VOL. XCII.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 4, 1940.

No. 1.

The New Year

I am the New Year, and I come to you pure and unstained,

Fresh from the hand of God.

Each day, a precious pearl to you is given

That you must string upon the silver thread of Life.

Once strung can never be unthreaded but stays

An undying record of your faith and skill.

Each golden minute link you then must weld into the chain of hours

That is no stronger than its weakest link.

Into your hands is given all the wealth and power

To make your life just what you will.

I give to you, free and unstinted, twelve glorious months

Of soothing rain and sunshine golden;

The days for work and rest, the nights for peaceful slumber.

All that I have I give with love unspoken.

All that I ask—you keep the faith unbroken!

—J. D. Templeton.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

Rev. F. N. Cox preached in the Winston-Salem Church on December 10, while the pastor, Dr. Jay, was in Ohio.

Rev. Robert Kimball of Everette, Pa., recently visited in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kimball of Manson, N. C., and attended the funeral of his uncle Weldon Kimball.

Friends will be sorry to learn of the death of Mr. T. W. Snyder, father of Mrs. W. M. Jay, in Buckland, Ohio on December 3. Mrs. Jay was with her father four days before he died. Dr. W. M. Jay drove to Ohio for the funeral. THE CHRISTIAN SUN extends its sympathy.

Two weeks before Christmas Mrs. P. J. Kernodle of our Richmond Church, who had been in poor health for some months past, was taken to the hospital for observation. CHRISTIAN SUN readers and friends will be glad to learn that she has returned home and is now convalescing.

Reports indicate that fine Christmas programs were held in our churches. This is one good way to preach the Gospel. Many pastors and families were made happy by remembrances from their people. Christmas in our churches and parsonages seems to have been very happy. This gives high hopes for the New Year.

Rev. and Mrs. F. C. Lester spent the Christmas holidays in the home of Mrs. Lester's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Carleton, in Winter Park, Fla. While on the trip Mr. Lester talked with several ministers and church leaders in Florida and Georgia. Among these were Rev. W. T. Scott, Superintendent of Georgia and Florida and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, worker among women and young people in Georgia and Florida. Both of them are North Carolinians who are doing excellent work in the far South.

The Southern Convention starts the New Year with emphasis on education. January and February are designated for this purpose. When the church schools and public schools begin work, our college opens its doors to half a thousand young people and undertakes to train them for Christian living and serving. The Sunday schools and churches should know of this work that they are doing together, for the college is the work of all the churches, Sunday schools, and individuals who share in supporting Elon College.

Rev. Thomas Alfred Tripp of the Town and Country Department of our Church will be among the speakers at the fourth annual Convocation of the Churches of North Carolina to be held at the First Presbyterian Church, Greensboro, N. C., January 16-18. Miss Jeanette Perkins, children's editor for our church and supervisor of Primary work in Dr. Fosdick's church in New York City, GREETINGS.

HAPPY NEW YEAR TO YOU!

"The Christian Sun" is wishing for you all the happiness you can crowd into this Leap Year. It is the kind of happiness Jesus told about in what we call the Beautitudes that we are wishing you. The "blessedness" of which Jesus spoke, and the kind you desire, comes from being the kind of person He described in the fifth chapter of St. Matthew. You are invited to join in the search for that happiness during the New Year of 1940.

will be another speaker. This Convocation will be near enough for many of our people to attend, and should certainly see to it that as many as possible are present. Please plan to get a group from your church to attend. For a folder telling all about the Convocation, write to Rev. Ernest J. Arnold, Box 685, College Station, Durham, N. C.

Unless THE CHRISTIAN SUN office hears from several subscribers who have recently received a letter from the Managing Editor, this will be the last copy of the paper they will receive. The most difficult task related to editing and managing the paper is to discontinue subscriptions. However, we simply must collect subscriptions in order to publish the paper. We hope that every one who is now far behind in payments will send a letter post haste to the office at Elon College, N. C., inclosing enough money to bring the account up to date so the paper can continue to bring sunshine to your home. Thank you very much.

INTRODUCING OUR MISSIONARIES.

CARL C. COMPTON.

Carl C. Compton, Dean of Anatolia College, Thessaloniki, Greece, knows from years of experience that "boys will be boys" whether they are in Greece or in the United States. Close and constant contact with over two hundred boys and young men at Anatolia has given Mr. Compton a close-up of the psychology and aspirations of youth in the Near East. He will speak in American churches during his furlough.

Born in Iowa and educated at Grinnell College, Mr. Compton first went to the Near East in 1913 under the American Board of Foreign Missions as a tutor in Merzifon, Turkey.

In 1915 the war caused Mr. Compton to return to America. Before going back to the Near East he secured his M. A. degree at Oberlin College and a bride, Miss Ruth McGavern, also an Iowan. Together they returned to the Near East in 1917 where for two years they worked under the Near East Relief in the Caucasus.

In 1920 Mr. Compton again took up service with Anatolia College, which was then located in Merzifon, Turkey, but a year later the school was closed under tragic circumstances and all other Americans expelled from the country. The Comptons remained for a time in charge of the buildings and worked in an orphanage near Cesarea.

In 1925 Mr. Compton went back to Anatolia College which was now in its new home in Thessaloniki, Greece.

Anatolia College has always been a pioneer in education in the Near East and when it began its new life in Greece was called, "a pilgrim school among a pilgrim people." Today it has a beautiful plant and campus on a hill overlooking the blue Aegean Sea and the snow-clad summit of Olympus. It is non-sectarian and together with its high scholastic standing it seeks to develop in its students a firm Christian character.

DANVILLE CHURCH TO BROADCAST.

Beginning next Sunday, January 7, the service of the Danville Christian Church will be broadcast from 9:00-10:00 each Sunday morning. This can be heard by those living within a radius of 75-100 miles of Danville, Va., over Station WBTM, 1320 kilocycles. For the past three years this church has been broadcasting from 7:30 to 8:30 each Wednesday evening. The pastor is Rev. M. T. Sorrell.

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor

"SOME 1940 CERTAINTIES."

(A Contributed Editorial to THE CHRISTIAN SUN.)

Of the New Year it has been said, "Mine are the thresholds of the unknown. I furnish you untrodden ways, take care, you have not come this way before." This is but a half truth about the New Year, for there are obvious certainties upon which we can count in the New Year of 1940. Let us think of some of these certainties.

God is a certainty upon which we can count. The soldiers' questions, "Where do we go from here, where are we, what place is this?" is very real in this world of ours. There are people who are asking these very same questions as to life—its present experiences, and the future. Those soldier boys of war days might not have known where they were geographically, or just where they were going, yet did know with whom they were traveling. They knew they were traveling in the company of their buddies, and they knew they were traveling under the direction of Uncle Sam. We can be sure of that much in 1940, for God does not change. "Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations."

We drive our car upon the road at night. Our lights pierce the darkness only dimly and they create their own confusing shadows. But we do not stop! We trust the engineer who built the road and we drive on, making our way as we come to it. A ship rides out the storm and moves steadily on, and eventually comes into port, because there is a pilot aboard. We may count upon the natural, friendly order of God's universe as a certainty in 1940.

I know not what the future hath
Of marvel or surprise;
Assured alone that life and death
His mercy underlies.

I know not where his islands lift
Their fronded palms in air,
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond his love and care.

Familiar circumstances will be certainties in 1940. Associations and friendships will, for the most part, be certainties upon which we can count. Very few of us will experience a complete change of associations and friendships in the New Year. "A future which has constants of associations and friendships cannot be strange."

Our habits will be familiar parts of us in the New Year. Our habits, good or bad, are not made or broken in a day. We will be accompanied by many of them in 1940, and we shall have to struggle to grow out of the undesirable and more securely into the desirable ones.

Duties and tasks are certainties upon which we can surely count, and thank God! The days of the New Year, will, as of old, bid us to bend our back, exercise our brains, to our apportioned responsibilities. Life cannot be utterly new when in the days of 1940 we go back to our familiar jobs.

Renunciations, sorrows, love and happiness, will each have their familiar places in the weaving of the fabric of our life as we journey into the New Year. We may have to renounce some cherished goal or high aspiration. The life fabric we are weaving on the loom of God's time may be darkened for us by sorrow, or brightened by some golden threads of high achievement. Whatever it may be like, our lives will not be so radically changed this next year.

Does all this suggest an attitude of fatalism? Might one accuse the writer of agreeing with the pessimist who said of the world, "The biggest trouble with the world is that it should not have ever been made?" Do we feel that after reading some of these commonplace things—certainties, good and bad, with which we will doubtless be faced, we might as well resolve to go into 1940 unconcerned. Not for a moment! There are attitudes which we must form which will determine our future just as our past has influenced our present. While we will experience many of these same ordinary things, we will have many new experiences. But we shall not have to face them in the dark. Christ is the light unto the pathway of the believer. The life of the Christian is more than uncertainties, it is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self control. Thus, the Apostle counsels us, "Be not fashioned according to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind."

To the man of the street, the New Year often means resolution and often suicide. To the astronomer, it may simply mean that "January first is but the 365th day, 5th hour, and 48.8 minute period, popularly measured from the winter solstice in the northern hemisphere and scientifically determined by the sun's position in the relation to the fixed stars."

To the Christian, the New Year should be more than any sentimental resolutions made one day and broken the next; more than mere scientific calculations. It should be a time of taking honest measure of one's self as to physical, mental, social and spiritual life. The door jamb in many homes is the measuring post for the child's physical growth. It is tragic for the child not to grow physically, but it is even more tragic for a person not to grow mentally, spiritually, and socially. For the Christian this should be a time of measuring one's self by that Perfect Stature; an evaluation of one's self in the light of that Perfect Light. Are we pretending to live as a Christian, or we actually trying with all our being to live the Jesus way. However far below Him we may be, yet we may be like Him! That is a certainty promised by a loving Father who loved us so much that he gave us the Grace by which we may become!

The New Year is psychologically a good beginning place of high resolve. You will . . . you may . . . be what you are in 1940 not nearly so much in spite of yourselves as because of yourselves. God has made this world in such a way as to give (Continued on page 5.)

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The old year passes tomorrow. The old calendar will be replaced by the new. The "Happy New Year" greeting will be exchanged by young and old. It has been an eventful year. The palaces of the rich and the cottages of the poor have been darkened by threatening shadows of greed and hate. Bitterness and strife, lust and pride, indulgences and dissipation have taken their toll of health, spiritual power and human life.

The outlook for 1940 is not hopeless. There are millions of people who have not bowed their knees to Mammon. These people go quietly on their way to their daily tasks, with anxious hearts, but with steady faith. They cling to the old paths, but welcome the new year with its new days and new opportunities. The writer who said: "The reason we are likely to lose good young men from our ministry is due to our attempt to keep out of our group (church) any new idea or method of work. We seem to want no one to start any thing new"—failed to comprehend the deeper yearning of his readers. Church people welcome new days, new ideas, new discoveries and new life. A new baby receives more personal attention than the old grandfather. He is precious, cute, sweet, darling, beautiful, lovely, adorable—there is no end of admiration. People do not gossip about the new baby. The mother, the father, grandparents will receive their full share of criticism—but the new baby is the center of attraction and interest. The people who bear the burdens and pay the bills must be content with fewer words of praise and appreciation.

The church of 1940 will welcome constructive new ideas and plans. It will not be satisfied with denials and negative statements. It does not require much learning or mental ability to say "no." Denying Jesus was easy for Peter. It was not easy for him to deny himself. Self-denial is difficult. Any one can deny the inspiration of the Bible, the Divinity of Jesus, the existence of God, the possibility of a future life. But after the denial is boldly made, the Bible remains, Jesus lifts men out of despair into hope, God manifests His love as a Father in compassionate mercy, and men still believe that there is a life beyond the grave. The depths of abiding faith in God and in the Bible have not been reached by any human mind and heart. New fields of discovery await those who will search the Scriptures and yield to the will of God. Faith penetrates high altitudes and deep seas of thought. Reason cannot comprehend God. Reason cannot measure revelation. Faith takes the wings of the morning and looks beyond the horizon for the God and Father of all mankind.

The Church of 1940 will welcome a more consecrated attitude of the minister in the pulpit. It will welcome warmth and zeal in Christian living and benevolent work. Letters and learning have their place, but they are more powerful when under-girded by humility and abiding faith. The Spirit maketh alive. And all forms and ceremonies, however beautiful and impressive, should be the means of increasing spiritual understanding and personal power. The prayer meeting at Pentecost reached its climax when tongues of fire touched the lips of witnessing believers and warmed their religious zeal. They saw and heard and felt a new strange power in their midst—the evidences of which did not disappear, when the meeting adjourned after the benediction. That power is available today—and for the new year 1940. That power will make the ministers of the Southern Convention more effective. It will silence criticism and broadcast praise and unity. It will recharge the old and welcome the new. It will stop the forces of degeneration and revive the fires of regeneration. Happy New Year! Welcome new life.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE NEW YEAR.

The years pass swiftly. When we entered 1939, in all probability we had good intentions and high resolves. We were going to put out of our lives the things that had hindered and incorporate in our program for the year many things that would make life richer and more helpful. So many times our intentions fail and our resolutions come to naught.

When the writer was in the pastorate, he tried to improve his program for the New Year by honest consideration of the failures and successes of the old. Now that he is both pastor and administrator, his intentions and purposes are increasingly vital. Not only is the interest of the local church involved, but the interest of the college that is a Convention institution and predicates the interest of the whole church—ministry and laity—for as goes the college, so goes the leadership of the church and ultimately the church itself.

For many years as the Convention planned, the attention of the entire church has been focused on Elon College at the beginning of the New Year. January and February is the period on our church calendar designated by the Convention as the Elon College period. The Convention's apportionment for the support of the college is $12,500.00. This amount has been apportioned to the several conferences of the Convention by the Convention itself. The conferences in turn have apportioned a definite amount to every local church so that every church and pastor knows exactly what is their share in the support of Elon College. To the Convention it seems a good plan that each local church raise its apportionment for the college during these months. The church that raises its apportionments during the college period encourages itself to raise the entire conference askings and lends substantial encouragement to the college as it seeks to move forward beneath its staggering burden. The college is the property of the Convention and looks to the Convention for its support. It is encouraging to note that a larger number of our churches are beginning to take seriously the Convention's plan for the support of the church's institutions. In 1936-37 and 1937-38 the Convention's contributions to the college increased substantially. In 1938-39 some parts of the Convention increased their support of the college while other sections declined in their support.

During 1940 Elon College will observe its 50th anniversary. Anniversary occasions are expensive. All the expense of special celebrations must be borne out of current accounts. Everyone interested in the college throughout the entire church will want these historic occasions to be fittingly observed in a way as to reflect credit and honor. In view of these high ideals that we have for ourselves and that the church has for us, a special appeal is made to every pastor, every church, and every layman who reads to make generous contributions that every local church may raise its conference apportionments for the college in full. Won't you please make a special effort during the college period? We did a little better for the college last year during January and February than in previous

Three Ideas For January

By AUBREY C. TODD.

The first big idea for January is to emphasize the Epiphany Season. The Epiphany of the Lord is observed on January 6. It is a festival that is much more ancient than Christmas Day in December. This day, held in memory of the visit of the Magi, was of special significance to the early church. The church had long been in conflict with the Jews, therefore this manifestation of the Lord to the Gentiles meant a great deal to them. This date was also important because it was believed that Jesus was baptized on this day, thirty years after his birth. The Twelfth Night festivities of England are in memory of this occasion, so called because they come on the twelfth day after Christmas.

The Epiphany has great possibilities in our churches because it carries on the spirit of Christmas. It is very unfortunate that the Christmas joy should disappear with the New Year. Churches that are in the habit of having Christmas Candle-lighting Services might well save such a service for the Epiphany. Candle-lighting services have been traditionally connected with the Epiphany to carry out the theme of Christ the Light of the world. Because the baptism of our Lord is connected with this day, it is an opportune time for baptisms of children and adults.

The second big idea for January is to emphasize missions and education. It is customary in churches of the Southern Convention to use the months of January and February to present the program, the influence, and the needs of Elon College. It is better to raise the church's apportionment for the college at this time than to wait until the end of the Conference year. The cause of missions has long been associated with the Epiphany because it was the day when Christ came to the Gentiles. A prayer of the early church, used in the year 590, is appropriate: "Almighty and everlasting God, the Brightness of faithful souls, fill the world with thy glory, we pray thee, and show thyself, by the radiance of thy light, to all the nations of the world, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen."

The third big idea for January is to take advantage of the days before Lent to emphasize the childhood and early ministry of our Lord. Of course, the first Sunday in the month will be used to present the adoration of the Magi. Suitable subjects for the other Sundays of the month are:

the Presentation in the Temple, the Boy Jesus at Jerusalem, and the Baptism and Call to Service. The third Sunday in January is known as Septuagesima Sunday, because it is approximately seventy days before Easter. The following Sunday is Sexagesima Sunday.

These days before Lent should be days of preparation for Lenten devotions and the Pastor's Class. Lent comes early this year, the first day of Lent being February 7, therefore preparations for this season will have to begin in January.

I should like to devote the remainder of this article to giving suggestions for an Epiphany service. A traditional Call to Worship which may be chanted or read is: "Behold the Lord the Ruler is come; and the Kingdom is in His hand, and power and dominion." This may be followed by a traditional carol by the choir. Some suggestions are: "Bring a Torch," "God Rest you," "Good King Wenceslas," "Deck the Halls." The carol is followed by the reading of the Gospels. It is traditional to have appropriate passages read from the Gospels in the following order: John, Luke and Matthew. After each reading there is a choral response, and a candle is lit for each Gospel. Then may be sung a congregational hymn. Familiar Epiphany hymns are: "As With Gladness Men of Old," "From the Eastern Mountains," "Brightest and Best of the Sons of the Morning." Then the offering may be received and presented at the altar with suitable expressions of consecration and devotion. Then follows the march of the Magi, at which time the familiar "We Three Kings of Orient Are" may be sung. The Magi present their gifts at the altar, and remain there, the choir joining them during the closing stanza of the carol. While the assistants who are to light the candles are lighting the altar candles, which are in the form of a cross, the reader reads from St. Matthew 5: 14, 15 about the Light of the world, from St. Matthew 10 about the commission to the disciples. Then the choir and the Magi receive lighted candles, representing the going out of the Light of the world. Then the choir marches out, singing the recessional hymn, and the congregation follows them out of the church. Suitable recessional hymns are: "As With Gladness" and "Emmanuel Shall Come to Thee."

Leo the First preached a sermon in the fifth century that contained the following sentence: "The day on which Christ, the Savior of the world, first appeared to the Gentiles is to be revered by us, dearly beloved, with sacred honour; and we ought to feel this day in our hearts those joys which were in the hearts of the three Magi, when being urged onward by the sign and leading of a new star."

a large place of freedom to His creation. In this world of natural order and sympathetic, divine direction, we have something to do with what we are.

Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!

Leave thy low-vaulted past!

Let each new temple, nobler than the last

Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast

Till thou at length art free

Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!

years, but we did not do nearly as well as we should have or as we could. Please, my dear Pastor and interested Layman, don't let this appeal go by unheeded.

January 28 has been designated as Elon College day throughout the church. Won't you please plan a service of recognition and of helpfulness for the college on that day? It is our college. We want to encourage and support it. If others will contribute for the payment of our debts, the improvement of our equipment, and the increasing of our endowment, we shall be happy and delighted, but it is our privilege and our joy to provide for current expenses through our churches. Let no pastor, no church, and no interested layman fail in this opportunity and in this undertaking. If your church should wish envelopes, suggestions as to program, or someone to speak, please let me know at once, and your wishes will be granted.

In a unified effort Elon College was founded. With a unified program and unified efforts, Elon College can and will be properly supported.

A HAPPY CHRISTMAS.

Dear CHRISTIAN SUN Readers:

This Christmas Season has been the finest I have ever experienced. First of all, I expected to be in the hospital for Christmas Day. My father came to the hospital on December 21, and the doctor let me come home—provided I would stay off my “lame leg” for four weeks more.

My second surprise was to arrive at the parsonage and find the entire house newly papered. This was a gift which we really appreciate. So many churches remodel and paint up a church parsonage just before a new minister arrives. Rarely do the members think of repairs while the old preacher lingers on. They save every thing for the new man! But not so with Ingram: we have a new roof on the house.

I awoke the next morning after my home-coming to find the world as far out as I could see covered with beautiful white snow. The very evening of that day Mrs. Carleton’s “children” gave her a Christmas dinner. Our family was invited. To me this was as exciting as a “Coming Out Party.” I dressed in street clothes and prepared to enjoy my first feet-under-the-table meal. It was so different from a hospital tray. We laughed and talked and had so much fun. The food was delightful—ham, chicken, hot rolls, ice cream, everything—not just soup or broth or soft foods like sick folks live off of! The Christmas lights were beautiful and the moonlight on the snow made me feel quite gay.

On Sunday night I attended my first church service for over two months. Ingram presented a pageant which pictured a beautiful manger scene. Behind the footlights and beneath the far-away blue star, the young people depicted in a very picturesque and colorful manner the birth of the Christ. I couldn’t get up to sing the Christmas carols, but I could join in. When, after the pageant, the pastor wished the congregation a Merry Christmas, tears filled my eyes and I realized that this Christmas was complete for me.

One of the men borrowed the keys to the car. Daddy had warned him that there wasn’t much gas. After church we found our car packed with a surprise Christmas pounding. We saved the packages until Christmas morning. There were delightful squeals to greet each new discovery. A turkey had to be rushed into the oven to bake for dinner. The pounding included even a big sack of corn for the chickens.

Another surprise and pleasure of mine was to view the stack of boxes which have been sent to Daddy for the people in the hills—many of these boxes were filled by the people of Suffolk.

This year the Christmas treat for the Sunday school children in the mountains was made possible by money which was sent in by our churches. Remarkable to say, not one plea was made to secure this money. My father is very encouraged that Christian people would think of the mountain people at this season of the

So many readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN have made my Christmas pleasant by your greetings and letters. Cards were forwarded from the hospital. I was very happy to read those cards at home instead of at the hospital. My effort to reach home for Christmas time was doubly rewarded and even more pleasant than I had visioned. To every one of you I send my hopes for the happiest New Year.

CHRISTMAS IN THE VALLEY.

The pastor of the churches in Group No. 4 in the Valley of Virginia was recently surprised by a birthday party on December 26, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Stover, near Elkton, Va. The house was full of well-wishers who all brought nice presents. A three-tier birthday cake was baked by Mrs. Otis Smith, who also had placed (many) candles upon same! There were forty-seven presents in all—even the pastor’s wife shared in the receiving of presents. After the dinner and refreshments the Mt. Olivet (R) male quartet sang many hymns. It was the pastor’s first real birthday party. May God bless the good people of Mt. Olivet (R) for their kind wishes and happy remembrances.

Since the above birthday party and Christmas came so close together, the pastor can hardly distinguish between the Christmas presents and the birthday presents. The Concord Church gave pastor and wife money—not on salary! The Palmyra Church had a splendid Christmas program and gave the pastor money for a present. The Concord Church had a wonderful Christmas program. The Mayland Church gave the pastor money as a present. The Wood’s Chapel Church gave, from the Ladies Aid, money as a present. Wissler’s Chapel Church gave many personal presents. Bethlehem Church showered the pastor and wife with a great basket of food. They had an inspiring Christmas service. Mr. Wampler of Antioch Church, directed the choir. Pray that the pastor may give himself to God and for the people in His great work there. The pastor prays God’s blessings on the Valley churches for 1940. May it be the greatest year in our church history. It can be if we wish it, and pray for it, and work for it.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Our financial report this week carries us nearly to our goal. We still lack $449.92. We have one more report before we close our books for the year. Shall we reach it or fail? It is in your hands. Are you vitally interested in our reaching it? The writer is vitally interested in reaching it. We will make our final report and mail it to the publisher Monday, January 8. Do you want to see us reach it. If you do let every one who reads this letter sit down and address a letter to the Christian Orphanage, Elon College, N. C., and enclose 25 cents, 50 cents, or $1.00. No one is asked for more than a dollar. Let's give the Christian Orphanage a shower with quarters, half dollars or dollars. If you will mail your letter next Saturday we will get it Monday. I truly hope my Post Office box will be full of letters next Monday morning. If you will help in this small way we will come out victorious. We are counting on you.

THEY CAME.

The Christmas spirit increases in intensity and extensiveness. This writer was amazed and gratified, as no doubt readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN family were, to receive Christmas cards and greetings from so many directions indicating how this marvelous anniversary of the birth of Lord is observed. In looking over these glad greetings and beautiful cards he finds one from far away Turkey (a missionary friend and acquaintance in that now stricken land); another from friends in Puerto Rico; and then from acquaintances and friends here in the states: New Mexico, Arizona, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Louisiana, New York, New Jersey, Virginia, North Carolina, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, and others. We are not taking it for granted that our friends are scattered about any more than those of other CHRISTIAN SUN readers and we simply desire to call attention to the fact of how the birth of the Christ Child prevails and affects the minds and hearts of peoples generally. Someone inquired of the writer if during the Christmas Season he had received a card commemorating the life, deeds, or death of Alexander the Great, or Napoleon, or any other great warrior. Our reply, of course, was in the negative for at the Christmas season we seek to honor and celebrate the birth of Him who has had the greatest influence on history of any person that ever visited this earth. I repeat what this column of THE CHRISTIAN SUN has said before as emanating from a historian, namely, that the Child Jesus, born in a manger, has had more influence in the world than all the armies and all the navies of all the nations have ever had. So as we greet 1940, the New Year, with more than half the world at war, we may safely trust Him who will yet bring peace on earth and good will among peoples and nations. May we each of us do our best to help bring about this glorious consummation.

The Suffolk Christian Church

A LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

Enclosed please find check for $8.00 for four additional copies of THE CHRISTIAN SUN each week to me. I shall use them in my pastoral calling and on my Church Reading Table. Incidentally, they will be used also to help increase our church's subscription list by adding other new subscribers. About one hundred and fifty families in our church get THE CHRISTIAN SUN but I want every family to read it. To that end I shall also send bits of news to help make it interesting, more interesting I should say, to them.

I believe in the worthwhileness of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and believe that a church whose members read it will be a better church both at home, and also in Conference and Convention. Suffolk Church throughout its entire history has been a CHRISTIAN SUN Church. By that I mean a church which saw, read, and was interested in, THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It has had its part in making a good history here and elsewhere. How I wish every member of the Eastern Virginia Conference (I write as Conference secretary) read THE CHRISTIAN SUN! And how I wish every home in the Southern Convention received and read it! Larger congregations make larger sermons, greater heights of worship, and so also would be a larger reading list make THE CHRISTIAN SUN a better church paper. Reading counts, and it should be made to count for Christ.

Most sincerely yours,

JOHN G. TRUITT.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.

Last Christmas we were unable to prepare this Bulletin for you. You recall we were both in the hospital, and Mrs. Truitt desperately ill. Ann and John prayed that God would give them the health of their father and mother. And so you prayed. Just to remember now how God answered that prayer makes a very joyous Christmas indeed.

Since last Christmas we have both lost our father. Hence we both know how to suffer the broken band in the family circle, and to share with many of you your own deep losses. Even in your losses, we, too, have warm and sincere friends. We are all bound together in the bond of friendship and care. When one suffers all suffer, when one rejoices all rejoice.

We help bear one another's burdens, ah! and so fulfill the law of Christ! That is Christmas! Yes, it is the Christ that gives us hearts full of affection and love one for another. It is His Birthday—the Birthday of the King of Love—that we celebrate. It is because He came there is so much kindness and friendship and love.

He gave us our faith, our Christian families, and our homes; He gave us our Church, our community, and our country. We should thank Him daily and especially rejoice in Him today.

May we not resolve to go with Him through the New Year, to be His in thought, and plan, and work, in eternal gratitude to Him? Let us study to show ourselves faithful during the coming New Year that His Light may shine in our hearts. And may God bless you everyone!

YOUR PASTOR AND HIS FAMILY.

A CHRISTMAS BREAKFAST.

The Junior Department of the Suffolk Christian Church School came in for one of the happiest experiences in

A CHRISTMAS VERSE.

The Light of the World in a manger lay,
On Christmas morning far, far away;
And all who looked beheld the Light
That came to the manger that Christmas night.

And all who live that same Light may see,
If they come to Him in humility;
And on their faces that Light will glow,
If in their hearts God's love they know!

—John Galloway Truitt.

their church life. For several days the faculty of the well-organized department had been decorating and planning for the special Christmas Sunday service. The spacious hall of the Christian Church was a fairyland of pine and poinsettia, separated across the middle of the hall with a thickly set row of pine trees. On the one side were tables beautifully decorated with seating capacity of ninety. Each of the four tables was tastefully decorated in the Christmas mode, each with differing centerpieces, and other individuality in decoration, and yet a harmony of scheme was followed. It was very pretty, so beautiful that the boys and girls moving into their places were quiet and reverent, yet bright and happy in their manner. Some eighty boys and girls enjoyed the occasion, and with a few invited guests and the department faculty, made up the party.

The breakfast was quite real although served in such a fairyland of fragrance and beauty. Cereal with fruit and cream and sugar, cocoa, bacon and eggs, butter, hot biscuits, coffee, cakes and jelly made up a delightful breakfast. Mrs. W. V. Leathers, superintendent of the department, acted as the presiding officer and in a manner most fitting introduced the guests, and thanked everybody for their one hundred per cent cooperation. Mr. W. S. Beamon, general superintendent complimented the boys and girls on their good graces, and praised the leaders of the department for their excellent work. The pastor of the church thanked the department officials on behalf of the guests for the invitation to be present.

Following the breakfast the entire department moved into the other half of the Fellowship Hall, where a chapel-like arrangement of chairs, furniture, and altar made a beautiful and worshipful setting for the eight classes of boys and girls, and their teachers. There a most impressive "White Gifts" service of worship was followed. Appropriate songs, prayers, scripture readings, wherein the children themselves had their parts, made up the first section of the program. At the altar Virginia McClenney, dressed in an angel costume, stood near a beautiful picture of the Madonna and Child, while each one present came with gift in hand and kneeling reverently presented the gift. It was a most impressive moment and one long to be remembered by each one present, and especially by the boys and girls.

Throughout the entire service one could but remember the appropriate prayer of thanks at the breakfast table made by Harvey Rawls, youngest son of the late beloved Dr. J. E. Rawls, and Mrs. Rawls, as he said, "And make us more and more like Thy Son Jesus, for in His name we ask it. Amen."

THE AMERICAN BOARD YEAR BOOK—1940.

Each year the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions—which is the foreign mission board for our denomination—publishes a Year Book. The 1940 Year Book is very much worth the 35c (three copies for $1.00) it costs. It contains a variety of material concerning our mission work—the officers, the history of each station we have, the organization and financing of the American Board, brief biographies of each of the missionaries on the field now, and tables showing just what kind of work is being done in each station. It also contains a prayer list for each day in the year. THE CHRISTIAN SUN will contain the weekly prayer list during the coming year, as given in the Year Book.

"CHECK UP" ON YOURSELF.

At this season, the beginning of a New Year, we often feel the need of "checking up" on ourselves, to see wherein we have succeeded and wherein we have failed in meeting the standard set before us. After we have studied ourselves in this manner we will be better able to plan those things we need to do to improve ourselves during 1940.

Before we can "check up" we must have some standard to use, some measure by which to judge ourselves. For Christians, Jesus is that perfect example and His life is our measuring rod. It would do each of us good to read again the "Beautitudes" found in the first part of the Sermon on the Mount in the fifth chapter of the Gospel of St. Matthew. Use these few verses as a goal during the coming year, sincerely strive to attain your goal, and you will truly be "blessed."

"CHECK UP" ON YOUR MEETINGS.

Besides "checking up" on ourselves at this time of the year, it is a good thing to "check up" on the type of meetings we are having. So often we get in a rut, doing the same old things in the same old way, and do not realize that all of our programs are much alike. Or we may find that interest is lagging in our young people's meetings and not be able to find just what is the matter. It is surprising to find that it may be a purely physical discomfort which causes interest to drag—perhaps we do not have enough fresh air in the room, or perhaps it is a strain for the members to see the speaker (have you ever been in a church where there was a window directly behind the speaker, where an electric light bulb hurt your eyes, or where the stovepipe obstructed your view?). This is just one phase of the "check up" we need to make. Conduct such a survey in order to improve your meetings and to be helpful, and not to hurt any individual's feelings or to be unduly critical of anyone. The following test may be helpful to you in making such a study. In the original test, it was suggested that twelve and one-half points be the perfect score for each question, and that you score your meetings on that basis and see how your group would rate.

WAS IT A GOOD MEETING?

1. Did people know about it? What it advertised by (a) announcement in year book, (b) newspaper notices, (c) card notices and church bulletin, (d) telephone calls, (e) personal solicitation?
2. Was it conducted with precision? Did the chairman start the meeting on time and keep the program moving? Was it closed when members still desired more?
3. Was the business kept to a minimum and handled efficiently?

A NEW START.

I will start anew this morning
With a higher, fairer creed;
I will cease to stand complaining
Of my ruthless neighbor's greed;
I will cease to sit repining
While my duty's call is clear;
I will waste no moment whining,
And my heart shall know no fear.

I will look sometimes about me
For the things that merit praise;
I will search for hidden beauties
That elude the grumbler's gaze.
I will try to find contentment
In the paths that I must tread;
I will cease to have resentment
When another moves ahead.

I will not be swayed by envy
When my rival's strength is shown;
I will not deny his merit,
But I'll strive to prove my own;
I will try to see the beauty
Spread before me, rain or shine;
I will cease to preach your duty,
And be more concerned with mine.

—Author Unknown.

4. Did all do their part? Did the program committee have a complete program planned? Did all of the talent appear as scheduled.
5. Did everyone have a good time? Was the program varied and interesting? Was there opportunity for fellowship? Did new people feel at home?
6. Did each have a chance to learn something? Was there an educational feature? Did the members receive helpful information? Were they challenged to think?
7. Was there a well conducted devotional service at the beginning or close of the meeting?
8. Was the room well arranged? Attractive? Well ventilated? Speaker in a good position? Hymn books and other materials ready? If discussion was used, could people see each other?

WHAT IT MEANS TO TRUST IN CHRIST FOR STRENGTH.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR JANUARY 7, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: Psalm 2:12;
II Timothy 2:1-7.

We begin the New Year with a series of five topics dealing with the Christian Endeavor pledge. It is important that Endeavorers understand and appreciate the implications of the pledge. Make the most of each of the series by having before the society a wall chart of the pledge.

Write for material for use in the celebration of Christian Endeavor Day, February 4, to International Society of Christian Endeavor, 41 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston, Mass. Each society should participate in the new Christian Endeavor Program, "Christ Calls!" (a folder outlining this program is free).

Discuss and undertake some project during the year. The Christian Endeavor World suggests a number of projects. One of the most worthwhile activities would be a survey of the community. Discover those who are unchurched and enlist them in Sunday school and church activities.

Suggested Hymns—

"Come, Thou Almighty King."
"Lead On, O King Eternal."

WHAT IT MEANS TO STRIVE TO DO HIS WILL.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR JANUARY 14, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: Galatians 6:6-10.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Christ's Obedience Foretold—
Psalm 40: 6-10.
Tuesday—Christ's Obedience Fulfilled—
Luke 22: 39-43.
Wednesday—Cost of Doing His Will—
Acts 5: 40-42.
Thursday—His Will Through Prayer—
John 14: 13-15.
Friday—Requirement of Discipleship—
Matthew 16: 22-26.
Saturday—A Benediction—Hebrews 13: 20, 21.

This is the second of the series dealing with the Christian Endeavor pledge: "I will strive to do whatever He would have me do," is a phrase which should bring Endeavorers face to face with all means of discovering God's will and doing it.

There are two divisions of the discussion: First—How can we know God's will? Use a blackboard and jot down the ideas of the group. The following are suggestive:

THE CHRISTIAN'S CONFESSION OF FAITH.

LESSON I—JANUARY 7, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 16:13-28.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."—Matthew 16:16.

The Son of Man.

It is significant that Jesus used the term, "son of man" more than the words, "son of God." Jesus was the Word made flesh. He revealed in human form the character, and spirit, and purpose of the invisible and eternal God. He was made in the likeness of man. He lived our life. He was subject to its limitations. And in it he achieved his perfect character. Because of all this, Jesus is able to enter sympathetically into all of our experiences and to give us practical help in all of our problems.

What Think Ye of Christ?

Turning to his disciples, Jesus said, "Who do men say that the son of man is?" Jesus was interested, of course, in knowing what impression he was making upon the masses of the people. He wanted the disciples to tell him to what extent people in general had come to understand his Messiahship. He wanted their reaction to his impression upon the masses at large. Their reply is interesting. They said that the people thought that he was John the Baptist, Elijah, Jeremiah, or one of the prophets. They saw in him something of the spiritual fervor and the spiritual insight which was characteristic of the great prophets of an earlier day. Their answer paid tribute also to the many sided character of Jesus, for these prophets were not alike in their temperaments or in their methods.

But Jesus was concerned with something more than what folks in general thought of him. He wanted the personal opinion and the personal response of the members of that inner band. Turning to them he said, "But who say ye that I am?" Here is perhaps life's supreme question. What do I think of Christ? What does he mean to me? What is my personal relationship with him? It is very interesting to know what others think about Jesus Christ, but that is not the most important thing. It must become a personal matter—every man must give his own answer—every man must place Jesus somewhere in the philosophy of his thinking.

The Son of God.

"Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God,"—thus spoke Peter, the spokesman for all the other disciples. And he spoke also for the great group of Christendom through all the centuries. Men have come to feel that the son of man was also the Son of God. He is unique. To be sure there are those who deny his Deity and who minimize his Divinity. But for the most part Christians through the centuries have held that Jesus Christ was the Son of God. Those denominations or branches of the Church which have held anything less than Jesus as the divine Son of God have not been characterized by evangelical spirit, by spiritual power, or by missionary impulse.

"For flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father who is in heaven." Thus spoke Jesus to Simon Peter when he made the great confession. Recognition of Jesus as the Son of God does not come merely as the result of intellectual processes; it comes through the revelation of the spirit of God making this fact known in the hearts of men.

"Simon . . . Peter."

There is an interesting sidelight at this point which has a great deal of meaning and encouragement for those of us who are struggling along in the Christian way. Jesus used both names by which Peter was known in commending him on his great confession—Simon, the son of John, and Peter. The first name emphasized the unstable, undependable phase of Simon Peter's character. The word Peter, however, literally translated, means "rock." Here was a parable and a pledge of what this impulsive, impetuous, unstable and untutored fisherman was to become by the help and by the power of the spirit of God. He was to become a rock, dependable, courageous, unmovable. Discipleship is primarily a matter of becoming. We do not reach Heaven by a single bound, nor do we achieve character forthwith. But he who yields himself to the leadership of Jesus will find that Christ is able to make him to become what he would aspire to be.

His Church.

This is one of the two places in the New Testament in which the word

"church" is used by Jesus. Its root meaning is "the called out." Jesus said some interesting things about the church in these few words. First of all, he says that he will build his church. It is his. He has purchased it with his own blood. It is a divine institution. Its growth and development is an expression of the inner working of his spirit within its life. It is the only institution or organization which he established while on earth, and although he did not organize it in a formal way, and although he undoubtedly did not have in mind some of the forms of the Church which exist today, the record does state specifically that Jesus did think of himself as the founder and the builder of the Church.

In the second place, Jesus says that he is going to build his Church out of ordinary men and women, folks of all kinds. The disciples themselves were an evidence of this fact. They were not saints; they wore no halos around their heads; they were distinctly human, and they had some very real limitations. But they were the best material that Jesus could get, and they had the qualifications for church membership. They believed in him, they committed themselves to him, they gave themselves in obedience to him, and out of such folks as this Jesus then, and now, is building his Church.

In the third place, Jesus said that the foundation of his Church is to be a recognition of and a confession of his Divine Leadership. To be sure Catholics say that the Church is built upon Peter, making him the first Pope of the Church. But Protestants choose rather to interpret Jesus' words as referring not to Simon Peter himself, but to the confession that Simon Peter made. It is on people who having been shown by the spirit of God that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the Living God, and who have yielded themselves to his lordship that Jesus will build his Church.

And, finally, Jesus states that the forces of the unseen world shall not prevail against his Church. The phrase, "The gates of Hades," or "The gates of Hell," means the unseen or the spiritual world. Even death itself can not prevail against the Church of the Living God. The future belongs to him and to his Church.

The Shadow of the Cross.

"From that time began Jesus to show unto his disciples that he must go unto Jerusalem and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and the

"HAPPY NEW YEAR TO YOU.""Remember from whence thou art fallen and repent."—Rev. 2:5."Bear ye one another's burdens."
—Gal. 6:2.

The old year is a book which, though having much that is sad and much of which is to be ashamed, we are not quite willing to close it. All through its pages are thickly strewn markings of love and happy experiences. Here and there are tear-stained pages and notes of restless nights. But joys and laughter sparkle through the shades and we rejoice as it closes itself, and we hand it to God.

But we do not hand this book of the past back to God without looking forward. As we leave it, we forget the unseemingly and unhappy things about it and dare to go forth with a true purpose in all the unknown tasks of the new, pledging ourselves to help others in their tasks and burdens, to add our gifts of good cheer along the way, to love and to cherish all, and do all the good we can. We believe this is to have and to give a Happy New Year.

This is our prayer. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE MESSAGE OF THE NEW YEAR.""One thing I know."—Jno. 9:25."One thing have I desired of the Lord."—Psalm 27:4."This one thing I do, forgetting the things which are behind, and reaching forth unto the things which are before."—Phil. 3:13."One thing is needful."—Luke 10:42.

I asked the New Year for some message sweet,
Some rule of life with which to guide my feet;
I asked, and paused: He answered, soft and low,
"God's will to know."

"Will knowledge then suffice, New Year?" I cried;
And the question into silence died,

The answer came, "Nay, but remember, too,
God's will to do."

Once more I asked, "Is there no more to tell?"

And once again the answer sweetly fell,
"Yes! This thing, all other things above, God's will to love."

—Author Unknown.

Prayer—Our Father, we earnestly desire to begin the New Year right, and we pray for strength to keep it right. Be Thou our strength midst all temptations. Hold Thou our hands, and at the end when we look back may it be "well done" and in the name and the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"A CALL TO THE CHURCH.""And when they . . . had gathered the church together, they rehearsed all that God had done for them."—Acts 14:27.

Our text is the record of an instance of supreme confidence and trust in God's over-ruling (for good) all the displeasing things of the past, and an utmost resignation of self to Him in the future. These apostles were divinely touched with the Spirit of God and His Word. To them the future was a door of faith flung wide open, through which they and all the nations of the earth might pass to the glory of the Kingdom. Would that the church could get together with this vision in these days of Godlessness and turmoil.

Prayer—O God, give us vision that our forefathers had as we come to the close of the old year and enter upon the new one of opportunity. And give us the vision of Thine ever increasing purpose of grace. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE GREATER SATISFACTION.""The whole earth is full of His glory."—Isa. 6:3."Come ye yourselves apart."—Mark 6:31.

It is hard for one who lives wholly within walls, surrounded by artificialities, to avoid becoming materialistic and satisfied with nothing less than money, and the things that money can buy. But there is a lesser circumstance which is greater.

The other day we visited one of the happiest families on earth—a family of husband, wife, and two children. They lived in a grass hut, their dining room was the great open, their riches were the trees and the fields beneath the open sky, where the daily sunset is an ever-recurring expression of God's sense of beauty, and where their whole thought was in the simple terms of life, their needs few and their satisfaction greater.

They worked by moods, they worshipped nature and the God of Nature, and they had no anxieties or worries. They spoke good English and conversed well, they said "If money comes our way, well and good; if it does not we get on just the same. We are happy."

To be frank, we doubt that we would like living that way, and yet these people had their every want, and we rather felt ashamed of ourselves that our needs are so great and once having them supplied, we find that they give so little satisfaction.

Prayer—Our Father, fill our lives and our souls with more of Thy nature and Thyself, and in Thee may we find escape from the harrassments of our man-made environments. As we come to each day, may we go out to get in with Thee. Amen.

"THE DAYS OF OUR YEARS."

(Psalm 90:10.)

Here we are, now, well within our New Year—a year, like all the others, made up of days. These days flow like a river on whose waters we pad

WHAT IS THE CHURCH FOR

By A. LANSON GRANGER, JR.

[Sermon preached at the Organizational Service of the Congregational-Christian Church at Asheboro, North Carolina.]

This sermon this morning has its beginning, logically at least, in a parable of life which I saw from a train window in a little mid-western town two summers ago. From its appearances, it was evidently an average community that I was looking upon; but all around there were marks of moral depletion which one's eye could not miss. The outskirts of the town, with its wretchedly shabby and dirty hovels, cried out of poverty and misery. And in the brief view one could see also the protracted Main Street, with its two leading "institutions," the saloon and the community theatre. One was apparently doing a good business, dispensing of its wares; the other was as certainly making its appeal with its huge shouting advertisements of "Bank Night." But this was not all! There in the midst of this motley of town "evils," almost besieged by them, as it were, was the church! A delicate white frame building. Here, truly was a symbol. But this was what caught the eye and pulled upon the imagination: High in the belfry one could see workmen busy at a job; and you could not miss it! They were repairing the bell. Now, that simply but clearly is a parable of the church. Set in the midst of a world confused with evil, with which it also is beset, the church is confronted with the task of clarifying its message, of repairing its tone, so that that which is truly itself, its eternal note, may be distinctly declared.

No one needs to be told that these are hard days upon which the church has fallen, in which the task of performing its true function in society is imperative. At the turn of the century Marcus Dodds wrote prophetically: "I do not envy those who have to fight the battle of Christianity in the twentieth century. Yes, perhaps I do, but it will be a stiff fight." Dodds was a seer whose insights were evidently keener than he knew. For, in the opinion of one of the most intelligent Christians in the world today, Nicholas Berdyaev, now in exile in France, "the sickness from which the world is suffering is connected not only with its lapse from Christianity, but with a disease in Christianity itself." That, to be sure, may sound like an exaggeratedly pessimistic picture. It may be a chastening challenge to our conscience. But, albeit, the task of defining its function and performing it in the world has never been an easy one for the church. That task may be as difficult today as it was for the early church, and essentially it is the same, but look at the contrast! Under the disturbing compulsion of one who had said "I am not of this world" and who had assured them "You have not chosen me, but I have chosen you," those early Christian went out into the world. It was not the charm of that One which held them together and fired them. Indeed, it was more than that! It was not a genial sense of companionship which they themselves had created! It was something more. It was His claim, His hold upon them, and yet not His, but God's. And whatever else they knew, they recognized that they were a community which was set against the world. Touched by a madness which would not let them be, their contemporaries described them as those who turned the world upside down.

In contrast, our modern expressions of Christianity seem a calm and tame affair. Whatever else church membership signifies for us, few accept it as anything as revolutionary as that first church understood it. Indeed, the faint line between those who are in the church and those who are not is often hardly discernible. The truth is, as the Oxford Conference put it: "The church is infected with the very ills which it proposes to condemn." And the consequence all too frequently has been a sterile kind of religion of which Josephine Johnson's description in her novel Jordanstown is apt: "The religion of Jordanstown was neither corrupt with death and superstition, nor a direct fountain force toward life. . . . The church's religion lay about the town like a gentle fog, consoling and indifferent." If the church has lost its power it is not because our Christ lacks authority to speak to our age, but because our hands have been unclean and our voice faint. In truth, we have become like the world in trying to adjust to it. And we have too often forgotten the needful thing in a changing world—that of adjusting of the Eternal God. We have ad-again sunk below the level of its high dignity. It has become colored too justed to a greedy capitalism, whose selfish individualism we have identified with the personalism of the gospel and the freedom of the human soul. We have adjusted to the imperialistic self-interest programs of kings and democracies, and we have tried to disguise it as charity and good will. We have given religious sanction to a war, and some will possibly do it again, by calling it a holy crusade. The church stands convicted, knowing that the condemnation is just; and if we are honest, knowing that it stands in need of the same forgiveness and redemption which it preaches. Until in quietness and penitence the church turns aside to see the cross which it itself has helped to fashion, and there in consecration is willing to lose itself, with all that that may mean, the church, too, will not be able to speak that redeeming word or be true to Him who is its Head.

Now, there is no doubt that all of this is true. By its falsity and compromise the church has again and dle our little boat of life. Perhaps it is better to say it runs like a good road on which we are journeying, and each year is a mile-post marking the distance we have gone. To each of us it is another birthday. To humanity it is a New Year.

Prayer—And so, our Father, we call upon Thee for success. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"OUR NEW YEAR PRAYER."

Our Father, God of all that man calls time,
One gift I'd ask of Thee throughout this year;

Thy quiet strength, O God, let that be mine,
Such strength as comes when I can feel Thee near.

I would serve man when comes the hour of need,
Such service as is measured calm and strong,
But first and ever, Father, I would heed,
The source from which such quiet help is born.

Thy quiet strength, dwell in this house of mine,
Still fretted nerves and heart of anxious fear.

I would think deeply . . . make my values Thine.

Oh, grant Thy quiet strength throughout the year.—Amen.

much by the world, and as a consequence, it has not been able to lose itself for the world. But however much the church has fallen from its true purpose, it has never quite been able to forget it. God has given it some high meaning, which despite its frequent shabbiness and complacency, the church itself has not lost—a sense of the towering meaning of life and the glory of God which has prevented it completely from coming to terms with the evils of men and society. It has never entirely lost the vitality of the life of God and the radiance of the light of God. The church still stands as a tower of refuge to those in a weary land. And however persons may disagree with the church, and whatever illusions they may have about it, somehow they have never quite been able to put from themselves the fact that the church does stand for something, something which is real and eternal, which towers above their commonplace lives, and yet which pulls upon them to keep the growing edges of their spirits vital.

Even those who are careless about the church and indifferent seem to recognize this. Almost by some instinctive obedience, they go back again and again to feel the touch of the church when life is most meaningful. Parents who long ago put from themselves any concern for the church turn back to it to have the baby christened. And young people, sophisticated and modern, for whom the church has no glamour, return to it and say in its shadow "I take thee" in marriage. And when life has gone its way, it is usually the spokesman of the church who is sought to speak words of the solemnity of life and death, and to give to wistful hearts some glimmer of hope about a life that is eternal.

Now precisely what the church does in those moments, it attempts forever to do—to keep life human, to bring men to a sense of their creatureliness before the Eternal God, and a sense of their oneness with each other. The church is significant, therefore, because in no other relationship of men's lives is this so clearly done. The other relationships of men's common existence, as a friend of mine has shown, call out the degrading and hateful elements: the nation pulls upon men's fear; industry upon men's greed and selfishness; social clubs upon their pride and snobbery; and even education comes to be looked upon merely as the preparation for making money.

It is here in the church then, above all the other relationships of our lives, that there is called from us those qualities which make life human, vital and real. Here alone can one fully and truly recognize himself as the person he is and the person he can be. Here alone in the company of others like him, waiting in the presence of God, can one rightly see himself in his true perspective. This is so precisely because the church is the community of God, which exists for the purpose of bringing men to see their weak and rusty lives in the light of His radiant goodness.

This the church attempts to do in worship. And this is the sole reason for the church's life. It does not propose to be an institution of perfect individuals, or even of good people. Its primary requisite for membership is not that a man recognize that he is good or that he has achieved some merit. Precisely the opposite; it is based upon the solemn realization that he is a sinner, a creature who stands before God in need of mercy and forgiveness, wholly unable to live except in dependence upon Him. Nor is it the function of the church to attempt to make people good. This idea has been the bane of much of our Protestantism. Consequently, we have believed that merely by manipulating people saved souls would be the result. Such attempts never produce real goodness, but a self-consciousness that easily becomes self-righteousness. But what the church is for, finally, is this: to bring men before the Eternal God in whose presence alone their lives can become good, and through which they may become the instruments of His purpose.

In Memoriam

HARWARD.

On October 2, 1939, God saw fit in His great wisdom to call to his reward our beloved brother, Dr. W. D. Harward. In his passing the Dendron Christian Church and Men's Bible Class has lost a faithful and efficient member.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That while we mourn his loss, we weep not as those without hope, and bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

2. That we emulate his trust in God.

3. That we extend to the bereaved family our sympathy, and that we ever hold his friendship in warm remembrance.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be recorded in the minutes of the church.

HAPPY HOME.

A service of this kind is not a custom in our church and seemed to give the new officers inspiration and a realization of their duties, as well as offering to the others an opportunity to pledge their confidence and support.

The young people's organization has been sharing in the China Friendship Project of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship.

On Thanksgiving Eve the Woman's Missionary Society prepared and served a banquet to about forty-five of the young people and some of their friends at the local school. Invited guests were: Rev. W. J. Andes and his brother, Mr. Roy Andes, Rev. and Mrs. Duane Vore, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Hudson, and Mr. Allen Lewis, the school principal.

The program consisted of Thanksgivng hymns and readings and special selections on the piano. Rev. Mr. Vore, a former pastor, was the after-dinner speaker.

The ladies seemed to enjoy giving and preparing the food just as much as the young people enjoyed the banquet. It helped to promote a feeling of good fellowship throughout the group.

third day be raised up." He would have them know that God's law of progress is by the way of sacrifice. The Church was not to be established by easy methods. He would prepare them for the tragedy which he knew lay ahead. He would have them understand that the things for which he stood cut directly across the prejudices of the religious leaders of his nation, and that he must pay the last full measure of devotion for the ideals for which he stood. It is significant to note that Jesus not only predicted that he would suffer many things and that he would be killed, but also he predicted that he would rise again on the third day.

The Voice of Satan.

On one occasion Jesus said, "A man's foes shall be they of his own household." Here is an instance in point. Simon Peter took issue with the Master, and said that such a thing should never come to him. But Jesus saw in Simon Peter's well meaning protest a sinister suggestion, or temptation, from Satan himself. It was the temptation to choose the easy way, to step aside from the path of duty, to compromise one's ideals. Thus many a man is turned aside from full discipleship to Jesus, and made to compromise his ideals by those who are nearest and dearest to him. Christian discipleship demands eternal vigilance as the price of spiritual growth and spiritual progress.

The Law of Discipleship.

Jesus said that self denial is the first law of discipleship. This does not mean denying things to one's self but denying one's self. One must surrender his will to the will of Christ if he is to be a true disciple. But the amazing thing is that when one surrenders completely to Christ he finds complete liberty.

ELON COLLEGE

PAST—PRESENT—FUTURE

Eighteen hundred ninety was a significant year for the Christian Church. Elon College was born out of the consciousness of an impending need and was founded in the widening vision of an increasing responsibility of a free church to inquiring minds. To meet this need and to follow this vision, an intelligent and informed leadership was imperative. The vision and hopes of yester years shoot across our pathway today. The spirits of just men made perfect through hopes and sacrifices sit in our congregations and stand in our pulpits. They walk with us and they talk with us as we ponder the present need and the future well being of the institution to which they gave birth and launched so proudly upon its mission of service to the church and to the world through the youth of every age.

Among these spirits of the just, whom do you see? I seem to see Long, Wellons, the Lees, Carlton, Kernodle, Staley, Rawls, and a host of others from all walks of life whom I never knew.

I seem to hear them say, "Match loyalty to loyalty, service to service, sacrifice to sacrifice. Through fifty years of opportunity the church has grown wiser, stronger, and richer. Out of our poverty and riches it was a joy to lay for the church and the future a foundation for progress. Compare your strength, membership, church properties, personal holdings with ours of fifty years ago. Compare our services, gifts, sacrifices and joys with the present needs of our college and your opportunities of today. You will find that matching your strength and abilities with ours, it will seem an easier task to free the college of its debts than was ours to found the college" for the training of our youth and the development of leadership for a church whose name is Christian, whose head is Christ, whose creed is the Bible, and whose mission is to save the world.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

The Piedmont Ministerial Association will meet at Elon College, N. C., on next Monday, January 15, at ten o'clock. All of our ministers in North Carolina are urged to attend.

Rev. and Mrs. Melvin Dollar of Carolina, N. C., enjoyed a trip south after Christmas. They spent a week at the home of Mrs. Dollar's parents in Georgia, and then toured Florida with friends.

Dr. and Mrs. John G. Truitt are spending two weeks in Florida for a much-deserved and needed vacation trip. Their many friends will wish for them a splendid trip, rest, and renewal of strength.

Rev. and Mrs. D. M. Spence and family enjoyed visiting in the home of Mrs. Spence's parents in Nashville, Tenn., during the holidays. They report over three hundred miles of ice and snow-covered roads through the mountains on their return trip.

Our denomination believes in inter-denominational cooperation. Let us prove that by attending, if at all possible, sessions of the Convocation of Churches to be held in the First Presbyterian Church, Greensboro, N. C., on January 16-18. Program will be found in another place in this paper.

Copies of this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN are being sent to the leaders of women's societies in our churches in Georgia by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, in order that they may read the article on "Family Religion and Church Cooperation" by Mrs. C. Lisle Percy of Demorest, Ga., president of the Georgia's women's organization. We hope they will enjoy reading all of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and would remind them that they may receive it weekly for the sum of two dollars per year.

Rev. and Mrs. W. Millard Stevens of Union Ridge Christian Church spent the week following Christmas visiting relatives and friends in Alabama. This followed a busy Christmas season at their church which included: a pageant by the young people on Sunday night, December 17; a program by the children and Christmas tree for them on the next Friday night; Christmas worship program in church on December 24, and carol-singing by the young people at the homes of aged and sick on that afternoon.

We are sorry to report a large number of cases of flu in this section of the country. Among those well-known to CHRISTIAN SUN readers who have been sick recently are: Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, Mary Graham and Rowland Wisseman, Mrs. C. H. Rowland and Miss Margaret Rowland in the parsonage of First Church, Greensboro; Mr. C. D. Johnston, superintendent of the Christian Orphanage at Elon College; Miss Tora Rudd, assistant to the pastor in First Church, Burlington; and Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker, secretary to Dr. J. O. Atkinson in the Mission Office, Elon College. Attendance in our churches has been smaller than usual because of illness. We hope that soon our people will be able to be back at work and worship.

NORFOLK CHURCH TO HOLD BIBLE CONFERENCE.

Recognizing the need of a more intensive study of the Word of Life, the First Congregational-Christian Church of Norfolk, Va., is preparing for a four-day Bible Conference which will be held from January 16-19, 1940. The Rev. H. Framer Smith, Ph.D., Th.D., noted Bible teacher of Philadelphia, will be the speaker.

Dr. Smith will be heard twice each day during the four-day period. The afternoon sessions, beginning at three o'clock, will be devoted to an informal teaching of the Epistle of First John. The evening services, beginning at 7:30, will feature a running exposition of St. Paul's Epistle to the Philippians. Rev. J. Frank Morgan, Rosemont Christian Church, will direct the singing at the evening services.

Dr. Smith will be heard over the Church of Air, Station WTAR on the mornings of January 17-19, from 8:45 to 9:00. He will address assemblies at the Norfolk School of the Bible on January 17 and 19, at 10:00 A. M.

If there ever was a man who possessed the gift of teaching, it is H. Framer Smith. It is amazing how clearly and easily he can bring out the deep things of the Word of God.

THE PAST YEAR.

Last year this writer prophesied that decisions would be made during 1939 that would change the currents of history. It was in that year that Europe lost some of its little countries and became a seething battlefield. No one could guess a year ago that conditions would become what they have, but momentous decisions were made during the past year.

In our church some significant things happened. The World Council was called off because of the war in Europe. We continue to spend more on our local churches and less on the world-wide church of Christ. Our college has made significant progress towards paying out of debt and improving its program. Several new pastorates have been started, and many churches now have new pastors. There was an increase in the membership of our churches, and four new churches were organized within the Southern Convention.

There was enough of good in 1939 to give us encouragement and enough of bad to make us willing for the old year to pass away. Like it or not, the old year is gone and we are now embarked on a new year fresh from the hand of God.

NEW YEAR OPPORTUNITIES.

In 1940 world conditions may grow desperately worse or they may become much better. We are inclined to believe the latter will take place. No one seems to like the war situation. Those who do the fighting are not mad at each other. The countries involved have little or nothing to gain so far as the populace can see. Movements are under way to create good will among church people around the world. Many Americans seem to be afraid of the President's move in calling upon Protestant, Jewish, and Catholic leaders to work for international peace, but of this we can be certain: If the religious people of the world really get together and work earnestly, peace will be the result. This is the great opportunity of the church in 1940. Partisan politics and fear of other religious groups should most certainly not deter us from active efforts to end the present war and to make another impossible. The President is right in calling on the people of good-will to make peace a reality. Friendship and understanding among Protestants, Jews, and Catholics will do much towards healing the broken-hearted world. Members of our churches will do well to join in every possible movement looking to friendships, and cooperative efforts among peoples around the world. Perhaps before the year ends the Japanese will be out of China, the Germans can enjoy their neighbors, and Russia will have learned to respect the borders of small nations. Work towards this end is the opportunity that lies before us. Let us not forget that the way to peace is the way of God's will, and that His will is learned by the study of His Word and sincere prayer.

In our Southern Convention churches there is the opportunity to prove our ability to do the things that we should. The Golden Anniversary of Elon College should mean that it is clear from debt. We are plenty wealthy to care for one hundred children in our Orphanage—that is about one child for two churches. At present we are not quite reaching this standard. We can care for all our aged ministers and their families. We are not too impoverished to clear our churches of debt, establish new churches within our midst, and redouble our efforts to build the church and minister to human needs in other countries. This year we have the chance to try again to meet the standards set by our Convention. Only a small number met those standards last year. We will meet them this year if we have the will and wisdom to work together towards that end. If we fail it will not be because of poverty, but because of our failure in those things that come close to the heart of our religion. The needs of our church will test the mettle of our members. The opportunity to serve is listed in the statistical table of the "Christian Annual" in what we call Conference Apportionments.

Many other opportunities come to us with the New Year, but only one more can be listed here. This one is personal. We can make ourselves the persons we ought to be. None of us are as strong, intelligent, or good as we might be. Possibilities yet untried lie all around us. Many need to improve their health. To do so they may be forced to change their habits. Close contact with the Great Physician is important, but do not expect God to give good health to those who will not use judgment enough to come in out of the rain. Intelligence and goodness may be improved by effort. This world needs all of both that we can develop. The Father of Jesus certainly expects us to know more and to be better than we are. That is probably the reason why he has given us another year.

"MY CHURCH."

We do not know all that Jesus meant when he said "my church," but it must have stirred his soul when he looked down the centuries and saw his church triumphing over all evil. That part of his church that is you and me may not be doing so well, but we have the assurance that His Church shall never fail. When you worship with your friends again, sit quietly and listen for the still voice that says, "my church." Try repeating the words "my church" as you think of its Founder, and feel the warmth within your heart. The Master loved the church so much that he gave Himself for it. How well do we love the church, and how much will we give for it this good year? If you love enough, and give enough, you can say, "my church" and it will have meaning.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

For several days workmen have been tearing down one of the older residences on the street near our home. This home was built by carpenters in a time when lumber was carefully selected. Original growth, heart pine was used throughout the building. The framing was large, mortised, and strongly braced. Brick chimneys were erected on the outside, with open fireplaces. The building was well preserved, but it was torn down to be replaced by a large store.

This home was occupied by a prominent family for many years. The young and old have gathered around the fireside in other days. The burdens and pleasures, the joys and sorrows were inter-mingled as in other homes. Old age lingered and dreamed of good old days past and gone forever. Children and grand children added the touches of air castles and glowing visions of the future. The original owners have passed to the spirit land. The children live in other homes. Business must have more space. The old home has been torn down and the lot has been cleared for another building.

Yesterday the workmen cut down a beautiful magnolia tree, about eighteen inches or more in diameter, and dug up the stump, as the last act in clearing this lot for other workmen. That tree was placed there about sixty years ago. It was carefully watched and nurtured through its tender years. Its green leaves have sheltered many birds from wind and rain, sleet and snow. A cooling shade by day and a warm protection during the cold winter nights. But the beautiful tree was cut into small pieces to be burned. The tree has gone the way of all the earth. It was attractive in its day. But its day is done.

This house, and the tree that stood as a sentinel by its side, are parables of life. Men and women come upon the stage and fill their places and have their day. The time comes when their work is done, and they must give place to others. They filled their places well, but others must have their day of opportunity and responsibility. Fifty years from this day only a few people in this city will remember the old building and the magnolia tree. And when the people of another generation take their places in the homes along this street, or go to their offices in stores and factories, they will not know the names of the people who are prominent in the social and business life of this age.

In making these observations it must not be taken for granted that the new brick building will be more important in its day than the residence it will replace. The new is not always better than the old. The final place of importance must await the judgment of time and maturity. Neither is the old better than the new, because of its age. In the final accounting a day is but a thousand years, and a thousands years as a day. Time is not the vital element in a building, or a tree, or a business, or a DREAM OF HOME.

Your dream of home a mansion may be,
A cottage where mountain streams flow;
It may be a castle o'er-looking the sea,
Or a cabin where wild flowers grow.

If you have money and select your design,
To please every whim of your heart,
You can build as you will, but afterwards find,
That the house is only a part.

It may be built with the greatest of skill
Of brick, cement, mortar and stone;
But its highest mission never can fill,
Till God, and love make it a home.

Enlarge your dream of home my friend
And fashion each part with care;
Make God and love its highest end,
And joy will abide with you there.

—R. A. Whitten in "Along Life's Way."

life. The vital factor is the quality of its character and the value of its service. A house may endure the storms of a century and be a den of vice. Or it may come to the end of its usefulness and be remembered as a home where love reigned in human hearts and children learned the lessons of obedience and righteous living.

Men come and go. Homes serve their day and return to the dust. Business arises and has its day—to pass into oblivion. The rich become poor and the poor become rich. The meek shall inherit the earth. "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven."

ELON COLLEGE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY.

The church, the alumni, and friends of Elon College are greatly interested in the celebrations at the college during 1939-40.

Founders Day was observed September 14 with fitting ceremonies. The principal speaker for the occasion was His Excellency, the Honorable Clyde R. Hoey, Governor of North Carolina. The original faculty was given the place of honor on the program of celebration. An elm tree was planted on the campus commemorating this historic occasion.

The second period of celebration will occur February this year. The opening address will be Sunday morning, February 11, at eleven o'clock, topic, "The Church and Education." President William Preston Few of Duke University has been invited to deliver the address. The remainder of the program will be as follows:

Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock, topic, "The State Schools in Cooperation With Church-Related Institutions of Higher Learning." President Frank P. Graham of the University of North Carolina has been invited as guest speaker.

Monday evening at 7:30 Chancellor Oliver C. Carmichael of Vanderbilt University has accepted the invitation to speak on "The Independent College in Cooperation With the Church-Related Colleges in the Field of Higher Education."

Tuesday evening at 7:30 Dr. Gould Wickey, Executive Secretary for the Church-Related Schools in the United States, will speak on "The Contribution of the Church-Related College to the Causes of Higher Education." These addresses will be followed each evening with a period of open forum discussions lead by different members of the faculty. Attendance by the students and faculty on these occasions will be required. There will also be in attendance educators from other institutions, ministers and laymen from the church. The general public is cordially invited.

Family Religion and Home Cooperation

An Address Delivered at the Georgia State Conference

By MRS. C. LISLE PERCY

Our topic, "Family Religion and Home Cooperation," is a very timely topic, for a very similar subject was chosen for Childhood and Youth Week, the third week in October. Parents, realizing the changes which are now taking place in the social, economic and moral structure of our world, are really confessing an inadequacy in giving children guidance. Yet they feel that upon the home rests the final responsibility for building permanent values.

The home, as everyone concedes, is still the greatest and the finest institution of civilization. We fathers and mothers will also have to concede that the home is what we make it. The five topics which our denomination has chosen for this year's program show the tendency in this perplexing time to turn right back to the religious beliefs of our grandparents—the same in essence, anyway, if not in rigidity. Many of you remember when we did have family prayers every morning and nothing interfered with them. Each child was taught to say grace at the table, and each child was encouraged to pray his own prayer at night. It does take quite a bit of time when each child wishes to pray for each one he knows and feels obliged to describe each one in detail to God. And yet the child's faith is strengthened when he finds that the tea man for whom he prayed has been able to extricate his truck which had been stuck in the mud.

I was brought up in a strict Methodist home, where we were taught our Sunday school lessons as carefully as our daily school lessons. My grandmother bought us a blackboard and she insisted that we write the answers to our Sunday school questions on it before going to church each Sunday. Unfortunately for me, she did not attend the same Sunday school class that I did and I was often punished for misbehavior by not being allowed to answer any of the questions asked. We were not permitted to play week-day games on Sunday, yet Sunday was never dull. The neighbor's children were invited in and our grandmother read to us or played Bible games with us. By means of these games, similar to the Peter Coddle type, the whole neighborhood learned the answers to the most common questions on the New and Old Testaments. For some reason the Old Testament appealed to us the most. Probably this was because every child, if exposed to them, loves the Old Testament stories.

I admit that in the hurry and bustle of our modern world it is harder to find a time for family worship, but I still believe that it could be found. We find time for the things that we want to do. In one modern family while the mother is getting breakfast, the father, with a child upon each knee, turns on the radio to a particularly fine devotional program. They follow the Scripture reading with their own Bible and sing the hymns with the choir. Such a service every morning can hardly fail to impress a child.

The modern child responds just as readily to spiritual teaching as the child of fifty years ago. Every child naturally wonders with awe and reverence concerning nature. He can so easily be made to feel the order and beauty in everything and be taught to recognize the Power behind it. This development, however, is dependent upon the calls made upon it. The parent must educate and nourish it, he or she must help the child to formulate a philosophy of life, must teach the truths which tend to form a stable foundation, security and real purpose. When the child begins to ask questions concerning the creation of the universe, it is the mother's place to explain as best she can our dependence upon the Creator, our need of prayer, and the common precepts of right and wrong. These things cannot be left to the Sunday school teacher who has the children but one hour a week. All this requires planning and thinking, training ourselves to answer these questions satisfactorily to our children. Puzzling problems often arise which require us to keep on the "qui vive." A child learns by precept; it is foolish to teach the child to pray and not pray one's self; it is foolish to send a child to Sunday school and church and not go one's self. Sooner or later the reaction will naturally be, "As soon as I am old enough I will draw out from under all of this."

It is not hard to talk to a child about Jesus if we show them the pictures of Christ the Good Shepherd, of Christ blessing the little children, of Christ knocking on the door, or of Christ, the boy in the temple. They will grow to love these pictures and the stories connected with them. We have interested neighborhood children by putting pictures on the radiotopic and throwing the pictures on the wall. The children loved to guess the story represented. One father pasted Bible pictures on a strip of brown paper and wound it up on a reel. As he turned the reel the children would call for the best-loved story. There are very fine illustrated children's Bible story books now, and many fine story papers well worth the few pennies invested in them for building character.

Often there is not religious training in the home because the parents themselves were not trained along these lines, and yet in recent surveys it is often this untrained parent who feels the need for his child. Perhaps it is just indifference, and yet the modern parent is not indifferent to the physical and mental needs of his child. Perhaps the excuse is offered, "I will let my child choose his religious beliefs when he grows up," but he isn't allowed to wait until he grows up to choose his spinach and cod liver oil (he might never choose them), or whether or not and how he shall learn the multiplication table. How much more important in this baffling world that he be given a stable standard, that he be taught that he is a part not only of the home but of a social unit. He must learn early not to do as he pleases, but to respect the rights of others.

Most of the women here and a few men belong to a parent-teacher organization. As parents we have learned to work with the day school teacher for the best physical and mental development of our children. Why is it that we do not have a parent-teacher group in connection with our Sunday school? Why is it that we almost never talk to the Sunday school teacher about the course of study, or what the child is expected to do in preparation for the lesson. I do re- (Continued on page 9.)

Elon College Golden Anniversary

Most good undertakings that do not succeed fail for the lack of human effort and cooperation on the part of those directly or indirectly concerned.

Our goal is three thousand members for the club. Potential members are scattered literally to the ends of the earth. It is impossible to interview everyone personally. We inaugurated a plan sufficiently comprehensive to carry the privilege and appeal to everyone interested. There certainly must be three thousand individuals interested enough in Elon College to join the club. Many who are interested simply delay and defer definite decision. We are undertaking this campaign without the expense of a professional money-raising agency. The campaign has been going fairly well. Its present rate, however, is not so encouraging. The writer is willing to work day and night, but both night and day put together are not sufficiently long to permit personal canvassing among our wide constituency.

The Alamance County Campaign is still in progress. The holidays made a serious break. Friends outside of Alamance County seem to be hesitating before sending in their subscriptions and contributions. My dear reader, if you have not joined the club, won't you please send in your membership. The fee is $50.00 to be paid on or before May 1 if possible. If not convenient to pay that early, write us when you can pay. This year is certainly the opportunity to get this college debt behind us. Together we can do it.

CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS.

January and February constitute the College Period on our church calendar. During this period pastors and superintendents are asked to inform their churches and Sunday Schools concerning Elon College and the Convention's plan for the support of the college by the church. Your church has been apportioned a definite amount. It is the plan of the Convention that this amount be raised during this period. All amounts raised by the church or any organization within the church and sent direct to the college for conference apportionments only will count on that church's apportionment. It is a good time to begin to raise these amounts. A number of our Sunday schools have already begun. They are, as follows:

What Share Do You Have in ELON COLLEGE?

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

The first CHRISTIAN SUN of the new year has just come to my house! I have looked through it very carefully but there was no Children's Page to be found! Were you disappointed, too? I knew that there would be no Children's Page. I had started the page but I got sick with the flu and even though I tried to sit up long enough to finish it, I felt too badly. So—that is why there was no page for you. I shall try very hard not to let this happen again.

Did you have a good Christmas? My husband and I had a very busy but happy Christmas. My husband is a minister and is the pastor of our Sanford and Shallow Well Congregational-Christian Churches. It is a big task to try to be a good pastor's wife but it is lots of fun. We do not have any children to share Christmas with us in our home but there are hundreds of them in our two churches. So we know how many happy children are at Christmas and how much they try to bring happiness to others.

The boys and girls in our Sanford Sunday school brought white gifts to our White Christmas Service on Christmas Sunday. On Sunday night our boys and girls at the Shallow Well Church helped the Young People to present a Christmas pageant. Some of them were dressed up as angels and others donned ragged clothes to play the part of needy children. They had such fun doing their bit to help others to catch the real message of the Christmas story. On Christmas afternoon Mr. Todd and I gave our annual Christmas Tea for our church members. The girls in my Sunday school class helped me just like grown women. They made new pots of tea, sandwiches and re-filled the cookie, candy and nut dishes.

On Tuesday after Christmas my husband, two young people and I drove to our Christian Orphanage at Elon College to take the white gifts; those gifts which our Sanford boys and girls brought to Sunday school on Christmas Sunday. The boys and girls at the orphanage showed us the lovely Christmas trees which they had decorated all by themselves.

Now Christmas is over for 1939 and we are looking forward to another glad time in 1940. Just the same I am going to send in a poem for this page which is about Christmas. Mazie Redding from Pleasant Garden, N. C., sent it to me with a letter just before Christmas. I think it is good for a first one. I hope that she will start earlier next year and get one to me in time for our Christmas Page. Will others of you try sending me some of your poems?

Happy New Year to all of you! May all of your good dreams come true in 1940!

Sincerely,

DOROTHY TODD.

snow-covered mountains, and to the east they could see a little bit of the big sea. In fact, the sea was the first thing they looked for. Samuel was the first to catch a glimpse of it. They were slowly climbing the ridge when Samuel shouted:

"Look, Reuben, I see the sea."

"No," said Reuben, "that is only a cloud. We must climb higher before we see the sea."

"Oh, yes, it is," Samuel replied. "Look where I point and you can see it. Right there between the hills is just a little bit of it. Do you see it?"

And sure enough there was a wee bit of the sea. It was much darker than the sky, and Reuben knew it must be the sea as soon as he saw where Samuel pointed.

The boys loved to play on the ridge. They liked to look at the mountains far away to the north. They also loved to watch the men pass on the road below the ridge.

The long walk to the ridge had made them hungry, so they did not wait long before they ate the lunch that mother had prepared for them. Then they lay on their stomachs and watched the road. There were horses, donkeys, and camels loaded high with goods. Many men were walking beside them, and a few men were riding. Reuben knew that most of these people had come from Damascus and were on their way to Egypt. He wanted to go down near the road where he could see them better, but Samuel reminded him that mother said it was dangerous near the road.

They had been lying there a long time when they saw three men turn off the road. Two of them stayed near the road with the donkeys, but the other started climbing the ridge. Samuel and Reuben thought of the warnings from Mother and Father. They had told them that some mean men had once stole children and sold them in Egypt as slaves.

"Let us run," suggested Samuel.

"No, he will catch us," replied Reuben. "We will lie very still in that hole and perhaps he will not see us."

The man kept coming straight toward them, but Samuel and Reuben lay very still and did not talk.

"THE WITNESS" OF JOHN.

Our good women in their missionary societies could not possibly have chosen for the year a better theme than "Witnessing," nor a better source than that of the Fourth Gospel—St. John. This whole book of John is one of witnessing and it will be difficult indeed for the devotionals in the societies to be conducted, if based on this Fourth Gospel, which do not bear witness to the fact that Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God. The Gospel itself opens with a declaration of witnessing, that "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." And then the Beloved Disciple in writing the book follows this declaration with the witness of John the Baptist. John the Baptist in bearing witness declared that he himself was not the true Light, but that he was only a voice in the wilderness giving testimony to the true Light that should shine ever brighter and brighter through the ages. And then John the Baptist declared that he must decrease while the true Light must increase and thus bore witness in such a manner that cannot now be mistaken.

Moreover, John the Beloved Disciple, writer of the Fourth Gospel, follows the witnessing of John the Baptist by calling and naming the disciples who were to be his witness-bearers, proving (see John, second chapter) that his was the right and privilege to call and name these disciples who were to bear witness of Him by confirming the same with the "beginning of miracles." When the first miracle was wrought both Jesus Christ and his disciples were there and he made the beginning of his miracles bear witness of divine power. And then, in the third chapter of John, he causes one of the rulers of the Pharisees, Nicodemus, to bear record of Him. And in the fourth chapter of the Gospel, Jesus himself bears testimony of Himself to a woman of Samaria that he is the Messiah—the one sent of God to redeem the world and reconcile the world to God through himself. He sent this poor woman out to bear testimony of him, and she bore it in such a way that many from her city flocked to see and hear for themselves, and they returned bearing testimony of what they had seen and heard, all the testimony being to the fact that Jesus Christ is the son of the living God.

Some writer has quite truly observed that at a later date when Paul began to bear witness of his own conversion and the change that had been wrought in his own life, then churches began to spring up. It is a singular and very interesting fact that in every instance as related by Luke in the Acts of the Apostles where Paul testified to the fact that he was converted to the true faith in Jesus Christ as Savior and Redeemer, that a church sprang up. But where he argued the matter, as he did at Athens, for instance, with the scholars and great thinkers of his day, no church was established there. It has been repeated again and again through the ages, and the same truth will continue to bear repetition, that wherever one bears witness by word of mouth to the saving power of the Son of God, that of itself is the power of God unto the salvation of men. This writer had a friend who spent the last years of his life investing the savings of a lifetime (over $200,000.00) in employing missionaries in China, Japan, India and Africa, whose sole business it was to bear witness that they themselves believed in and accepted Jesus Christ as the Son of the living God. This friend, who passed to his reward about a year ago, having kept a record from the reports of these missionaries, found that they had won some 60,000 souls to the worship of the true and living God. So our women in their missionary societies, let me repeat, will do well indeed to bear some of these things in mind as they follow in their worship service this year the theme they have chosen, namely "Witnessing," and the book they have chosen, the Fourth Gospel.

Sincerely,

J. O. ATKINSON.

We acknowledge with deep grati- tude the above offerings and all who had a part therein. "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." We feel that as our people make a contribution to the wholly un- selfish and divine work of Missions that to that extent they become in- terested in sharing the love and life of our Lord with those less favored than themselves.

Owing to conditions which we could not control, we submit the report of four weeks, which we trust will prove satisfactory and will be found to correspond with the amounts sent in by the various Sunday schools, churches, and individuals.

member asking one of my children once what the teacher asked her to do for the next Sunday and she said, "She told us to draw a picture of God, and if we could not draw a picture of God to draw a picture of an old woman with an apron on." In order to see the point to an answer like that one would need to establish some contact with the teacher.

My uncle and aunt had six chil- dren, and I suppose they were normal mischief-loving youngsters, yet even as a child I sensed the spiritual at- mosphere in that home. There was no quarreling between father and mother, and although I lived next door I never heard my aunt raise her voice in anger to any of the children. Each one had his daily tasks to per- form and was made to realize that the home could not run smoothly unless he did his part.

It is impossible for the religious life of the child to develop naturally when the father and mother are con- stantly on the verge of divorce. I saw a picture recently of a child pray- ing for her parents who were about to separate. She prayed, "O God, you know how to fix things up. Please do." If her parents had her faith all might have been well. Many parents wish that they had the faith they had as children when they truly believed in God and the future world. Of course, the reason that they have not that faith is because it is a long time since they have exercised it.

It is also very difficult for harmony in the home when the religious views of the father and the mother are dia- metrically opposed to one another, as, for example, the mother a Jewess and the father a Catholic; or the mother a Christian Scientist and the father having no patience with her views.

In a recent survey published in the Ladies Home Journal it has been found that church membership has not decreased in recent years, but church attendance has. It seems that the women of New England down through North Carolina and Georgia still go to church regularly, but the farther west we go the smaller the church attendance. The farm women and the small town women are at- tending better than the city women. The church of today is at last waking up to its need and its opportunity. The city church is changing its pro- gram to meet the changing conditions in the homes. It has its parent-train- ing classes, it has trained teachers in its Sunday school, it has a nursery

CHINA NEW YEAR.

China New Year is a very important date to people living in that country—it is an advantageous time for business transactions, and it is the date on which everyone becomes a year older! The young people of the Southeast are interested in that date this year, for at that time they hope the money will be in hand to purchase the badly needed land and buildings for our mission station in Tientsin, China. The time of China New Year is not on the same date each year, like ours, but varies with the moon. This year it comes a little later than usual, February 4, and thus gives us a little more time in which to raise the money for our China Friendship Project.

Put on an extra drive in your group next Sunday and see if you can raise some money for this project to send in next week. We hope to have a report soon from each of the Conferences showing how much has been raised by each one. Many societies have raised some money, but have not sent it in. It is preferable that this be sent to your Conference treasurer, but it may be sent direct to Roland Allgood, Treasurer of Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship, 1414 West 27th St., Norfolk, Va., or to Miss Frances Foster, 614 Arlington St., Greensboro, N. C. Do not forget to find out about the money in your society, and send it in right away.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WEEK.

The week of January 28 - February 4, will be observed as Young People's Week by many denominations, including our own. We hope that special plans will be made for this week in our churches in this area. Last year some of the churches gave a supper in honor of their young people, in others one church service was given over to the young people, and in still others the minister conducted a special young people's service at the regular church hour. We will be interested in reports of the things you do in your church this year.

Miss Lucy Eldredge has some suggestions for this week in the January issue of the Pilgrim Highroad. Among them are: young people giving a tea on Sunday afternoon for their minister and his wife, perhaps inviting their parents, with a program by the young people; have a "question box" on the preceding Sunday, into which young people are to put questions about the church that they would like to have your minister answer, give them to the minister in advance, so he can be studying them, then have him answer them at your meeting on January 28. You may have one or more of the following goals in mind, as you prepare something "special" for this week: (1) Interesting adults in the young people's work in their church. (2) Learning more about your church, both denomination and local. (3) Interesting all the young people in your church in coming to its services. (4) More cooperation and understanding between young people and adults in your church. The Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., will be glad to help you in any way possible in preparing special services for Youth Week.

ALABAMA GOALS.

In the Down South News we find a letter from Donald Carson and Ouida Wright, officers of the Alabama Pilgrim Fellowship, outlining the goals of that group:

1. Every Congregational-Christian Church have a young people's organization of some kind. That each district fellowship undertake this responsibility for its own area (Suggestion: Strong societies organize and sponsor new groups).

2. State Fellowship feel responsible for all Congregational-Christian young people in our area and for bringing into our fellowship all young people not connected with other churches.

3. Each local fellowship put on a program of church beautification.

4. Each member develop the habit of daily personal devotions.

5. Each organization be represented at its district association, state conference, local Christian Life Conference, and at least one Leadership Training School.

6. Each organization take a definite share in the financial support of its (Continued on page 15.)

WHAT IT MEANS TO PRAY AND READ THE BIBLE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
JANUARY 21, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: Psalms 119: 11-16;
I John 5: 13-15.

Daily Readings—

Monday—One of Many Answered Prayers—Acts 12: 5-11.

Tuesday—Listening to Jehovah—Psalms 85: 7-9.

Wednesday—Benefits of God's Law—Psalms 19: 7-11.

Thursday—Faith and Hearing—Romans 10: 13-17.

Friday—Assurance of Answered Prayer—Isaiah 65: 24.

Saturday—Enlightened and Inspired—Luke 24: 25-32.

The third declaration in the Christian Endeavor pledge for consideration is: "I will make it the rule of my life to pray and read the Bible."

Discuss the Questions—

1. How can we form and keep such a rule? Make time for important things; plans for family worship; be conscious of sin; keep spiritually alive.

2. How can prayer mean most to us? By giving ourselves in prayer; using various ways of praying; noting persons, situations, and sins which need praying for; having a purpose in prayer, praying for something or some person regularly; and by praying in the spirit "Thy will be done."

3. How does the Bible become most helpful? Read the Bible expecting to learn; use a Concordance to find those passages which will be most helpful in meeting a problem or in resisting a temptation; memorize Biblical passages, and share these with others in Christian Endeavor and on similar occasions.

4. What keeps American youth from placing more emphasis on prayer and Bible study? We are too busy; homes are too crowded to find a quiet and private place; we are accustomed to push a button and get what we want, surrounded by man's power and forget God; we are too proud and self-sufficient, and fail to realize our shortcomings.

Let various members give a testimony on the subject, "Spiritual and moral help I have gained from regular devotional life."

Suggested Hymns—

"Our God, Our Help in Ages Past."

"Take Time To Be Holy."

"Sweet Hour of Prayer."

THE PROBLEM OF FORGIVENESS.

LESSON II—JANUARY 14, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 18:15; 19:30.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 32:1-5.

GOLDEN TEXT: Forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors.—Matthew 6:12.

One can not realize just how tragic it is for people to hold a grudge, or to harbor an unforgiving spirit, unless he reads carefully the many words which Jesus spoke on these subjects. Jesus' heart was so filled with love toward God and with an undiscourageable goodwill toward all men that to him one of the worst and most costly sins in which any man could indulge was to have anger or malice in his heart, or to cherish an unforgiving spirit. Again and again he warns men against these two evils. And again and again he emphasizes the importance of living in right relationship toward men as the only basis on which men can live on right relationships with God.

The Right Way to Do It.

Jesus knew that it was inevitable that folks would rub each other the wrong way, that offenses would come, that intentionally or unintentionally people would do us wrong. He also knew that was almost instinctive in human nature to fight back. But in today's lesson Jesus tells us of a better way, of a right way to deal with these difficulties. If a man wrongs us we are not to fight back, we are not to harbor ill will, we are not to plot or plan revenge. Jesus suggests that we go to the person who has wronged us and in a quiet and calm way tell him that we believe we have been wronged by him. If he refuses to respond to this reasonable approach we are to avail ourselves of the help of friends in an effort to effect reconciliation. If he still refuses we are to present the matter to the church. If, however, he is still stiff necked and hard hearted, there is nothing else that we can do—he is to be to us as a publican and a sinner. But under no circumstances are we to hold malice in our hearts toward him.

Unlimited Forgiveness.

"How oft shall my brother sin against me and I forgive him, until seven times?" Thus said Simon Peter to Jesus. Simon Peter thought that he was doing the handsome thing when he suggested that he forgive his brother seven times, for the Talmud suggested that after the third time one need not forgive those who had wronged him. Imagine the surprise of Simon Peter when Jesus told him that he was to forgive the one who had wronged him not only seven times but seventy times seven. Jesus did not mean literally, of course, four hundred and ninety times, but he did mean that forgiveness should be limited. No matter how often one may have wronged us, if he is truly penitent and sincerely seeks forgiveness, forgiveness ought to be granted. To be sure one would suspect the sincerity of a man who again and again wronged his fellowmen. At the same time it must be kept in mind that it is impossible to forgive a man who refuses to be forgiven. The one must forgive; the other must accept forgiveness. This applies not only to human relationships; it applies also to our relationships with God. God can not forgive a man who does not want to be forgiven. Neither can God forgive a man who refuses to forgive his fellow man. For ultimately forgiveness depends upon a state of mind, an attitude or quality of heart. And as long as a man has an unforgiving spirit in his own heart he does not have the primary requisite for forgiveness from God.

As We Forgive.

One of the most searching and startling statements which Jesus ever made were the words "Forgive us our trespasses even as we also forgive those who have trespassed against us." A man who has an unforgiving spirit ought to give heed to these words. Every time we say what we call the Lord's Prayer, we ask God to forgive us only insofar as, and only in such measure as we have forgiven those who have sinned against us. Perhaps the most costly thing in which a man can indulge is the refusal to forgive his fellowmen.

A Story Illustrates the Point.

As was so often the case, Jesus illustrates this principle by telling a story. A man who owed another a huge sum—it amounted to millions of dollars—when summoned to give an account of his debt frankly confessed that he was unable to pay, but pleaded for mercy and promised to pay in full if only he was given a chance.

His lord graciously and generously forgave him. Forthwith this same man, however, went out and summoned before him a man who owed him $17.00. When this poor fellow, in exactly the same words which the other man had used in making his plea for mercy, asked for mercy the man who had been forgiven refused to forgive his fellowman and had him put in prison. When his lord heard about this ruthless action, he immediately pronounced judgment upon the betrayer of his mercy. Thus does Jesus give the basis for our willingness and our eagerness to forgive others. Others forgive so much in us that we ought to be willing to forgive our fellowmen. And beyond that we are debtors to God in such unpayable measure for the forgiveness which he grants to us that we ought also to forgive one another.

"HEARING THE VOICE OF GOD.""He that is of the truth heareth my voice."—John 18:37.

THE VOICE OF GOD.

All day long with anxious heart and wondering ear,

I listened to the city; heard the ground
Echo with human thunder, and the sound
Go reeling down the streets and disappear.
The headlong hours, in their wild career Shouted and sang until the word was drowned,With babel voices, each one more profound,
All day is surged—but nothing could I hear.That night the country never seemed so still;
The trees and grasses spoke without a word
To stars that brushed them with their silver wings.Together with the moon I climbed the hill,
And, in the very heart of silence, heard
The speech and music of immortal things.

—Louise Untermeyer.

TUESDAY.

*"MANSIONS OF THE LORD.""In my father's house are many mansions."—John 14:2.*In the book Days of Our Years by Pierre Van Paassen, one named Henry Bataille is quoted as saying, "What is needed to shelter all the love under heaven, the greatest sorrow and the most pressing care of earth is a solitary tree, on one of whose low-hanging branches sits a magpie blinking at the passing clouds."

Van Paassen indulged a memory of his early life when he sat before an open window on a long summer evening watching the lamps being lit in the homes of the neighbors along the hillsides, and calls these homes "The mansions of the Lord." In the thought of these things, he caught a breath of eternity. He felt, rather than understood, the solution of the riddle of human existence; the sense, the purpose and the mystery of life.

If we sense his meaning, it is that the loves of home, though mixed with sorrows, are but foretastes of the heavenly mansions of God.

Prayer—O Lord, we thank Thee for our home, its loves, its sorrows, its sweets; and for our heavenly home which thou hast prepared for us. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"AN ABSENTEE BLESSING.""Ye are the temple of God."—I Cor. 3:16."The temple of the Lord."—Jer. 7:4."I have never been in one of their temples, but I have frequently listened to their congregational singing when I passed by and it always made a better man of me." So spake an Abbe' of Rome. Such is the silent influence of the church when it is resonant with worshipful souls whose cups are brimming with God's goodness. Such also is it with individuals in their everyday life, whose life is such that it makes others better to know them.Prayer—Dear Lord, who alone can make us shining souls, we offer ourselves to Thee today through Jesus to make our way bright with Thy goodness. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE SPIRITUAL DEMAND OF THE TIMES.""To whom shall we go."—John 6:68.

Von Paassen, referred to above, describes our times as times when "man has lost so much of what once gave his life direction and filled it with meaning and content, when he has allowed the struggle of life to replace the Spiritual traditions that once envelope him with their beneficent warmth, that he has become as restless as a hunted animal, seeking happiness everywhere, yet finding it nowhere. In this condition, the prey of violent changing moods, sudden unreasoning fears and desperate loneliness in a world which he does not understand, it is difficult, if not impossible, to feel that there is a tie which binds all of us to that little notch of land on the eastern shore of the Mediterranean (Palestine)." He might have substituted for Palestine these words: "to feel any longer the need of religion." To the hosts of humanity, in its delirium and yet conscious self-sufficiency, God simply does not exist.

Prayer—O God, who art able to do all things, forbid that we shall forget Thee, but help us daily to grow closer to Thee—in Christ's name. Amen.

FRIDAY.

BILLY SUNDAY'S BEQUEST.

"These all died in faith."—Heb. 11:13-16.

Remarkable evidences of persisting and widespread interest in Billy Sunday have followed the great evangelist's death. His eccentricities and defects seem to be forgotten, as his essential message and mission are remembered. Myriads whom he led up "the sawdust trail" to changed life are recalling him with grateful affection.

Billy Sunday demonstrated that the unfastidious plain people love to hear the truth stated in plain and even rough speech. They are concerned about their relation to the living God. They will still answer a clear call to repentance. And they will unite in tireless service in a concerted campaign to make Christ known to a community.

Prayer—God help us to bring the shining truths of redemption down to the levels of everyday life. May we each be a fresh translation of Thy word. *Amen.*Wm. T. Ellis in Christian Herald.

THE YEAR OF OUR LORD 1940.

"Thou crownest the year with goodness."—Psalm 65:11.

God will crown your year with goodness if you will only let Him. He will crown every day with His presence and guidance. The very days are His and He gives them to you. Every day we should arise with the psalmist and say: "This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it." Psalm 118:24). It is too late to ask the Lord to crown your year with goodness at Thanksgiving time, or at Christmas. The year is mostly gone then. Now, at the beginning of your year, is the time to plan with God to have your year crowned with goodness.

Each day will speak to you of God if you will only have it so. "Day unto day uttereth speech; night unto night showeth knowledge" (Psalm 19:2). If the Lord speaks His message of guidance, and inspiration, and challenge to you each day, you can truly say, "Day unto day uttereth speech," and you will not need to travel each day in darkness, nor try in vain to have the day crowned with success. At the end of each day you can look the day over as God did, and say, "And the evening and the morning were the first day . . . and God saw the light, that it was good Genesis 1:4, 5). He will crown each day with His goodness!

God will do His part. Each day will bring its message of love and mercy; its rain so sweet and necessary, or its sunshine so bright and beautiful. God will give seedtime, and harvest-time, and fill each day with opportunities, will crown each day with His light and life. He will speak, but will we hear His voice? He will stand on the threshold of every day and knock: "Behold I stand at the door and knock, if any man will hear my voice." How often we allow Him to knock in vain, and yet we expect Him to crown our year with His goodness. In Psalms 95:8, 9, we read, "Today, if ye will hear His voice, harden not your heart."

God has given us another year in which to hear His voice, and to do His biddings. He has spared us. Do you remember the parable of Jesus? "And He spake also this parable unto them: A certain man had a fig tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none. Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, Behold, these three years I have come seeking fruit on this fig tree, and find none; cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground? And he answering said unto him, Lord, let it alone this year also" (Luke 13:6-8). He came seeking fruit and found none! Does disappointment and shame come upon the Lord of our lives at the end of the year as he looks upon your life? Or mine? He has in His wisdom and love said, Let it alone another year also. Yes, He has spared our lives, and will be looking for fruit, in order that He may crown our year with His goodness.

When I was a boy plowing in my father's field I had to drive around a huge grapevine every year. Each spring it put forth abundance of leaves, and bounteous, fragrant blossoms, fair promises of a harvest, but each year the blossoms fell away and the vine was barren. I remembered very well when we dug up that vine, branch and root, and bore it out beyond the edge of the field. My father told me that it could not bear fruit of itself alone, and that it needed another vine to pollinate its blossoms that it might bring forth fruit. But our lives are not to be so. God will crown each day with His goodness, and His Spirit and power will be ever with us that we may bring forth much fruit. Jesus says, "I am the vine, ye are the branches. He that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing." Without God our year can never be crowned with goodness. Without God our lives may give much promise, but in the end they will be barren. "Without me," saith the Lord, "ye can do nothing" (John 15:5). "And he answering said, Lord, let it alone this year also"—another year we have for fruit bearing.

Why do men try to live their lives without God? Even Jesus said of Himself, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of Himself," and yet we all too often try to do our tasks without God!

In the providence of God you have become a member of this great old church. God is counting on you now to help make it great. God is looking to you for fruit. He has blessed you with this world's goods, and he is expecting you to lay them upon His altar of service. God has given you talents, and he is coming around looking for results. God has given you time, days, years, and he is looking for the privilege of crowning them with His goodness. God has so situated this church as to make it a leader, and example, in this Conference, and in our Convention. He has left plenty in our hands with which to make this church an outstanding blessing. He is looking for fruit. He is challenging many of you to lay a tithe of all you possess upon His altar. He is asking you for your crowning gifts in order that He may give you your crowning years. A life crowned with His goodness cries out for joy: "Everyday will I bless Thee; and I will praise Thy name forever and ever" (Psalm 145:2). There is a joy unexpressible in letting the Lord crown our days, and weeks, and months, and years with His goodness.

He who cooperates with God has His promise of help: "Call upon me (Continued on page 15.)

FAMILY ALTAR.

It seems but a short time ago that I was thrown out of the Mosque of St. Sophia, in Constantinople, for conning too openly the Christian symbols that were reappearing through the plastering. In those days the famous church was a seat of Moslem intolerance.

Now, behold, those Christian mosaics have been uncovered and restored by the Turkish Government itself; and St. Sophia is a historic monument, freely open to all the world.

Thus time does its work. Desirable things do come to pass, if we are patient. Evil conditions in public life are abolished. In a word, the Kingdom is coming.

Prayer—We would enter into the patience of the Lord, with Whom a thousand years are as a day. Help us to heed Thy "Wait on the Lord." Amen.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The financial report this week is our final report for 1939. We reached our goal for the general fund and had $2.00 over. I am happy I reached it. We never did like the word fail. It has been no easy task as some may think. We have had many obstacles to overcome. Some months ago it looked very discouraging and the way was dark and the final curtain that was to close the report this week was blue. The writer just would not give up. We had faith in the friends of the little dependent children to believe they would come to our rescue. They did, and we are happy. If we should be called home before another year rolls around and another final report is to be made I want you to know this year had a happy closing for the writer.

I want to thank each church and Sunday school, and each individual who have stood by us so faithful during the year. I want to especially thank those who came with their checks and dollars during the last two days when it was discouraging. You hold a warm place in my heart. May God's richest blessings be yours during 1940.

Superintendent.

where its working mothers may leave their children in safety, it has its supervised play periods for the children after school. There are study classes for young business women, there are rooms where they may entertain their friends. My daughter belongs to a young matron's class of forty members; they have their own missionary circle, their own socials, and above all, a wonderful leader.

The rural church cannot perhaps pay well trained leaders, but its leaders could put more time and thought into the work undertaken. The Sunday school teacher in the small church can visit the homes of her pupils, can find out the needs in each home, can help the mother to straighten out many a tangle. When a doctor wants to diagnose a case he goes back to the home. The court, the school, and the social worker before making any decision in a case investigate the home. The mothers and teachers can meet together to talk over the work of the Sunday school and young people's society. A teacher cannot hope to hold a group of children just by reading aloud the lesson to them; they could do that for themselves. Even though not fully trained herself, she has learned many things concerning that lesson by experience which she can helpfully pass along. She can learn something of modern methods, if she will, from the Sunday school superintendent, the young people's secretary, or by attending the summer conferences where they have special training classes.

Wherever possible the church should be open more than once a week. In one country church where we were we tried, and very successfully, to have the church open all day Wednesday. The children had their junior league or scout meeting, the women perhaps a missionary meeting or the meeting of a group to tie a quilt. Each Sunday school class in turn provided a substantial but inexpensive supper at 10c a plate. There was a prayer meeting in the evening, followed by a general social. The pastor was available all day for talks with individuals members. It seems to me that would be one of the most pleasant tasks of the pastor—to make himself, as it were, a part of every family, to whom each individual would feel free to turn for advice when necessary. He may not know the answer to every question, but he can usually direct the inquirer to the right solution.

During the past year a church in Nashville sensed a particular need for a closer cooperation between church and home, so a church-home cooperation committee was appointed. The committee planned a series of four forums: (1) Church and Home Cooperation—Why and How? (2) The Organization, Objectives, and Nature of the Sunday School (led by the superintendent). (3) Literature and Equipment Used (after the discussion the parents were asked to visit the departments). (4) Needs of the Sunday School. It was decided that one of the greatest needs was an assistant hired to help the pastor carry out the whole program. A questionnaire was sent out to many of the young people, asking them to state the problem which most concerned them, to state the problem in the individual home, to tell what the church could do to improve its work. The answers from the questionnaire formed the basis for the discussions on further programs. A meeting of the parents was called before the Vacation Bible School, and its purpose in the day of trouble; and I will deliver thee" (Psalm 50:15). How many of us go right along without thinking much of the Lord until we come to the day of trouble, and then we think God has not been good to us when troubles pile upon us. But he has warned us aforetime. "Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. But you say, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed Thee? In tithes and offerings. . . . Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it (Mal. 3:7-10).

What are the blessings you would like to have throughout the year? Are you not willing to say God's blessings? Are you not willing to begin today to count on His blessings by cultivating His presence daily, and looking to Him for the light of His guidance upon your daily pathway? Begin today to walk in Him. Begin today to let Him crown your year 1940 with His goodness. Begin today to let Him supply your every need according to His riches in glory.

One day in His presence is better than many days without Him. "A day in Thy courts is better than a thousand (days)" saith the psalmist (Psalm 84:10). "Teach us to so number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom" (Psalm 90:12), unto the wisdom of giving God the privilege day by day of crowning our year with His goodness!

was explained. The parents were called upon to aid in transportation and at the end of two weeks were invited to the exhibit of the work done by the children. The program ended with a family picnic for all.

By means of a questionnaire sent out to our young people it has been found that the large majority of the young men and women express a hope of being married, having children, and establishing a successful home. They want to succeed in this greatest of adventures, but lack the knowledge as to how it is to be done. The Christian college is recognizing this need and it is now offering courses in Family Relations which are being well patronized. The school and the church together can do a great deal to solve our present problems.

The home is necessary for religious growth and development. May we all strive to make ours the best possible, working toward complete cooperation between it and our church.

CHILDREN'S RELIGION.

Our denomination's new publication Children's Religion undertakes to help parents and teachers in their mutual problem of training children in the Christian religion. It is a well-edited, illustrated, and helpful monthly magazine for both parents and teachers. One of its features is material for use with children in home devotions. The magazine may be secured for a dollar ($1.00) a year from Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

RELIGION IN THE HOME

By REV. WARREN S. ARCHIBALD.

Religion in the home is the source of institutional religion. It is the spring from which flow those rivers of the water of life—the Churches of Christ. When God sent his Gospel in Jesus Christ into this world, he sent it not through the temple or the synagogue, but through the Home. And when the Christian Church began, the first meeting-houses were not temples or basilicas, but Homes. Religion worth its salt is home-made religion. It is never good for much when made in ecclesiastical factories. Religion in Home, therefore, is most important, because it is one of the sources of religion. If that source is neglected, then the devaluation which inevitably follows, is appalling.

Religion in the Home is first of all an atmosphere, a life. It is the way we speak, and look, and act, and think, and feel, and live. A real Christian home is like Heaven, where they need no temple. The atmosphere, the life is a temple, and therefore Heaven. Religion in the Home is the life to which all contribute: a life of love, and joy, and peace; nobility and honor; high standards; durable values; the beautitudes of daily living. It is the very opposite of the vulgar, common, trivial, and vile. A child growing up in such a home may say: I had a Christian home and religion there was the breath of life—a sanctity not to be indecently exposed but decently lived.

Religion in the Home has a Christian nurture. It is nurtured with scripture and prayer and hymn. Children, and parents, should learn by heart the great Psalms: the 23rd, 24th, 100th, and 121st, for example. The best is none too good for the Home. God's word is the living bread for living homes. Even if children do not understand these scriptures, feed it to them nevertheless. They will in some measure enter in later days into the profound truth. Let them learn by heart the Beautitudes, and Commandments of Jesus. Let them learn these in the King James Version. Parents will do well to use the small Oxford edition of the Bible arranged for parents and teachers. This edition makes it convenient to find at once the great passages in the Bible. Children should grow up knowing these stories and names and living words in the great English text. This takes time; but it is better to sit down with the Bible than to run around so much in an auto. As often as possible have family prayers. Always have prayers before meals. As children grow into youth, teach them the great prayers, for these are disciplines in the great necessity of prayer. Above all let the home sing hymns together and learn hymns by heart. This is one of the best ways to plant and grow pure religion. From the very beginning of your family life, learn in the home the great hymns of the Church of Christ. Avoid the trivial hymns. Again, no matter if the children don't understand all the words, they will understand them when they grow up; and the main thing in religion, for both children, and adults, is to grow. Learning great hymns by heart, singing them together in the noble and approved melodies, this carries religion to the very heart of man. To know the 23rd Psalm in the King James prose, and in the metrical version, in one of the great tunes, is a Christian nurture in itself. By such hymns, and prayers, and scriptures we establish religion in our homes, which ought to be thresholds of Heaven.—Handbook, Congregational-Christian Churches, 1940.

SOME BLESSED

Blessed are they that have eyes to see.
They shall find God everywhere.
They shall see Him where others see stones.
Blessed are they that have understanding hearts.
To them shall be multiplied kingdoms of delight.
Blessed are they that see visions.
They shall rejoice in the hidden ways of God.
Blessed are the song-ful of soul,
They carry light and joy to shadowed lives.
Blessed are they who know the power of Love.
They dwell in God for God is Love.
Blessed are the dead,
For they are with God.
Blessed are the living,
For they can still serve God.
Blessed are they who rejoice in their children.
To them is revealed the Father-Motherhood of God.
Blessed are the childless, loving children still,
Theirs shall be mightier family,
Even as stars of heaven.
Blessed are the souls kept virgin for mankind,
Unto them shall be given unbounded kingdom of great joy.
Blessed are the faithful strong,
They are the right hands of God.
Blessed are they that dwell in peace,
If they forget not God.
Blessed are they that fight for the Right,
They shall save their souls, for God is with them.
Blessed are they whose memories we cherish,
Our thoughts add jewels to their crowns.
Blessed are they who, through tribulation, have come to perfect trust,
Theirs is the peace which passeth understanding.
Blessed are the burdened of heart to whom the comforter has come.
They foretaste the joy of heaven.
Blessed are the souls all bare before God,
He shall clothe them with His Peace and Love.
Blessed is the people whose heart is set on God,
It shall stand.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

INSTITUTE OF RELIGION.

THE UNITED CHURCH,
RALEIGH, N. C.

THEME: "Religion Confronts the Modern World."

For six Monday nights in January and February the United Church in Raleigh, N. C., will be the scene of an interesting and unusual community "Institute of Religion." In announcing these meetings it is stated that "In a world that challenges the basic principles of religion at every turn, the search for greater understanding becomes imperative if our religion is to be intelligent and effective. In an effort to promote fellowship and to provide opportunity for study and inspiration this Institute is presented in the hope that it will focus new attention upon the resources of religion in a troubled world." There will be no admission charge for these sessions.

At six o'clock each Monday evening a fellowship supper will be served in the church. Tickets for the six dinners may be secured for $1.50. Single tickets will be available by writing in advance to Rev. Allyn P. Robinson, 14 Bagwell Street, Raleigh.

At 7:00 P. M. the following classes will be held:

"Humanity's Stake in the World Crisis"—Dean B. F. Brown, State College.

"Religion and the Problem of Minorities"—Rabbi Avery J. Grossfield, Temple Beth Or.

"Understanding Ourselves"—Dr. Edgar H. Henderson, Meredith College.

"Religious and Social Problems Presented in Motion Pictures"—Rev. Lee C. Sheppard, Pullen Memorial Baptist Church; Rev. Newton J. Robison, Hillyer Memorial Christian Church; Rev. Allyn P. Robinson, United Church.

At 8:00 P. M. the following outstanding men will speak in the church auditorium:

January 15—WILLIAM AIKEN SMART —"Religion Confronts the Modern World."

Professor of Biblical Literature, Emory University, Atlanta, Ga. Outstanding religious thinker of our time.

January 29—NORMAN THOMAS—"Religion and Democracy."

Leader of the American Socialist Party, former Presbyterian minister. His thoughtful books and his championship of social causes make him one who is listened to with interest and respect even by those who do not share his political convictions.

February 5—HORNE LL NORRIS HART —"Religion and Successful Marriage."

Professor at Duke University, Durham, N. C. A sociologist who is deeply human and one who is most competent to discuss this important problem.

February 12—SYMPOSIUM: "Religion and Education."

Five outstanding leaders will discuss this subject in round-table fashion. They will discuss such questions as: Has religion a place in the public schools? What is the status of religion on the college campus?

EPIPHANY SERVICES.

Two programs for Epiphany Services, held on January 5, have come to the office of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. We believe that this is a new type of service for our churches in the Southern Convention and that you will be interested in the programs.

"The Feast of Lights" was a five o'clock vesper service at the Holland (Va.) Christian Church, of which the Rev. Will B. O'Neill is the pastor. The climax of this service, commemorating the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles, was a candle-lighting service. Following appropriate Scripture readings and choir responses, the minister lighted one candle for each of the four Gospels, then one for each of the twelve apostles. Then from his candle, symbolizing Christ, he lit candles of the deacons of the church, who in turn lit the candles of the people in the congregation.

The Congregational-Christian Church of Sanford, N. C., held an evening candle-lighting service to commemorate the coming of the Wise Men and the going of the Light to the Gentiles. The pastor, Rev. Aubrey C. Todd, led the lovely service, which consisted of readings from the Gospels, traditional carols, an appropriate litany, and the lighting of candles representing the Light of the World, the Commission to the Disciples, and the going out of the Light to all the world.

"SUITED."

On the night of December 23, 1939, at the conclusion of a splendid Christmas program at Shallow Ford Christian Church, Mr. J. B. Gerringer and I were called to the front of the church. "Uncle Buck," as everybody knows him, had been assigned the task of presenting the pastor with a new, nice, gray-striped worsted suit of clothes. This was the biggest surprise of my ministerial career.

So far as I could ascertain, this was the first time in the history of the congregation that it had done a deed of this kind. I deeply appreciate this fact, as well as the very much needed suit. I wish to thank the young men's and men's adult classes, who were responsible for starting the movement. And thanks to everybody who made it a reality.

I hope that I can render service sufficient and live a life to prove my appreciation to the church and congregation for their kindness and their generous gift. L. L. WYRICK,

Pastor.

Don't forget to return materials borrowed from the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., for use in preparing Christmas programs in your church. You will not want to use the same material next year, but someone else will want to use it. Please return yours right away.

YOUR HELP, PLEASE.

"The Christian Sun" office is now greatly in need of the help which pastors and church leaders can give. It has been two years since the campaign for subscriptions that brought to the office more than $1,400 in one month. Some of the churches have committees that have been steadily at work since, and their lists are well up to date. Most of the churches, however, have done little about it since the campaign, and their lists are far below the desired standard. This is only one of the many things which a church is expected to do, and it happens to be one of those that can be pushed aside easily.

It seems to be impossible for "The Christian Sun" to send out a canvasser who will secure subscriptions. We send letters from the office to subscribers, make an appeal through the paper itself, and on every possible occasion solicit subscriptions. This is a very inadequate attempt to carry forward our Church Paper. We must depend upon the pastors and leaders in local churches for the major part of the work that is done along this line.

Our Baptist friends in North Carolina are now undertaking a campaign to secure 20,000 subscriptions to "The Biblical Recorder" by the fifteenth of April. The prospects seem to be good for them to reach this quota. They are definitely calling on their pastors and church leaders to do the work. We want 3,000 subscribers in North Carolina and Virginia. If we ever get them it will be because the pastors and the church leaders plan definitely for it and do the necessary work in order to secure the subscriptions. Each church has been given a quota and when all the churches reach their quota we will have the desired number.

January and February seem to be the two months in which "The Christian Sun" can expect its best income. Some real work in the local churches will aid greatly. Your elected leaders will appreciate your cooperation and help.

How It Can Be Done.

The Convention and the Conferences have suggested that each church have a committee for "The Christian Sun," or for religious literature. It would be the business of this committee to secure new and renewal subscriptions to "The Christian Sun" and to our other church publications. "The Christian Sun" office at Elon will gladly furnish the mailing list by post offices to any authorized committee or interested person. After receiving this list, the committee can check it by the church roll and begin the campaign in real earnest. We can also furnish the committee with sample copies of "The Christian Sun."

It stands to reason that church leaders, such as pastors and deacons, other church officers, Sunday school superintendents, teachers and officers, young people, and leaders of missionary societies should know what is going on in our church. This they can learn best of all through "The Christian Sun." The committee should make up its list of prospective subscribers, divide them among its members, and then seriously present "The Christian Sun" as our southern church paper on the basis of its own merits. The committee can also be very helpful in securing renewals and being sure that all subscribers are paid up to date.

In this way your church can not only aid the denomination in its program by sustaining "The Christian Sun," but it can also improve the effectiveness of your own local church. Regular readers of "The Christian Sun" are usually among the best leaders in every church.

Please be assured that whatever effort you put forth to aid in sustaining your church paper will be greatly appreciated by those whom you have chosen to edit and publish it.

BROKEN CONTACT.

Yesterday was very rainy and attendance at church was small. Today the sun was shining beautifully, but only about one-third of our ministers in North Carolina attended their regular monthly meeting. In both instances there was broken contact, which means broken fellowship.

By pulling a little switch the electrical contact is broken and a house is left in darkness. By inserting the switch and keeping the contact clear there comes light and power into the home. Something similar to this happens to individuals who do or do not join with their fellows in worship and study at the appointed time and place. Those who go find illumination. They see the pathway a little more clearly. They are encouraged to undertake more zealously and they become more efficient workers in the Church of Christ. This applies to ministers as well as members.

There are conditions under which people cannot attend the stated services of the church or of the Conference. Sickness and death interfere. Sympathy goes from those who gather to those who cannot come, and the bond of fellowship is not broken. The bond is broken when those who do not attend stay away because they do not wish to be present. It is then that darkness settles over the individual and the path becomes bewildering.

This is not a criticism. It is a plea for attendance. It is a plea for all those who care to be among those present when the children of God gather to consider matters that concern the Kingdom.

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"Pardon me for interrupting you." The minister was busy with a sermon for next Sunday. There was a knock on the door of the study. "There is another break in my line of thought," he said, "why do people come to see me during my hours of study?" "Come in," he called. A poor, troubled mother entered and apologized for her call. She poured out the perplexity of her soul and revealed the agony of her troubled heart. She was poor, her husband was a drunkard, her children were hungry and needed warm clothes, and she had no money. She came to her pastor for sympathy, for advice, for guidance and for a fellowship of prayer.

She remained for half an hour. The minister lost his grip on the sermon. He was compelled to make a new start in his study. But he had opened a new spring of joy and a new source of power in his own life. He lost his own line of thought, for a while, but a new inspiration took its place in his soul. "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these . . . ye did it unto me." When the door closed behind the troubled woman, a new sense of the Divine Presence flooded the soul of the minister, and new thoughts, revealed by this new experience of spiritual ministry, took the place of the old sermon outline.

The husband and father in a home passed away in the prime of life. The dear wife was broken hearted. Six children turned from the new mound in the cemetery with tear-stained cheeks and heavy hearts. One question was upon every mind in that bereaved home. "Why should our plans be broken in this way?" There is no answer in such an hour. But when mother finds her Bible and the deepening fellowship of increasing prayer for Divine guidance, she will be on the track of an answer to the question of her sorrowing heart. The answer can wait, but sometime it will come. And when it comes, whether soon or late, that dear family will discover that un-wanted disappointment may open doors of greater blessings and larger spiritual opportunities.

A young man wanted to be a big business man and become rich. And when far flung life plans were being made he attended a gracious revival. He was deeply impressed with a conviction that he should become a preacher. In his struggle to reach a decision he bravely took his father and mother into his confidence. He told them his recent experience. Father looked at mother with keen disappointment in his face. Mother shared the same experience. At first they tried to persuade him that the life of a minister was filled with hard service, many disappointments, much sacrifice and poor pay. But the conviction remained. He dedicated his life to the ministry of his church and became a great preacher. The changed plans brought greater blessings.

Self-expression is not always the best expression. Young people discover this with great disappointments when parents do not approve their youthful plans. Older people sometimes find a "stop" sign in the road over which they planned to make their journey. These interruptions and delays are sometimes more important than many of the things that one has planned. "Thy will be done" is a safe standard of living. One may sweat drops of blood reaching that cross of self-crucifixion, but a bright resurrection morning will dawn for those who are brave to face that eventuality.

CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS AND ELON COLLEGE.

Why should my church raise that part of Conference Apportionments that goes to Elon College? This is a practical question—one that will probably be asked by either the pastor or some member of every church in the Convention who takes the College Period and its purpose seriously. This question will be asked honestly and in all earnestness. It should be answered with equal frankness and earnestness. There are many who ask this question sincerely and wait for the answer before they do much about it.

First, Elon College is our own church institution. It was founded by our people a half century ago. For fifty years it has served faithfully and successfully. Many times the way has been dark, the need has been great, and the helpers have been few, but even so, the college has not at any time lessened its efforts nor curtailed its program. Day in and day out, year after year, for forty long years, it has been prosecuting a program of Christian Education in our church and for our people. A laborer is worthy of his hire.

Second, the Convention has planned for the support of the college. Without the church's help, the college could not have begun its work and certainly could not have continued it. The church has a right to be proud of Elon College and proud of the support that it has given the college through the years. It is now receiving dividends for the investments made in the cause of Christian Education through our college.

Third, the plan determined by the Convention for the support of the college is known among us as the apportionment plan whereby a modest but definite amount is apportioned by my denomination. I belong to the denomination, and I know no good reason why my church should not follow this plan in its support of the college. This plan is still in force, no one has suggested a better one, and until a better plan is proposed and accepted by my denomination, my church should follow the plan offered by the Convention.

Fourth, in recognition of the plan for the support of the college proposed by the Convention, my church, realizing the need of the college, has been raising its share as required by the Convention, and it is our purpose to continue to do so. It will not seriously tax the ability of my church to raise this amount, and since I know of the college's needs from many sources and with no desire whatsoever to escape this responsibility, I feel and am sure that my church feels that we should undertake to raise this amount. I hope that every church in our conference will reach the same conclusion and be successful in their efforts. What an inspiration and an achievement it would be not only to my church and to the college but to every church in the Convention if we should raise the amounts apportioned. It would certainly give heart and soul to those who have been charged with the responsibility of that larger undertaking; namely, the clearing of the college of its present indebtedness. We can certainly raise our apportionments, and we should.

Fifth, this is a historic year for our college. Great things have been happening on her campus through the years, but greater things will be happening this year. We will be celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of our church's achievements in the field of Christian higher education. To prepare programs, bring influential educators to the campus for addresses and conferences, entertain visitors, etc., cost money. My church is not asked to have any definite part in the

I am waiting, waiting, waiting for the many who have assured me of their interest and cooperation in an effort to clear Elon College of its debts. If one mail should bring a contribution from the many who have said they are "behind me" in this great undertaking, my report for THE CHRISTIAN SUN would certainly be astonishing. Now, my good friends, if it is your purpose to help in this effort to clear the college of its debts, you will never find a better time than now. If you intend to help the college, now is the time to do it. Won't you join with the ones who are helping that others who are considering may be helped in making their decisions.

The Board of Trustees meets the middle of February. We want to make the best reports possible then. Won't you please let me hear from you before that date?

The report this week carries us beyond the $40,000.00 mark. On Thursday of last week we made another payment on our debt of $2,000.00, making a total of $17,000 paid since October, 1938, and leaving a balance of $127,000.

The report for the week follows:

	Pledged
Burlington, N. C.:
Baker-Cammack Hosiery Mill	$ 350.00
Mr. & Mrs. Garland Huffman	50.00
R. Homer Andrews	50.00

WINTER READINGS.

These long winter evenings and some of the rough days offer many of our people, farmers in particular, a fine opportunity for reading. The time may be wasted with trashy materials, or it can mean much in the study of things that will develop personality and fit for Christian service. The Board of Christian Education at Elon College, N. C., can furnish a fine list of suggested reading materials, and can lend some books. If you are a teacher, or other leader, or if you hope to be, now is a good time to prepare for the work you are to do.

"Men's hearts ought not to be set against one another, but set with one another, and all against the evil thing only."

ELON'S GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY CAMPAIGN

CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS.

It probably would be helpful if the pastors, superintendents of Sunday schools, and other officers of the churches would look back over the report of last year and compare the amounts contributed to other interests of the church with that of the college. The college is a child of the church just as much as any other interest of the church. It should receive our affections and support equally with others.

This is the College Period. Won't you please plan to provide in some way for that part of your conference apportionments that goes for the support of the college. This is our anniversary year. We will have additional expense. I know you will be glad to help by providing for the college's share of your apportionments during the College Period. Some are already beginning to send in their contributions. We hope that you will be prompt and generous with yours.

What Share Do You Have in ELON COLLEGE?

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

On the last Sunday night in the Old Year I was sick in bed and could not go to the Watch Night Service at our church. I felt badly because I had never been to such a service in a church and I had wanted to be there. So I was very happy to be well so that I could go and sing in the choir at our Epiphany Candle-Lighting Service on the first Sunday in this New Year. Did you have an Epiphany Service at your church? The boys and girls in the Holland Christian Church of Holland, Va., did. It must have been a lovely one and I am sure that it was enjoyed and appreciated.

Do you know what Epiphany means? It is a Greek word and means "the appearing." We call it this for it was on this day that the baby Jesus was first seen by the Wise Men. They did not see Jesus on the same day that the Shepherds saw Him. They were farther from Bethlehem than the shepherds were. When they saw the new star in the sky they started out to search for the baby Jesus who was to be born. On the twelfth day after Jesus was born their camels reached Bethlehem, and the Wise Men got down from their camels to kneel before the baby Jesus and give him their gifts.

Do you know why we light candles in this service? We light candles because when Jesus came into the world he brought light and love to take the place of the darkness and hate which were in the world before he was born.

Would you like to know about the two little boys who acted as Acolytes at our service? Jimmie and John wore white robes and each had a long white taper. When the service began John sat on the right side of the altar and Jimmie on the left. When the reader read from the Gospel of John the two boys came up to the altar and lit a candle on each side of the altar. Then the reader read from the Gospel of Luke and again Jimmie and John came to the altar to light two more candles for the Gospel of Luke. Now the reader read from the Gospel of Matthew and once more Jimmie and John met at the altar to light the two candles which stood for the Gospel of Matthew. Then they went quietly back to their places to sit quietly while the ushers came forward to take the offering.

Now as the choir stood to sing "We Three Kings of Orient Are," Jimmie and John leaned forward on the edge of their chairs. Down the center aisle of the church came the young man who was playing the part of the first Wise Man. He wore bright robes and carried a jewel box full of gold. He came and knelt before the altar and left his gift. Then two other young men who were acting the parts of the other two Wise Men came, one at a time, down the aisle. They, too, knelt at the altar and left their gifts of Frankincense and Myrrh. I saw Jimmie and John as they watched with shining eyes. I wondered if they were thinking about the day when they would be tall enough to act the part of the Wise Men in the service.

The reader again read from the Bible about the Light of the World; the sending out of the Disciples by Jesus; and the going out of the Light into all the world. While he was reading Jimmie and John came to the altar and lit the forty-eight candles which were arranged in the shape of the cross. Every candle in the cross burned brightly when Jimmie and John left the altar to march to the front of the pulpit. There they stood while each member of the choir came by to light his candle from the burning tapers which Jimmie and John held. As the choir marched out with their burning candles they sang:

As with gladness men of old
Did the guiding star behold;
As with joy they hailed its light;
Leading onward, beaming bright;
So, most gracious God, may we Evermore be led to Thee.

REUBEN BAR-BARUCH.

The man who had left the road slowly climbed to the top of the ridge. Reuben and Samuel lay very still, hoping that he would not see them. They watched him as he shaded his eyes and looked into the distance. Then he walked away from them and looked again.

"Look," whispered Samuel, "he's looking for us. He wonders where we went."

"He'll be sure to find us this time," said Reuben. "He's coming right toward us."

The man was right upon the boys before he saw them. When he did see them, they looked so funny and scared, that the man laughed out loud.

"Ho! ho!" he laughed, "what is this I've found? What are you boys doing here, and why are do you lie so still?"

"P-lease, s-ir," said Reuben, "we were afraid. Please don't bother us, so we might go back home to our mother and father."

"Why, what on earth do you mean? Why do you think I would hurt you?" asked the man, with a puzzled look on his face.

"Then you will not steal us and sell us for slaves?" asked Samuel.

The man thought this was funny, and he laughed again. "That's silly," said the man. "I'm only looking for the house of my cousin Dan. He lives somewhere along this road, and I wanted to see him before I go to Egypt."

"Oh, we know Dan," cried the boys together. "Would you like for us to show you where he lives? It's on our way home, and its time we were starting."

"I surely would," replied the man. And he gave a signal to the men by the road, who started up the ridge with the donkeys.

QUIZZ CORNER.

This week we shall see how many children of the Bible you know:

1. What small boy heard God call his name, as he slept in the Temple?
2. Who was the boy whom Pharaoh's daughter raised as her son?
3. What was the name of the shepherd boy who killed a giant?
4. Do you know the names of the famous twin brothers in the Bible?
5. What was the name of the girl who watched by her brother as he floated on the river in a basket?
6. Who was the first boy to be born in the world?
7. What boy was sold by his brothers for twenty pieces of silver.
8. What boy was almost offered as a sacrifice by his father?
9. What was the name of the boy who was lost in Jerusalem when he was twelve years old?
10. What was the name of the brother about whom Joseph was so anxious?

Answers to last week's questions:

1. Eve (Genesis 3:20).
2. Sarah (Genesis 17:15, 16).
3. Rebekah (Genesis 25:20, 24).
4. Miriam (Exodus 15:20).
5. Deborah (Judges 4:4).
6. Ruth (Ruth 1:14).
7. Hannah (I Samuel 2:1-19).
8. Esther (Esther 7:3, 4).
9. Mary Magdalene (Matthew 28:1).
10. Martha and Mary (John 11:1-5).

"Better to have three hundred picked men than thirty-two thousand unsifted host. Numbers do not always count! Take Gideon for example. There is such a thing as victory by elimination."

A RELIGIOUS WAR.

It certainly seems that the present conflict in Europe has developed into a real religious war. All the world knows, of course, that Soviet Russia, several years since, officially declared that it did not believe in God, or in any ruling power beyond that of the State itself. Was it not Stalin, or one of their atheistic leaders, who declared that he knew there was no God and if there was they would have to abolish Him? The Russian state has done everything within its reach to abolish all authority from any source whatever other than that vested in the State, the children being reared in the belief and the teaching that Christmas, for instance, could not and should not be observed, nor should any other religious ceremony or gesture other than that instituted by the State. Those who are reading the progress of the war at present and the movements that are taking place because of the war are beginning to declare Russia is the biggest menace to Europe and its civilization at the present time. Then comes Hitler with his Nazi regime, declaring for the totalitarian state; that individuals exist for the State and not the State for individuals. This in a measure explains Hitler's attitude toward the Jews and almost every day, certainly every week, movements are set on foot by Hitler or his agents to show Germany's hatred for the Jews. Comes now the report that while others than Jews in Germany are limited to a certain extent in their purchase or use of food necessary to sustain life, every Jew is limited still further and can only purchase or secure a limited supply of food, having to make such purchase or secure supplies by presenting a card on which is stamped the letter "J." It is indeed a very singular and strange alliance that has been formed between a nation controlled by a dictator, Hitler, and a nation who claims Communism as its only economic or religious creed. How long this pact can exist, and how strong it is, is indeed an uncertainty. Verily, nations at war, like politicians, find and make strange bedfellows.

The world stands aghast at Soviet Russia's wholly unjustified attack on little, harmless, innocent Finland. It is a strange phenomenon which can only be explained by the fact that when a people forget God and righteousness and truth and peace, there is simply no telling in what direction it will turn or what unrighteous thing it will undertake.

All of the above seems to be causing even in Christian lands a confusion of thought as to what the outcome will be and what stand the church should take. There can, however, be no doubt that the Prince of Peace with His program for building the Kingdom of Heaven on earth cannot be abolished and will not be abolished, as long as there are hearts that respond to the challenge of love, and sinful souls that crave forgiveness and redemption in order that their own souls may be at peace. This means that the Christian nations and peoples everywhere must, or at least should, redouble their efforts to spread the Gospel of the Prince of Peace and to make Him known against all odds in all the world. He is the only force and power who can speak peace to the troubled sea and bring about a calm on which ships, big and little, may sail in peace and safety. Missions is the very foundation of the world's safety and security—Christian Missions, the kind of missions our Lord had in mind when his most emphatic command He said, "Go ye into all the world—Ye shall be witness of me unto the uttermost parts of the earth." We each can do our little part in this task and in so doing we may hasten that day far off and uncertain as it may now seem to be, when war with all of its waste and madness and sin shall be abolished and peace with all of its prosperity and happiness and love may be established in the world.

THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.

FOR JANUARY.

By AUBREY C. TODD.

Mission study groups not using the pamphlet by Mrs. Askew will find a helpful suggestion for this month in using one of the many passages in John on the new life. This is the month that people make resolutions to do bigger things and are planning to start life anew. The Gospel of John is full of suitable passages along this line, but perhaps the best ones would be chapter eight, verses twelve to forty-eight, which tell about the Light of the World, or chapter ten, about the Good Shepherd. Regardless of which passage you choose, you should first of all try to think of yourself as a member of John's audience hearing this message for the first time.

In John's audience were many who were looking for a new way of life. There had been many who had risen and attempted to lead the people to a better day, but they had all failed. In the first six verses of the tenth chapter, he tells about these false teachers, and in the following verses he tells how they fled when the heavy hand of Rome fell on them. Then he tells them how they might find the new life in Jesus for which they have been seeking.

This chapter differs from those preceding it in that it uses a parable for the starting point rather than an incident out of the life of Jesus. As usual, John chooses his subject from the daily life of the people of his audience. Sheep and shepherd were as common to the people of Ephesus as automobile and garage are to us. The story around which the talk is developed is the one of the lost sheep as told in one of the other gospels. The leader of this study should also notice the close parallel between this chapter and the twenty-third Psalm.

The climaxing thought to be left with those who share this study is the figure of Jesus as the "door." At the beginning of a new year, most of us are looking for an open door that will lead us to higher planes of living, to a life that is more than this. John suggests that we might enter into this fuller life "through Jesus." Paul shares this belief when he says that it is "through Jesus" that God saves us, and "through Jesus" that we have access to the Father (Romans 5:2; Ephesians 2:18). Luke uses the figure of the door when he says, "strive to enter in through the narrow door" (Luke 13:24).

At the beginning of this new year may our mission study groups find a new lease on life and a deeper understanding of the ways of the Kingdom. May we learn that it is through Jesus that such an understanding may come, and that through him "if any man enter in, he will be saved . . . and will find pleasure . . . and have life . . . and have it abundantly."

expense of the anniversary program of celebrations, but we are asked to raise the amount apportioned to us by the conference for the college. We certainly should demonstrate our interest in this historic occasion by raising our apportionments promptly and sending the same to the college. My church may not be able to contribute largely, but we can raise our conference apportionments, and we intend to do it.

"Youth at Work in the Church"

A FEW REMINDERS.

Easter comes early this year—on March 24. It is now time to begin to plan the type of program you are going to have. Plan something very worshipful and meaningful this year.

Plan special services for Young People's Week, January 28 to February 4. Suggestions: Young People's banquet, young people in charge of regular church service, special young people's meeting with parents as guests. February 2 is "Christian Endeavor Day."

Send to Roland Allgood, 1414 W. 27th Street, Norfolk, Va., money from you personally or from your society for the "China Friendship Project" of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship, marking the church from which it comes and Conference your church is in.

Lent begins on Wednesday, February 7. Stress personal religious living in your group. Order copies of Lenten Devotions for Young People (five cents each from Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.) for each member of your Sunday school class or young people's society.

Elon College Day comes on January 27. Ask your Sunday school superintendent about special program for that day, and offer to help with it. Learn all you can about your college, and make an offering for its support.

On February 9 Christian people around the world join in the World Day of Prayer for Missions. Suggestion: Join with your women's missionary society in its program for this day. Material may be secured through the Missions Office, or Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C.

At the beginning of a New Year is a good time to do some of those things you have been talking about in your society—subscribe to The Pilgrim Highway ($1.25 per year—Pilgrim Press), begin your meetings on time, have programs planned far enough in advance to enable all to have their parts ready, have a well-rounded program which includes mission study, emphasis on personal devotions, Christian neighborliness, and a study of the Bible.

Has your group used the mission study books for this year yet? Young people are to use "Comrades Round the World: Christian Youth in Action" for their foreign mission study and "Right Here at Home" for their home mission study. These books may be purchased for sixty cents each from Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or through the Mission Office, or Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C.

Programs for February may include a celebration of Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays. In connection with the latter, February 11 is observed by many denominations, including our own, as Race Relations Sunday. You may secure material for this from Council for Social Action, 289 Fourth Avenue, New York City, or by writing Information Secretary, Board of Home Missions, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City, asking what our churches are doing in this field of work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AT MT. OLIVET (G).

The young people of the Mt. Olivet (G) Church in the Valley of Virginia are still "going strong," in spite of the fact that we have no pastor to lead and advise us.

Many members of the church said that we sponsored a most worshipful Christmas pageant. There are several reasons for its success: First, every member in the organization was given a part and came to rehearsals regularly. Second, we made every rehearsal a religious meeting, for we opened each with a worship service.

Should a small church like to have a very effective Christmas pageant, use "The Light of Men," a candle-light service which covers the life of Christ from the birth to the ascension, touching the highlights only. We are sending our used copies of it to the Board of Christian Education at Elon to help in a small way enlarge its supplies. Had you thought of sending yours?

WHAT IT MEANS TO SUPPORT MY CHURCH.

(BEGINNING C. E. WEEK. DEVOTIONAL DAY.)

SCRIPTURE: Genesis 28:18-22;

Luke 6:38; Psalm 122:1.

Daily Readings—

Mon.—Financial Support—Mal. 3:10.
Tues.—Charitable Support—Acts 11:27-30.
Wed.—Social Support—Acts 6:1-6.
Thurs.—Hearty Support—Col. 3:23, 24.
Fri.—Intelligent Support—Col. 3:16, 17.
Sat.—Diversified Support—I Cor. 12:4-11.

The fourth important declaration of the Christian Endeavor pledge concerns your obligation to loyally support your church. This topic is a suitable basis for a discussion in the church for Young People's Day in the denomination.

The leader may conduct a general discussion on the benefits and blessings of the church to the individual. Enumerate these on a blackboard. Then enumerate the things which young people can do for the church.

For Consideration—

Most church work would probably be considered under three categories. Let three persons discuss these categories:

1. Soul winning and personal work. The church exists primarily to save the lost and to lead individuals in a deeper experience with Christ.

2. Building and equipment. These are essential for the training of children, young people and adults. A considerable amount of money is needed to keep a church in repair and provide necessary equipment.

3. Publicity and extension. The influence of the church must extend beyond its doors. Its work goes even beyond a single community.

According to a statement by the National Committee for Religious and Welfare Recovery, contributions to the twenty-five major communions and denominations declined 21 per cent from 1932 to 1938; while our National income increased more than 79 per cent in that period. Does this mean that most church members are reducing their support to church and charity? What will happen if this continues?

When we consider the finances of the church, we should look at human needs and way by which the church may meet these needs. Contributions to the church are a means through which these needs are met.

Suggested Hymns—

"I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord."
"The Church's One Foundation."
"Glorious Things of Thee Are Spoken." S. E. M.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

A NEW STANDARD OF GREATNESS.

LESSON III—JANUARY 21, 1940.

LESSON: Matthew 20.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 5:1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT: While we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.—Romans 5:8.

Moral Heroism.

"And Jesus was going up to Jerusalem." He knew exactly what was in store for him. On every side there were indications of the rising tide of opposition on the part of the religious leaders of his nation, and he knew they would be satisfied with nothing less than his death. In fact he very frankly told his disciples what was going to happen—that he would be delivered unto the chief priests and scribes, that they would deliver him to the Gentiles to mock, to scourge, and to crucify him. For a long time the shadow of the cross had been lying across his path, and its sinister meaning had been heavy on his heart. But there was no whining, no complaining, no self pity. He knew that he was walking in the path which God had appointed. Therefore, he faced it calmly and courageously. For most of us there are unpleasant situations to be faced. Let the Master be our example here as elsewhere. Keeping our faces to the light and our feet in the path of duty, let us endure the cross and be faithful, even unto death, if necessary.

He Said That He Would Rise Again.

Jesus not only told his disciples that he would suffer many things and be crucified; he very plainly said that the third day he should be raised up again. To be sure, the account in Matthew was written many years after the actual event occurred, but as Matthew looked back he remembered quite clearly that Jesus had foretold that he would rise again from the dead. This is perhaps one of the most significant statements that Jesus ever made. Under the shadow of the cross he declared calmly and confidently that God would raise him again from the dead. He knew that life was ever victor over death, truth over error, love over hate, righteousness over evil. Any Christian may be sustained in the hour of death by the assurance that because Christ died and rose again, through him he, too, shall live.

These Ambitious Mothers.

Salome, the mother of James and John, came to Jesus asking that her sons be allowed the high privilege of sitting, the one on the right hand and the other on the left hand, in his kingdom. Like so many people today, she was thinking about the honor and rewards of religion and of the kingdom. And like so many others she misunderstood the central genius of the kingdom. Like so many mothers, also, she was ambitious about her children. But she had a zeal not according to knowledge. It is a good thing, of course, for parents to be ambitious for their children, but ambition may be a very dangerous thing—especially if it is misdirected or misguided. How mistaken are many parents in the ambitions which they cherish for their children! They want them to be rich, to be popular, to have social prestige, to have positions of preferment and honor—and all of these things have their value, if they are put in their proper place. But how important it is that our children be encouraged to be good and to do good, to have character and to render service. Hollywood is not the only place that is full of doting mothers with foolish ambitions for their children. Mothers and fathers ought to give heed to the ideals which they cherish for their children and the goals which they set before them.

Ignorance In Asking.

"Ye know not what ye ask," thus replied Jesus to the request of Salome. And thus does he speak in a parable which is characteristic of so much of our asking and praying. So often we really do not know for what we ask. Occasionally one hears somebody thanking God for, or bearing witness to, answered prayers. That is all very good. But, as a matter of fact, we probably ought to thank God for some unanswered prayers. There is a significant statement in one of the Psalms illustrating the tragedy of answered prayers. "He gave them their request; but sent leanness into their soul." Often we have not because we ask not, but as James says, we often have not, because we ask amiss.

The Rewards of the Kingdom.

One marvels again and again at the patience and at the sympathy of Jesus in dealing with human frailty and weakness. Instead of rebuking Salome for her foolish request, he tactfully pointed out her mistake, and took occasion to use that mistake in teaching a great lesson about the kingdom. The rewards of the kingdom are not based upon special privilege or on what we call "pull." Fitness, not influence, secure honor in the kingdom. God has so arranged it that those who deserve the ultimate rewards of the kingdom shall receive them. There is no favoritism here, and every man has the same chance. Of course, we have not yet learned this lesson, for there are many who feel that because of their particular station in life, or their wealth, or their social prestige, or their family connections, or for one reason or another, they shall have special privileges in the kingdom. They may have them in the church, but they will not have them in the kingdom.

Saints in the Making.

Sometimes we think of the disciples as men with halos about their heads as if they were saints. As a matter of fact, they were simply saints in the making. They shared with us our common humanity. On this occasion, for instance, they became highly indignant when they learned that the mother of James and John had tried to secure choice places in the kingdom for her sons. They were moved with jealousy, and envy, and selfishness. On one occasion after another they showed their common humanity, their limitations, and weaknesses. This is, of course, no reflection upon them. Then, as now, Christ judged men by the trend of life. Then, as now, he judged men not so much by how far they had gone but by the direction in which they were moving. The church is not made up of folks who are perfect; it is made up of folks who want to be better.

A New Standard of Greatness.

Jesus said that the true standard of greatness was not wealth, or even achievement. A life was to be measured by the spirit of service which characterized it. In sharp contrast to the standards of greatness of his day, especially as expressed by the great Roman Empire, he insisted that true greatness was found in the spirit of true humility and in the willingness to serve. And in one of the most remarkable utterances anywhere to be found in all literature, he says that the Son of God himself "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

MONDAY.

"A PROGRAM FOR THE YEAR."

By Mrs. A. J. Stanley.

Read Psalm 91.

"He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in others and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration; whose memory a benediction."

Prayer—Our Father lead us on in our new year to greater success, as Thou dost count success, than we have ever known before. We commit ourselves and our time in Thy hands. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"Is It I?"

"Lord, is it I?"—Mark 14:19.

A little girl visited her father who was sick in the hospital. When she returned with her mother she cried, "Mother, do you think I made Daddy sick by jumping on his bed?" The dear child feared that her morning frolic with Daddy was responsible for his illness.

The disturbing question of the disciples reflects the true Christian Spirit regarding the welfare of others. Perhaps we may have been responsible for some of their ills. It reflects the proper check of our own hearts. We may be guilty of sin. At the close of each day it will not be amiss to inquire of our own hearts the guilt of today. Repent and start anew.

Prayer—Our Father, help us each day to examine ourselves for flaws, and keep our hearts fixed in Thee, that we may not sin, nor cause hurt to another. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"HE LEADETH ME."

"In paths that they know not will I lead them."—Isa. 46:15-17.

He leadeth me, O blessed thought!
O words with heavenly comfort fraught!
Whate'er I do, where'er I be,
Still 'tis God's hand that leadeth me."

Turn to your hymn book and sing this song through. Isn't it wonderful?

Let the warm experiences of God's nearness sweep into your soul. Though your heart may be cooled with chilling influences, new spiritual fervor will blaze again.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee for the warming power of Thy Holy Spirit. Lead us in the paths of the faithful. Increase our faith, and perfect our souls. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"ALL TURN TO GOD."

"He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, etc. . . ."—James 5:20.

Several years ago we read the following from the lips of Lord George:

"When the chariot of humanity gets stuck, as it has done now, nothing will lift it out except great preaching that goes straight to the mind and heart. It is time the Christian Churches should act together and act promptly in the name of God and humanity. If the churches fail, I do not know what is going to happen."

It appears that the chariot of humanity is still stuck, and worse than before. As we write tonight (August 23, 1939) the world will not be surprised to hear tomorrow that war has broken and Armageddon is here. These tragic times need a return to God. If the church could write in the fever of zeal for a turn to God; if there were only one person in every church on fire with this zeal, we might hope for the fulfillment of such sentiment.

Prayer—O Lord, stir and spur us and drive us until we and the whole church shall find the fulfillment of Thy expectations. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"IN HIS LIKENESS."

"Conformed to the image of His Son."—Romans 8:29.

It is an ambition of all true Christians to be like Christ. We cannot "be a Christ," as we may have heard someone irreverently counsel, but we can know His life, His teachings, His Spirit, humbly follow Him with a sincere heart and therefore with fidelity to the characteristics of Him, reproduce Him in our lives. Only by such consecration on our part will the world ever catch a glimpse of His loveliness.

Prayer—Our Father, our lives are very poor things to offer Thee, and any likeness of Thy Son in us may be very meager, but we pray that we may resemble and portray Him, and that Thy image may grow in us till the day of Thy eternal glory. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"MAN'S SMILE."

"I never think of you without thanking God."—II Timothy 1:3.

Our text is the Goodspeed version. These words are the same as the authorized version. The thought is radiant. It proposes the question, "What is our reaction to God's smile upon us?"

It has been said that the greatest joy of life is in living so that there will be no regrets, or as nearly that as possible.

Can it be said of us that we speak so tenderly, smile so radiantly, pray (Continued on next page.)

IT RESTS WITH THE CHURCH!

By REV. VAUGHAN DABNEY, D. D.

Dean of Andover-Newton Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.

"The rich console themselves with pleasure, the able with achievement; but where shall the rest of us find again a belief to give us stimulus, a conscience to give us decency, a new devotion to give us something of that nobility without which our life is meaningless?"

In a recent article entitled "The Crisis in Christianity," Will Durant speaks of the great sadness of disillusionment that has settled down upon the soul of Western man and voices an inarticulate longing for a saving faith in this moving sentence.

Surely the ears of Christian people are not deaf to such an entreaty. The cure for "the great sadness" lies in the joy of a vital faith. Chronic pessimism is a sign of spiritual ill health. The same gospel that scattered the gloom of the first century is still the power of God unto individual and social salvation. The truths of that gospel, however, must come alive in persons. The principles of Christianity must be applied in actual situations. The church, therefore, as the organized expression of the religion of Jesus must deliver men from the bondage of despair.

It rests with the Christian Church to furnish men the stimulus of satisfying beliefs. The current philosophies of paganism are no match for Christian theology. As a system of thought, a way of life and a personal experience of God, Christianity meets men at the point of their deepest intellectual, moral and spiritual need. The great doctrines of God, salvation, the Kingdom of Heaven and life everlasting are adequate to the needs of thinking men. Upon the church rests the responsibility of teaching these sublime truths. In a day when ideas clash for supremacy, the individual Christian must give a reason for the faith that is within him.

Unfortunately, the average church member is poorly equipped to bear this witness or he hardly knows just what he does believe. Hence, there is a call for the evangel of education in the local church. Let it begin in the pulpit with more sermons on the basic doctrines of the Christian religion. Let it be spread in the program of religious education especially in the use of available catechetical materials for the young. Let week-night adult study groups follow the example of some alert laymen in a certain church who through the fall and winter followed a course of instruction taught by a professor of theology. The church must disseminate the truth in a day when misguided followers of false messiahs are spreading propaganda with evangelistic fervor.

It rests with the church to promote human decency by quickening the slumbering consciences of men and women. When man is considered as a fighting animal, when right and wrong are confused, when national emblems are held sacred, the human conscience becomes dulled. Christianity teaches that God alone is holy and that sacredness belongeth to human personality. An awakened church must bring men and nations before the judgment seat of Christ. The restoration of decency rests with the church, the conscience of society.

Alas, the conscience of the church itself is a bit blunted. Her members are not sufficiently pricked in their hearts by the horrors of war, the cruelties of economic injustice and the brutalities of race prejudice to rectify such wrongs.

Worship quickens and trains the Christian conscience. At the altars of a holy and righteous God we confess our sins, receive pardon, and are sent out with burning and resolute hearts to act. Regular church attendance is not primarily a matter of statistics; it is a means of salvation. Private prayer likewise nourishes the devotional life. By the daily practice of the presence of God an aroused Christian conscience will bring back decency into human life.

It rests with the church to give that nobility without which life is meaningless by offering men a cause great enough to enlist their full devotion. In a day when classes and races and nations are arrayed against one another in bloody strife, the only hope of social justice and international good will is found in Jesus Christ. The church is commissioned to hold the world together. As a supernatural organization established in every land the church holds the key to the peace and security of the world. Will she use that key in time?

Much depends on the whole-hearted enlightenment of the entire membership in the program of the church. Is the church itself a true spiritual democracy? Are we really interested in social action? Does the cause of modern missions receive our intelligent and gracious financial support? Until these questions are answered satisfactorily it is idle for the church to talk about peace and justice.

Christians must face the darker aspects of modern life with open eyes. We must be realists, but never defeatists. God is, whether men worship him or not. Christian principles shine on like the fixed stars even though mariners ignore them and go on the rocks. The cross is our symbol of victory of redemptive goodness. To give us hope and courage, we need the assurance that our God is able to deliver us and that he will work out his righteous purpose in the unfolding of history.

So far as our generation is concerned, we must act immediately. The time is short, so short! Now is the day of salvation. What will be our answer to the cry for help that comes up to the Christian Church? The call summons every last church member to a fresh commitment and a deeper loyalty. Whether or not "the great sadness" yields to the joy of a mighty faith rests with the church!—Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life.

FAMILY ALTAR.

so fervently, serve so loyally, and live so humbly that those who know us are glad and will be glad to remember us when we are gone?

Prayer—O Lord, bless us with those benedictions which make us radiant with goodness and love. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"A LOVELY SUNDAY DUTY."

"He declared particularly what things God had wrought."—Acts 21:19.

Bearing such a testimony as our text records was Paul's power into salvation of his people. If we could fill our churches today with just those who name the name of the Lord, or if they would bear testimony to one another the things that God has done for them and will do for them more, the result in world transformation would thrill us to Thanksgiving. The triumphs of the Gospel, of His Spirit, and of His blessings, are both the best and the most powerful news known to men.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee for all Thy blessings. Make us living witnesses of Thee today. Amen.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:—

Some years ago the writer had the pleasure of visiting a beautiful estate. The owner had spent millions to make it beautiful and attractive to the eyes of the visitors. We entered this estate through a gate, and this gate was open to visitors only on certain days in the week. As we waited on the outside of the gate waiting for the hour to arrive for us to enter we could not even imagine what the world beyond the gate had in store for us. The way was dark to us.

But when the gate finally opened we passed through. It was like entering a new world. Our guide took charge of us. And as he guided us along the beautiful driveways bordered with beautiful shrubbery on both sides and up to the mountain side. It was beautiful to behold. The little rippling streams carrying down the mountain side into the valley below as clear as a crystal made one feel that he was in the hands of nature in its most beautiful state.

All of us are now entering the gate of the New Year. Who can tell what the New Year has in store for us? We cannot know its mysteries. We cannot see into its darkness. It may have a great store of beautiful blessings, with joy and happiness abounding. It may have disappointments and sorrows and misfortune for some of us. Each day will bring its share and it will be apportioned to us one day at a time. We cannot know today what tomorrow may bring. We can only lean on Him who is the light of the world and He will guide us day by day.

But as we enter the gate of the New Year let us all make up our minds that we are going to "live at our best" and try to spread flowers of good deeds along the way to bring happiness to others.

In Memoriam

HEFLIN.

On Christmas Day the writer conducted the funeral of Mrs. Alice Felts Heflin, assisted by Rev. R. E. Brittle. Mrs. Heflin died in Washington, D. C., and is survived by two brothers, Everett A. Felts, Suffolk, Va., and Clyde C. Felts, Nansemond County, and by one half-sister, Mrs. Willie Mae Sawyer, and a step-mother, Mrs. Alice Felts.

May God bless and comfort the bereaved.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Pastor.

AYERS.

On Christmas Day there passed from labor to reward Brother Ebenezer Wilson Ayers, sixty-five years of age, at his home on North Street in Suffolk. Mr. Ayers was a native of North Carolina, but had been living in Suffolk for 21 years. He was a candy manufacturer and merchant in this city. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alice Singleton Ayers; a daughter, Mrs. Claude A. Johnson; two sons, William Albert and Eugene Wilson. His funeral was conducted on December 27 by the writer, assisted by Dr. H. J. Goodwin.

May God's blessing be upon the loved ones left behind.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Pastor.

KIMBALL.

Weldon H. Kimball passed away at the home of his brothers, W. W. and J. A. Kimball, Manson, N. C., on December 19 after an illness of two and a half years. He had made his home with his brothers since retiring from the railroad system, a position which he had held many years, in Charlotte. Before returning to his home community he was a member of the Presbyterian Church; since then he was a member of the Mt. Auburn Christian Church. He was held in highest esteem by all who knew him, both in church and fraternal relationship.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. E. M. Carter, assisted by Rev. C. L. Read of Durham, at Mt. Auburn Church and interment was made in the church cemetery.

MORRIS.

Mrs. Ellen Wampler Morris, beloved wife of a deacon of the Mt. Olivet (G) Church, passed away January 2, 1940, at sixty years of age. She is survived by her husband, William Frank; daughter, Ruby Mae; son, Galen Joseph; four sisters, two brothers, and many friends.

Mrs. Morris held her membership with the Church of the Brethren since girlhood, but was ever willing to help in her husband's church. She was a constant reader of "The Christian Sun" and was always very complimentary about its contents. She was known as a faithful Christian worker in all worthwhile projects and will be greatly missed by all who knew her.

Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. Chester Harley, assisted by Dr. George Mayo, and the body laid to rest in the Mt. Olivet Church Cemetery.

A FRIEND.

STROWD.

Matthew Marshall Strowd was born February 10, 1862, and died October 8, 1939, spending his entire life in Orange County, near Chapel Hill, N. C. Brother Strowd was married to Adella Hill Andrews, who survives, on December 23, 1885. To this union were born three sons, H. D. Manly Dwight (deceased), and Thomas; and four daughters, Mrs. James Wills, Mrs. A. L. Cheek, and Misses Annie and Leta—all of whom live in and near Chapel Hill. Surviving also are eleven grandchildren.

His church membership was first at Damascus Christian Church, but later he transferred it to Chapel Hill. He served long and well as deacon in each of these churches. "Live right" was his personal motto, and his well-known and appealing exhortation to others. This finds lasting reflection in his Christian home and family, and in the universal respect and admiration of those who knew him. His consistency of creed and dauntlessness of faith were never repulsive, but represented accuracy and application with impressive beauty and strength.

Funeral services were held at the home and interment was in the nearby family cemetery. The Rev. W. J. McKee and Rev. George Harward assisted the undersigned in the services. Grandsons of the deceased were active pall bearers.

MT. OLIVET YOUNG PEOPLE.

After the pageant a group of twenty-five went caroling. We visited the aged and shut-ins only, for it was very cold and we had to help with the music in a midnight service at a neighboring church.

We furnished gifts for the children in the homes of those given baskets by the Ladies Aid Society. We also had a party for our Young People's group.

All in all Christmas was a happy time in this community, because emphasis was put on the true meaning of this season and the best methods of celebrating it.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAM AT MT. BETHEL.

On Sunday evening, December 24, the young people of the Mt. Bethel Christian Church gave a very interesting Christmas program. The first part of the program consisted of recitations and songs by the smaller children in keeping with the season, and the second part consisted of a play given by the members of the Christian Endeavor Society.

The name of the play was "The Spirit of Christmas." The subject of the play was woven around the plot of several young people who have received a handsome check from a wealthy relative. All were undecided what to spend their money for, but their ideas were things of selfish personal benefit. An announcer told over the radio that the spirit of Christ was abroad in the community and was going to visit in certain homes. The young people immediately began to set the house in order for an expected visit. Soon there appeared a little child in search of food for her mother and other children, a sick lady came by for rest and help, and a poor man appeared in search of a doctor for his son. The young people, after considering the matter, realized that they unknowingly had been visited by the spirit of Christ and decided that they should spend their money for the service of those who had come to them for help. After seeing the effect on the people they helped, the young people rejoiced over what they had done.

The program was under the direction of Mrs. S. E. Albert. Rev. and Mrs. Forrest E. Church were present and assisted in the devotional service.

The Pastor Talks to Himself

January and February are here again. These months have been designated by the Convention as the College Period. Elon College is our institution. For fifty years it has served and served faithfully. Many of our church people have attended Elon College. By far the greater majority of our ministers received training and inspiration there. I really don't know what our church would have been like, had it not been for the college and its unselfish service for the church. The church has always supported the college, not as well as it deserved to be supported, but it has supported it. The Convention founded the college. It has always been interested in it and has never failed to ask the churches to be loyal and generous in their support.

My church has been apportioned by the conference a definite amount for the college, and we are asked to provide in some way for the securing of this amount for the college during this period. I know that this should be done, and we must do it some way, but how? Many of the members of my church who were most interested in the college and gave most generously for its support have died. We miss their leadership as well as their gifts. Unfortunately others have not come to take their places. When you count up the offerings for the different interests of our church, their contributions are just not there.

Then we have a debt on our church. This must be paid. We cannot put our creditors off longer. To continue to pay interest when we could pay the debt is not good business. Our creditors have a right to their money, and we should pay them.

Then, too, my salary is not what it ought to be. If my church is able to contribute to other things, it certainly should consider its pastor. The college is expecting its money, other interests of the church are waiting for theirs. Demands known and unknown will be made of us. What shall we do? Where can we find the money?

The other day in my devotional readings, I ran across the question of tithing. I have heard sermons on tithing; in fact I have preached on tithing, but I have never really tithed myself, and my people have not tithed. I wonder if we could not put on a program of tithing in our church and see what would happen; that is for everyone who earns to bear scriptural injunction and bring his tithes to the storehouse and put God to the test for His promised blessings. If all of my people should tithe, we would meet every demand and every need of the church including our debt this year, and I know that we would experience a joy and realize a power that we have not known before. What a blessing it would be if we could hear the commands of God and obey the same. Then the needs of our church would be met, and the joy of our lives would be complete. It may be that we have been robbing ourselves of the joy of the Christian life by keeping that part of our earnings that really belong to the Lord through His church. From every standpoint, my church should tithe. I am willing to tithe myself and undertake to lead my church into a program of tithing and of spiritual dedication of life and property to the cause of Christ and His church. After all, these are the things that count, and God is depending on me to lead in these higher things of life. I will not disappoint Him.

CHRISTIAN ELEMENT IN EDUCATION.

In many of our denominational schools it seems that stress is being laid on religious education rather than Christian education. As I see it, Christian education is concerned with Christ as He is presented to us in the Bible. "Search the Scriptures . . . They are they which testify of me." John 5:39. I believe the Bible should be so safeguarded in our colleges that no professor should be employed who does not believe the whole Bible to be the inspired word of God, and that through the vicarious death of the virgin born Son of God the way of salvation is secured. We believe His bodily resurrection, advocacy in glory, and personal return to be of fundamental importance, and where these are taught without denial or compromise, that young men and young women, especially young ministers, will go out to be a blessing to many.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

OUR COLLEGE.

Some time ago I was asked this question. Will Elon be self-supporting when the present debt is paid? Many do not understand why the college is not self-supporting. Perhaps they do not stop to realize that we help to support our state schools by taxation. Our denominational schools must look for help in other ways. Elon is supported by student fees plus special gifts, endowments and conference apportionments. The thing that we pastors should be concerned about at the present is that our churches be given a chance to do their part in the support of our college.

January and February have been designated by the Southern Convention as the College Period. During this period let's see to it that Elon gets what our conference voted that should be paid. Elon is doing a "great work" and we must not let her down.

J. FRANK APPLE.

WHY SUPPORT ELON COLLEGE?

"Why should I support Elon College?" Many members of Congregational and Christian Churches in North Carolina and Virginia ask themselves this question annually. Each year during January and February the call goes out to each church for contributions for Elon College, and each year the argument is repeated. Among the many reasons that are offered for support of the college, the following certainly deserve consideration:

1. It Is Our College.

Most of those who are now active in the Congregational and Christian Churches today had nothing to do with the founding of Elon College. A few of them did. To the few there is added responsibility, but to the others there is great obligation. All members of our churches have pledged themselves before God and in the presence of witnesses to support the church. Otherwise they could not be members. The church of which we are part organized, built, endowed, owns and operates Elon College. Members of the churches are obligated to support the work the church has undertaken. To do less would put us in the class with fathers who will not support their children, and brothers who cast out their brothers and sisters because the little ones cannot take care of themselves. The title to the college belongs to the members of the church that owns it. We can give it away, but we have no right to starve it to death.

2. Our College Is Worthy of Our Aid.

Never yet has Elon College failed the church that founded it knowingly and wilfully. Critics of the college can point out defects easily. They can do the same for themselves. An institution is no more perfect than is an individual. In fact it is likely to have the faults of many individuals, because it is composed of many individuals. Officials may not always be right—who is? teachers may sometimes slip—most people do; students may not reach the highest standards—they are from our homes and our homes are not always perfect.

But when the rankest critic has done his worst, the fact still remains that Elon College is worthy of the best that Congregational and Christian Church people in this area can do for it. The grounds and buildings are beautiful and useful. The financial program keeps well within the income, and debts incurred in building and depression days are rapidly being paid. The faculty is well-trained, eager for success, and devoutly religious. Graduates of Elon succeed in the best universities, and now fill places of usefulness in all walks of life. At Elon College boys and girls of college age are as safe as they are in anybody's college. The proof of this is that they go away from Elon with a desire to live in a Christian way, and usually succeed in doing so.

Because Elon College trains young men and women to follow the Christ and serve humanity, that college, our college, is worthy of our support.

3. Our College Needs Our Help.

A moment's meditation will remind us that students do not pay for their education. Most of what they pay is for board and room. Someone else must pay for the teachers. The state pays for teachers in state schools—the tax payers put up the money. Individuals give the money for endowed colleges. And church people give the money for church schools. Elon is a church college, and church people must pay most of the cost of instruction for the young people who study at Elon.

At present the endowment of Elon is paying just a little more than the interest on debts. As the debts are paid, interest on endowment will be released for current expenses and the college can render better service. Now it is necessary to cut expenses wherever possible in order to keep going. If the Golden Anniversary Campaign is successful, and it certainly should be, our college can do much more effective service for the church.

In the meantime, and afterwards, our college needs the help of every member of the Southern Convention churches. Those who teach for our church are just as worthy of their salary as those who preach for our churches. To be a member of the church means that we are under obligation to pay them all. The college needs our help, and we must give it, or forfeit our right to be called Christian.

4. Our Church Needs the College.

The real reason for supporting Elon College is that we need it. If we had no buildings, no endowment, no faculty, and no obligation, we would still need the college. When Dr. Staley, Dr. Long, and the other notables of our church decided in 1888 to establish a college of "high grade" they did so because they were thoroughly convinced that such an institution was needed for the benefit of the church. Conditions have changed in these fifty years, but the church remains, boys and girls grow up in homes and need instruction, the church must train its children and its leaders. Elon College was founded for this purpose, and the needs are continually with us.

The state college has its place and does an excellent work. The endowed institution can serve in a fine way, and usually it does. But the time has not yet come when the church can afford to turn over all education to the state or to private institutions. Because we want to put our impress, our stamp, upon the younger generation, we maintain a college and support it.

Most of the ministers in our Convention received their college training at Elon. Many of our business and professional people who are the leaders in our two states and carry on the work of our churches were trained in our college. Because we need more and better leaders for the day that lies ahead, we need a college of high standing with high ideals. This we have at Elon College, N. C.

Through the fifth Sunday offerings in the Sunday school, by special gifts on College Day, and through the regular giving to Conference Apportionments, we can help to sustain the college of which the church can be proud, Elon College, the college that belongs to members of Congregational and Christian Churches.

CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS FOR ELON COLLEGE.

The Southern Convention has a college. It has had it now for fifty years. It is a good college, and few if any are disappointed with it. It has to be supported. It looks to the Convention, or rather the Conferences that make up the Convention for a block of that support. The amount of that block of support is $12,500.00 annually. That amount is looked upon as regular and permanent funds for the running of the college each year. It is a very small part of what is actually needed, but it is the amount the Convention through its Conferences has agreed to give. It is needed. It is badly needed as a part of the means whereby the college is kept going, and the failure to secure it impoverishes the college, and cripples it; and hurts its rating and standing. It needs the steady influence of knowing here is a fund which will be faithfully paid it each year.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.,
Graduate of Elon and Princeton.
Suffolk, Va.

The Convention accrues this fund through its Conferences, and they in turn accrue it through their local churches. Each church is apportioned a certain comparatively small amount, and that amount is a part of the regular Conference Apportionment. Every time a local church fails to completely raise its Conference Apportionment it lessens the amount the college will receive, and each year it receives much less than the $12,500.00. That hurts the college, and hurts its rating. It is our college, and we should support it gladly for all it has done for us, and for all it has done for itself. It has achieved mightily and gloriously.

On four Sundays, the fifth Sundays of the year, we are asking every Sunday school to take their offerings for Elon; and if they will think about it before hand they can make those four offerings pay a large part of their church's share of the Elon apportionment; and in addition to this we are asking each church to observe Elon College Day, and receive a special offering for the college on that day. There is a reason for paying Conference Apportionment in full, because the church enterprises to which it is allocated need it, every cent. Now is the time to emphasize our college's just share of it, and to see that it is raised for the current year. It is right. It is promised. Let's do it.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

ELON COLLEGE AND CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

Elon has made a great contribution to Christian education in the past. She has exerted the Christian influence and imparted a Christian spirit to a great host of Christian ministers, missionaries, church workers, business and professional men and women, homemakers, and many other young people, and sent them out to help build in home and church and community a Christian social order. She can, of course, continue to do this in the future.

She also made a distinct contribution to Christian education when she became the first college to erect on its campus a Christian Education Building, and to offer full courses in Christian education.

But perhaps most important of all, Elon can, with other church colleges, impart a spirit of Christian idealism to education, and act as "the leaven in the lump," transforming and redeeming modern education from stark and sinister secularism. This is a most vital and strategic function.

Elon has perhaps never faced a more vital ministry than she faces today and tomorrow. Because of what she has done, is doing, and can do, we owe it to Elon to give her our loyal and generous support.

H. S. HARDCASTLE.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

What will be the future of Elon College? This question involuntarily comes to the minds of all who are interested in that institution. Will the general and rapid development of tax-supported education seriously affect its program? Can the college keep up with the increasingly standardized educational system of today? These questions have been answering themselves in these past few years. When it seemed to all of us that the institution which we love was doomed to annihilation, in an almost miraculous way it began to live again. Most of us just sat back bewildered and watched this miracle take place, without having any definite part in it. But, to some it cost dearly.

Too long we've merely watched and waited. This is the year that every man, woman, boy and girl in every church in the Eastern North Carolina Conference must be made to feel a part of Elon College. To this end, the small conference apportionments must not serve as bounds. Pennies, nickels, and dimes must be accepted with larger gifts, in a serious endeavor to make every member of this conference feel the influence of our college on his individual life.

AUBREY C. TODD.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

The following facts will indicate the influence of Elon College in the Eastern Virginia Conference. Eighty-five per cent of the present conference officers are Elon graduates, and something like sixty-three per cent of the various committees of the Conference, have been trained for their work at Elon.

The Sunday School Convention, the Christian Missionary Association, and the Ministerial Association of the conference are all headed by Elon men.

In the Woman's Missionary Conference, which is one of the most efficient organizations of the Eastern Virginia Conference, an honor roll of missionary churches is kept. Ten of the thirteen of these honor roll churches, have Elon graduates as pastors. There are twenty women's societies on the honor roll, and fifteen of these have as their pastors men who were trained at Elon. There are nine young people's societies, and nine junior societies on the honor roll, and of the churches in which these are doing their fine work, seven in each case have Elon men as their ministers.

Then, too, a vast number of the finest workers in our Eastern Virginia Conference are men and women who have attended Elon College.

J. F. MORGAN.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

About seventeen years ago a terrible disaster occurred on the campus of Elon College. One of the oldest and most cherished of her buildings (Administration Building) went down in ashes. Those charged with her direction said that greater and better and more modern buildings should be erected. To build Elon went in debt. During this year the Western Conference is expected to do its part in fostering a better spirit and in freeing her of her indebtedness.

We must do our part because the founding fathers had faith in us. They did not expect to lay a college in our lap which was heavily endowed and with no responsibility for us. They had to believe that we would arise at her call and her need. Just this we are obligated to do. If we fail her to whom shall she go?

We must do our part because she has so nobly served the churches of our conference in the past. Her portals are open to our people. If we do not enter and drink at the fountain it is not her fault. Her ideals are high. Her training is thorough. Her plant is spacious. She tries to make Christian those who come to her. She can and will help us, and now we should help her.

The conference recently adopted the Convention plan on finance. It is, therefore, hoped and urgently requested that every minister and every church will make a conscientious effort to raise the apportionment for the college in full during January and February. May we also lay stress on the fifth Sunday and individual offerings to the end that the college may be freed of its debt and enabled to face the future unimpeded and unembarrassed.

E. CARL BRADY.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE TRAINING OF THE MINISTRY.

When the history of our contemporary Christian culture is written, a large place undoubtedly will have to be given to the role of those small denominational colleges throughout our land, which have been the most effective interpreters of the Christian faith and tradition to the church's students. Dean Lynn Harold Hough, in a suggestive article recently in Religion In Life, points out the invaluable contribution of the church college as the interpreter of Christianity and the guardian of democracy.

We would be more conscious of the significance of Elon College if we would view it more often from the perspective of its importance in the historical conditioning of our religious heritage. We would certainly be confronted with an impoverished church life were it not for the influences which have come to us by way of the college. Fifty years ago Elon was founded specifically for the purpose of preparing the students of our church for Christian service, and particularly for the Christian ministry. And whatever has been the strength of our denominational tradition during these years cannot be explained apart from the primary conditioning influences of the college.

What the college has done and what it does for the church, the church itself can never afford to do without. It gives vitality to the Christian truth in its relation to all truth. Within the framework of the church, it supplies to those who would be its ministers and teachers the necessary foundation for preparation in specialized Christian service. In this the college provides that which secular schools are not usually able to give. A friend in the Divinity School often lamented to me the fact that his own preparation in a state college had failed to afford him the richer background which he felt had been the lot of us who attended denominational colleges.

To intensify the meaning of the Christian faith, and to provide within the framework of the church the necessary basis for specialized study—this is the reason for a denominational college, and this my own experience has convinced me Elon College adequately fulfills.

HOW TO RAISE CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS.

The pastor and the church members must regard conference apportionments as a sacred obligation. There must be a will, a determination to raise the money for the various outside interests of the local church. If a will is there, a method will be found by which to do it effectively.

A church may use the various periods of the year in which to raise the apportionment for the cause designated. For example, this is the College Period. Many churches, by stressing the college this time, raise their quota now.

In the church of which the writer is pastor the finance committee prepares a budget at the beginning of the year. Conference apportionments are included in the budget which is adopted by the congregation at the annual meeting. For the past number of years this method has been effective.

The Church School can play an important part in raising the apportionments. One monthly offering should be designated for the Orphanage, one for Missions, and the fifth Sunday offering for the College. The offerings will be counted on the apportionment.

ELON COLLEGE AND MISSIONS.

It is significant that about the time a movement was begun in our Southern Convention to establish a Christian college, Elon, a movement was also begun in the Convention to make donations for, and send out, our first foreign missionary. The two movements have thus developed almost simultaneously and it is most probable that the one movement, or enterprise, did not interfere with, but really accelerated the other. This is because missions and the college do not ask all of the church and give nothing in return, but they give back to the church in personality, interest and life far more than they ask. The college is ours and from its founding till now has been a source of constant and ever increasing power and influence in the church, and the same is true of missions. The college is not a missionary enterprise, nor is missions an Elon College enterprise, but a glance at the facts will show that these two interests of ours have been and still are a constant source of increasing power in and to the Convention that sponsors both. They give back to the churches as stated above, more than they ask of the churches.

We have in Carroll County, Va., a real home missionary work. The pastor in this field who is responsible for the work, is a graduate of Elon College. We have at Ocean View, Va., where the population like the tide ebbs and flows, a home missionary church and enterprise. The one in charge of this church and directing its affairs is an Elon College graduate. In church extension within the Mission Board we have organized and are establishing a Christian Church in Asheboro, N. C.; the pastor of this church leading in the work that has begun with such bright prospects is an Elon College graduate and a very promising young man.

We could follow on around the circle of our church activities in establishing local congregations and building churches and the same truism will be found to hold good. True it is that since our first missionary within the bounds of the Convention went to Japan just prior to the founding of Elon College, only one other missionary has been sent abroad to a then foreign mission field, namely, Puerto Rico, and this missionary, still on the field, was Rev. D. P. Barrett, a graduate of Elon College. The high probability is that the next missionary, or missionaries, to be sent to fields afar from and by our Convention will be graduates of Elon College. This, however, is only one half the story. Those pastors as a rule most interested in missions and doing the most to make their churches missionary-minded are Elon College graduates. Nor does their interest in, nor enthusiasm for, missions abate by one whit their interest in, and enthusiasm for, Elon College. These two enterprises working coordinately to give back to the church more than they receive from the church are of mutual helpfulness and prove to all who will take time to consider the matter that the Biblical statement still holds good, "We are members one of another and if one member suffers all the members suffer with it."

It does not make a congregation, or a people, poorer, but richer, for them to make their offering for missions, nor do they give less to the college on this account. "The light that shines furthest from home shines brightest at home," and the very individuals who have been induced in the churches to give most liberally to missions found themselves soon giving most liberally also to Elon College. No one claims that our missionary enterprise is absolutely flawless and perfect in all of its movements and undertakings. Those who head such movements and undertakings are human and while they do the best they can, their vision and wisdom are limited. The same is true of our college. Anyone who has the disposition to do so can pick flaws in the conduct of the college and question the wisdom of those who manage and direct the affairs of the institution. We human beings cannot claim perfection of wisdom and judgment in our dealings, even with church enterprises. The fact is if one is disposed one can find grounds of criticism of the conduct of the local church, any local church; but if one has a disposition and the desire to help, one will find an abundance in the church and in the conduct of the church to approve and to applaud. The same is true of the institutions and enterprises that the church is building in order that the church itself, which our Lord said He would build and the gates of hell should not prevail against it, may go forward in its work of preaching the gospel and of establishing on earth the kingdom of heaven. It is much easier to stand aloof and find fault with those who are trying to do for the cause of righteousness than it is to be one of those who in loyalty to the church, which has made him what he is, is active in building up his church.

In this time of great need for our college we should, all of us, do our uttermost through effort, self-denial, preaching and pleas to help free the college of its indebtedness that it may be in position to make even a larger contribution to the church to missions and the cause of righteousness.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Outside my study window snow flakes are swiftly, silently, softly falling upon the ground. Is it snowing at your home, too? I think that snow is beautiful; don't you? There is something mysterious in the quiet way it comes, so softly and silently without making any fuss! Can you think of other things in nature which come as softly and silently? Sunday night I watched a sunset which was as soft and silent as the falling snow. Slowly the sun went to bed behind the buildings which make up the business section of Sanford. I stood at our west window watching that red ball of sun which hung in the western sky. Then it was gone! Suddenly from the place where the sun had disappeared there came a tiny ray of flaming red. Others came up in the sky and soon the clouds were all rosy with golden edges. The sky became so bright that it looked as if the buildings of our town were on fire. Slowly and softly the colors and rays returned to their hiding place in the west. Monday morning when I got up I hurried into the study to see what had happened to my pot of hyacinths during the night. Sunday night they were all shining green. But lo! when I looked at them on Monday morning the green petals had opened and there was one pure white hyacinth bell or blossom. I bent over it and caught a whiff of its dainty perfume. The blossom had come during the night as softly and silently as the snow!

When I was a little girl in our farm home in Tennessee I would pull aside the curtains at our living room window, and pressing my nose against the cold pane of glass, I would watch the snow flakes chasing each other down from the dark sky above! I often wondered if they did not play "tag" as they came tumbling down. This is the song that I would sing over and over again as I watched the miracle of the falling snow: "Old Mother Goose is picking her feathers, picking her feathers, picking her feathers; Old Mother Goose is picking her feathers! See how fast they fly!" The sky was "Old Mother Goose" and the white, whirling flakes of snow were her feathers.

The most beautiful snow I ever saw was the big snow in Chicago last January. I had walked home with Marilyn and Carol from our Church School Session at about noon on Sunday. They were two little girls in the Primary Department of the Presbyterian Church in which I worked. Marilyn and Carol were wishing that it would snow. They wanted to see the dirty buildings, bare trees, and empty streets made beautiful by a deep blanket of snow. I said, "Perhaps it will snow this afternoon or tonight. The sky looks as if it were planning some surprise for us; doesn't it?" The little girls laughed and said that they believed the sky looked that way, too. But it did not snow that afternoon and when I went to bed that night there still wasn't any snow. I left one of the windows open a little and jumped into my warm bed. In the night I was awakened by the whistle of the wind as it rushed through my window. I sat up in bed and pulled on the light. Out of bed I came! That wind was blowing snow all into my room. There was a small drift of snow on the floor and a much larger one on the window sill. First I shut the window so that no more snow could get in; but that was not easy for the snow was hard to get off the sill so that the window could be closed. I mopped the snow off the floor. Then I went to the big window on the other side of the room and looked out into the street. By the light of the street lamps I saw snow coming down the swiftest and thickest I had ever seen it. I shivered and ran back to bed.

The next morning I awoke to find it still snowing. The world looked like fairyland. What fun I had wading through snow which was up above my knees to get to the house next door where I ate breakfast! I wondered if Marilyn and Carol were happy over the "Sky's Surprise?"

REUBEN BAR-BARUCH.

It was getting late when Reuben and Samuel arrived home. Mother had waited for them to come before she put the evening meal on the table. The boys were so excited they did not eat much. Samuel talked almost all the time he was at the table.

"Weren't you afraid of the men?" asked Leah.

"Indeed we were," answered Samuel. "We were too scared to run so we just lay still. The man who found us thought it was very funny that we were afraid of him. When he told the other men that we thought they were kidnappers, they laughed very loud."

Then Samuel told how they had gone with the men to Dan's house and about the many things they said. Samuel had been allowed to ride on one of the donkeys because he could not walk fast enough to keep up with the men.

"Where were they going?" asked Samuel's mother.

"Oh, very far away," said Samuel. "It's a big city in Egypt. I don't remember the name of it."

"It is Alexandria," spoke up Reuben for the first time. "When I get big I shall want to go there. They have big buildings made of stone. Many people from all parts of the world go there to trade and study."

WHAT WOULD HAPPEN.By L. E. Smith, D. D., President.

This issue of "The Christian Sun" is dedicated to the interest of the college. A number who are alumni and friends of the college have written splendid articles urging our churches to properly observe Sunday, January 28, or the Sunday nearest that date as College Day.

What would happen if—

First, all readers of "The Christian Sun" would read these articles, take them seriously, heed their appeals, and express their approval to their pastors and fellow members of their several churches.

Second, all ministers, church officials, and Sunday school superintendents throughout the Convention should take these appeals seriously and decide to lead their respective congregations in a determined effort to fulfill conference requirements this year, reminding themselves that the orphanage period is over and that the full amount was raised, and now confronted with the opportunity of raising the college apportionments they determine to do it.

Third, all churches in the Convention following the leadership of their ministers and officials should agree on a program for the proper observance of College Day in their Sunday Schools and churches and should pledge their co-operation and contributions in an effort to raise that part of the apportionments that goes to the college.

Fourth, the entire church constituency should, after careful consideration and due deliberation, decide to set as a goal for the college offering a minimum of $1.00 per member and should organize the entire congregation to secure this amount.

Fifth, all the above suggestions and programs were put into effect in every church and Sunday school in every conference throughout the entire Southern Convention and forwarded from the different church treasurers to the college immediately.

It would not require a Solomon to tell what would be the results if the above suggestions and programs were taken seriously by all of us. Experience has proven that when a church adopts a program that is right and within reason and consecrates itself to the task of achieving the goals contained therein, success is bound to follow. The majority of our failures are due not to lack of information or scarcity of funds but to failure on our part to make the proper effort in preparation and achievement. This kind of task will not do itself. Someone with compelling interest and a vision of the college's contributions to the church and the contributions that the church will need from the college in the future must arise and lead in every congregation if this part of our church's program is to be effectively done. The raising of conference apportionments this year is essential to the present and future rating of the college. Let no one fail to do his best. Services rendered this year will serve as an example for years to come. When a church raises its entire apportionments, confidence in its own ability is increased, its spiritual power is multiplied, and the program of the Convention goes forward.

FINANCING OUR COLLEGE.

By I. W. Johnson, D. D.

The Southern Convention owns Elon College. By vote of that body the college was founded and chartered. This action of the Convention automatically carries with it the assumption that financial support must be provided. A definite financial plan has been adopted by the Convention, and approved by the various Conferences.

There are three provisions for this support: Personal gifts direct to the college, offerings by the Sunday schools on fifth Sundays, and apportionments raised by the local churches and sent in through the Conference Treasurer.

Personal Gifts.

Personal gifts may be sent by individuals at any time. This privilege is open to every member of the church. If one-third of the members of the churches within the bounds of the Convention would send an average of one dollar each per annum, it would make a total of more than $10,000.00 per year. This could be doubled without great sacrifice.

Sunday School Gifts.

The fifth Sunday offerings by the Sunday schools offer an excellent opportunity for children and young people to have a definite part in the support of the college. Usually, there are four fifth Sundays in a year. This request is a very modest one and yet, if all the Sunday schools responded regularly, the total sum each year would be surprising.

Church Gifts.

The apportionment included with the regular Conference Apportionments offers an opportunity for financial support by all the members of the local churches. In the majority of cases these apportionments are fair and reasonable. There are exceptions, of course, but these could be adjusted. If the pastors and other leaders in the local churches accept this opportunity seriously, the apportionment for the college can be raised. The churches have the privilege of using the three methods of raising this apportionment, and sending the money direct to the college during the year. When so designated any money sent for the Conference Apportionment for Elon College will be credited to the local church.

A COLLEGE OF HIGH GRADE.

Fifty years ago the Southern Convention decided to establish a college of "high grade" for the education of Christian Church children and ministers for the churches.

The Convention has at Elon a college that meets educational standards and produces graduates who are welcomed into the best universities. The equipment, the faculty, the courses, and the work done are of high quality.

This goal of the founders has been accomplished, perhaps even better than they hoped the day that perhaps even better than they hoped.

Amid native oaks and hickories stand the beautiful buildings pictured at the left. Beauty and usefulness characterize the college.

ELON STUDENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

Elon College has one of the ten Student Christian Associations in the South. The S. C. A. is a combination of Y. W. and Y. M. C. A. work on a co-educational campus. The president this year is Florine Ray of Elon. This organization is financed by $250 from the college, to be used in promoting Christian activities on campus, such as bringing noted speakers there, and for providing an opportunity for Elon students to fellowship with other Christian groups.

The members of Elon's S. C. A. are those who sign the pledge. More than 300 students have signified their desire to align themselves with such a group this year. There is no membership fee or "voting you in"—you become a member by signifying your desire to "understand Jesus and to follow Him."

Each morning there is a brief devotional service for those caring to begin their day in that way. "Morning Watch" is sponsored by the S. C. A. Every Sunday evening at 6:30 a Vesper Service is held in the Whitley Auditorium. Once a month this is conducted by the ministerial students. All the vesper services are under the sponsorship of the S. C. A. The ushers in the regular Sunday morning worship service at Elon are Junior Deacons selected from the membership of the S. C. A. Thus you can see what a vital part this organization plays in the personal devotional life of the college students.

Twice a year, at least, this organization carries out the service motive in a way that touches the whole campus and community. On Thanksgiving it is the S. C. A. which promotes the "breakfastless breakfast" in order that the money saved in this way by the college may be turned over to the Christian Orphanage at Elon. At Christmas a pageant is presented by the S. C. A. to which the public is invited. The "white gifts" received at this service are used in baskets for the needy in the community. The service motive is also carried out in helping with the Boy Scouts and the local Christian Endeavor Society.

The social life on the campus at Elon is largely planned and directed by the S. C. A. There are "Get Acquainted Socials" at the beginning of the year to help in the orientation of the Freshmen, and other parties given throughout the year in the gymnasium and the Y. W. room.

Each year members are chosen for the "Freshman Cabinet" from the newcomers to Elon. These Freshmen assist the upperclassmen in the furtherance of Christian ideals and work on the campus and are trained to take the places of the upperclassmen later.

All in all, it seems very wise for the college to give its sanction and finan-

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA YOUNG PEOPLE TO MEET.

The young people in our churches in the Western North Carolina Conference are to hold an Institute beginning at 1:45 on Sunday afternoon, January 28, at the Ramseur Christian Church. During the business session there will be a report of the China Friendship Project, plans for next Institute, explanation of "Caravan" groups, presentation of Western North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship Map, and a discussion of ways of observing Lent. This will be followed by a worship service conducted by Howard G. Cox of Park's Cross Roads Christian Church.

WHAT IT MEANS TO "ENDEAVOR." (CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR DAY.)

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR FEBRUARY 4, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 5:14-16;
Hebrew 6:11, 12.

Daily Readings—

Mon.—Endeavoring to Be Righteous—
Tit. 2:11-14.

Tues.—Working Out Salvation—Phil.
2:12-16.

Wed.—Sluggishness Condemned—Prov.
6:6-11.

Thurs.—Pressing Toward the Goal—
Phil. 3:10-14.

Fri.—Advice to An "Endeavorer"—
Jesh. 1:2-7.

Sat.—Advice to a Minister—I Tim.
4:12-16.

It is appropriate that we consider the meaning of "Endeavor" on Christian Endeavor Day. This is the last of the topics based on the pledge.

Someone selected should give the proper background setting by relating a bit of history on the incident of the birth of "Christian Endeavor." The discussion which follows should concentrate on what it means to "endeavor" today.

Points for Short Talks—

1. The word, Endeavor, suggests our determination to do our best to please Christ.

2. The meaning and value of trying.

3. Great reforms have not been brought about over night. They are processes of long endeavor.

4. The things for which a Christian should endeavor.

For Discussion—

1. What is the difference between a Christian and an un-Christian endeavor in the following situations: on the athletic field, in business, in politics, in church, when one has been mistreated?

2. T. Z. Koo, the famous Chinese preacher and author, made this statement: "Christian groups spend 90 per cent of their time discussing principles and only 10 per cent of their time planning action." Is he right? Does your society turn discussion into action?

For Action—

1. Strengthen your own lives for Christian activity.

2. Study the needs of your church. Make its worship program, educational, missionary, and evangelistic programs more effective.

3. Assist your pastor in every possible way.

4. Make provision for the neglected families in your community.

Suggested Hymns—

"Work for the Night Is Coming."

"A Charge to Keep I Have."

JESUS DRAMATICALLY PROCLAIMS HIS MESSIAHSHIP.

LESSON IV—JANUARY 28, 1940.

SCRIPTURE LESSON: Matt. 21:1-16.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 11:1-5.

GOLDEN TEXT: Behold, thy King cometh unto thee.—Matt. 21:5.

Jesus knew, of course, that he was the Messiah, that is, that he was the one whom God had sent as the Christ, the one who had been promised in Scripture, and the one for whom the Jews had been looking through the centuries. He had also made known to a few others that he was the Messiah—He told the woman at the well of Sychar that he was the Messiah; he also made known unto his disciples at Cæsarea Philippi that he was the Christ, the Son of the Living God.

But he had not yet made any public announcement of his Messiahship. What we call the Triumphal Entry was simply the public proclamation on the part of Jesus of his Messiahship, the formal offering of himself to the Jews as their king. Of course, they were looking for a different kind of Messiah—they expected one who would overthrow the Roman government, who would establish again the kingdom of Israel, and who would bring an era of peace, plenty, and prosperity to the chosen people. It was because Jesus failed to meet their expectations of the messiah that they rejected him. The words of John found tragic fulfillment, "He came unto his own, and his own received him not."

Doing As Jesus Said—Finding It As He Said.

We need not think in terms of miracles when we read the story of how Jesus sent two of his disciples into the village for the ass. It is quite likely that he knew the owner, and it may be that he had already made arrangements with the owner for the loan of the animal. The interesting thing is that the disciples did as Jesus told them, and when they did as he told them they found that it was as he had said. This is, of course, a parable of life. A great preacher once said, "Obedience is the organ of spiritual knowledge." One of the best ways, in fact the only way, in which to test the validity of the claims of Jesus is to do what Jesus says. And Jesus is always able to keep his word. He himself said, "He that doeth the truth cometh to the light." Again, he said, "If any man will do my will, he shall know of the teachings." So much of our ignorance in the realm of religion is due not primarily to a lack of intellect, but to a lack of obedience.

"The Lord Hath Need of Him."

"The Lord hath need of him." This is a significant statement. Here is Jesus, Lord of heaven and earth, holding all power in his hands, and yet frankly saying that the Lord hath need of him. It is a revelation of the cooperation which God needs on the part of man. To be sure, God could have chosen some other way, but as a matter of fact he chose to seek man's cooperation in the fulfillment of divine plans and purposes. There are some things which God can not do, and can not get done, unless man cooperates. Men must think with God, men must give to God, men must work with God if the kingdom ever is to come. The Lord Jesus Christ would say to every reader of these notes: "I have need of all that you have and all that you are. Without you I can not carry out my divine purpose." Here is after all the most persuasive appeal for the surrender of our substance and ourselves to him—the fact that God needs us, and that we can do something for him.

Behold Thy King.

Jesus came riding into Jerusalem on an ass. He chose not a symbol of war, but a symbol of peace. Although he was a king, he did not come with all the royal trappings and splendor outwardly that conquerors often used in making triumphal entries into conquered cities. How unlike modern dictators as they ride into conquered cities was the method of Jesus! As always, he chooses the way of love, and, as always, he respects the free will of his people. Jesus would be king, but he would be king only with the consent of men themselves.

Thus did Jesus very definitely offer himself to the Jewish people as their king. There were mingled emotions in respect to his offer. Some no doubt sincerely and honestly welcomed him as their king. But in general the multitudes simply acclaimed him with their lips but did not honor him with their lives. Like so many of us, they were quick to say Lord, Lord, but they would not do the things which he commanded them. Like so many of us, they were willing to adore Jesus, but were unwilling to follow him. And finally, there were those who had religious prestige and social privilege who regarded Jesus not as a king at all, but as an intruder and as a dangerous enemy to their own selfish interests. As a matter of fact, we line up in one or the other of these groups—those who honestly make Jesus king of their lives, those who glibly call him king but deny his lordship, on those who are his outright enemies.

And All the City Was Stirred.

Jesus always stirs things up when he comes into any city. In one sense he can be called "The Great Disturber." This is true whether he faces the individual in the deep places of his personal life, whether it be the industrial, the social, the political, or the religious, or international life of the world—when Jesus stands before an individual or a group, or a social order, he stirs up reactions which are troublous until some adjustment is made to him and to his demands on life.

Jesus In the Church.

"And Jesus entered into the temple of God." The first place in which Jesus went after he had offered himself as king was to the center of the religious life of his people. He went to what would correspond to our church. And he was not pleased with what he saw there, as he would probably not be pleased with many things which he sees in our modern churches. Certainly he would not look with favor upon any class pride, or selfish privilege, or religious prejudices, or favoritism, or commercialism, or formalism in the church. In his own words, the church is essentially a house of prayer. He would be against anything that would lessen its dignity or impair its efficiency as a spiritual power in the lives of its worshippers.

The Inconsistency of Folks.

How inconsistent we all are! The chief priests and scribes were so excited and indignant about the fact that the children were crying, "Hosanna to the Son of David," while at the same time they had converted a part of the temple into what Jesus said was a den of robbers. But then, as now, Jesus always arouses the indignation of those who are making profit at the expense of persons, who put the rule of gold before the law of God.

"MAN'S SMILE."

"I never think of you without thanking God."—Phil. 1:3.

Our text is the Goodspeed version. The words are the same as the authorized version. The thought is radiant. It proposes the question, "What is our reaction to God's smile upon us?"

It has been said that the greatest joy of life is in living so that there will be no regrets, or as nearly that as possible.

Can it be said of us that we speak so tenderly, smile so radiantly, pray so fervently, serve so loyally, and live so humbly that those who know us are glad and will be glad to remember us when we are gone?

Prayer—O Lord, bless us with those benedictions which make us radiant with goodness and love. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"TOGETHER."

"I beseech you brethren that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfected together in the same mind . . . that there should be no schism in the body; but that members should have the same care one for another."—I Cor. 1:10; 12:25.

I have just listened to the South-ernaires over the radio. One of the songs they sang was, "Let Us All Pray Together On Our Knees, Let Us All Sing Together On Our Knees." This song was a special blessing to my own soul. But beyond that it seemed to be fitting for the world of sin and confusion today. Oh, that we would think, pray, work and sing together. To do this truly in Jesus' name, we believe, would settle the world's problems and bring heaven a little closer to us.

Prayer—Our Father, we bow together as a family in our home and pray and sing together. We pray for our community, that all may pray and sing together. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

NEW YEAR FOLLOW-UP THOUGHT.

"Take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life; but teach them thy sons, and thy son's sons."—Deut. 4:9.

Goodspeed's interpretation enjoins that you must profit by your past experiences, that they do not slip from your minds, that you impart them to your children and to your children's children. Paul enjoins us to test ourselves for this continually, or else we will be failures. Paul knew that there can be no failure when Christ lives in us. Mahatma Gandhi is quoted as saying recently, "My aim is not to be consistent with any previous statements I have made . . . but to be consistent with truth as it may present itself to me at a given moment."

Gandhi is right, for it is thus that one grows from truth to truth. It is thus that one grows in life and in God. To do this is the greatest consistency; for them there will be no inconsistencies or lapses.

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, as we go forward into the New Year, grant unto us a double portion of Thy Spirit to live the truth as it is in our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"WE NEVER KNOW."

"Let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."—Eph. 6:9.

I spoke a word,
And no one heard;
I wrote a word,
And no one cared
Or seemed to heed;
But after half a score of years
It blossomed in a fragrant deed.
Preachers and teachers all are we,
Sowers of seed unconsciously,
Our hearers are beyond our ken;
Yet all we give may come again
With usury of joy or pain,

We never know
To what one little word may grow.
See to it, then, that all your seeds,
Be such as bring forth noble deeds

Prayer—Our Heavenly Father, in thought, word and deed we aspire unto Christ each day. May we never forget. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE CHALLENGE OF THE PAST.

"Lest we forget."—Deut. 4:1-10.

There is a theology of Paul's which enjoins forgetting the things that are behind. New Year rings with the Gospel of forgetting the past, and the writing of the future spotlessly.

Indeed there are many things we need to forget. But there are many things we cannot forget, for the fountains of life are in the past. We dare not forget those holy hours when the Lord blessed us and we know that none less than He did it. We dare not forget when and where our hearts were revived and made new. Life's past is our challenge now.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee for yesterday with its family prayers, its triumphant songs, its holy worship. Make them our stay of faith in this our New Year. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"DAILY BREAD."

"Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."—Matt. 4:4.

The Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ deals with all of life. Unfortunately the most of us grasp only some phases of it and ignore others. Nevertheless it remains true that the abundant life cannot be realized without taking this Gospel into every phase of our lives. For instance, it gives comfort to the sorrowing. It gives strength to the weak. It gives calm in crises. It gives patience in suffering. It gives all this in all ex-

SHOW THYSELF APPROVED.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God.—II Tim. 2:15.

The advice of the prisoner Paul to his beloved son Timothy is greatly needed counsel for us who live today. When winds of many strange doctrines all but shatter the faith of people everywhere, and war destroys that which God hath made, it is time for us to re-think the faith that is ours and to seek a sure foundation on which to build our lives.

There seem to be a few among us still who are afraid of study, but they are not many. Ignorance had its day in the Dark Ages, and we owe it nothing now. In its blindness people have blundered much too long. There is nothing in the teachings of Jesus or St. Paul that puts a premium on ignorance. On the contrary Jesus sought knowledge and St. Paul urged his young minister friend to study. Church people belong in line with those who seek to know truth, for truth brings freedom from superstition, fear, and littleness of personality. The way to greatness is the path of study.

In home Sunday school, church, forum, and college the people of our churches should study. Books, magazines, newspapers, church literature, and the radio may grace the home and make it a place of culture and refinement. The Sunday school is the handmaiden of the church that does much of the teaching concerning the facts of the Christian religion. The regular services of the church have in them such good information, or they become poor feeders of the souls of sons and daughters of God. Forums of various kinds turn light on the path to successful living. And the college of the church gives itself entirely to making it easy for youth to learn. Thus the church plans to fulfill the desire of Jesus and the instruction of St. Paul for study that leads one to God.

In this special College Number of our church paper it may well be said that the churches have not yet demanded enough of their college in the field of study. Some of our young people attend our college, but most of them never enter its portals. The Summer Training School is only one of many short courses that might be given. Ministers might well spend some time each year in study at Elon even though they have graduated from university. Books for research are available, and the college environment inspires one to study.

The objects for study are as numerous as the things in the universe. All truth is of God, and leads to God. We have not yet explored the truth in our Bible, in literature, in history, or in any of the sciences. It is obvious that we have not yet learned how to live with the other peoples of the world happily. How rewarding it would be if we could understand something of the beauty of the path that leads to the three gates on the opposite side of the City Celestial about which we read in Revelation! We become so absorb in our own little trail that sometimes it seems that there can be no other way than the one we travel. But the City has four sides, and on each side there are three gates through which people pass to the presence of the King of Kings. Our fellowship would be larger if we understood better the people about us and all the paths that lead to God. Study, directed study, consistent study, careful study will aid us greatly.

The purpose of study as given in the text is that one may be approved in the presence of God. The same writer tells us that the Spirit of God dwells in the human body of those who love him. Hence it is safe to say that Paul was not thinking of Timothy waiting for approval until some far away judgment day. He was to find the approval of God daily just like the disciples of Jesus are to take up a cross and follow him daily.

The will of God for daily living is the only will we can afford to follow. The prayer Jesus taught us to say asks that the will of God shall be done here on earth just as it is done in heaven. This is the prayer of Christians. If we fail to study to find that will, we become hypocrites.

So far as we can discover from the reading of Scripture, Jesus daily did the things that would relieve suffering, take away sorrows, make people friendly, and undergird all of life with an assurance of the vital, living presence of God. His message was positive. His faith was firm. His life was spotless. His service was sacrificial. A re-study of the Gospels with a desire to follow Jesus would mean a re-birth for the church of our day, a re-birth that is long overdue.

There is little comfort for those who think that the approval of God awaits the judgment day. When they read the description of that day as given by Matthew in his closing account of the teachings of Jesus, there is periences, and gives self-respect because we know we are the children of God.

Said Christ: "I came that they might have life."

MONUMENTS OF FAITH.

"He builded an altar there."—Gen. 26:25.

In the December number of the Geographic magazine an article is devoted to "Cathedrals of England." It is a story of those cathedrals as monuments to the glowing history of that country. It is a picture of color and romance, sacrifice and suffering, triumphs and glory. These cathedrals of England represent all that England has been and they inspire all that it may be in the future. The author closes with these words: "Whatever may happen to posterity in its unceasing struggle, I believe that these monuments of man's faith will still stand, and the people of the dim future will look at these masterpieces in stone and marvel at the hands that fashioned them.

Moved with rapture, we ask what monuments have we erected to our faith? Monuments of our faith may not only be embraced in temples, churches and chapels, nor in the Holy Sabbath turning up every seven days, but monuments of our faith are erected in hearts by good deeds for others and Christlikeness in everyday life.

From the time of the patriarchs till now God's people have erected altars, and sanctified them as the rallying point of worship and consecration—Christ is our only altar to whom we bring our sacrifices of love and service.

Prayer—Our Father, we look unto Thee not only to remember good need to worship Thee, but to build altars along our way redounding to Thy glory in good deeds and Christlikeness. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Quite a number of our children have had "flu," but so far none has had pneumonia. For the past ten days the weather has been cold and at this writing (Saturday monring, the 20th) the thermometer is standing at 15 above. That is pretty cold weather for this section, but it is clear and there is no wind to make it disagreeable.

The children have enjoyed fresh meat this season. We had thirty-two hogs to kill and we began killing the last of November and killed five or six at a time so the children will have fresh sausage and backbones and ribs all through the winter.

With fresh meat, sweet and Irish potatoes, and plenty of sweet milk they fare very well.

Our children are generally in good health. If they are in bed one day we count it on our sick list. It may be a slight cold with a degree of temperature. Out of our group we had one hundred and eleven days in bed. We are grateful we had only one child we considered real sick during the entire year. Of course, we have some accidents. Children will climb and sometimes fall, maybe breaking an arm or a shoulder, but we expect that with a group of children. They just don't think of danger, suffering, or cost of hospital bills and medicine. They will take risks that grown people would not think of taking. Especially little boys. But in all my dealings with boys I find most of them will climb trees and throw rocks. But after all we have few accidents to have as large a family as we have.

We have a number of urgent calls from members of the Congregational-Christian Church to take fatherless children whose mothers are not able to support them. If we had funds to support them we could give them a place. The Sunday schools and churches were loyal during the year 1939, and we are grateful. We trust they will be equally as loyal during the year of 1940. There is no finer investment than investing in children. To invest in a fatherless and dependent child is an investment that touches the tender spots in one's heart that no other investment does.

C. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

Reuben's father spoke. "I should like for you to go there. But, you must study hard and make good grades in school. Perhaps you can go to the big school in Alexandria when you get big."

"Is that the same Egypt that Rabbi Joseph told us about?" asked Samuel.

"Sure," answered Reuben, "and the men who are going there shall see the very place where our people were slaves to the great Pharaoh."

As Samuel slept that night he dreamed about the gifts which the men would bring to him and Reuben. They had promised to bring the boys gifts from Egypt for showing the way to the home of Dan.

Reuben dreamed of big buildings, all made of stone, and people from other lands.

CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS.
The church would perhaps be interested to know how the contributions for the support of the college in 1938-1939 compared with contributions for the same purpose in 1937-1938.
Up to 1938-1939 there has been a gradual increase in the support of the college through conference apportionments throughout the church. Each conference has been contributing slightly more than in preceding years. The receipts for 1938-1939 were different. Below is a tabulation of receipts by conferences for the years 1937-1938 and 1938-1939. These figures include all money received from churches, Sunday schools, and other sources allowed on conference apportionments. In raising your conference apportionments this year, I assume that the amounts will be practically the same as last year.

nothing there to make them feel at ease in Zion. The starving multitudes of our present world will stand there to condemn those who ate too much and did not share. The cries of the pitiful sick to whom no ministry was given will be torture to those who enjoyed good health and thought nothing of the less fortunate. The piercing eyes of prisoners who were left to suffer without any visitation by those who claimed to know the way of the Lord will burn holes in the conscience of those who left prisoners alone while they lived in this prison-infested world. If St. Matthew reported correctly, the voice of Jesus is crying out to the church in our time through the multitude of needs that crush the major portion of the world's population, and if church statistics tell the truth, most of the people who are members of the church do not heed that cry.

It is time for us to study to show ourselves approved unto God, and not merely to seek the comfort and consolation of what we blandly call salvation.

HOW THE PASTOR MAY HELP IN LOCATING AND SECURING STUDENTS FOR THE COLLEGE.

There should be no difficulty for the pastor to locate students who are eligible for college. He should be so well acquainted with the young people of his church that he will know each one who is finishing high school each year. The students of our own church are the primary concern of our college; however, it is not the whole concern. The pastor can aid the college by sending the names of those students who are to graduate from high school to the President of Elon. That is the first step in aiding the college in locating prospective students.

The job of securing students is a little more difficult. Yet it is a simple matter if gone about in the right way. That way is old yet the most convincing this writer knows. Just invite the prospective students to come and see. This was the argument Jesus used in getting disciples enrolled in the first Christian College. When they asked Him where He dwelt, He replied, "Come and see." When Phillip had seen His master and went in search for Nathaniel, the only argument he used was, "Come and see." When the woman met Christ at the well, she went forth and said to the villagers, "Come and see." If we can get the young people of our church to come and see our college plant, and see the striking personality of our President, come and see our college faculty, come and see the place it takes among other colleges, come and see the type of preparation it gives her sons and daughters, come and see how much the college gives for so little cost to you, compared with other institutions, come and see how her alumni take their place of importance along with the rest of the institutions, come and see the Christian training it gives; that will be sufficient to convince a large per cent of our young people of the importance of our school. They may also come to the games, young people's classes in the summer, some special occasion or just a motor trip.

JOSEPH E. McCAULEY.

ELON COLLEGE MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

There are twenty-four young men and women in Elon College preparing for active full-time Christian work who share in the Ministerial Association of the college. Among them are members of the Methodist, Friends, and Baptist Churches, as well as our own. The following are members of the Congregational and Christian Churches: Ellis Clarke of Virginia; Anna Marie Eshelman of Pennsylvania; J. L. Griffin of Virginia; Weldon Madry of North Carolina; Elizabeth Newton of Florida; A. M. Phillips of Virginia; Kenneth Register of North Carolina; Holt Ross of North Carolina; Joel Scott of Michigan; C. C. Thomas of North Carolina; Duane Vore of Ohio; and Henry Wise of Virginia.

Fifty Years

OF SERVICE.

For a period of fifty years, through adversity and prosperity, despair and hope, Elon College has served the young people, the homes, and the church of this period unselfishly. The fruits of her labors have been trained minds, strong bodies, consecrated lives, Christian characters, a prepared and enthusiastic ministry, a stronger and more influential church at home and abroad.

OF STRUGGLE.

The way has not been easy. Problems have multiplied and obstacles have mounted high. Always inspired by opportunities, hopes and dreams, but too often hindered in the realization of such possibilities by the scarcity of funds necessary for achievements, the college has pushed on to greater undertakings. Visions have been bright but too frequently blurred by the shadows of want. Out of her poverty she has given what she had that others might be advanced and enriched. Her struggles have been trying, but her rewards have been satisfying.

OF HOPES.

In faith the college has sown its seeds. In trust it has rendered its service. In confidence it has waited for harvest. With lavished hand it has cast its bread upon the water, hoping for the golden day when the same would come back to her campus fourfold. It has given, hoping for the fulfillment of a promise that it should be given back good measure, pressed down, heaping up, and running over. Today in the twilight of her fiftieth year of service, her hopes burn brightly as she looks wistfully out across the campus beyond the walls to the hearts, homes, and purses of the church and the people to which she has given herself through the years.

OF WAITING.

Elon College has endeavored to fulfill the purposes and hopes of the consecrated hands that founded her. Day in and day out she has been diligent in service and faithful to the trust committed to her a half-century ago. Many things would turn her aside from her original purpose, but with a determined spirit and a consecrated heart she has remained true to this day, touching the minds and hearts of youth and quickening their spirits to the demands of their day and age. Evidences of her faithfulness and efficiency are to be found in pulpit and pew throughout the church of our hearts and homes. Yet she waits for the liberality that will set her free, widen her vision, and make possible the multiplication of her service to the church and to the world. She waits as a traveler, overtaken by darkness, for the break of day. She waits as an innocent prisoner held in chains for the liberator who knows of his innocence and virtue. She waits as a child in need whose parents have been blessed with plenty. She waits as one emaciated in body for a blood transfusion that would restore health and vitality.

For fifty long years she has been serving, struggling, hoping, waiting. This year, the year of her golden anniversary, she makes anew her plea. May God help the alumni, friends and church to heed her plea, meet her need, and set her free to serve as she was meant to serve and as she hopes to serve.

faith and practice."

Now in the Days of Youth

By WALTER J. MATHAMS.

Now in the days of youth,
When life flows fresh and free,
Thou Lord of all our hearts and lives,
We give ourselves to Thee;
Our fervent gift receive,
And fit us to fulfill,
Through all our days, in all our ways,
Our Heavenly Father's will.

Teach us where'er we live,
To act as in Thy sight,
And do what Thou wouldst have us do
With radiant delight;
Not choosing what is great,
Nor spurning what is small,
But taking from Thy hands our tasks
To glorify them all.

Teach us to love the true,
The beautiful and pure,
And let us not for one short hour
An evil thought endure.
But give us grace to stand
Decided, brave, and strong,
The lovers of all holy things,
The foes of all things wrong.

Spirit of Christ, do Thou
Our first bright days inspire,
That we may live the life of love
And loftiest desire;
And be by Thee prepared
For larger years to come;
And for the life ineffable,
Within the Father's home.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

Credit for this young people's issue goes to the editor of the Pilgrim Fellowship page.

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, our mission board, is looking for about fifty young people to do missionary work around the world. If you are interested, the Promotional Secretary will gladly talk with you, or correspond with you about it.

Just three months hence the Southern Convention will be over. What do you want accomplished at that meeting? We need discussion in these pages concerning our work. Careful plans should be made before the Convention convenes so wise action can be taken while in session.

Young people can serve our college, Elon, by attending it, by putting on programs in the local church about Elon, and by giving and getting others to give to the college. Every young person in the Southern Convention is need to boost our college, the best college for us in all the world. It is ours.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN joins with her many friends around the world in offering sympathy to Miss Ruth Isabel Seabury because of the death of her mother last week. Miss Seabury had arrived in Chicago from a tour of the West for the Mid-Winter Meetings when news reached her that her mother had died. Anyone wishing to send a personal greeting should address it to her at 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

This Young People's Week is a very fine idea, I believe, and I hope our young people throughout the South will make it an opportunity to express their interest in the work of the church and their loyalty to Christ. There are so many openings for service through the young people's organizations, the Sunday school and the church that this special period should be a challenge to the young people. The following suggestions are made in the hope that every group of young people in all our churches may find some practical project which will employ their fine talents. If there are questions about the suggestions, you may ask your pastor, or write to the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C.

1. Prepare a list of people who have not been to church recently and divide the name among the young people, who in turn will visit the people and invite them to your church services.

2. Ask the president of the Missionary Society what your group can do toward making your church an honor church in missionary work.

3. Prepare now to present a beautiful and worshipful service on or near Easter Sunday.

4. Work out a plan with your Sunday school superintendent by which your Sunday school can secure $50.00

MISSIONARY STUDY.

An important part of the work of any Christian young people's group should be that of learning about the work being done for others in our own land and abroad. This may be done in various ways—by studying the individual countries in which our mission stations are located, by having reviews given of the study books, by placing mission books in a circulating library so that individual members may read them, by having "news from the mission fields" once a month at the beginning of your meetings.

The following will be helpful in your missionary study:

The Missionary Herald—Our denominational monthly missionary magazine. Only 25c per year.

Work of the American Board—Six booklets containing accounts and pictures of our mission work in six foreign countries. 25c for the set of six.

Right Here at Home—Home mission study book for this year in which various forms of home missionary service are pictured. 60c.

Comrades Round the World—Foreign mission study book which introduces Christian youth of many countries to young people of America. 60c.

These materials may be ordered direct from Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or through the Missions Office or Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WEEK.

This is the week designated by the churches of America for the emphasis of work with and for young people. At Christmas the mind of the world is turned towards a Child. At other seasons thoughts and efforts go to other groups. Now is the time for the church to consider its young people.

Yesterday I heard of a church that applied for aid to build but did not secure it because there were no young people in the membership. There seemed to be no future for that church, and the Board did not think it necessary to invest in a building for just one generation. Unless the young people take their place in the church, the buildings will soon not be needed. Then whose will these beautiful buildings be?

Because young people believe in themselves and older people believe in them, and because youth must learn to take over the responsibilities of the older generation, the church sets aside a time for special emphasis on the work of young people.

GOOD OR BAD.

Since the dawn of history there seems to have been an argument about the goodness of young people. Are they better or worse than the older generation? On the train with me coming from Carolina to Chicago (where this is being written) was a young fellow on his way back to the state of Washington where he had escaped from prison. He did not look like a bad boy, but he talked about escaping from prison with the same ease that the young people who read this talk of going to church. The long, relentless hand of the law reached across many states to take this boy back to prison.

Another boy in North Carolina that is well known will not be bothered by the law. He has cast his lot with the church and is helping the church to develop the kind of boys that will never need to be cast into prison. If these better boys succeed, the time will come when prisons will not be needed. Life, then, will have meaning, beauty, and attraction for all.

Yes, there are many young people who are good and many who are bad, as good and as bad as those who have given them life and training. The church needs to develop skill in training the younger generation to be better than the one that goes before. This will mean that the redemptive force of the church must operate in homes, schools, on the playgrounds, in business places, in the picture shows, in pleasure resorts, and in the church circles. Wherever people live, there is the place for magnetic influence of the church. This applies particularly to young people. If the church waits for them to come to it, the wait will be too long. It must bring them into the fellowship of the children of God.

Good or bad, the young people round about us are what we who are older have made them. It is our business to help to make them as good as we think that they ought to be.

SOME THINGS TO BE DONE.

Friendships are to be cultivated. Antagonisms between age groups is both silly and sinful. Older people need the brilliance, joy, and enthusiasm of youth. Young people need the serenity, stability, and wisdom of age. More rapidly than we like, we pass from one group to the other.

Houses are to be made into homes. Without preparation of any kind, many couples undertake to make a home. Business and pleasure keep parents so occupied that they sometimes forget to make the house into a home. Edgar Guest has well said that it takes a "heap o' living" to make a house into a home. But the making of the home is much more important than the making of money, or the enjoyment of pleasure. The houses in which church people live should become homes to which both young and old will delight to come.

Churches are to be made attractive. Women that keep their houses spotless sometimes seek to worship in church buildings that are dirty. Public schools and colleges expect students to study, but it often happens that the church school leaves study out of its ideas. Theatres spend millions of dollars for attractive surroundings and dramatically beautiful programs while churches sometimes go undecorated, uncomfortable, and without any program worthy of the name. A very ancient writer in a very good book said that "cleanliness is next to godliness," and the writer of most of the New Testament made much of the idea of rejoicing. The church needs to maintain these two fine virtues.

Work is to be expected. Most churches try to enlist the boys and girls as members, but when the name is on the roll not much more is done about it. Every person who joins the church should be expected to take some part in the work to be done. Very young people can still serve in the house of the Lord, just as young Samuel did. Jesus still needs rich young people to share with him the world's work, and he still calls from fishing and farming those who will really work with him as the world is fed and healed and helped. The Christian Church is a working organization, and every member should be expected to do his part. Young people should do their share, including the giving of money.

Only one thing more can be mentioned now. A vital Christian experience is to be cultivated. The Moderator of the General Council of our church says that we need self-disciplined people in the world today. It is the love of Christ that constrains one to live a life of unselfish service. It is the grace of Christ that makes one gracious. It is not enough to simply say familiar phrases. Life needs to conform to the teachings of Jesus. He both taught and practiced happy living. He was a young man, and young people who know Him love Him.

When friendships are cultivated, homes are happy, churches attractive, service is expected, and religion is a living experience, when all this becomes real, young people will love the church and will be the church.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Professor Benjamin Kidd in his book The Science of Power said: "Give us the young and we will create a new mind and a new earth in a single generation." Hitler's phenomenal rise to power was made possible by his emotional appeal to masses of young people to accept his social ideal for Germany. Communism is systematically making its appeal to young people by many methods of insidious propaganda. All political, economic and social revolutions are more likely to succeed if the support of the young is assured.

Jesus revealed a new and powerful discovery when he laid His hands upon the heads of children and said: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." The church has been slow to understand the significance of His attitude towards youth, but a new day is dawning for every denomination which makes definite and adequate provision for the training of young people in the faith and service of the kingdom of God.

For the last thirty years many attempts have been made to organize the young people in the churches of the Southern Convention. The first attempts were made in the Sunday School Conventions. Later the Woman's Board of the Convention undertook to organize a Young People's Department of Missions. This effort met with success where it was definitely planned and carefully promoted. Hundreds of young people were enrolled and a goodly sum of money has been raised for missionary work. This work is being continued with success.

The latest young people's movement is now called "Pilgrim Fellowship." The announced purpose of this Fellowship is to enlist the young people in all the activities of the church and train them for more efficient service. It has been difficult to integrate the program of the Fellowship with the regular program of the Sunday schools and the young people's missionary societies. This difficulty has not been due to any lack of cooperation on the part of the young people. Leaders of young people are usually older people who have had experience and who have ideas and plans of their own. When the leaders are not fully agreed, confusion will always follow. The present situation in the Southern Convention needs to be clarified. This calls for careful consideration of all the facts and problems involved in the promotion of work among the young people

Since 1867 the Southern Convention has been the law-making body for Christian Churches in Virginia and North Carolina. It is, at the present time, the law-abiding body for the Congregational and Christian Churches in these two states in the work of the Sunday schools, missionary societies, and churches in this area. Pilgrim Fellowship is not an organic part of the Southern Convention, as stated in this column some months ago. At the forth-coming session of the Convention some definite steps should be taken to correlate the work of Pilgrim Fellowship, Young People's Missionary Societies and Christian Endeavor. This can be approached by a joint meeting of the leaders in these groups for consultation and study of the whole situation. If the leaders can reach some definite agreement, as to the future objectives, in plans and methods of organization, the outlook will be more harmonious and encouraging. The survival of any one of the present organizations is not the first consideration. The enlistment of the young people in the fellowship, the religious education and the missionary work of the church, is the primary task of the leaders who are to determine the future of the work in our beloved church. Give us the young people.

I. W. JOHNSON.

YOUTH.

Science tells us that the span of human life has been advanced in these recent years. As life is lengthened, youth is shortened. At the age of sixteen young people are more advanced in mind and living than they were at twenty two decades ago. This is due largely to advanced curriculums of studies in public and private schools. Also the recognition of youth's importance and ability by church and state has contributed to this development. Education and responsibility are contributing factors in human advancement. The tendency today is to give a young person mental equipment, the opportunity, and expect him to use that equipment. Creative efforts in the field of training have become one requisite for success.

The church has been tardy in proper recognition of the ability and usefulness of her young people. The church needs the saneness, the dependability, and the stability of maturity. It also needs the daring faith, aggressive energy, and arresting activity of youth if its program is to be such as to capture the imagination of man and put to rout the forces of evil, negative and positive, that will eventually retard its service if not destroy its usefulness. The programs of the local church and the church universal should be made sufficiently extensive and comprehensive to invite the constant participation of all ages. Christ put His approval upon little children and His benediction upon the aged.

We should consider carefully and prayerfully our denominational programs. Should our youth be expected to have their future national and international gatherings separate and apart from the programs of the denominations that have to do with the ongoing of the Kingdom through our church. I raise the question if it should not be more beneficial for all to have all such gatherings at the same time and place, that as youth and maturity consider their opportunities and difficulties separately, that together they may also have the opportunity of formulating their plans for advance. There is a distinct advantage in pooling our findings that we may successfully determine a program for the whole church for the capture of the world for Christ. Our young people are definitely a part of the church. The church cannot be without them, but we do not need two churches, one for youth and one for maturity. There must be a solidarity in fact and in purpose if we are to achieve as God intends. We are one in Christ. Our task is one. Together we shall win!

YOUNG PEOPLE'S ISSUE.

Since this week is designated as "Youth Week" by many denominations, including our own, it is appropriate that this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN should be mainly devoted to our young people and their work. It is hoped that the older readers of this church paper will be interested in learning about the things our young people are doing and are planning to do. February 2 is the anniversary of the date on which Christian Endeavor was organized and this is one reason for emphasizing young people's work in our churches during this week. Give the young people in your church an opportunity to serve, and to lead. You will not be disappointed in the results.

Pilgrim Fellowship Activities

NATIONAL PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP MEETING.

The National Council of the Pilgrim Fellowship will hold its biennial meeting at Mills College, Oakland, Calif., August 15-22, 1940, the period when the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches is to be in session at Berkley.

The constitution provides that "Each state or district conference of Congregational-Christian Churches shall be entitled to five members on the National Council of the Pilgrim Fellowship with voting privilege, four of whom shall be young people. Non-voting delegates will be allowed to participate in the work of the Council. These members shall be chosen by each state or district conference of Congregational-Christian Churches in a manner approved by the state or district conference."

The Executive Secretaries will send soon to each state information regarding plans, cost, registration, and program, and suggestions regarding selection and preparation of delegates.

We hope state and district Pilgrim Fellowships will begin at once to make plans to be represented at Mills.

Nat'l Council Pilgrim Fellowship.

SOUTHEAST PUBLICATIONS.

During the past five months three issues of the Southeast Pilgrim Voice have gone to Conference officers, key workers in local societies, and ministers throughout our area. These have been financed by the different Conferences, without any cost to those individuals receiving them.

The September issue gave a general picture of the plans of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship, but emphasized the China Friendship Project. Editorial credit for this issue goes to Frances Foster, president of the Southeast, and financial backing was furnished by North Carolina and Virginia, Valley, and Eastern North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowships.

In December Eastern Virginia, under the leadership of Charles Heath, Jr., gave us a Christmas issue, with an appropriate drawing on the front.

The latest issue is just "off the mimeograph" and was edited by Charles Drake, Jr., president of the Georgia Pilgrim Fellowship. Georgia paid for the cost of this third Voice. It emphasizes devotional life and brings the use of "Lenten Devotions for Young People" forcefully to one's attention by a drawing of the cover of that pamphlet on the front page.

Besides these three issues of the Voice, program material for use in connection with the "China Friendship Project" has been sent to the key worker in each local society in all the states of the Southeast.

IMPORTANT VISITORS.

The young people's department of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches—which is called the Pilgrim Fellowship—has two capable executive secretaries. One is a woman, the other a man; one has visited the Southeast in this official capacity several times, the other has not. One has been working with this NATIONAL PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

The Pilgrim Fellowship unites the young people of the Congregational and Christian Churches in the purpose:

1. To achieve Christian personality after the pattern of Jesus.
2. To seek a fuller understanding one of another in the interest of happy relations in home and community.
3. To work for a united church, practicing Christian freedom and definitely promoting the program of Jesus.
4. To secure equal rights and opportunities for all classes and races as equally the children of God.
5. To practice a Christian patriotism which recognizes the authority of God in conscience as supreme.
6. To strive for justice in the social order which will afford an abundant life for all.
7. To work for such international organization of the nations as will preserve peace and security.

department for quite a few years, the other is a comparative newcomer to the work. One has an office in Ohio, the other in Massachusetts. But they both have one thing in common—they are to visit our area this spring! Miss Lucy Eldredge of Dayton, Ohio, whom many of us know, is to be the guest speaker at the spring rallies of the North Carolina Woman's Conference in April and at the North Carolina and Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship Rally. Rev. Henry David Gray of Boston, Mass., will make his first trip to the Southeast the last part of February, visiting our colleges and getting acquainted with as much of our young people's work possible. We are indeed fortunate to have the opportunity of meeting and talking with our national leaders, and we shall be very happy to welcome them to the Southeast.

OPPORTUNITIES IN THE SOUTH-EAST.

Surely nothing could more keenly delight the imagination than to visualize thousands of young people scattered over eight states—each making an enthusiastic contribution to a common task, and each knowing that he shares with members of Pilgrim Fellowship throughout the United States the conviction that our world will be better as we are able to make Christianity real in everyday life! The challenge of that dream is yours and mine individually, and it is ours as the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship. Let's make it a reality!

During this first quarter of the year, Personal Religious Living is the special emphasis stressed by the Southeast. Grace Long, Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., is Superintendent of this department, and will be glad to help you in any way possible. You will find her suggestions for work in your church in the January issue of The Southeast Pilgrim Voice. The keyworker in each church listed in our Southeast set-up receives this paper. If for any reason you did not get one, please write to Charles Drake, Jr., Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga.

Be sure to remember Young People's Week. And do all you can to make the Lenten Season one that will be long remembered in your church.

This fall we have perhaps broadened our vision somewhat as we set our minds on China, and worked together that Christianity might be more widespread and effective, and indeed, might be safeguarded, in a country where injustice and the uncertainty of life itself seem to defy the teachings of Jesus. Some of us have made our gifts—freely and willingly. But, as you know, we have by no means completed our job. Can it be said that the young people in the Southeast have not learned to share? Or to work together? Surely it is more reasonable to believe that every one has not had a convenient opportunity, and has simply failed to make that opportunity. Won't you see that the young people in your church have a part in the China Friendship Project?

As we renew our personal devotion during these days before Easter, and as that devotion expresses itself in gifts for a Laymen's Training Center in Tientsin, China, may we also be looking ahead to other jobs that we can do which will make our world better. Your suggestions, and your

ELON COLLEGE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY CLUB.

There are only four months before we hold the final celebration of Elon College's Golden Anniversary. The church, the Board of Trustees, and the alumni more than a year ago through committees set certain goals to be reached on or before commencement 1940. One of these goals was to secure three thousand members for our Golden Anniversary Club with membership dues at $50.00, making a total of $150,000, a sufficient amount with which to pay the entire indebtedness of Elon College. Because of the service that the college has rendered, the gratitude of the church and alumni, it was felt that there would be at least three thousand different individuals who would volunteer to become members of the club, that it would not be necessary to go to the expense of conducting a universal campaign for these memberships in the club, but that by invitation through the mails, those whom the college has served in years past would gladly cooperate in this fine undertaking. A sufficient amount has been raised in cash and subscriptions amounting a little more than eight hundred members. We need about twenty-two hundred more. Won't you come to our assistance.

ELON'S GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY CAMPAIGN

MID-YEAR CELEBRATION.

The committee in planning for the proper observance of the fiftieth anniversary of Elon College arranged for three programs, one to be held September 14, 1939, and to be known as Founders Day. This was duly observed with the Honorable Clyde R. Hoey of North Carolina, as the principal speaker and a program in honor of the original faculty.

The second period of celebration was planned for February 11 through 13. The theme for this period of celebration is to be "The Contribution of the Church-Related College to the Cause of Higher Education." It is hoped sincerely that many of our church people, alumni, and friends will avail themselves of the opportunity arranged. Much effort has been put into the preparation of the program, and the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN I am sure will agree that it is a very fine program. It is as follows:

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1940.

11:00 A. M.

"The Church and Education"—President William Preston Few, Duke University, Durham, N. C.

7:30 P. M.

"The State School as Related to the Independent or Church-Related School"—President Shelton Phelps, Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1940.

10:30 to 11:30.

Forum Discussion.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Some of you have said that you did not know how to work crossword puzzles. I hope you will learn how, so that you might work the ones that are printed on this page for you. There are many words in the puzzles that are taken from the Bible, so this is a good way for you to learn more about the Bible. Would you like for me to help you learn how to work these puzzles? All right, run and get your pencil.

First of all you should know why these puzzles are called crossword puzzles. This is because the words cross each other. The letters in one word are used to make other words. Let me show you what I mean. See, in the puzzle for this week the first word is the Hebrew name for Matthew. Did you know that Matthew had another name? Now, if you know what this name is you may write it in the puzzle. It must be only four letters to fit in the blanks. If you do not know the name, look it up in the Bible. The puzzle tells you where to look. Now, if you have looked for this name in the Bible, you have found that it is Levi. Write these four letters in the first four blanks. You see now that the first word coming down must begin with the letter "L" because this is the first letter of the word across. What does the puzzle say is the first word down? Oh, yes, it is the name of Timothy's grandmother. Some of you will know this. It begins with an "L" and has four letters in it. If you do not know the name, look in the Bible again. When you have put this word in the puzzle, try the second word down. The puzzle says that this word means a god of wood or stone. This word must begin with the letter "I" because this is the last letter of the word Levi. See how easy it is?

I hope many of you will try to work the puzzle this week. If it is too hard for you, perhaps you can get your mother or father to help you get started. If you enjoy these puzzles and would like to have more of them, I should like to hear from you to let me know. And if you don't like them and think they are too hard, I should like to know that, too. Please write and tell me what you think about the page for children and if you like the cross-word puzzles!

Sincerely yours,
DOROTHY TODD.
Sanford, N. C.

SOMETHING TO DO.

Did your mother read to you the newspaper story about how the starving wild swans were fed? Two thousand wild swans on the Island of Salthom, near Copenhagen, were reported in danger of starvation because of the severe winter weather. Two military planes were sent to "bomb" the Island, as gently as possible, with wheat and corn for the hungry birds.

Are there any hungry birds near your home? I have found that there are some here in Sanford. Not so long ago a young couple came to be married in the parsonage. As the "newly-weds" left the house they were showered with rice by their friends. The next morning I discovered a flock of feathered friends on the front lawn having rice for breakfast! I saw three red birds, two blue jays and some others in darker dress. Since then I have been saving my scraps from the kitchen for the birds. If you want to make some new friends in a hurry, just put some bread-crumbs where the birds can find them and the cat can't. Or tie a piece of suet to the limb of a tree.

REUBEN BAR-BARUCH.

A new boy entered the synagogue with Reuben and Samuel. He smiled at them but neither of them spoke. None of the boys in the class knew him and no one talked with him. He sat cross-legged on the floor with the other boys and waited for Rabbi Joseph to come in.

Across.

- 1. Hebrew name for Matthew (Mk. 2: 14)..
- 3. The son of Ruth and Boaz.
- 5. One of the Twelve Tribes of Israel.
- 7. He led the Israelites out of Egypt.
- 9. Part of a ship (Acts 27: 17).
- 11. To hit a fly,

Rabbi Joseph noticed the new boy as soon as he entered. He smiled at him, and said to the other boys, "I want you to meet Zenas. He has just moved into our community, and will be your classmate. He has come all the way from Alexandria."

Rabbi Joseph was saying more but Reuben did not hear him. The lesson for the day was about Moses and when the Rabbi asked Reuben a question there was no answer. Then Reuben's face turned red and he was ashamed because he had not been listening.

Reuben wanted to talk with the new boy after school. But when the others were leaving, he heard the Rabbi say, "Reuben, I should like to talk with you for a few minutes."

All the others had left when Reuben and Rabbi Joseph sat down together. Reuben had to explain why he had not been paying attention and could not answer his question.

"I was thinking of Zenas' home. I was hoping that I might see the big buildings there some day."

"How do you know there are big buildings in Alexandria? To whom have you been talking about this?"

Then Reuben told Rabbi Joseph about the men he had met. The Rabbi listened to every word. Then he told Reuben that he had studied there once.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE AND MISSIONS.

It is well and timely indeed that the churches of our own and also of other fellowships are this week emphasizing "Youth Week." The church has a task as well as a duty and a privilege to perform in behalf of the youth within its reach and range. Young people are ready and willing to act if and when properly directed, and certainly their activities for and in behalf of the church should be carefully and prayerfully directed.

Dr. John G. Truitt, pastor of our Suffolk Church, has set an example that other churches may follow with profit and benefit, both to the adults and to the youth of the congregation. Not long since, as was noted at the time in this column, Dr. Truitt assigned to the youth of his congregation certain areas for each to canvass in person those adults and youths in their district, or areas, not attending church and who in reason should do so. This gave the youth something practical to do in the name of the church and for the sake of the church, and resulted in activity on the part of the youth and a larger attendance at the church services.

The good women in many of our Women's Missionary Societies sponsor a Young People's Society in their church and seek to increase interest in missions and in the work of the church by looking after the Young People's Societies through the year. Every Woman's Society in a church will find it profitable to its own membership to sponsor such a society of youth in the church, and they will find that the youth will respond, usually with pleasure, vigor and gratitude.

Some of the wide awake pastors, realizing the need of enlisting our youth in behalf of the church and also the possibilities of the same, are awake to this opportunity and are themselves sponsoring and doing all they can to encourage Young People's Societies and activities in behalf of the church.

It is indeed regrettable that some pastors feel that they have done their duty if they preach at the church to the whole congregation without taking any special cognizance of the needs of the young people and the opportunity that these young people afford for real constructive work for the church and for all that the church stands for. The youth as well as the adults of the congregation need to get a vision of world needs and of the opportunity they have of making a contribution in the name and for the sake of Him, who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not for such is the kingdom of heaven." It is in His name and for His sake that we should enlist the youth in missions and in helping to carry out the great commission, which He has entrusted to all who would follow Him and do His will. Here is hoping that Youth Week in the churches will mean much, not only for the present, but for the future as well.

Again our gratitude is expressed to all who had a part in the above offering. It will be noted that "A Friend" sends a check of $27.00 for Missions. This Friend has a job on a salary, but has been unable to work for many weeks. This Friend tithes whatever income she has and divides her tithe between the needs and calls of her local church and individual gifts to Missions. If all church members would tithe, as is the command of our Lord, the church would have an abundance of funds to carry forward its supreme task of making our Lord Christ known to a warring and sinning world.

Our gratitude is expressed for every dime sent in for missions, realizing as we do that it goes for the wholly divine and unselfish task, not merely for the sake of humanity, but for the sake of our Lord and our Redeemer.

Gratefully,
J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER.

The World Day of Prayer for 1940 is February 9, the first Friday in Lent. The theme this year is "In quietness and confidence shall be your strength." A Call to Prayer, which announces the date, place and hour of the meeting, is free upon request. A booklet entitled "Worship Program for Adults and Young People," contains six beautiful worship services prepared by Muriel Lester and her sister, Doris Lester, world-famous Christians of England. The booklet is pleasing in appearance, made of lavender paper and printed in black ink. Price, two cents. The handbook which offer suggestions for the planning and observance of the Day of Prayer is ten cents. The poster for announcing the meeting, 17 x 22 inches, is five cents. These may be ordered direct from Missions Council, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City or through the Missions Office, Elon College, N. C.

Observance of the World Day of Prayer for Missions is one of the points on the Standard of Excellence for our missionary societies. There is still time to secure materials for a special meeting on this day.

"Before the end of time prophecy says wars shall cease, swords shall be beaten into ploughshares and spears into pruning hooks. The lion and lamb shall lie down together. From present indications the end is nowhere in sight!"

Young People's Missionary Work

SUPERINTENDENT'S MESSAGE.

(FROM SOUTHERN CONVENTION YEAR BOOK.)

The first aim for our young people is that they grow in "wisdom and in stature, and in favor with God and man." May they become consecrated Christians with a story to tell to the world—beginning in their own homes and spreading to the ends of the earth—of Christ's redeeming love. May every young person in this our Southern Convention be so filled with the love of Christ that they will be constrained to work for Him and for His Kingdom on earth.

The two books that have been selected for this year are: Right Here At Home and Comrades Around the World. We should study and learn all that we can about our mission work and then support it in every way possible in our missionary societies.

The American Board has voted to send forty-three young people as missionaries as soon as the funds can be secured. There is an urgent need for physicians, nurses, evangelistic workers, teachers and social workers on our mission fields. May the young people of our Convention help to make it possible for these young people of our church to be sent. Then may we support them with our money and our prayers.

TORA RUDD, Young People's Superintendent, Southern Convention Woman's Mission Board.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

The Southern Convention Woman's Mission Board sponsors the organization of young people's missionary societies in the local churches, and sets up goals and apportionments for them. If a group of young people in a local church desire to form such an organization they may secure information and help by writing to any of the following: Southern Convention Superintendent, Miss Tora Rudd, 403 Church Street, Burlington, N. C.; Eastern Virginia Superintendent, Miss Caroline Gort, 1622 McDaniel Street, Portsmouth, Va.; North Carolina Superintendent, Mrs. J. H. Lightbourne, 401 Church Street, Burlington, N. C.; Valley Virginia Superintendent, Mrs. R. A. Whitten, 12 W. Clifford Street, Winchester, Va.

STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE.

1. That each society study the book of St. John.

- 2. Eleven monthly meetings held during the year.
- 3. Representatives to District and Conference Meetings.
- 4. One public service held during the year.
- 5. A Membership Campaign held during the year.
- 6. At least one Home and one Foreign Mission study book used during the year.
- 7. Each society sending a quarterly report to Conference Treasurer and to District Superintendent.
- 8. An increase in gifts over apportionments.

BETHEL YOUTH FELLOWSHIP
REORGANIZES.

The Youth Fellowship of the Bethel Christian Church, near Elkton, Va., held its annual business meeting on Sunday night, December 31. The following officers were elected: President, Walstein Snyder; Vice-President, Ellen Monger; Secretary-Treasurer, Margie Alger. The newly elected president conducted a fine service on the following Sunday evening, with a fine group of young people present. He appointed a program committee consisting of Hazel Davis, Helen Monger, and Goldie Dofflemeyer. This committee met with the president for the purpose of discussing and selecting topics and planning programs most appropriate for the society. They plan to meet once a month and plan the programs a month in advance. Walstein is a promising young man and is deeply concerned in benefiting his church and society as well as himself. We pray that he will be successful in the new work he has undertaken. He plans to study to become a minister following his graduation from high school. May his high ideals be attained and may he be a blessing for the church and community.

GOLDIE DOFFLEMYER.

LIBERTY SPRING.

The young people's missionary society of the Liberty Spring Christian Church held a lovely meeting in the church on the third Sunday night in December with a fine attendance. The business session was presided over by the president, Edward Tarkington, after which a most interesting and inspiring program was presented. Miss Polly Thompson, chairman of the program committee for the month, had charge and gave the call to worship. The program was as follows: Piano Prelude by Sue Turner; The Annunciation Story, Luke 1:26-33 by Claire Bradshaw; "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear" by Lettie Tarkington; "Adeste Fidelis" by Claire Bradshaw; The Story of the Shepherds, Luke 2:8-14 by Gladys Taylor; "The First Noel" by Edward Tarkington; "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing" by Harrel Byrd; Address: "Love" by I. W. Johnson; "Away in a Manger" by Martha Ann Massey; "Silent Night" by Frank Tarkington; The Story of the Wise Men, Matthew 2:1-13 by Sue Turner; "O Little Town of Bethlehem" by Edward Tarkington.

The history of each of the Christmas carols was read by a young person.

EASTERN VIRGINIA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

The Spring Conference of the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship will be held on Saturday afternoon and evening, March 30. Place of meeting will be announced later. The theme is to be "Echoes of Amsterdam" and is based on the World Conference of Christian Youth held in Amsterdam, Holland, last summer.

Our Pilgrim Fellowship has raised about one hundred dollars for the China Friendship Project of the Southeast.

CHAS. E. HEATH, JR.,
President.

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

We have a new society organized in our Conference at Turner's Chapel. This is a very fine group of young people and we expect to hear more about them later. By the time of our annual conference, we hope to have reached our goal of five new societies organized.

Since the Rally we had in Raleigh in September, we have been working on the China Friendship Project. Some of the local groups had special Christmas programs. Also, the young people made donations to the aged ministers' superannuation fund.

One of the goals set up at the last Pilgrim Fellowship Conference was for the young people to help improve the appearance of their local church. This has been done in one of the churches. Reports about this have not been sent in from all the churches.

The officers of our group are: President, Mrs. Brookston Eaves, Route 1, Henderson; Vice-President, Josephine Evans, Franklinton; Secretary, Josephine Langston, 414 Rowland Street, Henderson; Assistant Secretary, Luvene Holmes, Elon College; Treasurer, Odell Arnold, Route 3, Louisville.

SUE DUNN EAVES, President.

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

Last summer at our Western North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, which met to unorganized groups and try to get at Randleman Christian Church on July 27, the need of an organized young people's group was discussed. The young people present expressed their desire to organize a Pilgrim Fellowship in this Conference, and set a date for the meeting at Pleasant Ridge Christian Church near Ramseur.

Although September 10 was one of the most sultry days of the year, there were 140 young people present, representing sixteen churches in the Conference. The program for this meeting was planned by Rev. A. Lanson Granger and Mr. and Mrs. Sybrant Pell and consisted chiefly of an explanation of "Pilgrim Fellowship." The young people unanimously agreed to organize, and to join the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship in the China Friendship Project.

The following officers were elected: President, Sybrant Pell, Asheboro; Vice-President, Juanita Owens, Snow Camp; Secretary, Thelma Thomas, Biscoe; Treasurer, William Dan White, Pittsboro. Since that first meeting there have been two officers' retreats held in which the work for the ensuing year was planned. Also at Conference, which was held at Brown's Chapel, the night session was devoted to the young people and the Pleasant Hill Christian Endeavor Society gave a very interesting play which gave further insight on our friends in China. Our Superintendent of Missions, Howard G. Cox, did a splendid job on the China project and received a very good response from the churches, considering that fact that our organization is so young.

Some of our plans are as follows: To hold four institutes during the year. At the first, which was to have been held January 28 at Ramseur Christian Church, but which was postponed due to weather conditions until February 11, race relations and Lenten devotions are to be stressed. A map is to be drawn by our vice-president, on which the church are to be located and information about young people is to be compiled. With the aid of this map, we plan to start a "Caravan" in the spring, when organized groups will present programs new societies started. We also wish to

"LIBERTY AND JUSTICE FOR ALL." (RACE RELATIONS SUNDAY.)

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR FEBRUARY 11, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: Matt. 7: 12; 25: 34-36.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Liberty for an Ethiopian—Acts 8: 35-39.

Tuesday—Christ's Great Mission—Isaiah 61: 1-3.

Wednesday—Proper Use of Liberty—Gal. 5: 1, 6, 13, 14.

Thursday—Justice Promised—Jer. 23: 5, 6.

Friday—Kindness to Enemies—II Kings 6: 18-23.

Saturday—A Foreigner Healed—Mark 7: 24-30.

The phrase, "Liberty and justice for all" is a part of the pledge to the flag of the United States, which is used in many of our schools. This Sunday, in honor of Lincoln's birthday, is commonly observed as Brotherhood Sunday. It would be well to observe the meaning of this phrase with reference to racial intolerance. There will be two topics on this theme.

Suggested as part of the Devotional Service:

Hymn: "In Christ There Is No East or West."

Scripture.

Leader's Comments: On basic principles of Constitution and Bill of Rights; then compare the Christian ideal of brotherhood.

Salute to the American Flag: "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands: one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Hymn: "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

Salute to Christian Flag: "I pledge allegiance to the Christian flag, and to the Savior for whose Kingdom it stands: one brotherhood uniting all mankind in service and in love."

Hymn: "Fling Out the Banner."

Sentence Prayer.

Hymn: "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life."

For Discussion—

1. Why do people think that white Americans are so much better than Negroes or Jews or foreigners.

2. Why do people so often think that most of the crime is committed by "foreigners?"

3. What is the attitude of Christ toward people of other races? Refer to Luke 10: 33; John 4: 6-10.

4. Study Paul's statement, Acts 17: 24-26.

5. Study what our denomination says about inter-racial justice and brotherhood.

HOLDING LIFE SACRED.

(A PRINCIPLE OF TEMPERATE LIVING.)

LESSON V—FEBRUARY 4, 1940.

LESSON: Genesis 1:27-31; I Cor. 6:19-20; II Cor. 6:16-7:1.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Matt. 9:35-38.

In God's Image.

"And God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." Man belongs to the animal kingdom, but he is more than an animal. Man has been created in the likeness of God. This does not mean, of course, that God has a physical form like a man, but it does mean that man is like God in his intellectual, moral, and religious capacities and powers, in his ability to think, to feel, and to will. Man has God's divine nature stamped upon him. This glorious fact has two implications: it makes it possible for God to reveal himself to man; it makes it possible for man to have communion with God. Needless to say, this applies both to men and to women. Woman is not an inferior being; she, too, has been made in the image of God, with all the divine capacities and possibilities as are to be found in man.

Be Fruitful and Multiply.

From the beginning God ordained that men and women should mate, that they should establish their homes, that they should reproduce their kind, that they should be fruitful and multiply. Family life has a biological function as well as a social one. Family life does not fulfill its highest function unless there are children in the home. There are, of course, exceptions to this rule, but much of the avoidance of bearing children is an opposition to God's plan and purpose.

Replenishing and Subduing the Earth.

Man was giving work to do. Indeed, he achieves character only by dint of hard work. The earth is a constant challenge to him. He is to subdue it, and he is to replenish it. History is an eloquent witness to the way in which man more or less successfully has carried out the divine decree.

Have Dominion.

"And God said, 'Have dominion.' " Man is to be master. He is to learn to control the forces of nature and to harness them to do his tasks. He is to subdue the animal kingdom and make them minister to his highest well being. He is above all else to master himself. Here is perhaps man's most fatal weakness. He has exerted his mastery on the sea, on the earth, in the sky, but alas, he has all too often failed to be master of himself. And much of the world's woe is to be traced to this failure. Man has been all too eager to exert his mastery over others, but unwilling to master himself.

Very Good—But It May Be Better.

"And God saw everything that he had made, and behold, it was very good." Things were very good when they came from the hand of God, but in many areas as man has worked with God they have become better. An outstanding example of this is the work of Luther Burbank. We are workers together with God. Not only in the realm of plants and animals, but in human life and in human relationships we are constantly to be working together with God to make the things which are very good, better, and best.

The Temple of God.

Know ye not that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit which is in you, which ye have from God?" Primitive people thought that God lived in stones, in trees, in rivers, and in mountains. Later they believed that he lived in temples. Paul announced the revolutionary truth that God also lives in people. Our bodies, as a matter of fact, are the temples of the living God. God dwells elsewhere, of course, but there is nowhere that he would rather dwell than in the hearts of his children. Furthermore, the body is the instrument of the Spirit of God. Through its mind and through its members, God makes his truth and his love known in practical action. The body is sacred. No man has a right to defile it. It should be kept clean; it should be developed; it should not be abused. It should be an instrument which God can use. It is more than a rack on which to hang clothes. It certainly is not simply something to be fed. It is the temple of God, and therefore through it and in it we are to glorify God. God himself says, "I will dwell in them, and walk in them. . . . Wherefore come ye out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord."

Sons and Daughters of God.

We have not only been made in the image of God, we are sons and daughters of a loving heavenly Father. Through faith in Jesus Christ we enter into this relationship. Religion is not primarily a matter of creeds or ceremonies; at the heart it is an intimate, personal relationship between God, a loving heavenly Father, and men and women as his children.

Sins of the Flesh—Sins of the Spirit.

"Having, therefore, these promises, beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all defilement of flesh and spirit. . . ." There are, of course, sins of the flesh, the coarser sins, the sins which are often so repulsive, lust, drunkenness, etc. There are also sins of the spirit—pride, jealousy, bigotry, and the like. And in the sight of God the last group is as repulsive as is the first. In our modern world sin often takes on polished forms, but it is just as deadly.

Positive Goodness.

"Perfecting holiness in the fear of God." Men can hardly be good simply by refraining from doing wrong, at least in the sense in which Jesus used the word goodness. For on the lips and in the life of Jesus goodness means positive, outgoing, constructive love. Paul says we are to perfect holiness in the fear of God. No man is perfect—Paul himself said that he had not yet attained—but perfection must be our goal. And in season, and out of season, with patience and pursuit, we must keep our faces to the light, and we must "press toward the marks of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

6. Study and discuss racial conditions in your community. What attitudes exist? How are they treated?

7. Delegates to the first World Christian Youth Conference in Amsterdam, Holland, were disturbed when a South African said, "In this discussion group I have found that there is a black man's God and a white man's God." What did he mean by that statement?

8. Booker T. Washington said, "We are fast learning that one man cannot hold another man down in the ditch without remaining there with him." If we deny health, education, and decent standards of living to Negroes or other under-privileged groups, do we not suffer in the end with them?

Have an outstanding speaker present to the society a message on racial relations and methods to improve them.

MONDAY.

"COWARDICE."

"And cast him out of the city, and stoned him."—Acts 7:58.

Cowardice is of little use at any time, least of all in the field of religion. Yet, it is suspected that cowardice in standing for what we believe is the downfall of many a soul.

Many a believing, consecrated, well-intending person, under the appeal of temptation, yields and falls. He yields because he does not have the courage to say no to his companions, or to deny himself momentary gain or pleasure.

On the other hand, the devotion of martyrs has added mightily to the vitality of us all. Could we draw inspiration from them, we might have a little more of their spirit in our day when the same sort of courage is needed.

Prayer—O Lord, our Father. We thank Thee for this day, and for our day, and for our lives. Endow us with the courage of Jesus and that of our forefathers, upon whose courage the church stands a mighty fortress. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"CAN THE MAJORITY BE WRONG?"

"Let us go up at once."—Numbers 13:30.

The vote stood ten to two! Ten for fear—two for courage. Could the ten be wrong? Let's see.

As soon as they voted for fear, the whole "caboodle" started back. No success there. Success means going forward.

In the motion picture, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," for his stand is right. The Senate voted Senator Smith out. He started home. The thought what a failure he was stopped him. He returned to the Senate, secured the floor and held the house at bay till he collapsed. He fearlessly declared their wrong doing and he maintained his idea of right. He won. The Senate confessed their wrong and vindicated him.

Who is the successful Christian today? The "courage-ers" or the "fear-ers"? How is it with the church? How is it with you?

Prayer—O God, forgive us our spiritlessness. Tune our souls to Thy Spirit and set our feet in obedience to Thy voice of hope, courage and faith. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE BRIGHT LIGHT.

"Quicken thou me in Thy way."—

Psalm 119:37.

Thine is "the way, the truth, the life."—John 4:6.

The masses seem to have no abiding consciousness of our indwelling God. They run after vanities and struggle to see which can get there first. The urge of the flesh for pleasure and comfort and the appeal of the age to the imagination is photostatic and irresistible and folks lose their sense of true values. The flare of a candle light robs them of the glories of sunrise and the blessings of the day.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, guide our erring feet in Thy way that we may come to know Thy peace, Thy joy, and Thy abiding truth forever. Amen.

THURSDAY.

HOW SHALL I?

"Walk in the Spirit."—Gal. 5:16.

"Walk in the Spirit and ye shall fulfill the lust of thy flesh." It sounds simple enough, doesn't it?

Eating and drinking, looking and listening, talking and doing, are normal instincts. All of it is simple enough, yet any of these may run wild and cause a tragic downfall. They must be controlled by reason, by conscience and with a clear sense of value for ultimate good.

Love is God. Love was the mission of Christ and it is the crowning experience of human life. But it is easily wrecked. If the rules of love are broken, woe to the breaker. "If any man destroy the temple of God, him will God destroy." Yes, defilement carries with it its own destruction.

Prayer—Our Father, we plead our weakness, and we lay them at Thy feet. Forgive us, endow us, and help us to walk in Thy Spirit and heed Thy word always. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FAILURE? WHY?

"My people have . . . forsaken me . . . and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns that can hold no water."—Jer. 2:13.

Self-control, self-reliance, and personal initiative must not be discredited. They are essential to temporal success and also to Christian culture. But the person who forgets God, gets the idea that he is self-sufficient and abandons "the formation of life" is doomed to failure. To the God-given attributes of life add inspiration, consecration, worship, and cheerful service, and one has the greatest driving power of life's glories.

Prayer—Our Father, reveal to us each day Thy will; and move our spirits to dutiful service in obedience to it. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"TOO MUCH BAGGAGE."

"Our wants are few."—Lk. 10:42.

We are told that occasionally a tourist has been known to miss the Alps while fretting over his baggage.

If we would get the most out of life we must not spend our time with minor things. Attention must be centered on essentials. Jesus told Martha that there were things more important than a good dinner. In the parable of the rich man He taught that there are better possessions than a full barn. The things that really

A VITAL RELIGION FOR THE YOUTH OF TODAY.

"Be still and know that I am God."—Psalm 46: 10.

A religion that will meet the needs of the youth of today must be a vital one. It should even express a hope for the tomorrow. It must heighten their joys and alleviate their distresses and sorrows. It must satisfy. And if it fails to satisfy, then youth declares his atheism and becomes wild and reckless—so they say.

Yet youth has something of a religion as all of us have one. It may not be a vital one that will bring them newness of life, but it is a religion, whatever it may be. Can youth have a vital religion—and not only youth but adults—that shall make them new creatures and build a new world? It goes without saying that many of them declare our modern type of Christianity as out of date and of no practical use for them. Not knowing many other religions, such as Buddhism and Mohammedanism, he still clings to the remnants of Christianity. What could be done to make Christianity a vital and a life-giving religion for all of us?

Christianity must have at its center a personality. This is true of any religion that will be vital for youth. The world follows a personality today. Books and machines have their place. But watch the Italian youth follow Mussolini and the German youth follow Hitler. They have created a culture around them and they have become the centers around which everything else revolves. In our own land we have outstanding political leaders and the youth respond to their calls. What is wrong with Christianity? Is it not supposed to have a personality at the center?

Yes, it is supposed to have a personality. But through the ages the Christian religion has crystallized into an organization, known as the church, which is all well and good. But we have built and attached organizations, ceremonies, and customs.

Church buildings with all of their equipment, have been emphasized. One Methodist minister seems to have gone some farther than the rest of us when, in his annual report, he said that he had four churches, two missionary societies, one youth society, and seventeen saloons. His conclusion was "As long as the church has the power to run the country and leaves the saloons there, they are a part of the church." Thus the church has taken in much under its wings. Can we find the center of it all?

We look at man. If he is the center then our religion becomes weak and is mere humanitarianism. Soon things will crumble. But we look again and see that there was a man, named Jesus Christ, who was not only human but also divine. We see God in human flesh. If we put Christ at the center of this religion, then it becomes Christianity. He had a few uneducated followers and He, Himself, was just a carpenter, or a man that was a "jack of all trades." But from Him those early disciples received such a peculiar power and such a dynamic that their witnessing is still heard. They had Christ at the center of their religion and they were able "to turn the world upside down." Rather a vital religion, don't you think?

There is another characteristic that must be had if youth's religion is to be vital. Youth's religion must be his own religion. Most of our religion is second-handed. It has been passed on to us from our parents. Nothing wrong with it. It just isn't our own. Dr. Smart of Emory University tells the story that he liked cucumbers because his mother did. Suddenly he discovered that he didn't like cucumbers, but had always eaten them because his mother had urged him to do this and had done so herself. We have our beliefs, ideas and church membership as most of our parents had the same. We really don't know what we believe. A young man went to college and returned home for his vacation. He approached his minister and told him that he didn't believe in anything, in moral purpose, in difference between right and wrong. The minister replied: "Go home and kill your mother." The boy refused. The young man began to discover what he did believe and his religion became vital to him. Youth, if you want a vital religion, begin to discover and emphasize your beliefs. You do believe in courage over cowardice, truthfulness over lying, honesty over dishonesty. Look at the Universe and you will discover something of a law and order prevailing. There is a purpose back of it all. We call that purpose God. Youth's religion will become vital when he thinks through these things for himself and it becomes his own.

When the individual youth contacts and feels the impulse of the Eternal God, his religion will become vital. Not only through his charity, such as helping colleges, orphanages, hospitals, etc., will he do this. This is good as far as it goes. He can contact God through prayer, but generally he does the talking and God does all the listening. This is fine, but we must needs go further. Let us talk with God and let him talk with us. Go off into a quiet room where it is dark, rest yourself, and let that inner spirit express to God and receive a message from God. Discover God, for He, too, is a Spirit and can com-

BALANCE.

(Read Matthew 6: 25-34.)

They lost their balance. They were a simple folk with meagre means. Good fortune gave them a trip to China. Their passage furnished them with service comparable to the best. They were waited on and served. They had to turn their hands to nothing.

These people lost their sense of balance and proportions. Upon arrival at their destination they put up at a hotel at a rate comparable with their monthly income, where they could have done well at one-third of that. They rode taxis when they might have taken jinrikishas. Result: broke, debt, and enslavement to that debt for years.

Every one like "to keep up with the Joneses," but after all keeping up with the Joneses is not life's main business. Let us repeat, "The things that really count in life are but few." We cannot afford to let life's thrills cause us to lose our heads. If we do, we lose our hearts.

Prayer—O Lord, the Giver of all power, we would like to make a wonderful pilgrimage of life. Enable us to see clearly the things that are vital and grant us wisdom. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

It would be useless to tell you that the Christian Orphanage was snow-bound on January 25. The snow is practically two feet deep. It is the heaviest snow we have had in a long time. It is the first time we were not able to deliver milk. We tried going on a tractor, but it would not work. We tried mules and wagon. The snow clogged on the wheels so much the mules could not pull it. We then tried carrying it on a snow plow and finally got some over to the college.

The boys had a day of digging out. Shoveling snow is hard work. We have so many paths to shovel out it took time and lots of work.

We always feel for the dumb animals and birds during a deep snow. The little birds suffer for lack of food when the snow is deep, and many of them perish. We have the children put crumbs on the window sills so they can come and feed. In front of my office window there is some thick shrubbery and it is interesting to see the large number of little birds that gather in the shrubbery and feed from the window sills.

In time of deep snows it is kind of anyone who will take the time and trouble to shovel the snow off the ground and make a clean place and cover it with feed for the birds. Don't think they won't find it. They will. If you will put yourself to a little trouble and feed the little helpless birds when the ground is covered with snow and they are hungry, you will not only get a joy out of it, but in the spring when the sun shines warm and everything is taking on new life perhaps these same little birds will come back to see you and show their appreciation by singing their songs for you.

The children like to see it snow. They like to play in it. They enjoy getting out in it. If they fall down and get covered up, they take it for their part and get up with a smile. The part we dread about a snow is when it begins to melt and the sidewalks and the paths from building to building get in a slush. That is the time we try to keep the children in the house. It is a great time for them all to take cold from wet feet.

Children, dumb animals, and birds should have our care during the snow season.

Superintendent.

The above offerings were made by individuals and churches to assist in the support of our ministers who are incapacitated now by ill health to earn a living for themselves and for the widows of deceased ministers who shared through self-denial the small salaries that their husbands received in their days of service for the church.

It was good of the churches to take the Christmas offering for our Superannuation Fund, an offering that is made for a most noble and worthy purpose, and for one so much needed.

Gratefully,

LENTEN DEVOTIONS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

The young people in our churches have a fine opportunity to develop their personal religious life each day during Lent (February 7-March 24) by the use of "Lenten Devotions for Young People," which contains material to help you in your personal meditations during each day of that period. The price is 5c a copy. They may be ordered from Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City, and will reach you in time for the beginning of Lent if you order them right away. Why not decide to order enough for every member of your society?

Miss Lucy Eldredge Says—

"Dr. Frank J. Scribner has written these meditations for the Pilgrim Fellowship. Dr. Scribner is a friend of youth and knows youth's needs well. These Bible verses, meditations and prayers purpose to help you 'to cultivate the sort of life that cannot be lived without His help.' They will help to 'achieve Christian personality after the pattern of Jesus.'"

"Will you be one to use this booklet daily? Will you also tell other young people about it?"

"So may the Pilgrim Fellowship grow as individual young people unite in the prayerful achievement of Christian virtues!"

Grace Long Says—

"As Superintendent of Personal Religious Living of the Southeast, I am delighted to recommend this booklet. We can never learn enough about courtesy, cheerfulness, love, sportsmanship, and many other important things. Let us study, learn, and put them into practice in our lives. We will learn real living, and others will be happy with us.

"And let God help us, for without His guidance, we can never fully enjoy or appreciate life. Talk to him each day and know the joy of true friendship."

CHINA FRIENDSHIP PROJECT.

No detailed report has come to THE CHRISTIAN SUN concerning the exact amount sent in by young people's groups for the China Friendship Project of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship. As many of you know, the young people throughout the Southeast are attempting to raise $1,200 with which to purchase land and buildings for a "Layman's Training Center" adjacent to our mission in Tientsin, China. This was to be raised by means of sacrificial giving, and to be over and above the regular apportionments of the missionary societies.

At last report the treasurer had on hand about $375.00. Many of the groups have not sent in the money they have raised. The Florida young people are just beginning to get their money together for this. If any of you have money for this project, please send it immediately to Roland Allgood, 1414 West 27th Street, Norfolk, Va.

"Could you stay a little while longer?" asked the teacher.

"Of course. I should like to hear more about Alexandria!"

Together they walked into the main church. The light was burning before the altar. And here Rabbi Joseph told Reuben of Alexandria and how he had gone there to study. He finished by saying, "The wish to know the truth is like a light burning inside of one."

After that, whenever Reuben thought of Alexandria he also thought of the light burning in the church.

There is no power quite so great as God working through man, yea, through youth, to bring the Kingdom of God to pass on earth.

Elon College and Youth

The founders of Elon College loved the church. They believed in the church not only for their day but for all days to come. It was their hope that the church would become stronger and a more powerful force for righteousness with every passing year. They were grateful for the founders of their church, but these great souls had come and gone. They fully appreciated the fact that the church of their day, its program and conduct, was largely to their liking. The responsibility was theirs. As the founders of the church had passed, so would they pass in due time. The efficiency and power of the church in the coming days would rest upon the youth of their day—their sons and daughters and the sons and daughters of their contemporaries in the church. How could they, the youth of their day, serve unless they had been prepared to serve? How could they teach unless they had been taught to teach? How could they be taught without a place dedicated to the cause of reaching? With these facts and responsibilities staring them in the face, fifty years ago they arose and laid the foundation for our college.

Elon College was founded for youth—for the youth of our church and our day that there might be a campus of higher education where the church would be free to formulate and prosecute courses of instruction in the field of higher learning without the restraining hands of any, a campus from which evils in living and teaching might be eliminated without encroaching upon the authority of any.

Elon College was dedicated to youth.—The youth of today stand bewildered in the midst of this present world. The lines of safety and the lanes of progress so evident in the past are obscured if not forever gone. They stand at the dividing line between childhood and maturity, not knowing which way to go or what to undertake. Some have tried, others are still searching, and still more wander aimlessly over the land adding daily to the unemployed. They need instruction; they do not know. They need inspiration; they are discouraged. They need guidance; they are lost in a world of fading ideas and of vanishing opportunities. But unaware, they stand on the threshold of a new world at the beginning of a new day—a world unlimited in possibilities and a day whose opportunities wait for keen minds and daring spirits. Elon College has dedicated itself to the task of bringing the youthful minds of today intelligently in touch with this new world that lies plastic on the table of research and adventure.

Elon College offers opportunity to youth.—With its equipment, its faculty, its scholastic atmosphere, its moral standards, and its Christian emphasis, it affords opportunity for the youth of today to prepare themselves that they may be able to discover the subtle challenge of a complex society in a rapidly changing world. The curriculum designed for the needed equipment of present-day youth must be inclusive and adaptable. Education that educates reveals the course that civilization has traversed in the past and multiplies the efficiency and widens the vision of the objectives of its instruction so that they march with certainty in their endeavor to capture the resources of the world for progress and human betterment. There are in our church and in our country young men and young women meant to be leaders in society and masters in government and religion. When these young men and young women meet on the Elon College campus and put themselves under the spell of its spirit, progress for the right is assured and destiny is determined.

faith and practice."

The Human Outlook

By JOHN A. SYMONDS.

These things shall be! A loftier race
Than e'er the world hath known shall rise
With flame of freedom in their souls,
And light of knowledge in their eyes.

They shall be gentle, brave and strong,
To spill no drop of blood, but dare
All that may plant man's lordship firm
On earth and fire, and sea, and air.

Nation with nation, land with land,
Unarmed shall live as comrades free;
In every heart and brain shall throb
The pulse of one fraternity.

New arts shall bloom of loftier mould
And mightier music thrill the skies,
And every life shall be a song
When all the earth is paradise.

These things—they are no dreams—shall be
For happier men when we are gone;
Those golden days for them shall dawn,
Transcending aught we gaze upon.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Snow may interfere with our plans but it does not relieve our obligations.

The ministers of North Carolina will discuss at their meeting at Elon next Monday morning the problems of the Southern Convention. This should be a very profitable meeting, and one that all the ministers should share in.

Western North Carolina churches will please note the meeting of young people at Ramseur Christian Church on Sunday afternoon, and try to get as many as possible there for the opening of the meeting at 1:45 o'clock.

At its meeting in Evanston the American Board commissioned another fine young couple as missionaries to China. The board is looking for fifty more young people to fill gaps around the world. The Promotional Secretary will be glad to give information to any young person desiring to know about the openings.

VISITING FLORIDA.

A nice coat of tan and renewed enthusiasm for my task were among the things I brought back from Florida. A new car, too, somebody says. Yes, so it was. The best driver in our family hit a cow in the middle of her southernmost side, and fortunately our car did not swerve either to the right or left—just took it right on the nose, and plenty! After being towed some forty miles back into Jacksonville, we traded cars and came safely on our way.

Two weeks of vacation is good for anybody who works steadily on the job, and especially a job that has as many ends and angles to it as that of being pastor of a goodly sized church. I found the rest and the change great! But how about those flowers, and that fruit, and the sunshine that Dr. Atkinson has been telling us about? It was all there just like he said. And it was indeed a delight and a blessing. The only thing, I could not bring the sunshine back with me, but under the circumstances I am thankful that I was able to bring the driver, her mother, and her sister safely home again.

We, Mrs. B. D. Jones, Selma Jones, and Mrs. Truitt and I, really had a fine trip. Mrs. Truitt and I are grateful to our church for the privilege of going.

VIRGILINA LETTER.

Two very interesting entertainments have been given at Union Christian Church during the present Conference year.

On the fourth Sunday evening in November the ladies of the Woman's Missionary Society gave the Candle-Lighting Service. The program was well rendered and was very instructive and interesting.

On the evening of December 24 a beautiful program was presented by the young people of our Sunday school under the leadership of Mrs. Pattie Murrow, Mrs. Otis Jones and Miss Marguerite Daniel. There was also a Christmas play by the primary

On Saturday evening before Christmas the Sunday school of Hebron Church gave their Christmas entertainment, which consisted of songs, recitations and a pageant. This entertainment was directed by Mrs. Wesley Williamson, Miss Emma Gray Hayes and others. The audience was delighted. While these entertainments mean time, labor and sacrifice, the spiritual value of Christmas is greatly enhanced by them.

NEWS FROM LYNCHBURG.

A Panel Discussion was held Sunday evening, January 28, at the First Congregational-Christian Church, Lynchburg, Va., on the subject: "Will the Appointment of a Personal Representative to the Vatican by the President Accomplish Definite Gains for Peace?" Participating in the discussion were Rabbi Isadore Franzblau of Agudath Sholom Synagogue; Rev. E. J. Hopkins, a retired Lutheran minister; and M. MacGregor Smith, a layman. It proved to be a very interesting meeting. At the conclusion of the discussion the congregation was given an opportunity to question statements made by the speakers. The pastor of the church, Rev. J. Howard Smith, presided.

Fifteen from our church enrolled in the Lynchburg Standard Training School held at the Memorial Methodist Church from January 28 to February 2. On Wednesday evening Rev. J. Howard Smith conducted the devotional service. Dr. John D. Lee, Jr., an alumnus of Elon College, was a member of the faculty.

MRS. TRUITT HOSTESS TO SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS.

Mrs. John G. Truitt, superintendent of the Young People's Department of the Suffolk Christian Church, entertained at a dinner meeting at the parsonage recently in honor of the teachers in her department. Guests were: Mrs. Henry Crocker, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. George Koenig, Miss Susie Holland, Miss Virginia Brinkley, Robert Speight and Dr. J. G. Truitt. Following the dinner there was a discussion of ways of increasing attendance in the department, and planning for the department's share in raising funds for the building indebtedness. This department operates not only as a department of the Sunday school, but also as the young people's missionary organization of the church.

PORTSMOUTH CHURCH RESOLUTION.

At a special meeting of the First Christian Church of Portsmouth, Va., some time ago the following resolution was passed:

"This church goes on record as expressing its sincere appreciation of the Rev. Robert Lee House's untiring efforts and splendid accomplishments as our pastor during the past three years, and that we urge him to remain as our pastor indefinitely."

NOTICE!!!

The Western North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship Institute, which was postponed on account of inclement weather (snow to you!), is to be held in the Ramseur Christian Church, on next Sunday, February 11, beginning at 1:45 in the afternoon. All young people in that Conference, and from nearby groups, are urged to attend.

MEETING OF DENOMINATIONAL BOARDS.

Members of all our denominational boards meet annually at Chicago and Evanston, Illinois, about the last of January. This year the boards met in succession so that all members of the other boards could listen in and discuss the work that is being done by our church.

It was your editor's good fortune to be among those present for a meeting of Home Missionary superintendents and officers of the Home Boards in Chicago for two days, for the three-day session of State Superintendents, and for all the meetings of the Home Boards, the Council for Social Action, the Prudential Committee of the Foreign Mission Board, and for the Missions Council, which is the combination of all of the boards.

For nine days we went to school to each other and tried to discover what needs to be done in this world of ours, and how the Church can best do its work. From early morning until late at night, we sought to find the way of successful service. This page will likely record ideas for months to come that were suggested in those meetings. At present there is room for only a few impressions.

Perhaps the first impression was that our leaders are very fine human beings. They seem to feel that there were giants in the era that is just closing, and that greater wisdom and skill are needed for today than we have. A Southerner who is new to the work is inclined to believe that there are intellectual and spiritual giants now leading our churches. Always they are courteous, sympathetic, anxious to find the right way, and deeply devotional. Sometimes they do not agree in their thinking, and say so frankly, but when the time for prayer arrives, differences disappear and the group becomes in a very real sense "the body of Christ."

A second impression is that our Church is grappling with the problems of the world in which we live. Our leaders begin with the Gospel of Jesus, with its transformation of personality, but they go on to the transformation of all people and of all those things that affect persons. Because people need health, they talk of doctors, nurses, clinics and hospitals. Because people need education, the leaders consider schools, colleges, universities, summer conferences, vacation Bible schools, aids for ministers and Sunday school teachers, and literature for all ages of people. Because people need clothes, homes, culture, health, and all the things that make personal development possible, our leaders consider the economic relations of the world that prevent some from having these needed blessings. Because liberty and life are God's best gifts, our leaders pray and plan for a world society that will guarantee freedom to all people and will make war impossible. While every man does his own job to the best of his ability, our leaders are trying to direct the united force so that the whole world will be made a good place in which to live like a son of God.

A third impression is that our church people are not feeling the thrill of new life that is in the world today. Some ministers and some churches are being electrified by the power of God, and are moving forward in a fine way. They are accepting the challenge of war, economic difficulties and personal sins, and are replacing hate with love, war with co-operation, economic selfishness with economic justice, and are driving personal sins out by the free grace that comes from God through Jesus. But many ministers and churches are not yet awake to what is happening about them. They are content to continue in the same way that grandpa did, and expect to receive the same kind of religious experience that came to the forefathers who were blazing new trails. But they are disappointed. God does not waste his power or grace on those who are doing nothing to need it. Gradually our people are beginning to realize that something is stirring, that new life is breaking forth in the church, like the buds on the trees. The army of God moves forward. Those who stand still get left, and lost.

The impression concerning us in the Southern Convention is that we have not yet struck our stride in church work. Never once did anyone in the meetings say an unkind thing about us in the South, and some were very complimentary. But the fact that in the great Home Missionary enterprise of our denomination members of the Southern Convention do nothing outside of the Convention made this writer very unhappy many times as that work was presented. As yet we have not been able, we think, to give more than it takes to run our own business. In the foreign mission field we do cooperate, but with only a very small amount compared to what we really could do. If you doubt this statement, then just try saying to your church: "In 1940 we will pay our own church bills and will give five cents per member per week for the church outside of our own local group." Seventh Day Adventists set for themselves the giving of a tithe and then forty cents per member per week. If we were to give five cents to missions and benevolences, that would almost double our income for these purposes. Try it in your church. Five cents per week for Missions seems to be very little, but it will move us forward. Up and at it! Five cents per week from each member of the church to support our church enterprises! Then we can share in all the work of the denomination. Then we will in reality be a part of our denomination and its program at home and abroad.

WE MUST NOT FAIL.

Yes, the weather was bad, income may have decreased, nobody knows about the future, and college work may be out of your line, but the fact still remains that every church should reach its apportionment for Elon College.

Why? Because it is our college. Because we need it to train our ministers, and (Continued on page 6.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Southern Convention will meet April 30-May 3, 1940. The place of the next session has not been announced, but the date is a little more than three months hence. This session will be important and delegates should have some advance notice of plans to be considered. Officials of the Convention will probably call attention to these matters in due time. On page forty of the last edition of the "Principles and Government of the Christian Church" the following appears: "All amendments or changes in the Principles, Government, or Official Forms and Ceremonies, shall be authorized by the Convention; and all motions and resolutions for this purpose shall be published in the church paper three months before the session at which the subject is to be considered, and all changes may be determined by a two-thirds' vote of the Convention."

The writer is not an official of the Convention, but as one of the least among the ministers, he ventures to say that this fundamental law of the Convention should be respected and observed by those who desire to propose amendments for consideration. The matter of revising and issuing a new edition of this book has been under consideration for six years. If the committee proposes to submit changes for consideration by the Convention, the method of making such changes is indicated in the above quotation. A new edition of this book is badly needed, and there are many changes which should have the careful consideration of the Convention.

From time to time the Convention has set up departments and elected officers not provided for in the last edition of the book. It has made a number of amendments which should be incorporated in the book, if they are to be continued in the future. At the last session of the Convention a plan of promotion was adopted which made a number of changes in the organic set-up of the various departments. The records will show that these changes were not published in the church paper according to the requirements of the Government of the Convention. If the Convention is to become a mass meeting, free from the restraint of precedents and its own law of procedure, the section on page forty, quoted above, should be amended in conformity with that plan of organization. If the Convention is to continue as the law-making body for the Conferences, churches, and other organizations and institutions under its control, its government, official forms and ceremonies should be clarified and brought up to date.

The names of boards and committees of the Convention and the Conference should be carefully studied and the duties of each should be clearly outlined. The forms for licensure and ordination of ministers receiving members into the church, ordination of deacons, ceremonies for marriages, baptism, burial of the dead, certificates of licensure and ordination should be considered for revision.

So many ministers have expressed the opinion that the book, and the basic elements of the government it represents should be discarded, it is possible that the question of continuing the work of the Southern Convention will be raised. The writer believes that the Convention has a definite place to fill, and its general plan of council is needed, and should be provided for, as soon as possible. It will be a tragic day for the local churches of the Convention if any step is taken to break the close bond of fellowship which has been such an important factor in the strength and unity of our denominational interests in Virginia and North Carolina.

THE ELON COLLEGE PROGRAM.

A most interesting program is planned for the mid-year celebration of our Golden Anniversary—one that will be of interest not only to the immediate college family but to the community, the church, and the public at large. This program of celebration proposes to call attention to the part that the church has played in the field of higher education, private and public. The church was the first to recognize the need of advanced training for professional services. To meet this need colleges were founded and faculties were employed.

Today we have a very fine system of state schools supported in part by the state, privately endowed colleges supported in part by individual contributions and income from invested funds, and church schools owned and operated by the church through directors or boards of trustees and supported in part by the church and income from invested funds. The church school is perhaps more largely dependent upon tuition and fees than are other colleges.

These different types of institutions will be presented at Elon College in a very comprehensive program beginning Sunday, February 11, and extending through Tuesday, February 13. Speakers of wide reputation in the church and the field of higher education will present the contrasting approaches to the problem of higher education and call attention to the fact that while the problem of education in the higher brackets is approached differently and from different angles, that still the ultimate purpose is to take the individual student, inform him, guide him, inspire him, and see that he is fitted for the highest possible service in keeping with his natural abilities. This program is not meant to set the church college on a pinnacle of importance or give it undue credit for the part it has played in the field of higher education, but to accentuate if possible the necessity of training not only leaders but the masses that society may meet successfully the vital issues ultimately to be encountered in its program of advance in a disturbed world, and also to make clear the part that all forces operating in the field of higher education have played in past and present achievements. On our program we have representatives from state, independent, and church-related colleges.

The faculty and student body will assemble in groups each day following the night address to discuss in detail the facts presented in the address in relation to the church college. Music for all sessions on the program will be provided by the Music Department of the college.

Saturday, February 10, preceding the formal opening of the program of celebration, the mid-year meeting of the Alumni Association will be held at the college, 2:30 P. M. Elon alumni engaged in teaching are invited to the college at 10:00 Saturday morning for a conference on the improvement of teaching. Dean J. D. Messick of the college will be in charge of this program. That evening at 8:00 Elon College basketball team will engage the basketball team of Catawba College in an important conference game.

Tuesday, February 13, at 10:00 A. M., the Board of Trustees will meet in mid-year session at the college. Wednesday evening at 8:30 the Alamance County Series presents Nino Martini, Metropolitan Opera Tenor, in the college auditorium in an evening's program.

THE CHURCH YEAR

Ten Points of Emphasis for February

By REV. AUBREY C. TODD

February is known as the month of holidays. Almost every day of the month has some event of importance attached to it, beginning with Christian Endeavor Day on the second and ending with Leap Year Day on the twenty-ninth. While the churches will want to observe many of these days, rather than try to do too much it will be better if the attention is concentrated on one or two main interests. The two most important events of this month are the beginning of the Lenten Season on the seventh and the observance of the month as Race Relations Month.

The importance of Lent is recognized to a greater extent today than ever before by non-liturgical churches. We are living in a day when the church has lost its sense of direction and the fervor which once characterized it. Therefore, if ever a season of penitence and prayer were needed, this is surely such a time. Definite plans for the observance of this season should be presented to the churches. Recent issues of THE CHRISTIAN SUN have had excellent suggestions in them, including suitable literature and devotional guides.

The ancient ceremony of Ash Wednesday is a solemn and meaningful way to usher in the Lenten Season. It is tragic that so many of our churches have been denied the rich contribution of symbolism to our faith, which fact renders such a ceremony impractical in the majority of our churches. Even if the burning and scattering of ashes, which is the Biblical symbol of penitence, does not seem feasible, the significance of the occasion may be emphasized in other ways. The subject for a talk or sermon might be centered about the words used by the clergy as the ashes are placed on the heads of the penitents: "Remember, man, that thou art dust, and that unto dust thou shalt return."

In addition to preparing the people for a worthy participation in the Easter services, Lent has also been used as a period in which candidates for membership into the church were trained. The Pastor's Class, for this purpose, has grown rapidly in our own denomination. In this particular section of the country there are some ministers who have more than one church, and for this reason find it difficult to conduct such a class. In a case of this kind it would be well if some competent member of the church would assist the pastor in getting such a class organized. Two approved texts that may be ordered from The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City, are "The Manual for Church Members" and "The Christian Way." A handbook that will help in setting up the class is "The Pastor's Class," which may also be secured from the same place.

In regard to the emphasis on race relations, most of the women's missionary groups have planned to observe the World Day of Prayer on the ninth of this month, and most ministers will preach suitable sermons on Race Relations Sunday, which is the eleventh. Splendid progress in white-black relations has been made in the past year throughout the entire Southeast. This should give us courage and new determination in facing the future.

TO OUR FRIENDS.

When God our lovely world had made,
And settled it in peace,
He must have wondered with what else
Its beauty He could grace.
And knowing how we'd need His power
In earth to the very end,
To show what He himself was like,
He gave to us our friends.

—Grace Marie Prince.

FEDERAL COUNCIL ISSUES STATEMENTS.

The Roosevelt Peace Move and the Vatican.

The Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, at its first meeting since President Roosevelt's announcement of the appointment to the Vatican of a personal envoy, "with the rank of ambassador," issues the following declaration of attitude and policy:

If the appointment should unfortunately prove a stepping-stone to a permanent diplomatic relationship, we should feel obliged in good conscience to oppose it, as a violation of the principle of separation of governmental function and religious function, which is a basic American policy and which both history and conscience approve, and as an ultimate injury to all faiths.

We assume, however, unless events disprove us, that the appointment is strictly temporary, unofficial, and centrally concerned with efforts for world peace. We can see ways in which it may help to bring peace and to avert wholesale bloodshed and a continuing disaster to civilization.

We pledge ourselves again to work with all faiths and with all men of good will for a just and enduring peace.

"Christian Front" Censured.

We note with satisfaction the recent issue of the Federal Council's Information Service presenting a declaration of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Church and Mission Federation concerning that affront to all true American Christians which calls itself "The Christian Front." The statement, which applies equally to all organizations misusing the term "Christian" in furthering racial and religious intolerance, says in part:

We declare with utmost emphasis that any acts or utterances which tend to prejudice class against class or race against race or to advocate the infringement of our right to pursue religious freedom without let or hindrance are irreligious and un-Christian. No organization or group of individuals fostering such evil propaganda has the moral right to call itself Christian.

Since the view of the Brooklyn Church and Mission Federation is in line with the policy of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America as expressed in past utterances and in public statements of its officers, we record our official endorsement of it.

Jewish Help to Christian Refugees.

Dr. George Buttrick, president, reported the receipt of a check for $125,000 contributed by the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees and Overseas Needs for the Relief of Christian Refugees.

The Executive Committee took unanimous action expressing to the United Jewish Appeal high appreciation "for the generous and unprecedented action" and voted to distribute the fund as follows:

- $ 5,000 To the Provisional Committee of the World Council of Churches, Geneva, Switzerland, for assistance to German Christian refugees having visas for emigration which will expire soon.
- $ 5,000 To the Central Bureau for Relief of the Evangelical Churches of Europe, Geneva, Switzerland, for assistance to Christian refugees now in temporary camps or in transit in neutral countries of Europe.
- $ 15,000 To the American Friends Service Committee.
- $100,000 To the American Committee for Christian Refugees.

CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS.

There are certain things in our church programs that we cannot do once and for all. They must be done every year. To get them done it is necessary that we keep them before us throughout the year. When conference apportionments are raised, as a rule the same program for the new conference year is before us. It should be this way. It would be a pity if we could do the work of the church and be through with it. We would be deprived of its joy and blessing. It would be a tragedy if we could receive the blessings of God and they come not again. Spiritual blessings come with the consciousness of duty well done.

We did not do so well with our conference apportionments for 1938-39, but we hope to do better in 1939-40. We forget the failures and short comings of yester years and look to the future with optimism and expectation.

Sunday, January 28, was designated as Elon College Day. The section of country embracing the Southern Convention is blanketed in the heaviest snow and visited with the coldest weather experienced almost since the founding of Elon College. Many congregations will not be able to gather for service. Many worshippers will not have the privilege of getting to Sunday school or church. It is hoped that you have done your best on College Day and that if you did not succeed fully that you may determine another Sunday during February on which you may tell your people about the college and urge upon them their continued support.

our church leaders. Because we have promised to do it. Because failure makes us feel too badly and keeps us from being our best. The college needs the help of the churches, but the churches need the college much more than it needs them. Why not make 1940 a banner year by sending Elon College the total amount of your church apportionment during the College Period, January and February? It can be done. If you doubt that, just get out and work at it until you know. It should be done for the sake of the churches and the young people. It costs too much to fail. We must not fail our church and our young people by failing our college.

DAN RIVER DISTRICT RALLY.

The sixth Sunday School Rally of the Dan River District was held at Union Church, Virgilina, Va., Sunday, December 31, 1939. The meeting was called to order by the president, Rev. B. J. Earp. Owing to the absence of the secretary, Miss Avis Dunn, Mrs. C. E. Newman acted as secretary.

A song service was led by the Union Choir. A special feature was a duet by Mrs. Emron King and Mrs. Arthur Tuck. Rev. C. E. Newman conducted the worship service.

The superintendent of the Union Sunday school, Mr. A. R. Seat, gave an address of welcome to the visiting Sunday schools. Mr. J. K. Landrum, superintendent of Ingram Sunday school, expressed appreciation of this.

The roll call revealed four Sunday schools represented, three superintendents and two pastors present. The banner for attendance was awarded to Liberty Sunday School.

The pastor of Hebron invited the rally to hold the next meeting there on March 31, 1940.

The following officers were elected for 1940: President, Rev. B. J. Earp; Vice-President, Mr. J. K. Landrum; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. George W. Pollard; Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Miss Margaret Tuck.

Representatives of the Ingram Sunday school presented in a very beautiful way the candle-lighting service. The place on the program assigned to Rev. J. E. McCauley, who could not be present, was filled by Rev. B. J. Earp. He held before us the standards he would like to see reached during the year 1940.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Your first crossword puzzle had the word Lent in it. You were asked to write a four letter word, meaning the season before Easter. Yes, the forty days before Easter, we call Lent. This year Easter comes on the last Sunday in March; so Lent begins on February 7, Ash Wednesday. We keep this forty days period because of the forty days which Jesus spent fasting in the wilderness. We keep it before Easter so that we may prepare our lives for a deeper and greater appreciation of Easter. Long ago Jesus gave his life in order that we might know how to live as children of our Father in heaven should live. During Lent we think of how we have been living. If we have been doing things which are wrong, we try to stop doing them. If we have been doing things which make people unhappy, we try to think of things we can do to make them happy. If we have been selfish and have wanted too much candy, ice cream or spending money to go to the show with, we try to think of how we can help others with our spare money during Lent.

How many of you boys and girls who read this page have been keeping Lent? Would you like to observe Lent this year? I would like very much for you to try it. I am looking forward to keeping Lent.

It was the Sunday before Lent began in 1938 that I was teaching my Junior Sunday school class in South Church in Chicago. I was using the last part of the session to talk with them about Lent, just as I have been talking with you in this letter. I asked how many of them kept Lent. Josephine raised her hand.

"Mrs. Todd, I did not know that this church observed Lent. I have not heard it mentioned in this Sunday school, but the church I used to attend keeps Lent. I like this church very much but I have missed 'Lent-ing.'"

"How have you kept Lent, Josephine?" I asked.

"One year I saved all of the money that mother and dady gave me to buy candy with and put it in the offering for the orphan boys and girls. Another year I took care of our neighbor's baby while she went to her church to sew for boys and girls whose mothers had to work all day and could not sew for them. Then I saved the money which Daddy gave me to go to the show with and put it in the offering for boys and girls in China. I always give up something to make others happy. I try to be kind even when I feel ugly and I try to forget about those things which others have done which hurt me. It is such fun to keep Lent!"

My other pupils decided that if "Jo" had found it such fun to keep Lent that they would try it, too. They did keep Lent. They decided that one good thing to do was to study their Sunday school lessons just as hard as they did their day school lessons. They were the best boys and girls you could imagine. They let the old bad habits go and gave up something in order to help others. When Easter Sunday came and my boys and girls answered my greeting of "Christ Is Risen," with a glad "He Is Risen Indeed!" I felt that we, too, had risen from the old life of selfishness to a new life of love and usefulness.

I am sure that you will find it a joy to keep Lent and I would like for you to write to me about some of the ways in which you are keeping Lent.

Sincerely,

DOROTHY TODD.

REUBEN BAR-BARUCH.

Not many of the boys spoke to Zenas when he came to class with them. Even Reuben did not talk with him. But he knew he should, for Mother had told him to always be good to strangers. She told him his people had a rule to always be kind to strangers because they had once been strangers in a far land. Reuben knew that she meant the time when his people had been slaves in Egypt.

He thought about these things as he sat in class and looked at Zenas. He saw that some of the other boys did not like it because Zenas knew more than they. Every question that Rabbi Joseph asked him was answered correctly.

When classes were out, Reuben and Samuel hurried to walk with Zenas. Reuben wondered what he should say first.

"I am Reuben, the son of Baruch, and this is my brother, Smauel. We do not live very far from you, and we should like to play with you sometime."

"I am very glad you said that," replied Zenas. "I was wondering if the boys around here would like me."

"I'm sure they will all like you," said Reuben. "We do not have many strange people to move into our neighborhood, so the boys don't know how to act toward them. But I'm sure that after you've been here awhile things will be different."

By the time Reuben and Samuel had to turn off the road to their home, they had become very fond of Zenas, and hated to leave him.

"We must leave you here," said Reuben. "I hope you will come to see us, so that we might know you better."

"I shall," replied Zenas. "Thank you for walking with me."

BANISHING THE BIBLE.

It was noted in the daily papers that Adolf Hitler, Dictator of Germany, in a recent address pointed with scorn and levity to Premier Chamberlain of Great Britain, calling him "Old man Chamberlain with his Bible." It is dangerous, not to say pitiable, when a nation, a people, or an individual banishes the Bible and its teachings from their thinking and their conduct. It is, of course, well known that Soviet Russia long since banished the Bible and its teachings, as well as the God and His Son Jesus Christ, insofar as they could do so, from their national and individual lives. One is constrained to believe that Dictator Hitler will ultimately find it his undoing and that of his people to banish the Bible and its teachings from their way of life and conduct. Our Lord Christ emphasized the worth and the life of the individual, making the State and every other organization, subordinate to the worth and the life of the individual. The totalitarian State of which Germany is an example makes the individual subordinate to the State and the nation it represents of supreme and superlative power and consideration. Jesus Himself said, "Render unto God the things that are God's, and unto Caesar (the state) the things that are Caesar's." This, Jesus did in commenting upon the authority of the state as represented by its money. "Whose image and superscription does it bear?" queried the Christ and when told that it bore the superscription of Caesar his reply was as given above. By implication, of course, the teaching is very plain that man being made in the image of God must give first consideration to the service of his God and that man serves his God and his country, too, who puts God first in his esteem and consideration and makes the state a means to this good end. The reason, as has been so often pointed out, that the Bible is the greatest and most useful book ever written is that it puts God first and keeps consideration for Him in the foreground of our thinking and of our activity if we read that Book and seek to follow its instruction. And Paul in his second letter to his beloved Timothy very truly says, "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (II Timothy 3:16, 17). This has ever been true and any nation, or people, will always find it true. The reason why the world is torn with war and strife today is because the nations have ignored this teaching, and we shall have peace only when the teachings of the Bible given by inspiration and for instruction and righteousness shall be followed. All of us as individuals need to bear in mind these words and to practice the daily reading of a portion of Scripture. It will indeed be helpful since no book is comparable to the Book in the beauty of its diction, in the simplicity of its teaching, and the worth and merit of its instruction. One of the miracles of the ages is the Bible itself. It contains sixty-six books written by forty-four different writers, covering a period of not less than fifteen hundred years, and yet it is nowhere contradictory, but inevitably leads to the same conclusion, namely, that here indeed is the Word and the revealed will of God. Let none of us of THE CHRISTIAN SUN family banish from his life, or his daily reading, as well as his, or her, practice, the plain teachings of the Word of God. Let not another do all your reading for you, but read the Book yourself, since it has a message direct to and for you as an individual.

It is to be presumed that the very severe weather conditions through which we have been passing for several days now prevented the Sunday schools from meeting in many instances and from taking the offering for missions. The above we believe is the smallest offering we have received in any week for years and we trust that as the weather improves and Sunday school and church attendance is better, the offerings likewise will improve. We acknowledge, however, with gratitude the amounts above received and appreciate with all our hearts the donations made for this unselfish and divine task of sharing the love and the life of our Lord with others.

"UPROOTED AMERICANS."

Drought and dust storms in the West, the tottering of King Cotton from his throne in the South, the mechanization of agriculture in all parts of the country have divorced thousands of rural people from their usual means of livelihood. Many have become migrant workers flitting from crop to crop with their families in aged jalopies.

You have read about these people in "Grapes of Wrath" and "Fables in the Field." They are the home mission study topic for 1940-41. They constitute one of the most perplexing problems confronting both the church and the nation.

"Uprooted Americans" is a new stereopticon lecture prepared by the Board of Home Missions which both reveals the problem and shows some of the ways in which it is being met. After February 1 this lecture can be borrowed from the Missions Council at 14 Beacon Street, Boston; 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City; or 19 So. The Christmas offering for Superannuation shows up very well and bespeaks an interest in the welfare of our disabled ministers and the widows of ministers, who shared with their husbands the self-denial entailed by small salaries. We are thankful that so many pastors and churches took the Christmas offering as voted by our Convention for this good and worthy cause.

INTRODUCING OUR MISSIONARIES.MISS E. MARIE CROSBY.

After eleven years among the Ovimbundu of West Africa, Miss E. Marie Crosby brought back a fascinating story of the life, customs and aspirations of this virile people as she spoke to our churches during the past year. Miss Crosby sailed on December 22 from New York for West Africa to resume her work with the American Board there.

Miss Crosby first went to Africa in 1927 she did a great deal of visiting among the kraals riding in a bush car or a tepoia (a hammock swung on poles carried by men). Her headquarters were at Dondi and she came to know village life from A to Z. More recently Miss Crosby has been stationed at Sachikela where she has been experimenting with a school for Ovimbundu girls and women which trains them as home-makers.

These girls are carefully selected by the elders of the Christian Churches and learn gardening, cooking, hygiene and baby care. Everything is based on the materials and foods which they can secure and raise in their own villages. Along this same line Miss Crosby has been singularly successful in summer camps conducted on the general principles of summer camps in America but with crude equipment. There these girls learn to play, sing, work and study together with every program adapted to the Ovimbundu village life. To the average Ovimbundu girl, marriage is the only career she has except for some teaching or nursing, professions which are slowly developing. Therefore, Miss Crosby's plan of training these girls to found intelligent, efficient Christian homes is a timely one.

On shipboard returning to America Miss Crosby was asked many questions by curious travelers, particularly about the morals of the Ovimbundu. "After reading some of the best sellers appearing in America I feel that our people out there are a mighty moral crowd and rank very high in that line!" she told them frankly.

Miss Crosby finds the Ovimbundu woman still doing the hardest part of the work as she is responsible for raising the food that feeds the family. With a high diet of starchy things, like sweet potatoes, meal, beans and peanuts, still you never see a fat Ovimbundu, Miss Crosby surprisingly states.

Miss Crosby was born in Hebron, Nova Scot.a. She was engaged in business and served in the Missionary Education Department of the Methodist Church (now part of the United Church of Canada) before going to Africa for our Board. With her attractive smile, her friendly and cheery personality, Miss Crosby made many friends for Africa wherever she spoke.

Remember her in your prayers as she goes back to Africa to carry on missionary work in the name of your Church.

MRS. WISSEMAN IS SPEAKER AT DURHAM MEETING.

The Durham Ladies Aid and Missionary Society met in joint session on Tuesday, January 23, to study, "Through Tragedy to Triumph," by Basil Matthews. Mrs. W. E. Wisseman from the First Church at Greensboro was the visiting speaker and she brought a most challenging message.

The Madras Conference, where 118 countries were represented, was the theme of the message. We were reminded that war is not the worst tragedy, as horrible as it is, but that the opium of China, the racial discrimination of Africa, the sin of the United States, are just as detrimental.

"There are ways and ways of meeting tragedy. The Mohammedans submit to it, many moderns try to escape it, but Christians face it. God can take that which is evil and make good out of it. Jesus could have used force or power but he did not, neither did he submit, he did not try to evade it, but faced it and made his choice.

"There is something for each of us to do in this world today. We can't all sing, we can't all make vestments for the choir, we can't all make speeches; but we can use the talents we have.

"The purpose of the church, it was decided at the Conference, is to transform personalities. The most important thing that Jesus did was not the miracles he performed, but the changing of men into beautiful characters, and the most wonderful part is that he can and will still do so.

"We would win the world for Christ. There are large areas that have not been touched; one-third of the people in the world today still have not heard the message of the Christ. It is the task of the whole church, not just the women, not just the young people, but all of us must work together if God's plan is to become a reality. 'Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done.' World peace can never be brought about until the world is brought to Jesus.

"Many countries are again closing their doors to the gospel; a few of them have reopened them. But a startling fact is that there are more people living now who know not Christ than there were in the beginning of Christianity 1900 years ago. 'To him that has been given much, much is required.' We have something to give them and they have something to give in return."

Assisting Mrs. Wisseman were four past presidents of the Greensboro Missionary Society: Mrs. M. F. Loudermilk, Mrs. O. H. Paris, Mrs. J. R. Foster, and Mrs. V. S. Donkin. Visiting the Durham society were twenty-one out-of-town guests—fifteen from Henderson and six from Greensboro. Due to the snowstorm that began shortly after the meeting opened, we were forced to adjourn sooner than we had anticipated, but all who attended were greatly benefitted.

After the book review by Mrs. Wisseman and the inspiring devotionals by the other ladies, the Durham society served lunch and an hour of fellowship was enjoyed.

KATHLEEN GLENN,
Secretary.

EASTERN VIRGINIA CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

At the next annual meeting of the Association a vote will be taken on the motion to change the date of the annual meeting from December to around the fourth Tuesday in September.

While there is merit in the opposition to the change for fear that the September meeting might hinder the raising of Conference Assessments in some churches, I shall vote for the change for several reasons:

1. Meeting before annual Conference will prevent pastors having to begin the new Conference year with a financial drive.

2. December is a bad financial month on account of Red Cross and anti-Tuberculosis drives, state and city taxes, and Christmas, and is a poor month for a good attendance.

3. September days will make for larger attendance, stronger programs, more general interest, and probably an increase in memberships.

NEWS OF "TEMPLE FELLOWSHIP."

The young people of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., have been doing a number of interesting things recently. On January 21 they heard about China "first-hand" from Mr. and Mrs. Homer Eng of the Chinese Baptist Church in Norfolk. This young Chinese couple expect to return to China for work with their own people, after completing their education in this country.

On January 28 the Temple Fellowship led the church vesper service, with the theme "We Would Be Building." The music for this service was furnished by the junior choir. Talks were made by Mary E. Vaughan on "The Pilgrim Fellowship," by Sammy Dudley, Jr., on "A Fuller Understanding," by Mildred Brushwood on "International Organization," and by the pastor, Dr. Hardeastle. The service closed with a Candle-Light Consecration Service conducted by L. W. Vaughan III, who was assisted by Jane Warriner and Ethelyn Godfrey.

On Thursday night of Pilgrim Fellowship Week this group had a supper at the church, after which plans were discussed for their work from now until Easter. Because of weather conditions, the classes on Worship which they were to have had the same week had to be postponed.

The Temple Fellowship is fortunate in having Miss Edna Fulcher to help them in their plans and programs. We are expecting to hear great things from this group.

VALLEY VIRGINIA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

[This article was intended for the young people's issue last week. However, weather conditions delayed mails and it came in too late.—Editor.]

Our Pilgrim Fellowship met last year with the annual meeting of the Valley Conference. The Executive Committee was kind enough to let the young people have charge of the evening session. We had a nice service, and a large crowd of young people, as well as adults, attended. During our short business session in the afternoon officers were elected for the ensuing year, and at the evening service they were installed. I am going to give you a list of them so that any workers in the Southeast who have any valuable ideas or materials may pass them on to us. The officers and their addresses are as follows:

President—Eugenia Snow, Dyke, Va.

Vice-President—Mrs. Lloyd Monger, Elkton, Va.

Secretary - Treasurer — Raymond Andes, R. 4, Harrisonburg, Va.

Ass't Secretary-Treasurer—Rhoda Driver, R. 4, Harrisonburg, Va.

Superintendents — Missions, Anna Lou Showalter, R. 4, Harrisonburg, Va.; Social Action, Hazel Davis, Elkton, Va.; Devotional Life, Thelma Morris, Dyke, Va.; Leadership Training, Gwendolyn Smith, R. 2, Harrisonburg, Va.; Publications, Mabel Higgs, Shenandoah, Va.

Pastor Counselors—Rev. Roy D. Coulter, New Market, Va.; Rev. Robert Whitten, Winchester, Va.

Lay Counselors—Roy Hosaflook, Linville, Va.; R. O. Rothgeb, Luray, Va.

At our Conference meeting we planned a little "get-together" for the following month. Our churches are scattered, so we have difficulty in meeting, but we selected a central place, and about six o'clock, or just as the sun was sinking behind these beautiful mountains, a number of young people met. We first played games. Then we had supper and closed with a short program. We had planned a longer worship service, but we had to cut it short because of a storm. However, we did discuss the Southeast Missionary Project, and we felt benefitted by just being together.

Since this "get-together" our main work has been the "China Project." Our committee chairman, Raymond Andes, really worked hard trying to get each group to contribute. He reports that $81.00 was sent in by the Valley churches. This is not nearly as much as we had hoped would be contributed, but at least we feel that our efforts were not entirely in vain.

A few days ago I had a letter from Miss Lucy Eldredge, urging me to impress upon the young people the im-

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR FEBRUARY 18, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: Col. 3: 9-17.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Service, A Criterion of Brotherhood—Matt. 23: 8-11.

Tuesday—Having All Things in Common—Acts 4: 32-35.

Wednesday—"No Respecter of Persons"—Acts 10: 34-38.

Thursday—Jesus and the Samaritans—John 4: 39-42.

Friday—All Things to All Men—I Cor. 9: 19-22.

Saturday—Jesus' Intercession for All—John 17: 20-23.

In this topic we continue the discussion of our need for racial tolerance and friendship. The heart of Christianity emphasizes the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Because of the intolerance toward racial minorities the world today falls short of this teaching. It is very important that Christians exercise tolerance and that they strive for fair play for all groups.

Arrange in your society for an International Night. Have a dinner of all races, or a party with games from all around the world, or a forum on interracial problems. Invite groups from other races if possible.

For Open Discussion—

1. Misunderstandings due to differences of language and custom lead to prejudices between people of different races and nations.

2. Economic competition is a leading cause of racial and national prejudice.

3. A feeling of cultural superiority causes one race to look down on another race.

4. Fear of political power becomes a cause of racial prejudice when one race feels it must keep another in subjugation in order to maintain the governmental control.

5. Study I John 4: 20, 21.

6. Can we love a person and do things which harm him?

7. Would the God whom Jesus revealed ever exercise race prejudice?

Where error smites with blindness
Enslaves and leads astray,
Do thou in loving kindness
Proclaim thy gospel day;
Till all the tribes and races
That dwell in this fair land,
Adorned with Christian graces,
Within thy courts shall stand.

THE PERILS OF REJECTING CHRIST.

LESSON VI—FEBRUARY 11, 1940.
LESSONS Matt. 21:17-22:14.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Matt. 22:1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT: I am the way, and the truth, and the life; no one cometh unto the Father, but by me.—John 1:4-6.

It was not always a pleasant experience to be around Jesus. To be sure, he was a friendly fellow, and he had indissoluble good will toward all men. But he had a disturbing way of getting down to brass tacks, of dealing with a man's inner life, of showing the relationship between profession and practice. One may feel quite complacent and rather self-satisfied as long as he deals in generalities of religion, as long as he compares himself with his fellowmen, as long as he thinks of religion in terms of rites and ceremonies and creeds—the external things of religion—but it is quite another thing when one stands face to face with Christ with his keen, spiritual insight and with his uncanny way of going to the very heart of our personal lives. This phase of Jesus' ministry finds striking illustration in two stories which he told and which are included in today's lesson.

Profession and Practice.

In the first story which Jesus told he was illustrating the intimate relationship between profession and practice in his religion. It was a simple story about two boys who were commanded by their father to go to work in his vineyard. The first one said that he would not go. He had other things to do, he did not like to work in the vineyard; he was a son not a servant, none of that stuff for him. But after he got to thinking about things he changed his mind and went. When the father told the other boy to go to work in the vineyard, he quite promptly said that he would go. But, alas, he went not. Jesus was here throwing into sharp contrast two types of people. There are those who often reluctantly face their religious duties, evade them, and sometimes refuse to do them. But later these people see their errors and do carry out the divine commands. On the other hand, there are those who are always so quick to make promises and so slow to perform them. This is true, of course, not only in religion, but in other walks of life. Jesus is suggesting that one should practice as well as profess, that those who call him Lord, Lord, should obey him as well as adore him, that obedience is better than sacrifice.

Good Teaching.

"Which of the two did the will of his father?"—thus did Jesus complete this simple story. And thus does he show one reason why we call him the master teacher. This question made the Scribes and Pharisees think, it stimulated them to draw their own conclusions, it helped them to discover the truth for themselves. Some of the most effective teaching is done by questions and by discussion. That is the advantage of a smaller class. Every Sunday school teacher may well study the methods of Jesus to discover the most efficient methods of teaching. Jesus knew nothing about what we call modern pedagogy or modern psychology by those names, but every sound principle of both of these sciences is founded upon, and finds illustration, in the principles which Jesus used.

"Thou Art the Man."

When these people to whom Jesus had been speaking answered his question they condemned themselves. And Jesus very frankly calls their attention to that fact. They had heard the preaching of John the Baptist but had remained unmoved and impenitent. On the other hand, publicans and harlots under the power of John's preaching had repented of their sins and had entered into the kingdom. Thus it is today: unless men respond in obedience to the divine commands others, in many cases the despised and outcast, will go into the kingdom before them.

The Peril of Rejecting Christ.

Jesus told the Scribes and Pharisees another story which had a very personal point. According to the story, a man prepared a plot of ground, planted a vineyard, set a hedge around it, digged his wine press, built a tower, and then leased it to husbandmen. In due time he sent his representative for his share of the profits. But the men who were in charge of the vineyard, taking advantage of their secure position, refused to pay tribute. They beat one servant, stoned another, killed another, and so on. Finally in desperation the man sent his own son, thinking that if they would not respect the servants they would at least pay tribute to the son. But the husbandmen killed the son also.

Here again is the story not only of the Scribes and Pharisees but of the Jewish nation itself. In a figurative way they were the planted of God, his possession. He had a right to expect fruit from them. Through the centuries he had sent his prophets, who would represent the servants in the story. But the Jewish nation had treated them shamefully, and in some instances had actually killed them. Last of all God sent his own Son; the man talking to them was God's last and greatest overture. Even then they were plotting to kill him, as Jesus himself well knew. It was all a graphic picture of the drama which had taken place and which was to find its culmination in his own crucifixion.

Here again Jesus resorts to a question, "When therefore the lord of the vineyard shall come, what will he do unto those husbandmen?" Their answer was the divine sentence upon themselves. Just as these men had brought upon themselves the judgment of their lord, just so was the Jewish nation, and the individuals in it who had rejected Christ, bringing divine condemnation and judgment upon themselves.

Using Cast-Offs.

"The stone which the builders rejected, the same was made the head of the corner." Just as a mason, culling over a pile of stones, finds one which has been cast away, but which exactly fits his needs for a corner stone or a head stone, just so is God always finding among the outcasts and the underprivileged, and sometimes even among the dregs of humanity, choice spirits which become faithful and fruitful servants in the work of the church and in the Kingdom of God.

The Price of Forfeited Privilege.

"The Kingdom of God shall be taken away from you, and given to a nation bringing forth fruits thereof," solemnly proclaimed Jesus. This statement, of course, was literally fulfilled in the history of the Jewish people. Christianity turned to the Gentiles. And the Jews have paid a high price for their forfeited privilege. This is also true in our own individual lives. "To whomsoever much is given, of him much will be required." He who rejects Christ pays a terrible price for his rejection. He who does not use what he has will lose what he has. Fruitage is the ultimate test of life. Mere profession is not enough. We must bring forth fruits.

MONDAY.

"LET US KEEP LENT."

"Create within me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."—Ps. 51:10.

Lent began February 7th.

Let us keep it.

Lent is meaningless to a great many less credal churches, and it is meaningless to a great many of God's children. But as a part of the creed of the Roman Catholic, the Episcopal and the Lutheran Churches, the significance and the spiritual value is spreading more and more into the less formal churches, till the most of them recognize it in some form as spiritually beneficial.

Stated briefly, our text expresses well the spirit of Lent. Observers of Lent are called upon to do something by way of self-sacrifice, to give themselves to a season of special study of the Bible and spiritual things, to spend more time than usual in the worship of God, looking to a mighty resurrection within, at Easter time, that will be fitting to the glory of that season.

Therefore, it is a cessation of festal nature and the giving over of one's self to religious rites. It is the entering into the closet of prayer and of closeness with God. It is temple-cleaning by getting rid of sin, curbing rebellious passions, stopping excesses, and conquering self. It is a special preparation for letting God in to replenish the soul.

So it is good, and let us keep it in our hearts. As we do, let us remember that God is not to be thought of as imposing miseries upon us. Jesus did not come to restrict our living, but He came to give life and beauty in abundance. And we may learn that way and know that abundance by honestly spending forty days now in spiritual thought and prayer.

O, Lord, hear our prayer. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE APPROACH TO THE CROSS."

"Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord."—Zech. 4:6.

The forty days ahead form a road-way straight from where we are to the brow of Golgotha. This is a way we are to go to find Christ. He travelled this way two thousand years ago, and on the cross paid our debt to God and set us free. If we travel this way devoutly, we shall see the light at that Cross and the burdens of our hearts will roll away. Amen.

Prayer—O Lord, Jesus, we lay ourselves upon the altar, (O Thou God of love, help us) that we may travel that road of Thine and sacrifice something of ourselves for Thee, that we may share a little with Thee in Thy way of suffering and agony. In Thy name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE AMAZING CROSS."

"Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."—I Cor. 10:12.

Is it not amazing that the uplifted cross yonder on Golgotha should still loom so large? The years are many and long since Calvary's red sun went down in dreadful night. The shadows of time have gathered thick and heavy about that scene. This is not the same world that it was then. It is not the same it was twenty years ago. Multitudes of interests close in our minds. The present world situation and the apparent impotence of the church is confusion beyond our understanding. Prayer does not seem to avail any more. Man's self-sufficiency has cast God out as unnecessary.

Yet, despite it all, the cross of our Lord is still there, luminous and large, pitied and adored. At Lenten-tide we strike the trail to gaze upon it that we may be energized to carry on life's burdens and struggle.

O Great God of all, the most unscientific, the most unreasonable, the most irreligious of all are they who dare to treat this experience as unreal, or who suggest that there is nothing here of which modern man still stands in need. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"LET JESUS COME INTO YOUR HEART."

"Let us search and try our ways and turn again to God."—Zech 4:6.

Freely it is admitted that we are not able to give a scientific explanation of how God comes into the human heart. Jesus told Nicodemus that. Still the fact of His redemption stands as one of the most certain facts of the ages. Christ is still mighty to save. With that fact to lead us on, let us open the door of our hearts to Lent and let us keep it in some acceptable way that will do us good.

Prayer—Our Father, in Thee we live and move and have our being. We acknowledge Thee as our God and Jesus as our Saviour. Bless us with open and consecrated hearts. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"WITH SPIRIT OF PENITENCE."

"Rend your hearts and not your garments."—Joel 11:13.

In the observance of the rites of Lent, in which one is called upon to make material sacrifices, there is danger in ascribing merit to ceremony itself and neglecting the spiritual cleansing of the heart. It is the heart life that is most important. It is inner knowledge of God and spiritual enrichment that must obtain.

Prayer—Our Father, we are poor indeed without Thee. Forbid that our egotism, self-will, pride and sins, should hinder us. But for Jesus' and righteousness sake, may we hate ourselves. As we open our hearts to Thee, fill us with Thy life. Amen.

PERNICIOUS ANAEMIA.

[Editorial-Sermon in "Greensboro Daily News" for Sunday, December 10, 1939. Mr. W. T. Dunn of Lynchburg, Va., suggested that it be reprinted in "The Christian Sun." —Editor.]

"And to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood."—Acts 20: 28.

All church people, particularly those denominationalists who run on budgets and must make systematic canvasses each year's end to carry the gospel into the new year, are familiar with the ailments of the church.

They may not know exactly what the disease is, but they do know that most of the time the churches are ill, undernourished, often ill-clothed, ill-housed, even as the population about them. These symptoms are observed in these campaigns and to them are added the reproaches of achieving little for world peace or domestic goodwill. There are wars of peoples and industrial clashes among ourselves. The church is falling down on the job. So the formula goes.

And then when one surveys the parish or the congregation and finds how pitifully small is the pastor's compensation, how ridiculously little some of the best of men contribute to the cause of religion; how devious devices are employed to get the necessary money for operation; how indirectly we go about the business of the gospel, one stands appalled at how much the church can do with so little. The eternal life of this religion of ours is proved by its ability to endure the most scientific and the most protracted starvation.

Somewhere in the desultory reading within the pastor's study, there has been a communication on this subject. The contribution may have been in the American Mercury, in its ribald columns; it may have been in the Southern Churchman, the Biblical Recorder, or the Christian Century. The pilfering of ideas, whole sentences, may be imputed to the pastor of this Daily News congregation; if so, very well. But somebody took the trouble to find out what ails this ailing religion of ours. One saintly soul repressed his indignation, prayed for patience, begged God for goodness, then failed to recognize the answer to that prayer when the petitioner's eye fell upon a rummage sale being conducted in the interest of a church. The saint broke loose. He stormed, he raged, he roared, and probably swore. To employ the sale of old clothes for the financing of an institution, "the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood," was such a profanation, such base infidelity, that the saint could not contain himself. There was this church of God, bought with His own blood, and it was dying of pernicious anaemia.

Whoever this Christian explorer, she must have been a woman, there was an exploration. She had gone to Plymouth, or some such environs. There was a church on the rugged coast of that New England state. Centuries before, men and women had landed there to keep their faith secure.

And now they were having a church fair, slightly more tony than a rummage sale, but worth much more. The celestialists were holding their show on the outside, both in the hope of saving the straggling sinners, and catching the tourist trade. There had been an immense amount of work done by the women who still were being silent in the churches. It was a gorgeous spectacle, booths swathed in crepe paper, and attractive women swinging baskets of merchandise on their arms. There were home-made vegetables, pickles, preserves, all sorts of articles sold in competition with the regular markets and below them. There were games of chance, "grabs" they called them; there were turtle races, eating places, fortune tellers, guesses at the weight of the cakes on display, all the prizes of the best guessers who paid their 10c a throw. There were all sorts of glassware, electrical gadgets, cheap Christmas presents, cookie jars, cartons of cigarettes, and quilts. The church fair was a great show.

Of course it picked up some money. Trust a good woman to cajole a man into spending a few dimes on his immortal soul. The churches were in destitute circumstances. The parish was behind with the pastor's salary. The increase in congregational expense had been larger than had been expected. The pastor, who had taken a stiff cut in the worst of the depression, had not recovered his pre-depression salary. There was hope that from this activity a small amount

TRUE LENT.

Is this a fast to keep
The larder lean
And clean
From fat of veals and sheep?

Is it to quit the dish
Of flesh, yet still
To fill
The platter high with fish?

Is it to fast an hour,
Or ragged to go,
Or show
A downcast look, and sour?

No: 'tis a fast, to dole
Thy sheaf of wheat
And meat
Unto the hungry soul.

It is to fast from strife,
From old debate,
And hate;
To circumscribe thy life.

To show a heart grief—rent;
To starve thy sin,
Not bin;
And that's to keep thy Lent.

—Robert Herrick, 1591-1671.

SUNDAY.

REJOICE IN LENT.

"Moreover when ye fast, be not as the hypocrites."—Matt. 6: 16.

In computing the forty days of Lent — days of penitence — Sundays are not included, for the reason that Sundays commemorate the resurrection and are days of rejoicing. They are days of triumph; not days so much of bowing down as days of lifting up. They are days of singing rather than sighing; days of rest and relaxation rather than days of restrictions that gail us.

Jesus did not come to restrict man's living, but to give him life of abundance and greater beauty. Wherever He does impose restriction and discipline, it is imposed that we may have beauty and happiness of life, just as we are to restrict our eating and drinking in order that we may have health. We worship and pray that we may come into this eternal well-being.

Prayer—Our Father, in spite of the sorrows of the world today, enable us to believe that the desire for happiness shall some day be fulfilled. To this belief we fully cling. Strengthen it within us and give us the joy of Jesus. In His name we ask it. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

For nearly two weeks the public school has been closed on account of the deep snow and zero weather. That means all the children had to be in the buildings all the time, except when the boys had to get out to do the feeding and milking. The girls were a little more favorably blessed, as their work was indoors. But to be in a building with thirty children for two weeks without any let-up, and all of them full of energy and restless because they could not get out is quite an experience. When they are all in school the buildings are quiet. In warm weather they are out playing and enjoying the fresh air, except those who are large enough to have some duties to do in or out of the buildings. When they can get out they amuse themselves. When they have to stay in the buildings they amuse us.

For the last two weeks we have had about as many orphaned birds as we have had children. We have been feeding them on the window sills and it has been real interesting to watch them eat. All the little birds have been very gentle and acted very humble except the blue jay. They have been hateful and acted greedy. They not only tried to run the little birds away, but did their utmost to eat most of the food. The blue jay is not loved and admired as other birds are, and is often a target for the bullets from little rifles in the hands of those who dislike them. Sometimes we find that same spirit in boys and girls, men and women. I wish no one had such a spirit. Several years ago we had a watermelon patch out in the field in front of my office window. I requested the children not to go in the patch until they were ripe and we would select a load of ripe ones and all would share alike. We had lots of them and if anyone went in the patch without permission, I never discovered it. Two or three greedy boys with the spirit of a jay bird could have robbed us of the real joy we had.

portance of purchasing "Lenten Devotions for Young People." I immediately wrote to each key-worker asking him to see that each member of his group purchased a copy. Surely, this is the time of the year when our attention should be turned to daily Bible readings and meditations.

Some of our churches have been without a pastor for several months, but in spite of this handicap the young people have been working. Most of the churches had a Christmas service. From reports, I gather that each active society is holding a meeting at least once a month and the attendance is very good.

In my local group we have been having our regular monthly meetings. Besides doing our regular work, we have bought for our church fifty "Pilgrim Hymnals." (If you are interested in knowing our plan of purchasing them, write to Miss Winona Morris, Dyke, Va.)

We, as young people of the Valley, realize that in the past we have not done all that we could have done, but we hope to accomplish more when we are better organized, and when all of the churches in the Valley are supplied with pastors.

might be used to increase the inadequate stipend that the minister had been receiving.

This, minus perhaps the church, is Christianity, certainly Protestant Christianity in microcosm. Just watch out for this during the next year. Pernicious anaemia is the disease of the church. And much of the food that the neglected patient does consume is provided by these extra activities. Church suppers abound, feasts with underpriced foods. There are church fairs filled with lotteries; there are church bride parties with prizes to stimulate attendance. This is what we make our women do to support the gospel, to pay the preacher's uncertain and insufficient salary; to boost a bit the janitor's precarious pay. With this money we also pay the organist, reward the choir, and furnish literature for the teachers in the Sunday schools. With that mite of a fund we do some repairing, provide a new carpet, maybe vary the decorations a bit. And all this time we do not know whether we are aiding the church or retarding it; whether in the improvement of the visible church we are not making wreck of the invisible.

It probably is important to do all of this; it can be made important to us all. But never was it so necessary to raise the values of what the church stands for in our every day life. If there is one thing which the church of God does not need to do, gambling is that one thing. But our whole technique in modern religion is to make the church itself a gambler. Conceivably this sort of financing may get us the money that we need, but it never will get us the men and women we need. And any church that can make money and cannot make men isn't going to be protected by the promise that the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

An interesting pledge that is, too. It can mean two things. It may be interpreted as digging in, as a sort of Siegfried or Maginot line, which not hell can crack. But it also can mean that the church is such a power in aggression as to make impossible the endurance of evil when once that power gets going. But before we give our hearts to a gospel scheme of rummage sales and church fairs, let us think again about our religion. There is nothing economically sound, ethically inviting, or spiritually fruitful in them. Any plan of indirect casuistry which leads one away from the value of direct and personal sacrifice isn't likely to profit much. And any scheme which raises dollars, but lowers or leaves at low levels, the values for which the church stands, is going to add to that pernicious anaemia with which our religion suffers throughout the world.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

AN UNUSUAL CHURCH CONFERENCE.

The Holland (Va.) Christian Church met for its first quarterly conference of the year on January 3, following a dinner in the Sunday school auditorium which was put on and served by the men of the church without the aid of any of the ladies. (To other churches: Why not try it? It worked wonderfully, the dinner was delicious, the decorations were lovely, and everyone had a good time.)

After dinner and a program of group singing, conference was called to order by the pastor, Dr. Will B. O'Neill. Business proceeded as is customary until new business was asked for. Then the fireworks started! Our senior deacon arose to say that since our church wasn't doing the work that it should in having only about one-third of its membership present at services, and since it was costing so much money to run the church, he would make the motion that the church be closed for six months out of the year. At this another deacon, a former public school teacher in North Carolina and Virginia, made a motion that the schools be closed also for six months if the church was to be closed.

This brought some opposition from the chairman of the school board to the effect that too many teachers would be thrown out of jobs; from a deacon who happens to have two daughters in the teaching profession came the statement that they would be home for him to board one-half of the year. He also stated that in regard to the cost of the church, most of us usually spend a great part of what we have anyway, and no doubt we'd put it in the slot machines or throw it away in other ways if we didn't give it to the church.

Another deacon, who happens to be both chairman of the finance committee of the church and treasurer of the county, seconded both motions because he felt that he was in a position to know just exactly how much both institutions were costing. Incidentally, this deacon has a son in the ministry.

At this the superintendent of schools in our county made the statement that if the schools were closed he would be without a job. Our pastor commented that he would have to begin looking for another job. He said he didn't know where to look but that he was sure he could go back home to Ireland and get in the army.

A young ministerial student, home for the holiday's got up to say that he was astounded and shocked! He continued by saying that all the inspiration he had received for going into the ministry had come from this church and its people.

At this time Dr. O'Neill thought that everyone should know the whole discussion had been staged and rehearsed (with the exception of the student) for the benefit of all the members and, especially for those who are not doing the job that they should, attending services and giving of what they have in a material way.

LANETT CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Lanett Congregational-Christian Church of Lanett, Ala., begins the year 1940 with a new and better opportunity for service in this industrial city of East Alabama. The church has no debts except for a small local bill. The missionary apportionment has been paid in full for 1939. For the coming year the church has accepted a slight increase in its missionary apportionment.

One of the interesting experiments of the church for the past year is a completely equipped stage with colored lights, curtains, etc. This stage will be used to present Bible dramas, pageants, plays and missionary dramatics. The stage was installed in the largest down-stair room in the church. It will not prevent the room being used for the Primary Department of our Sunday school which is the original purpose. This stage equipment is the gift of the Young People's Society. Dramatics in the opinion of the minister of this church furnishes an opportunity for the training of the young people as workers in the church and at the same time it provides the environment for wholesome playing and working together an important matter in the world today. The stage was dedicated with a Thanksgiving play by the Young People's group. This play was presented by our young people at State Line Church near West Point, Ga., on the Sunday evening after Thanksgiving.

The Christmas pageant "When the Star Shone" was presented by fifteen Juniors and a Junior Choir of twenty voices. Misses Gladys Hamilton and Stella Roquemore assisted in this performance.

For the first time in the history of Lanett Church a Christmas Cantata was presented. Mrs. Posey Sorrell, director and pianist for the church, assisted by the eighteen-voice choir, presented "The Chimes of the Holy Night" in a setting of palms, holly, tall candles, and colored lights.

The New Year's Watch Service was sponsored by the young people and was a happy occasion. This society has manifested an interest in the China Project of the Pilgrim Fellowship with a small offering.

One of our Sunday school classes took as their special project for the year our orphanage at Elon College. A small gift was sent at Thanksgiving time through the Secretary of the East Alabama Association. More will be given for this later.

Elon College and the Future Our Church in the South

By REV. ROBERT LEE HOUSE.

Elon College is a distinctly Southern institution. This is no occasion for regret. For the South is no longer famous or infamous for its lacerations, lynchings, landlubbers and its lackadaisical lingo, but also for its luxury, live stock, laboratories, lakes, letters and libraries. The traditional south, a land of rebellion, romance and repose, now receives less ridicule and is realizing a reputation for its resources, refinement, a recrudescence and rejuvenation of real religion. Experts are saying that the natural resources of the Southland haven't even been scratched, and that it is the future El Dorado of the nation. It is recognized by northern capital as a resort for residence, a pool in which to swim, a plantation for cultivation, a plot for the pioneer. Elon College has an indigenous relationship and opportunity in this land of soldiers, lovers and statesmen which is now recognized as an area for infinite experiment, development and expansion.

The accelerated life of the future is destined to make severe demands on the Church. Our church will fail in its high and historic mission unless it has the firm and dependable leadership of a progressive institution of higher learning. The future is still God's field of action. And in these future days of grace Elon must weave into our public life the fabric of an enduring civilization. Faith is still our greatest asset. But faith expresses itself in generous giving and sacrificial service. Those who expertly avoid all the inconvenient responsibilities of life are worse than useless in the task of building a great College, a great Church, and a great Civilization. The first fifty years of Elon's history have been significant. During the next half century a chapter of epic proportions may be written, a chapter in which the Church and the College march majestically and triumphantly toward the celebration of a notable Centennial.

The Practical Uses of Lent

By GAIUS GLENN ATKINS.

It is a fortunate provision of the Christian year that Lent comes just when we need it most and we, whose church traditions are a bit shy of formalism may avail ourselves of it without apologizing to the Pilgrim Fathers. It has a sanction deeper than the sanction of the Church Calendar: the need of lives hard driven and much occupied with the external, to take account of the state of the soul and seek a little quietness in the hope of understanding more clearly the real meaning of our wearying business and of replenishing the wasted springs of action.

Tidal Movements of the Spirit.

For there are of necessity tidal movements of the spirit, ebbings and flowings of interest and occupation. We live between deeds and duties and pleasures and the hidden empowerment of life. A life which is all action and wholly external, wanting in secret connections with some unseen and richly sufficient source of power, becomes in the end worn and sterile. There is but one supreme correction for such a state as that: a return to God in a faith which rests in him, in prayer which communes with him, in some thinking through of the meanings of our manifold activities and in an obedient and quiet openness to every suggestion of goodness, strength, and peace.

Time to Think.

Now this is no mere formal piety; it is the secret of an effective life. We act with force only in the clear understanding of the meaning and value of what we do. A feverish age, distracted by conflicting interests and much shaken in its confidences, has special need to consider what its show of action is all about and where, in its haste, it is really going, and since this demands much testing of occupations and ambitions by the enduring values, whatever halts us a little, thereby giving us a chance to think, and turns us from self to God and, above all, corrects us by the timeless spirit and example of Jesus Christ, has a practical value of which both the church and the world may well take account: and Lent does just that.—From leaflet by this title, published by Commission on Evangelism.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Rev. J. E. McCauley of Route 1, Henderson, N. C., reports that his work at Liberty and Pleasant Grove is starting off nicely. The Rev. Mr. McCauley is available for service on the second Sunday of each month.

Eastern Virginia Alumni of Elon College will have their annual banquet in the Suffolk Christian Church on Friday evening this week. It is always a delightful affair for those who have spent happy years at Elon College.

Problems related to the Southern Convention were discussed by the North Carolina ministers last Monday at Elon College. President S. C. Harrell led the discussion. It was agreed that some real problems confront the coming session of the Convention.

The Eastern Virginia Ministers will meet at Suffolk on Monday of next week. This group of church leaders makes much of its monthly meeting, and a very strong bond of friendship grows among them. They do some real study, and consider together their mutual problems.

Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, was the morning preacher at our church in Danville, Va., on the first Sunday of this month. Rev. M. T. Sorrell is pastor of this flourishing church which has one of the twenty-five largest Sunday schools in our American churches.

News from Alabama says that Rev. G. D. Hunt has been ill but is better. The Rev. Mr. Hunt has for many years been a leading minister of our church in Georgia and Alabama. His son, George Staley Hunt, has recently moved from Weeping Water, Neb., to a larger parish in Ohio.

Dr. John R. Scotford, associate editor of the Missionary Herald, preached in Portsmouth, Va. (First Church), on last Sunday. He was on his way back to New York after spending several days at Brick Rural Life Schools, Bricks, N. C. The Promotional Secretary will preach for the Portsmouth Church next Sunday.

Rev. Cecil Thomas, a member of the Shallow Well Christian Church and of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, a second year student at Elon College, and a young minister of promise, has recently accepted a call to be the pastor of our church at Rensselaer Falls, N. Y. He is also a student in St. Lawrence University which is only eight miles from the church.

Dr. Henry Smith Leiper, a secretary of the new World Council of Churches, a former missionary to China, and a writer of many books, will be the speaker at the Institute of Religion being held by our United Church in Raleigh, N. C., on next Monday evening at eight o'clock. "The World Church in the Present Crisis" will be his subject. Dr. Leiper is a member of the Congregational Church. Readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN are invited to hear him.

gregational Church in Almont, Mich., on February 6, 1900. His illness prevented a celebration in his church on the fortieth anniversary, but such a celebration will be held about March 10. His many friends in THE CHRISTIAN SUN family extend him best wishes for a complete recovery and much happiness as he continues to serve as a minister of the church.

NEW MEMBERS FOR EASTER.

Pastor's will please note that Easter comes early this year. That class in preparation for church membership should get under way soon, if it has not already. Materials can be secured from the Promotional Secretary, or from the Commission on Evangelism at 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

PASTORS' SCHOOLS.

Vanderbilt University has announced its annual Rural Church and Community Conference to be held April 1-5. Duke University will hold its Rural Church Institute and Pastors' School this year June 3-8. Ministers in the Southern Convention who may be interested in having a scholarship at either of these schools should write to the Promotional Secretary as early as possible. Through the cooperation of the Board of Home Missions of our denomination, plans are being made to assist several ministers to attend training schools, with the hope that they will not only be better ministers in their own fields but will also bring back helps for others.

AUTHOR OF THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.

The following quotation was sent in by the Rev. Mrs. F. E. Bullock, and is taken from "The Bible Comes Alive" by Sir Charles Marston, F. S. A., published in 1939 by the Religious Book Club, 111 Charing Cross Road, London, England.

"Because the archaeological evidence in this book refers to the Old Testament it should not be supposed that similar evidence is lacking for the New Testament. A recent discovery in connection with the latter deserves notice, because it illustrates the uncertainty of the textual criticism that has been applied to that Scripture.

"St. John's Gospel has been a principal target for this type of criticism. For a century and more German critics have indulged in wild speculations concerning it. No sort of agreement has been reached in regard to the conclusions of any critics. But there has developed a marked tendency to ascribe the authorship to a later date than Apostolic times. This verdict disagreed with the affirmation that St. John himself wrote it. (John 21: 24) And, having regard to the great importance of this Gospel, painful doubts and perplexities have disturbed the minds of Christian people.

"The John Rylands Library in Manchester is now in possession of a fragment of St. John's Gospel found in Egypt, which has been dated to within about a century of the crucifixion. Since this leaf only represents a copy of the Gospel circulated in a foreign land, and postulates a considerable interval of time for circulation and transmission, the original may well have been written by the Apostle himself, in accordance with the text to which reference has just been made."

SELF-DISCIPLINE.

Dr. Douglas Horton, Secretary and Minister of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, says that the church needs people who discipline themselves. In many countries today dictators regulate the conduct of people. In democracies there is freedom of thought and action. If this freedom is allowed to become selfish, the result may be anarchy. If freedom is disciplined by intelligence and consideration for others, democracy has a chance at health, and the church can grow.

Lent has been used by the church throughout the centuries as a time for self-discipline. Sometimes this extra thought about conduct has run to such little and insignificant things that it has seemed silly. But the fact still remains that as we face the courageous, self-controlled Christ marching straight to the Cross, there comes to each thoughtful person a desire to stand a bit straighter, work a bit harder, live a bit nobler, sacrifice a bit more, and give more freely. Those who do not feel this desire are those who have not seen the courageous, self-disciplined Christ.

Self-discipline means that the individual will set up certain standards for himself without regard to what other people are doing. Others may find no time for meditation, Scripture reading and prayer, but this person will, if that is part of the things to be done. Others may invest in whatever may be paying the greatest interest on money even if it means the sale of narcotics, alcoholic liquors, or war materials, but he will consider well his investments as a good steward of God. Others may spend their money in "riotous living" and give little or nothing to the building of the kingdom of God on earth, but he will give a specified portion of his income to the work of the church.

Such self-discipline is certainly needed in our day. Dictatorships by church or state dwarf personality, and the reckless use of personal freedom destroys the soul of the individual and makes modern society impossible. A church composed of people who are constrained only by the love of Christ and their own good will is the kind of church that the world needs today.

OUR BROTHERS—JEWS AND GENTILES.

Those who begin their prayers with "our Father" must admit their kinship with all the people that God hath made. That is all of them.

Some say that church people are hypocritical because they say that prayer on Sunday—a prayer that asks for God's will to be done on earth—and then go out to live as if no such prayer ever existed. Dr. W. A. Smart of Emory University, speaking in our Raleigh (N. C.) Church recently, said that they are not hypocrites. They are just living in two very distinct worlds. On Sunday they worship a Jew and call all men brothers, but on Monday they live in a world that hates Jews and claims kin with only a very few blood relatives. However this may be, it must be admitted that the Lord's prayer makes one claim kin with the world and ask not for his own will to be done but for God's will to be done on earth. The time has certainly come for all church people to make the Christian religion live in the work of the week. This will give more vitality and reality to worship on Sunday.

When this is applied to the war in China, the treatment of Jews by Germany, the slaughter of Ethiopians in their native home and their disfranchisement and economic slavery in my country, the constant bombardment of Finland, and the hungry hordes that roam the earth seeking food and shelter, one is inclined to feel too small to really change the currents that now submerge multitudes. And yet something can be done about all of it, and the church must find a way.

First we should eliminate race prejudice from our own lives. This done, we can find other things to do. There is little use for long lists till we take the first step. So long as we who say the Lord's prayer hate people because of their race—or for any other reason—there is no hope of us receiving the reward of opportunity to bring the kingdom of heaven to earth.

SOUTHERN CONVENTION PROBLEMS.

An article in last week's paper another in this raise questions concerning the work of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. These questions must be answered by the coming session of the Convention to be held the last of April and the first of May.

As has been suggested, there needs to be made some changes in the organic law by which the Convention works. It seems that it is now too late to give notice of constitutional changes other than the one concerning delegates that was presented at the last Convention and will come back for final consideration this year. This is quite unfortunate, but does not make changes totally impossible. It would seem that the office of Promotional Secretary might also be included as an amendment since such an officer was elected by the last Convention. It would seem also that the Convention would have the right to direct its Boards to work along certain lines and to cooperate in definite ways without any change of the Government and Principles of the church.

It seems to this writer that the time has come for our Convention to give very careful consideration to what it is doing, what it expects to do, and how it can best accomplish its work.

"The Christian Sun" will welcome constructive suggestions concerning the future of our work. It will not welcome personal criticisms. If you have an idea concerning the improvement of our work, let the church have it by sending it to this paper for publication. It might be such a radical idea that no one would agree with you now, but be so good that all would turn to it in the years to come. Write constructively and briefly, please, and in so doing get a hearing before the Convention meets.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Through the influence of public schools, colleges, universities, and theological seminaries an old custom is being revived in many churches. Somewhere between the third and the fifth century, A. D., the wearing of robes or vestments was made mandatory for the clergy and church choirs. This custom was discontinued in the Dissenting or non-Conformist Churches after the Reformation. In recent years many of the Free Churches are turning again to this custom. When this matter is brought to the attention of churches which have been free from this type of formalism, there is usually strong opposition to its adoption. It is a matter over which much controversy has raged in the history of the church.

The following quotation from a recent statement by Dr. Raymond G. Clarke, which appeared in his comments on the Sunday school lesson for January 28, 1940, indicates the strong feeling of the editor of our Advanced Bible Class Quarterly towards those who oppose his views: "Wherever we find those in our churches who do not want ministers to wear robes, it is indicative of one of two things: either they are extremely ignorant as to the value and the purpose of the garb, or else they are so internally selfish that they want to make a show of themselves rather than to blend their lives into a common mass of beauty and reverence with other folk."

In this sarcastic vein Dr. Clarke apparently would seek to make the impression that knowledge and unselfishness can be found only in those who favor his position in this matter. Outside that circle ignorance and selfishness thrive and threaten. One may ask: "If robes in the pulpit and choir are conducive to respect, humility and reverence for God, why should not the entire congregation also wear the robes?" And why should not the membership of the churches wear robes seven days in the week, as a mark of respect to God?

To some people a vested choir and a minister wearing a robe suggest simplicity, humility and dignity in worship. To other people the robe is a symbol of formalism, style and display. It had its origin in caste. Jesus said: "Beware of the scribes which desire to walk in long robes, and love greetings in the markets, and the highest seats in the synagogues, and the chief rooms at the feasts." (Luke 20:46.) Judaism, in the time of Jesus, was renowned for its gorgeous robes and ritualistic formalism. Jesus condemned the empty sham and prevailing hypocrisy of his race.

No mention is made of the use of vestments in the writings of Paul. One cannot imagine Paul carrying his clerical vestments with him on his missionary journeys. In the modern drift back towards ritualism it is natural for vestments to find a place in the present program of worship. It is unfair to condemn people who approve the use of vestments, and it is unjust to criticize those who oppose them. The use of vestments in the church should be approached very carefully. In a Congregational and Christian Church, the minister, the choir and all members of the church have an individual, personal right to make their own choice in matters of dress in the worship service of the church. It is not the function of our church to determine the color, the material or the pattern of dress for church officials or church members. It may demand that dress shall be decent, but it cannot justly decree the type of dress that may or may not be worn.

Several years ago a young man went to church to hear a sermon by a preacher who wore a clerical suit and a silk hat. When asked how he liked the new preacher he said: "He was the finest dressed and the poorest preacher I have ever heard." The preacher is more important than his robe, and the singing is more important than the vestments worn by the choir.

I. W. JOHNSON.

FEBRUARY EIGHTEENTH AND TWENTY-FIFTH.

The South has been visited with the most severe winter in years. Sunday, January 28, was designated as Elon College day in the Sunday schools and churches throughout the Convention. On that day it was practically impossible for churches in rural sections of the Convention to have services at all. Churches in towns and cities were put at a great disadvantage on account of the severe weather. No one is to be criticized for not observing Elon College day. Reasons for such failures are perfectly obvious. The above, however, does not lessen the need of Elon College. On the other hand the college's needs have been greatly increased on account of the effects of the severe weather. It was a most difficult task to keep the college buildings and dormitories comfortable. The heating equipment installed when West Dormitory was built in 1904 is still in use. The power plant was constructed to provide heat for four buildings only. At present it is required to heat eleven buildings. With equipment practically thirty-five years old, it is easy to see the difficulties encountered. During the month of January and the first days of February we burned two carloads of coal more than usual for this period. Other items of expense were greatly increased. Our failure to receive the usual amount from the churches has placed us at a great disadvantage.

This is to suggest that the following two Sundays, February 18 and 25, be designated as Elon College days in the churches and that the churches use the day most convenient. The burden of this plea is that the Sunday schools and churches do something for the college. We need your sympathy; we need your cooperation; and we certainly need your contributions. I hope that every church and Sunday school will find it possible to mention favorably the college, its program, and its needs, and will give those who attend an opportunity to express their interest. We have been getting along so finely for the past five years and have appreciated so greatly the church's cooperation and help, and now it is hoped that no one will fail us in our needs, particularly since we are celebrating our Golden Anniversary. For fifty years the college has served, and I know that we, that is, the church, alumni, and friends, want to start her on her second half century of service without handicap and with our blessings. You are cordially invited to visit the college when you find it convenient to do so.

L. E. SMITH.

John Bunyan wrote of Christian's death: "All the trumpets sounded for him on the other side." Paul at the end saw the crown. Bunyan heard the trumpets. The Christian has an interest in two worlds—the one that now is and the world to come. Sometimes it's the hard prison fare that comes from being persecuted for righteousness sake. But Bunyan can hear the trumpet "on the other side." Praise God for such a faith.—Exchange.

Southern Convention Problems--What Shall We Do About Them?

By REV. A. LANSON GRANGER, JR.

In these days preceding another biennial session of the Southern Convention it may seem pertinent to be asking ourselves some questions regarding the future of our work here in the South. Such questions, it seems to me, need not only to be provoked, but to be brought into the open and candidly and freely discussed before the Convention convenes. I, myself, am under no illusions about having any mature perspective upon the problems which confront us, or any profound wisdom concerning the future program and policies of our church, but neither am I seriously impressed that the Convention has any adequate conception of its mission or destiny. The whole point of this amateur article is to raise the question: What definite plans do we have for the future of our church in the Southern Convention?

There is no mistaking the purposelessness, the lack of specific direction, the almost hopeless inefficiency which characterizes much of our work. This statement is intended to be no harsh generalization for the sake of emphasis. It is a truth, clearly recognized by some, easily evident to anyone who ponders thoughtfully and critically the function of our Conferences and Convention: one is left with querulous wonderings as to what they are all for, what we are trying to do, and how we plan to get it done.

It might be a sobering experience for us to take a frequent look at what other denominations are doing, merely by way of contrast as to what they are accomplishing and we are not. Some of them in our midst seem to have at least a sense of direction, a knowledge of what they are doing, that is often lacking with us. (Perhaps they are more aware of our accomplishments than are we.) As contrasted with them again, one may analyze our ineffectiveness all the way from weakness in church government and discipline, which have been with us throughout our history, to the lack of competent leadership. Here, however, at the present we are not concerned with analysis, but merely with setting forth some of the obvious problems which face us.

To make the matter specific, then, do we have in the Southern Convention any Program of Progress, any plan of action as to what we should be doing for the next ten years, or even for the next two? These questions relative to the future of our church are basic, and primarily they lie in the laps of the leaders of our Southern Convention. Before the next session I should like to see some comment in THE CHRISTIAN SUN upon some of the following problems of our life and work:

The Ministry.—What are we going to do about producing and securing a better educated and more effective ministry? About the inconsistency of ministerial standards which prevail among the various Conferences? About the practice of letting down the bars to admit candidates into the ministry who do not meet the qualifications already specified? About the inequality of ministers' salaries, and the poverty of some of our ministers? About the number of churches which a minister should serve? About retirement for aged ministers?

The College.—What does the Convention propose to do about the remaining indebtedness of the college? Does the college have any definite program for the future? If so, what is it?

Home Missions.—What should be done concerning the formulation of a more consistent relationship between the Board of Missions of the Southern Convention and the Board of Home Missions of the Congregational and Christian Churches? How can the Mission Board more effectively aid in the establishment of new churches, and investigate the needs and possibilities of other churches?

Young People.—What is the relationship of the young people of the various Conferences to the Southern Convention? What is the Pilgrim Fellowship, what does it purpose to do, and what is its relationship to other youth groups, such as missionary societies and Christian Endeavor? What can be done to supply professional youth leadership for the hundreds of young people in the Convention who not only want but vitally need such leadership?

"The Christian Sun."—Should THE CHRISTIAN SUN be continued? Could the Convention apportionment for it be more valuably expended somewhere else? If not, what constructive policy for its continuance can be formulated?

Promotional Secretary.—What is the function of this office? How should it be financed?

The Message of the Church.—How do we propose to make our witness vital and effective in this modern world? What specific emphasis should we declare?

These questions are at the most merely suggestive of a few of the areas in which we need to do some concerted thinking and work for some purposive action. I hope that they will be a stimulus for the consideration of other problems which we are facing, and will bring forth some suggestions as to how these may be met.

EIGHT MILLION METHODISTS ON THE MARCH.

[Statement and Appeal to the Church from the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension.]

God has brought our united Methodism to the kingdom in America for such a time as this! An unparalleled opportunity opens before our great church as we bring the rich resources we have in Christ Jesus to bear on the unmet needs of our country.

Methodism has led the Christian communions of America in successful organic union. Methodism must now go forward in a great spiritual advance and in a mighty moral crusade. Christ wills it!

Through Christ we face this semi-pagan world in confidence. Large areas of American life have grown progressively selfish, secular, and sinful. Indifference, irreligion, gambling, drunkenness, crime, and lewdness are cruelly debasing youth and undermining the American way of life.

Christ calls again to Methodism to proclaim in word and in life personal redemption, the Christianizing of the social order, and evangelism for all the world.

A new spirit of adventurous faith is stirring the soul of our united Methodism. Eight million Methodists in forty-three thousand churches will answer the challenge of our bishops to more Christ-like personal life and to more sacrificial Christian service in the Great Advance of the coming months.

Every local church must become the dynamic center of the movement to make America Christian. Every minister must aggressively lead his people in bringing Christ to his community and his community to Christ. Every Methodist worthy to be called a good soldier of Jesus Christ must enlist in this Christian Crusade.

Elon College Golden Anniversary

ELON COLLEGE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY CLUB.

The campaign continues in the face of unfavorable weather and the delay in response on the part of so many of our friends. Time is passing, commencement will be here before we realize it, and some may delay sending their contributions or pledges longer than they had expected.

A faithful alumna in making her pledge last week stated that my letter and card had been on her desk for weeks and that she had been intending to respond but had simply delayed making her pledge. There are many, many in the same position. Now is the opportune time. Your pledge at this date will mean more perhaps than at any other time. Send a little cash along with the pledge. We have been able to reduce our debt to $125,000. We want to make another payment. Whenever the receipts amount to as much as $1,000, the money is forwarded immediately to the Virginia Trust Company and credited on our obligations. If you have pledged and are due a payment, please let us hear from you.

The following pledges have been received since our last report:

	Pledged	Paid
Memorial to Dr. W. W. Staley, by Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun	$ 50.00	$ 10.00
Archie Israel, Portsmouth, Va.	50.00
Ladies Benevolent & Social Union, Suffolk Christian Church	50.00	20.00
Juanita Waugh, Burlington, N. C.	50.00
Mr. & Mrs. L. F. Troxler, Elon College, N. C.	50.00	25.00
Mrs. Mamie P. Leonard, Washington, D. C.	50.00
Dr. & Mrs. C. M. Walters, Burlington, N. C.	200.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. H. Barnwell, Burlington, N. C.	500.00
Total	$1,000.00	$ 55.00
Total pledged	$ 1,000.00
Previously reported		41,162.50
Grand total		$42,162.50

CONTRIBUTIONS FROM THE CHURCHES.

The weather has been most unfavorable for church attendance and services. Very few have responded during the College Period. It is hoped sincerely that every church will send some contribution before the college period closes with this month. We made a very good record last year, and we should not do less this year but should improve our record if possible.

ELON'S GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY CAMPAIGN

LENTEN SERVICES ANNOUNCED.

Rev. John H. Knight, pastor of the First Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., began on February 4 a series of Lenten sermons entitled "The Changeless Christ in a Changing World." In this series Mr. Knight desires to lead his congregation into a new appreciation of the person and work of the Lord Jesus Christ, Son of God and Savior of men. The sermons are as follows:

February 4—"The Christian Year As an Aid to Worship"—I Cor. 14:40.

February 11—"Why Observe Lent?"—James 4:8.

February 18—"Who Was Jesus?"—Matthew 16:16.

February 25—"The Miracle Worker"—John 2:11.

March 3—"The Voice from Heaven"—Luke 9:35.

March 10—Passion Sunday—"Jesus Christ and Him Crucified"—I Cor. 2:2.

March 17—Palm Sunday—"His Kingliness"—John 18:37.

March 24—Easter Day—"The Garden of Resurrection"—John 19:41.

"To ridicule truth or laugh at sacred things will not change their nature, but will certainly close the door of salvation against those guilty unless they repent."

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Last Sunday, February 11, is known as Race Relations Sunday in our churches. The month of February is set aside as Interracial Brotherhood Month. The Department of Race Relations of the Federal Council of the Churches in America, has sent out a leaflet on this theme for Primary and Junior children. In it I found the following song, story and prayer:

God's Children Live in Many Lands.

God's children live in many lands,
All scattered wide and far;
Where nights are long and snow is deep,
Beneath the northern star.

Where flowers bloom, where rivers roll,
Where mountains tower high,
But all with one old earth for home
And under one blue sky.

Touch hands around the rolling world,
Call clear from sea to sea,
That brothers, sisters are we all
In God's great family!

There are many verses in our Bible which tell of these children who live in God's world-wide family. There have been many songs and stories written about these children. The song above is one. Here is a story about a person who forgot some of God's children.

THE ARTIST WHO FORGOT FOUR COLORS.

An artist was asked to make a design for a stained glass window for a new church, using the theme in an old hymn: "Around the throne of God in Heaven, thousands of children stand."

He painted hosts upon hosts of little golden-haired boys and girls around the Savior, singing happily; and after finishing it the evening before a committee was to come to judge it, he went to sleep, contented with his work. But in the night he heard a sound in his studio, hurried in and found a stranger changing his picture entirely—painting some of the white faces yellow, some brown, some black, some red, making golden hair brown or black, until one by one that host of little white children had become Negroes and Alaskans, Indians, Chinese, Cubans, Mexicans, Italians, Poles, Japanese, Koreans, Hindus, Russians, Armenians, Greeks!

"O stop!" the artist pleaded. But the stranger calmly asked him why, with five colors on his palette—white, black, brown, red, yellow—he had used only one color?

"These other children live all around you, and I want them all to come in answer to my call . . ."

But just as the artist realized that this was the Savior himself, he woke up in bed! He rushed into the studio, found his picture unchanged, his palette with the four forgotten colors! So he began to paint everything as the stranger had done in his dream; and when the committee arrived, one enthusiastic lady cried: "Why, it's just—God's family, isn't it?"—Margaret Applegarth.

PRAYER.

"Our Father, the Father of all children of the world, we thank Thee for all of them—different in some ways, but alike in, oh, so many more. We thank Thee for their songs and games and stories and pictures which we have learned to know and love. Forgive us for the times when we forgot that boys and girls of other races are truly our brothers and sisters. Forgive our unkind words and unfriendly actions. Help us to imagine ourselves in their places. Help us to treat all boys and girls as we ourselves should like to be treated. Help us to work and play together as brothers and sisters—children of one Father—the great Artist, who used all colors when he made the people of the world. Amen."

THE CHURCH PAPER.

One wonders if our pastors generally realize the necessity for our church paper, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and the struggle it is having to keep alive and going. If we of the Southern Convention were the only ones facing this situation and realizing the intensity of the struggle we might take counsel of our difficulties and let it go at that. However, it is a sad, and it seems to us, a very sorrowful fact that church papers, the religious press in fact, are facing what seems to be the most serious struggle in all their experience. Many church papers have already passed out of existence and others have been changed from weeklies to monthlies.

In Advance for February we find some very illuminating, but very deplorable facts about the religious press and the struggle it is having. These facts are given by the editor of Zion's Herald, sponsored by Methodist laymen. He says according to Advance that:

"Taking a group of six weeklies of the Methodist Episcopal Church for which circulation figures are available, including the Advocate, Central and Northwestern Editions; the Advocate, New York Edition; the Advocate, San Francisco Edition; the Advocate, Cincinnati Edition; the Michigan Advocate; and the Epworth Herald, we find that in 1922 this group of six papers, including papers that have since been merged with them, had a total circulation of 250,311. The same group of papers seventeen years later (1939) have an aggregate circulation of only 220,726, a total loss in this period of seventeen years of 29,585 subscribers. To put the matter vividly, one can see at a glance that these six papers during the seventeen-year period had a loss of almost twelve per cent of their readers.

"Taking a group of six papers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for which figures are available, including five independent conference papers with the official Advocate at Nashville, we find that this group had a total circulation of 77,196 in 1922. The same group showed a circulation of 64,702 in 1939, registering a loss during the seventeen-year period of 12,494, or over sixteen per cent.

"Taking the five papers published in Boston, namely, Advance (Congregational), the Christian Endeavor World (interdenominational), the Christian Leader (Universalist), the Christian Register (Unitarian), and Zion's Herald (Methodist), we find that the total circulation in 1922 was 122,951, and that the total circulation in the year 1939 had dropped to 36,654, a loss of 86,297 in the seventeen-year period. This means that the Boston papers during those seventeen years lost almost three quarters of their readers. A very large part of this staggering loss must be charged to the Christian Endeavor World, which had a decrease of 55,352 subscribers in the seventeen years. The rate of loss for the four denominational weeklies of Boston during this period was approximately 38 per cent.

"In the world of religious newspapers during the past two decades, some very tragic things have happened. Nine strong religious newspapers have had to fold up and go out of business. During the same period there have been mergers involving seven strong religious papers. During the twenty years, also, five or six religious papers have given up the struggle of weekly publications and have become bi-weeklies or monthlies."

The only comfort the above tragic facts can bring is that misery loves company. The religious press is essential to the religious life of the church and of the world. It does not deal with the economic and political problems of the day, (that in which our generation seems to be thoroughly absorbed) but with religious and spiritual life of the church and of the community. Our CHRISTIAN SUN must continue to shine if we of the Southern Convention mean to go forward in our work of building up the cause of righteousness in the world. Our pastors should indeed face these facts and realize that as they place copies of THE CHRISTIAN SUN in the homes of their people, they are placing there facts that are essential to the religious and spirit lives of those homes, as well as the interest of the enterprises of the churches.

I know this article is rather lengthy, but it does not cover even then all the sad and tragic facts in the case, and unless the pastors and laymen bestir themselves to increase circulation of THE CHRISTIAN SUN it, too, will have to go the way that many other religious papers have gone.

Again our gratitude is expressed to everyone who had a part in the donations noted above. Missions, like other purely church enterprises and institutions, is faced with the real problem of maintaining the work and carrying forward the cause of winning souls to Christ and building up the church in the home land as well as in the foreign fields. A missionary church is a growing church and it is the only church that has the promise of growth and progress. In present world conditions there certainly never was a time when missions were more needed and the cause of missions constituted a greater challenge to the loyalty and love of the church for the Christ, who founded the church, and who is himself building the church. He has permitted us the high and holy privilege of being co-workers with him in this divine task and we should count this a high and holy privilege to have a part with him in building the church.

Gratefully,

J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

"A church halting between two or three opinions on the question of war will be a church inevitably unable to march forward with directness and sincerity to the fulfillment of its task."

MISSIONARY ACTIVITIES.ARRIVALS ON THE FIELD.

DR. AND MRS. EDWARD W. WILDER arrived in Madura, India, August 7, returning to the Marathi Mission.

MISS KATHRYN L. HOWARD arrived in Athens, September 30, to join the staff of Pierce College.

REV. AND MRS. EDWARD G. NICHOLS arrived in Madura, India, October 11, returning to the Madura Mission.

MISS GERTRUDE E. CHANDLER arrived in Madura, India, October 20, returning to the Madura Mission.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES H. LAWSON and MISS KATIE WILCOX arrived in Madura, November 3, returning to the Madura Mission.

REV. AND MRS. FRANK J. WOODWARD arrived at Dansalan, Mindanao, November 5, returning to the Mission to the Philippines.

MISS OLIVE L. NELSON arrived in Madura, November 13, returning to the Madura Mission.

MISS EMMA B. NOREEN arrived in Peiping, November 11, en route to Fenchow, returning to the North China Mission.

REQUESTED TRANSFERS.

The transfer of REV. AND MRS. SAMUEL H. LEGER from the North China Mission to the Foochow Mission has been requested by the Mid-Fukien Synod and Fukien Christian University to fill the vacancy in the Board's quota on the staff of the University caused by the death of Frederick P. Beach in 1937. Dr. Leger spent last November in the territory of the Southern Convention. He is now studying at Cornell University.

SAILINGS FOR THE FIELD.

MRS. HARRY S. MARTIN and MISS MABEL I. HUGGINS sailed January 3 returning to the North China Mission. Mrs. Martin's daughter, Ruth, is a student at Elon College.

MRS. W. A. HEMINGWAY and ISABEL HEMINGWAY, R. N., sailed January 27 on the Empress of Canada, returning to the North China Mission.

WOMEN TO CONDUCT SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

The School of Missions, under the auspices of the Women of the Southern Convention, will be held at Elon College, N. C., June 18-19-20. All delegates are to be asked to arrive on Monday evening, June 17, and remain until Friday morning, June 21. Three full days of intensive work.

Watch this paper for further items. The Committee is at work and news of importance will be given CHRISTIAN SUN readers just as rapidly as things are definitely settled.

MRS. J. MONROE HARRIS,
President.

CAN WE TITHE IN HARD TIMES?

This is the title of a bulletin published by the Layman Company especially for these times. Layman bulletins on tithing, thirty-two in number, including sixteen in new type form and just revised, are printed in regular two-page church bulletin size so they may be used by every church issuing a weekly calendar. The two blank pages of each bulletin provide room for announcements of the local church. This arrangement not only affords valuable instruction, but also saves one-half of the printing cost as well as paper. A sample set containing thirty-two different bulletins will be sent to any address, postpaid for 20c. When you write please mention THE CHRISTIAN SUN, also giving your denomination. Send your request to The Layman Company, 730 Rush St., Chicago, Ill.

Our Missionary Prayer ListWEST CENTRAL AFRICA MISSION

Pray for my soul. More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of. Wherefore let thy voice Rise like a fountain for me night and day.
For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friends?
For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

—Alfred Tennyson.

FEBRUARY.

15—Thursday—Miss Lauretta A. Dibble:

Principal of Means School, Dondi, 1928-1938; now does general work in Bailundo.

16—Friday—Rev. and Mrs. Gladwyn Childs:

He is principal of Currie Institute, Dondi. Many of our people know Mrs. Childs, for she was the guest missionary at the summer School at Elon last year. She is a Swiss and met her husband while they were both in Portugal studying the language before going to the mission field.

Pilgrim Fellowship

"Youth at Work in the Church"

Emily Carleton Lester, Editor

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA RELIGIOUS INSTITUTE.

The first of four institutes planned by the Western North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship was held at Ramseur Christian Church on last Sunday afternoon with an attendance of about sixty interested young people and adults. The observance of Lent and the development of better relations between white and black people in our communities were the two main emphases of the institute. Discussions were entered into heartily, and several were heard to say that it was a very profitable meeting. Mr. Sybrant Pell is the president and Miss Thelma Thomas is the secretary of this active Fellowship in our Western Conference. Other leaders on the Sunday program were Dr. D. J. Bowden, Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Todd, Rev. A. L. Granger, and Rev. F. C. Lester.

AN ACTIVE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SOCIETY.

Recently Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Wiseman entertained the members of the Christian Endeavor Society at the First Church, Greensboro, at a baked-bean supper, honoring especially those who graduated from high school at mid-year.

After the supper a business meeting was held and reports of the activities of the group were review. This group, though not so large in numbers, is very active and fills an important place in the life of the church. Miss Dorothy Cox, granddaughter of Rev. L. I. Cox who founded this church about forty years ago, is the president.

Once every two months the young people have charge of the evening worship service. The most recent of these was a pageant, "Jesus, the Light of the World" presented on the first Sunday night in Lent. Two of the best plays given during the year were "Wages," a temperance play, and "A Christmas Idyll." A service on the China Friendship Project was arranged in January and $30.00 was sent in as our share in this. Fifteen dollars has been raised on our regular fifty-dollar mission pledge.

One of the best service activities of the group was on Thanksgiving. There was a brief Thanksgiving service and simple breakfast for the group at the church. Then fifteen baskets of fruit were taken to the shut-in members of the congregation. It was a wonderful experience for the younger members of the church to come in contact with some of the pioneer members, and it was a joy for the shut-ins to be remembered by the young people.

During the winter months the evening service is a vesper service at five o'clock. During this period the young people meet at 6:15 and after their meeting they enjoy supper and a social hour together. Some of the best meetings are held during this period.

LENTEN PROGRAM AT MT. OLIVET.

The young people of Mt. Olivet (G) in the Valley of Virginia are handicapped due to the fact that they have no minister to help them. However, they are continuing to do good work in their Young People's Auxiliary.

In order to encourage their members in the use of daily devotions and with the hope that they will develop many good habits, they are having a contest during the Lenten period. The things for which members get points for their side are: Daily devotions, Sunday school attendance, church attendance, visiting the sick, helping the needy, reading THE CHRISTIAN SUN, individual worship part, leading worship, making an Easter offering to missions, attending young people's Auxiliary, and bringing a new member to their Auxiliary.

Each member has been furnished with a copy of "Lenten Devotions for Young People" to use in their daily meditations. It is being arranged so that each one will have access to THE CHRISTIAN SUN during the period of this contest.

It is sincerely to be hoped that these young people will not only want to "win," but will gain much in the way of development of their personal lives.

and be useful is tested by the way we use our time and freedom.

SCRIPTURE: I Thess. 4:11, 12.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Learning From Experience—Phil. 4: 8-12.

Tuesday—Godly Wisdom Profitable—Prov. 4: 7-13.

Wednesday—Law of the Lord Taught—Neh. 8: 5-8.

Thursday—Study for Divine Approval—II Tim. 2: 15.

Friday—Learning God's Law—Ps. 119: 97-100.

Saturday—Learning by Growing—II Peter 1: 4-8.

If you have not had a special program in your society built around Elon College, this would be a fine time to do so. We are still in the college period. Write to Elon for information about "our college." The denominational college plays an important part in the educational life of our country. Nearly 400 of approximately 650 institutions of higher learning in the United States are related to Christian communions.

Have someone speak to your society on Elon College and her place in our church life. A general discussion may follow.

Jesus "increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." Think of the opportunities which we have to keep up-to-date on what is happening in any field in which we have an interest. Lectures, forums, extension courses, night schools, public libraries, etc. Our churches may foster learning by means of leadership education, courses, discussion groups, reading circles, study groups, and so on.

Growing in Knowledge (short talks):

1. Of God in Our Christian Experiences.

2. Of the Church's Program and Mission.

3. Of Human Nature.

4. Of Human Needs and How These May Be Met.

For Discussion—

On a blackboard draw the trunk and branches of a tree to symbolize Christian growth. Draw the roots as they are discussed. Examples: the roots of worship, of private devotions, of Christian service, of church loyalty. Consider as many as possible.

Next draw the fruits on the tree. Examples: poise, self-control, spiritual enthusiasm, unselfishness, broad-mindedness, compassion for needy, etc.

Let someone give illustrations of the places where our desire to grow

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

GOOD CITIZENS AND GOOD NEIGHBORS.

LESSON VII—FEBRUARY 18, 1940.

LESSON: Matthew 22:15-23, 39.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Rom. 13:8-14.

GOLDEN TEXT: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Matt. 22:39.

We are thinking today about good citizens and good neighbors. In a way the terms are synonymous. The man who is truly a good citizen ought also to be a good neighbor. And a man who is a good neighbor ideally ought to be a good citizen. This, of course, is not always the case, for a man might be on the best of terms with his neighbor and still lack the essential qualities of true patriotism. And a man might have at least a kind of patriotism and boast himself on his true Americanism and still be not only un-American but un-Christian in his attitude toward, and his relationship with, his neighbors. Ideally, however, a man who is a good citizen of the Kingdom of God will be a good citizen of his country, and a good representative of his countrymen.

Politics Make Strange Bedfellows.

"Then went the Pharisees. . . . And they sent to him their disciples, with the Herodians. . . ." Here is a strange combination. These two groups had practically nothing in common; in fact, they were diverse in their religious outlooks and their political partisanship. But they found one common meeting ground—their fear and hatred of Jesus. Each of them saw in Him the enemy of special privilege, of religious bigotry, of political prestige. They pooled their common resources in an effort to get rid of him. What strange bedfellows there are in the organized evil which is opposed to Jesus and his way of life. Our modern world offers some strange combinations of peoples and parties who forget all of their own differences and their diversities in their opposition to the rule of the spirit of Christ in their personal, and political, and social lives.

To Caesar, Or to God.

"Tell us therefore, What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar, or not?" In putting the question thus, these Pharisees and Herodians, to use a current slang expression, "put Jesus on the spot." For many years the Jews had paid tribute to hated foreign governments, and now they were paying tribute to Rome. Suppose Jesus had said that it was lawful to give tribute unto Caesar! Thus he would have branded himself as a traitor to his country, he would have been lining up with those who were oppressing his people and exacting taxes from them. He would have been enlisting with the Roman government in opposition to the rule of God. Suppose, on the other hand, he had said that it was not lawful to give tribute to Caesar, that Jews were under no obligation to pay taxes to Rome! At once he would have been accused of treason to the Roman government, and forthwith they would have resorted to stern measures to put out of the way this former of revolutionary principles. Indeed, as one looks at this question, it is difficult to conceive of a more subtle, or a more dangerous dilemma into which they could have put Jesus. One can almost see these slick hypocrites rubbing their hands in glee; certainly they were rejoicing within as they put the question to him.

With uncanny insight Jesus saw at once through their hypocrisy and their wickedness. "Why make ye trial of me, ye hypocrites?" said the Master. Then he asked them to show him a piece of money. On coins that were then in circulation there was stamped the image of the emperor himself and a superscription with his name. Jesus held this coin up to them, perhaps in a disarming way, "Whose is this image and superscription?" They could do nothing but reply that it was Caesar's image and superscription.

To Caesar and to God.

"Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's," said Jesus. Your life under the Roman government, which has established peace throughout the world, which has built you good roads, which has given you able and efficient administration of civic affairs, which offers you protection, which gives you a large measure of religious liberty, which has conferred upon you incalculable privileges—therefore you are under obligation to it. When you pay taxes, you are simply paying for benefits already conferred upon you. A man indeed would be an ingrate who was not willing to pay for the privileges of government. Jesus came to establish a kingdom of God, and his passion was that men should become citizens of that kingdom. Because a man was a citizen of the kingdom of God did not mean that he did not have certain obligations and responsibilities toward the state. If Jesus were here today in the flesh he would say "Render unto Caesar, that is, unto the state the things that are due the state."

"And unto God the things that are God's." When the Pharisees and Herodians put the question they made it a matter of "either, or." When Jesus answered the question he made it a case of "both, and." To be sure, there were obligations which a man owed to the state. But there were obligations beyond those which a man owed to the state; there were obligations which a man owed to God. Now, as then, Jesus would insist that the state is not supreme in the life of man. There are moral and spiritual realms over which the state has no sovereignty. And although a man should render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, he must also render unto God the things that are God's. In this dramatic way Jesus establishes once and for all the practical and pressing problem of the relationship between church and state. As has been suggested, he says that there need be no conflict between the two. A man should render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and he should render unto God the things that are God's.

"And when they heard it they marvelled and left him, and went away." This man Jesus—what discerning insight and what amazing spiritual wisdom he had. Again and again we find those who were far more technically trained and who professed to have superior wisdom, but they were dumbfounded by the answers of Jesus. We call him Master, and we do well, for such he is.

"Which Is the Great Commandment in the Law."

After the Sadducees had had their fling at Jesus with a vexing question, one of the Pharisees thought that he would try to catch him in a trap. Or perhaps to be a little more fair with the man, we will say that he asked an honest question, "Teacher, which is the great commandment in the law?" That looks like a rather harmless question, but it was packed with dynamite. The Jews were people of the law. Their whole life was filled up with, and governed by, the law. They looked upon that law as sacredly binding. Even though they may have recognized differences in the ethical content of some of these laws, none of them would hardly dared to single out from all of their laws the one which was first, or most important. Thus

MONDAY.

LENT'S FIRST REALITY.

"God, be merciful to me a sinner."
—Luke 18:13.

In these days the idea of penitence invokes a sneer from many. It has been described as "psychologically bad, morally depressing and spiritually fruitless." Were the spiritual realm not to be thought, of this way of thinking is all wrong for progress and improvement in anything that is built on sorrow for error and a correction of that error for the future. In our relation to God, as the creed puts it, "We have erred and strayed" from His way. "We have followed the devices and desires of our own hearts. We have offended against Thy holy laws. We have left undone the things we ought to have done; and we have done the things we ought not to have done." Only when realizing that we are such sinners can we find the Throne of Grace and Mercy. And only God can forgive. Only by such a process may we rise from what we are to a godly, righteous and useful life.

Prayer—O Lord, have mercy upon us miserable offenders. Spare those who confess their faults. Restore those who are penitent, according to Thy promises in Jesus Christ.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"WHAT PRICE GLORY?"

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."—Romans 12:1.

There is one outstanding symbol of our duty—Simon, the man who bore the Cross for Christ and with Christ up Golgotha to the sacrifice. "For Him and with Him." So must we go.

Is there any other way? We cannot expect to be musicians without practicing. We do not expect to succeed in business without self-devotion to work. And yet some expect to be Christians without doing anything about it. What price are you paying for the right to be called a Christian

That price is devotion to others—utter unselfishness. The poet put it so well:

The food I share with others
Is the food that nourishes me.
The strength I spend for others
Is the strength that I retain.
The freedom that I seek for others
Makes me forever free.
The pain that I ease in others
Shall take away my pain.
The load that I lift for others
Makes my load disappear.
The good that I see in others
My greatest good shall be.
The love that I feel for others
Comes back my life to cheer
The path that I walk with others
Is the path God walks with me.

WEDNESDAY.

AN EASY PRICE.

"Whatever good that each one doeth, the same shall be received again from the Lord."—Eph. 6:8.

A member of his congregation told the preacher one day of the delight and gratitude which she had witnessed in a poor girl to whom in passing he had given a kind look on going out of church one Sunday.

How easy it is to love! How cheaply happiness is given! How simply easy to rise to the work of an angel! A mere look of sympathy gives sunshine. A mere word of encouragement lightens a loaded heart.

Prayer—O Lord, keep ever before our eyes the splendor of the courage of our Savior. Help us to obey His voice ever speaking to us. Amen.

THURSDAY.

NOT EASY.

"O ye of little faith."—Matt. 6:30.

And yet, it is not easy. Life has so many complications of ill health, annoying relations, failure and misfortunes. There are things that take the smile away.

Yes, but when the disciples got that way Jesus rebuked them for their little faith. If one is swept on by the tides of life and forgets God, is it not because he has let go his faith? We must believe in and hold to the fact of what God has done in us as well as what He has done for us.

The power of Christian living is in the fact that Jesus lives in us. This fact transcends the limitations of time and space and it will continue to transcend until He hath made the earth His footstool.

Prayer—Our Father, when truth stands before us let us claim it, no matter at what cost. Let us not in weakness surrender our Lord to those who would destroy him. Amen.

FRIDAY.

PRESUMING VIPERS.

"O generation of vipers."—Matt. 3:7.

"Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."—Lk. 23:24.

Jesus praying for His crucifiers, begging forgiveness for them. How generous! What does it mean?

It does not mean that sin is easily disposed of. It does not mean that we can go our own way, following the devices and desires of our own hearts, and when the end comes, cry, "Father, forgive me," expecting Him to say, "Yes, my child, you did not know."

Forgiveness is for those who do not know, and for those who truly repent. For those who know and still insist on sinning He has another word: "Ye serpents, ye vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?" We can trust divine mercy, but we cannot presume upon it.

Prayer—Our Father, give us unfaltering trust in Thy mercy. Forbid that we shall ever presume upon it as

OUR PREACHER FOR THIS WEEK IS
REV. JOHN H. KNIGHT,
NORFOLK, VA.

RELiance UPON THE ETERNAL.

"Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils."—Isaiah 2: 22.

Man in his ignorance and folly thinks that he is his own master. Man thinks that he can improve his own condition, save himself by his own power, lift himself by his own will, and reach heaven by his own effort. This is characteristic of the spirit of the time, but it is also a very ancient delusion. It goes back to the Garden of Eden when Adam accepted as true the statements of the Evil One.

Satan, who is described by St. Paul as "a liar from the beginning," substituted two lies for what God had said. Satan's falsehoods are, "Ye shall be as God" (Gen. 3: 5) and "Ye shall not surely die" (Gen. 3: 4).

Our first parents believed these falsehoods of the Devil, and from that day until this the human race has labored under the mistaken idea that man through his own inherent ability and goodness can be saved.

William Henley's noted poem "Invictus" shows us how man loves to depend upon himself and boast of his own accomplishments:

Out of the night that covers me
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.

In the fell clutch of circumstance
I have not winced nor cried aloud;
Under the bludgeoning of chance
My head is bloody, but unbowed.

Beyond this place of wrath and tears
Looms but the horror of the shade;
And yet the menace of the years
Finds, and shall find, me unafraid.

It matters not now strait the gate,
How charged with punishment the scroll;
I am the master of my fate;
I am the captain of my soul.

But what is a Christian? Essentially a Christian is one who has seen his own impotency, his own insufficiency, his own ignorance and weakness. Convicted of his own inability to do anything that is pleasing in the sight of God, he therefore casts himself unreservedly upon the mercy of God. In the midst of his extreme need, he recognizes that God has made provision in the Gospel for his cleansing and pardon. He ceases to trust himself and begins to trust the "Wholly Other." He sees that man has but his "little day," and that his "breath is in his nostrils," and soon vanishes away unless he harbors a hope in the Eternal One.

This is what accepting Christ means. It is a turning away from all self-reliance and the identification of one's self with the "rock that is higher than I." Jesus Christ is the Eternal Son of God and One with the Father. Man "fades away suddenly like the grass," but "the Lord God endureth forever." What a beautiful thing it is that He invites us to come to Him, with all our weakness, imperfections and sins.

The man who receives Christ as his Savior finds that his fate is not longer uncertain, but that he now has a real Master of his life. He now has a Captain who is abundantly able to guide the imperilled soul into a safe haven of rest. Life now has direction, each day has its purpose and each hour brings victorious and meaningful living with the Captain of the soul in control.

With the arrogant and egotistical self-reliance of Henley's "Invictus" contrast the trustful spirit of commitment found in Dorothea Day's beautiful poem, "My Captain," which exalts not man but God, not the creature but the Creator:

Out of the light that dazzles me,
Bright as the sun from pole to pole,
I thank the God I know to be
For Christ the conqueror of my soul.

Since His the sway of circumstance
I would not wince nor cry aloud.
Under that rule which men call chance
My head with joy is humbly bowed.

Beyond this place of sin and tears—
That life with Him! And His the aid,
That, spite that menace of the years,
Keeps, and shall keep me unafraid.

I have no fear though strait the gate,
He cleared from punishments the scroll;
Christ is the Master of my fate,
Christ is the Captain of my soul.

a free ticket to glory. Hear our prayer, O Lord God, for Jesus' Sake. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE NEW LIFE.

"If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."—John 1: 9.

Genuine repentance brings forgiveness. Forgiveness brings a new life.

The adulterous woman was forgiven, but she was told to sin no more. Zaccheus was forgiven, but he was to rob and oppress his fellowmen no more. Paul was forgiven, but he was to work for Christ and not against Him. The rich young ruler was not forgiven, because he refused to follow Christ.

Forgiveness must always eventuate in moral improvement, in deepened faith and in newness of life. If it does not do that, it is a delusion and a snare..

Prayer—Search me, O God, and know me. Help me to know myself. May we really desire forgiveness and honestly fulfill all requirements for it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"A COMMON MISTAKE."

"Everyone that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted."—Lk. 18: 14.

A. J. Gordan is quoted as saying of himself, "I used to pray, 'Lord, have compassion on the hearts and lives of men.' At last the Lord said to me, 'I have had compassion on them. It is now for you to have compassion on them. I gave my heart. Now you give yours.'"

It may be easy for us to become conceited in our salvation—so good that we may have little tolerance for the failures of others. This spirit was condemned by Christ, who pointed out the man who thanked God that he was not as other men.

Prayer—Our Father, whose love passeth knowledge, open our eyes to an understanding of ourselves, that we may not think more highly of ourselves than we ought to think, but soberly, humbly, and being cleansed by Thy Spirit, live for others. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The big snow has melted away. But the deep mud it left in its wake is about as hard to get through as the snow. The country roads have been so muddy that the school busses have not been able to run for a week. The school closed and the children have been home for another week. We hope the weather will be better soon and that we will get back to normal again.

The Christian Orphanage has been bothered quite a lot with large rats (wharf rats), some larger than squirrels. The community seems to be infested with them and we have not been able to find a "Pied Piper" who can entice them away. We have offered the children five cents for each large rat they kill, and one penny each for mice. We were right much amused a few days ago. Two little boys who have been working together came to the office with a large mouse or small rat, and asked what class I would put it in. We told the boy it would have to go in the mouse. He turned to the other boy and said, "We will feed this one some more." Rats certainly are a pest. They destroy so much grain and other feed.

The bad weather has greatly hindered our farm work. In fact we have not been able to do any outside work since Christmas. It is time to plant garden peas, and several other things in the garden; but we will have to be patient as we have no control of the weather.

When it clears up and the days get warm and the ground in good condition, it is a pleasure to "make garden" and get seed in the ground to grow something for nearly one hundred children to eat. The vegetable crop means a lot to an institution of this kind. We generally have all we can use from the time the early vegetables come in until frost, if we have seasons.

Four of our children who have been out for several years came to visit the Orphanage last Sunday. They are all doing well and we feel proud of them. We are always glad to have our children visit us.

again did they put Jesus "on the spot." Without a moment's hesitation, however, Jesus answered, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the great and first commandment." God must be put first, and not only must he be put first, but he must be loved first. It is significant to note that Jesus says we are to love God not only with our heart, but with our mind—the Christian religion places no premium upon ignorance.

A second law, like unto the first is this, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Love to man is second unto God only in position, not in inner quality. To love one's neighbor as one's self is of the same sort as to love God. Here again it is to be noted that Jesus does not say that it is wrong for a man to love himself. In fact, no man thought more highly of himself than did Jesus. But Jesus says that a man is to love himself last.

"On these two commandments the whole law hangeth, and the prophets." All of the Old Testament leg-

Marriages

WILLIAMS - CHANDLER.

At 4: 30 P. M. on December 16, 1939, in the Baptist Church of Clarksville, Va., the marriage of Mr. Randolph Williams and Miss Mildred Chandler was solemnized. Thirty-four years ago the write united in marriage the parents of the bride. Mr. Williams is a popular young man at the head of the Unemployment Bureau of Mecklenburg County. Mrs. Williams is the daughter of Graham Chandler, long a leader in the affairs of Mecklenburg County, and Belle Yancey Chandler. For several years she has been a popular teacher in the Buffalo Junction School. Following the marriage the happy couple left by automobile to visit various points of interest. Their home will be at Buffalo Junction, Va. Their many friends wish for them a happy and useful career.

C. E. NEWMAN.

FORLINES - DANIEL.

On Saturday afternoon, December 23, 1939, in Clarksville, Va., Erthum Hardy Forlines and Louise Bet Daniel were united in marriage by their pastor, the writer. Mr. Forlines is an excellent Christian young man. He is the grandson of H. J. U. Forlines, a deacon in Union Church. Young Mr. Forlines is a graduate of Virgilina High School and is engaged in farming with his grandfather. The bride is the daughter of Bro. Alfred Daniel of Hebron Church. She has been active in Sunday school and Christian Endeavor work for a number of years. Their home will be Route 3, Virgilina, Va.

C. E. NEWMAN.

MORRIS - RICE.

On October 22, 1939, Virgilina, Va., R. F. D. 3, Mr. James Thomas Morris and Miss Bertha Irene Rice were married by the writer. Mr. Morris is an industrious young farmer and his bride a popular young lady. Each are members of Union Christian Church and were educated in the Virgilina schools. They will make their home near Virgilina. Their many friends wish for them useful and happy lives.

C. E. NEWMAN.

BROCKENBOROUGH - BROTHERS.

On Saturday evening, January 27, at eight o'clock, Miss Jacqueline Brothers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Riddick Brothers, 115 Franklin Street, Suffolk, Va., became the bride of Mr. Samuel Richardson Brockenborough, Jr., 217 Pinner Street, Suffolk, Va. The vows were spoken before an improvised altar in the home of the bride's parents. Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Brothers entertained with a reception. The entire occasion was one of the most beautiful and impressive of the season. Upon the return from their bridal tour, Mr. and Mrs. Brockenborough will make their home in Suffolk.

isolation; in fact, all of the laws of God have as their basis these two primary or fundamental laws, love to God, and love to one's fellowman. This principle is the unifying principle which runs through the divine commandments. All of this is true because God himself is love. He who does not love cannot know God, for God is love. And because God so loves us, we ought to love one another.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

LOWELL (ALA.) CHURCH NEWS.

Our church is moving slowly along. We plan to pay our pastor, Rev. H. M. Gray, $10.00 per week. We are using the envelope system and think it grand. We have an active and interesting Sunday school, with Mr. Howard Johnson as superintendent, and a real good Christian Endeavor with Miss Wilene Keeble as president. New interest is being manifested among the young people. We have mid-week prayer services regularly. There is a fine spirit of cooperation here among the churches—Baptist, Methodist, Church of God, and ours. We visit each other in our prayer services. We had all the churches with us two weeks ago. Next week we are going to visit the Baptists and hope to have a great service.

Now a word about our Woman's Missionary Society. We have regular meetings twice each month. These are not so well attended, especially since we have had so much snow and ice. Despite that we sponsored a Dollar Missionary Tree on January 28 and the tree had twelve one-dollar bills pinned on it. We invited Prof. W. C. Edge of Wadley, Ala., to speak to us. His subject was "Stewardship and Money," and his talk was enjoyed by all. Our missionary society Goal is $25.00 and we hope to go far beyond it. Mrs. Bob Keeble, our president, is new in the work, but she is much enthused over it.

Pray for us in the work that we might be faithful.

AN INTERESTING LENTEN PROGRAM.

The First Congregational Church of Torrington, Conn., Rev. Carl R. Key, pastor, includes the following in its well-rounded Lenten program:

1. Distribution of Devotional Literature:

- A. "Thoughts of God"—children.
- B. "Lenten Devotions for Young People"—young people.
- C. "Fellowship of Prayer"—adults.

2. Pastor's Training Class for Church Membership—each Sunday at 9:00 A. M.

3. Each member asked to read Psalm 51 before coming to each Sunday morning church service in Lent, and be able to recite in unison Psalm 121.

4. Series of sermons on "The Lord's Prayer" each Sunday morning at 11:00.

5. Lenten School of Religion held on Thursday evenings in church parlors, taught by Rev. Ernest L. Lacheman, Ph. D., based on Isaiah:

- A. "What is Is a Prophet?"
- B. "The Messianic Hope of Israel."
- C. "Israel in Isaiah's Time."
- D. "Isaiah As a Statesman."
- E. "Isaiah As a Prophet."
- F. "Isaiah's Message for Today."

6. Observance of Holy Week:

In Memoriam

JONES.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom and love, has called our beloved former treasurer and fellow-member, Mr. Brock D. Jones, to his eternal home, and,

Whereas, our faithful co-worker distinguished himself and honored the Christian Missionary Association by his consistent life, his unflinching loyalty to the cause of Christ and his thirty years of service as treasurer, and,

Whereas, the Christian Missionary Association desires to record some expression of appreciation of his useful life,

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of God, who, in His wise Providence, doeth all things well, giving thanks to Him for such a consistent, faithful and useful life, devoted to the church and consecrated to the cause of Christ.

2. That we express our deepest sympathy to his wife and family, assuring them of our mutual sorrow in this sad bereavement, and commend to them His sustaining grace.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one entered upon the records of the Association and one sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Done by order of the Christian Missionary Association in regular session December 5, 1939.

KLAGES.

Mrs. Georgianna Klages, 84, widow of G. A. Klages, died at her home, 424 York Street, Suffolk, Va., January 29, 1940. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. O. T. Byrd, with whom she made her home, and Mrs. James T. Waterman, Richmond; three sons, W. A. Stringfield of Philadelphia, Richard and Fred W. Klages of Suffolk; a brother, James P. Willis of Suffolk; 12 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. The funeral was conducted Wednesday, January 31, by Rev. R. E. Brittle, assisted by Dr. A. L. Franklin of the Main Street Methodist Church. May God bless and keep her loved ones left behind.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Pastor.

GERRINGER.

Mr. Lyman David Gerringer was born in Alamance County, N. C., on January 22, 1890, and departed this life January 8, 1940.

In 1912 he was married to Miss Fannie Ross. To this union eight children were born. The bereaved include a devoted wife; three daughters, Mrs. Ethel Cable, Mrs. Eva Wyrick, and Ruth Gerringer; three sons, Boyd, Everette and L. D., Jr.; one brother, Hurley Gerringer; two sisters, Mrs. Lelia Crouse, Mrs. Alma Hensley; two half-sisters, Mrs. Myrtle Moore, Mrs. Ruby Rudd; four half-brothers, W. L., J. F., P. B., and G. M. Gerringer; three grandchildren, a number of nieces and nephews, and a host of friends and neighbors.

Brother Gerringer joined Shallow Ford Church when young, and has served his church as superintendent of the Sunday school; delegate to Conference several times; and first president of the Memorial Association.

Funeral services were conducted at the home church by the pastor assisted by Rev. G. C. Crutchfield. May the Lord richly comfort the bereaved.

Soldier and statesman, rarest unison;
High-poised example of great duties done
Simply as breathing, a world's honors worn
As life's indifferent gifts to all men born;
Dumb for himself, unless it were to God,
But for his barefoot soldier eloquent,
Tramping the snow to coral where they trod,
Held by his awe in hollow-eyed content;
Modest, yet firm as Nature's self; unblamed
Save by the men his nobler temper shamed;
Not honored then or now because he wooed
The popular voice, but that he still withstood;
Broadminded, higher-souled, there is but one
Who was all this and ours and all men's—Washington.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Johnson of Suffolk, Va., are spending some time in Florida.

The Woman's Mission Board of the Eastern Virginia Conference met at Suffolk Christian Church last week. Mrs. B. D. Jones is the president of this group, which is doing such a splendid work in the cause of the Kingdom.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield of Windsor, Va., was "pounded" recently by his church, Antioch. He received a wide variety and a large quantity of good things to eat, and is wearing a broad smile because of this expression of love from his people.

Each evening this week at 7:30 o'clock a religious talking picture, "The King of Kings," will be shown at the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va. There is no admission, but an offering will be received. The same picture was shown in the Suffolk Christian Church last week.

On returning home after preaching at First Christian Church Portsmouth, Va., last Sunday night, Rev. Joe A. French received a message that one of his sisters had died. He left early this Monday morning for his home in Wedowee, Ala., where he is spending the week. THE CHRISTIAN SUN extends its sympathy.

Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, Sunbury, N. C., is rejoicing in his anniversaries. On the 29th of February he will have a birthday—the first in four years! This year he celebrates his fortieth anniversary as an ordained minister, his forty-fifth wedding anniversary, and the forty-fifth anniversary of graduation from Oberlin College. Congratulations and good wishes!

Our church at Newport News, Va., had a big day last Sunday on the tenth anniversary of its new church building. Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, preached at the morning hour, a musicale was presented by members of the church at 4:00, and Rev. F. C. Lester, Promotional Secretary, was the speaker at the vesper service. In a later issue the pastor, Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, will make a report of the method and amount turned in for the building fund on this day.

With war raging on two continents furnishing every news agency with messages of horror, bloodshed and death, we are in danger of concluding that civilization is doomed. Even the pulpit will be filled with men who have no message of victory, though from death and the grave Jesus came forth with a shout of victory. This is the only gospel that will get the ear of the multitudes. Christ will surely win. Any preacher who cannot preach this gospel should stay out of his pulpit. Only this unshakable confidence will cheer the doubting and suffering who are eager to hear a message of light and hope and victory.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

[The following paper was presented to the Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association, which met at Waverly on December 5, 1939.—Editor.]

The First Congregational-Christian Church of Newport News, Va., in appreciation of the constant and generous aid received from the Christian Missionary Association through the years of the history of the church, offers the following summary and resolutions:

The Newport News Church was organized in North Newport News in 1901, and was a project of the Christian Missionary Association. After some effort there, it was found that a majority of those interested lived in East Newport News. A Sunday school was organized, and by the help of Col. J. E. West a minister, Dr. N. G. Newman, was secured and his salary paid by Col. West. After the lapse of some three or four years the church in North End was closed and the membership transferred to East End. When the work was combined it was no longer necessary for Col. West to continue his personal assistance, but the church owes much to him. The Christian Missionary Association did continue its assistance, and in every sense of the word the Newport News Church is the child of the Christian Missionary Association.

The First Congregational-Christian Church of Newport News now has a membership of 387 built unto a well-rounded organization that is working well. The church and equipment is valued at $30,000.00, with an indebtedness on the new church building of $1,600.00. The present church is the third building to house the organization.

Since the time has come when the church can carry on its work and liquidate its indebtedness without the help of the C. M. A., and since other churches in the Conference are under heavy burdens, we relinquish our claim for aid and

RESOLVED:

1. That we extend a rising vote of thanks to the C. M. A. and pledge ourselves to an earnest effort to prove worthy of the confidence which has been expressed through their gifts of more than $10,000.00 to our church. That we give a like expression of gratitude to Col. J. E. West.

2. That, in order that other churches may be sustained as we have been, we endeavor to maintain a large number of memberships in our church, and in that manner show, in some degree, our deep appreciation for the most generous and loyal support of the Christian Missionary Association.

BETHEL (VALLEY) CHRISTMAS SERVICE.

The Bethel Christian Church held its annual Christmas service on Monday night, December 25, with a large number in attendance. The program, consisting primarily of recitations and dialogues by the children, was successfully carried out. A beautiful and impressive pantomime, "O, Little Town of Bethlehem," was presented by several young girls. This program was under the leadership of Miss Hazel Davis, superintendent of the Sunday school. She was presented with a gift from the school for her efficient work and interest taken in the advancement of our church, as she completed a year of successful service as the superintendent.

GOLDIE DOFFLEMYER.

LIVES OF GREAT MEN.

Since two of the greatest of Americans were born in February, it is well for us to remember Longfellow's lines, which say:

Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

Washington and Lincoln left their footprints so unmistakably on the soil of American thought that it is not necessary for this paper to recount the facts of their lives. It is important for readers of this paper, as well as all other persons, to recall at intervals those persons who have made our country great and to discover, if possible, the customs of life that gave them their influence.

Looking back through the years, one sees Washington molding a few separated colonies into a united country. No sacrifice seemed to be too great for him. This is probably why people still remember him and call him great. On the anniversary of his birth, this paper salutes not only George Washington, but all of those who, through the years, and even today, gladly give themselves to the cause that they believe to be right, and do it without any reservation whatsoever.

The real purpose of this item is to remind us who live today that it is still possible for human beings to make their lives sublime and to leave their footprints on the sands of time.

PREPARING FOR EASTER.

On the fourth Sunday in March, which is just a month hence, people around the world will be commemorating the death and resurrection of Jesus the Savior. There are three emphases which it would seem wise for our churches to make in preparation for Easter.

The first is a deepening of the spiritual life of the present church membership. We need to follow in the footsteps of Jesus as he goes from Galilee to Jerusalem, out to Golgotha, and then to the beautiful garden of the Resurrection. Every member of every church should receive a new assurance of the realities in Christian experience, and should feel an upsurge of new life within their hearts as they study again the sacred story of our blessed Christ. Pastors and church leaders should plan definitely for everyone to get this new thrill of the Christian experience.

In the second place, we should get new members for our churches. As the church feels the pulsation of new life there should be brought into the church those who are receiving for the first time this new birth. There certainly can be no better time to present at the altar of the church new-born souls than on the day we keep in memory of the resurrection of Jesus of Nazareth.

The third emphasis is on Missions. With our own personal development comes a growing desire to share with others around the world the redeeming grace of our Christ. It is our custom in the Southern Convention to make a special offering at Easter for the spread of the gospel. It is important that every person know something of what is going on in our mission fields, and of the tremendous needs, so that each member of the church can feel that his contribution will be used to relieve human suffering, tell the story of Jesus, and establish the Church of Christ around the world.

Helpful material on either phase of this work can be secured from the church office at Elon College, N. C. Every church that really works at these three important matters will be enriched and strengthened by so doing.

GOLDEN OR DARK?

Much has been said during recent months concerning the "golden" anniversary of Elon College. By this has been meant the fiftieth anniversary, which according to custom is called a golden anniversary.

This year of 1940 could really be a "golden" anniversary for our college. It will be if members of the church, members of the alumni association, and friends of the college clear it of indebtedness and send it forth on a new era unhampered by its present bondage. It will be a golden anniversary if those who love it share in its celebration and come to its commencement with rejoicing.

If, on the contrary, leaders of the church and members of the alumni association fail to give the college the necessary release from bondage, this will be a dark anniversary, rather than a golden one. There is no prophecy in this article. We are simply calling attention to the possibilities and hoping that in very truth our college will celebrate a golden anniversary—an anniversary that is made beautiful by renewed friendship, expressed loyalties, and liberal gifts.

MISSIONARY HERALD QUOTES US.

Readers of the "Missionary Herald at Home and Abroad" find in the December number an editorial from "The Christian Sun." It is not often that an area paper like this gets quoted in a denominational organ. "The Christian Sun" is pleased to have this signal honor. We are also glad to say that the "Missionary Herald" is a fine magazine. The twenty-five cents per year subscription price does not indicate the value of the magazine, and every church home should receive the "Herald" regularly.

WHAT DO LAYMEN THINK OF THIS?

"No minister has a right to accept a preaching job that will not pay him a living salary." So said a good deacon of a good church recently. His name would be given but for the reason somebody might think of the man rather than the idea. Do other laymen feel the same way? What do the ministers think? Has a man a right to starve himself, family, and church?

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The recent session of the American Youth Congress, held in Washington, D. C., was historical and epoch-making. Newspaper reports of the proceedings indicated an enthusiastic reception of C. I. O. Leader, John L. Lewis. The action and attitude of some of the delegates clearly substantiated the report that Communistic influences are at work among the young people of America, in national assemblies as well as local groups. This does not mean that the young people of America are Communistic in mind and purpose, but it does suggest that Communistic leaders are seeking to sow the seeds of that political doctrine in the minds of young people.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt spoke to the Congress in plain words concerning Communism. His counsel was wise, safe and sound. As President of the United States he is in a position to know, at first hand, the danger of this Russian political system. It is not the name that creates fear in the minds of people who are able to interpret the trends and implications of revolutionary methods and movements. The blending of truth and error, the concealment of subversive plans, the inter-weaving of economic fallacies with semi-religious sentiments—all these endanger the traditions and fundamentals of American freedom and personal liberty.

Some of these Communistic doctrines have been persistently introduced into the Youth Organizations of some of the Protestant Denominations. The label was removed and "The teachings of Jesus Christ" was substituted as a capsule to disguise the nature of the prescription. Young people have been the innocent victims of designing political schemers, who would destroy religious liberty for less than thirty pieces of silver. Young people may beware of religious leaders who invariably seek to inject partisan politics into services of worship and to interpret religion in terms of economic and social propaganda, with pious platitudes and hypocritical insinuations. Too often they are wolves in sheep's clothing and their bark and bite are both dangerous and deadly.

The young people of today will be the leaders in church and in state in the next generation. The school room and the church service, in teaching and in worship, should be conducive to clear thinking and clean living. They want jobs. But they also want to be employers who create jobs. They want work. But they should also want to be in a position to give other people work, when they reach manhood and womanhood. They want to be dependent. But they should also seek to be free and independent. They want to receive a pay envelope at the end of the week. But they should remember that it is possible for them, in the land of the free, to pass out pay envelopes to others.

And as long as American youth receive instruction free from the taint of bigotry and selfish exploitation, guided by a reverent devotion to the plan teachings of Jesus Christ, undergirded and sustained by humility and faith in God, so long will Christianity be the capstone of American institutions and the bulwark of our civilization.

THE BOARD MEETS.

The Board of Trustees of Elon College meets twice annually, a mid-year meeting in February, and the annual meeting in May. The mid-year meeting this year was in session Tuesday of last week. The attendance was not large but it was a very fine session. The mid-year meeting is largely a business meeting. Reports reflecting the condition of the college are given by official representatives of the faculty. The faculty for the ensuing year is usually determined with few exceptions. The entire budget is outlined and adopted.

This registrar's report showed that the enrollment for this year, 1939-40, totals 625 regularly matriculated students. This is the same number as reported last year, the difference being that last year's report included thirty-two enrolled in an extension class in Burlington. The extension class is not conducted this year. This means an increase of thirty-two students over last year. The ones of you who know something about the accommodations for students at Elon will realize that we are somewhat crowded, but we do have an excellent school. In our enrollment this year, eighteen states are represented. Four hundred and fifty-three are from North Carolina, seventy-two from Virginia, twenty-six from Pennsylvania, eighteen from New Jersey, and the remainder distributed over the other states and Puerto Rico. The report also reveals that one hundred and thirty-seven of our present student body are from the Congregational-Christian Church, one hundred and thirty from the Methodist, ninety-two from the Baptist, thirty-seven from the Presbyterian, and so on. There are sixteen different religious bodies represented. Including our summer session, we have a total enrollment of seven hundred and fifty-seven.

The dean's report presented the college in a very satisfactory light and listed new courses in aeronautics, church music, business organization and practice, economic resources and industry, home-planning and furnishing, and philosophy of science.

The business manager's report reveals a very satisfactory financial condition indicating gains along practically all lines. It calls attention, however, to the fact that the college is not receiving the amount expected from the church and states that if the debt could be paid, which would release the income from endowment funds now going to our creditors, and if the full amount apportioned to the churches could be received, the college would then be in excellent financial condition and could continue its program without embarrassment.

The president's report called special attention to the Golden Anniversary campaign and the imperative necessity of providing for the present indebtedness against the college in cash and subscriptions that we may not fall short of the goal of this major undertaking for our college.

Attention was also called to the fact that during this fifty years of service, both the college and the church have failed to make any provision whatsoever against the retirement of faculty members from active service. The president urged that steps be taken even at this late date to provide for such eventualities. It was recommended that a faculty foundation be formed to which individual faculty members might contribute monthly, the college contribute a like amount, and the church and friends be given the opportunity to add to the contributions of faculty and college that a sufficient fund might be accumulated at an early date, the income from which to be used to provide the necessities of life for individual faculty members retiring from active service on account of age, infirmity, or other reasons. The recommendation was passed to a special committee for thorough study and to report at the annual meeting in May.

Provision was made for an early meeting of the anniversary committees representing the Board of Trustees and the Alumni Association for the Golden Anniversary Campaign. These committees, together with a committee representing the ministers of the Convention, met at the college Tuesday, February 20, at 2:00 P. M. Reports regarding this meeting will be made later.

Elon College is grateful for every word of encouragement and every dollar of assistance. Now is the time for the friends of the college to unite their efforts and contributions that her burdens, so heavy and so long borne, may be renewed. The approaching commencement culminating the observance of the Golden Anniversary of the college should be the most enjoyable and the most inspiring commencement since the first commencement was held. Begin now to plan to be present.

L. E. SMITH.

The American Churches and the International Situation

We, the undersigned members of the Christian Church in America, desire to state our common convictions on the bearing of the Christian faith upon the present international conflicts and the relation of the United States to them. We are moved to do this partly because of our dissent from a position advanced by many who are regarded as spokesmen for the churches, which seems to us to be due to intellectual confusion and to tend toward moral callousness and national self-righteousness and irresponsibility.

That position is that, since all war is un-Christian, Christians in neutral nations should not discriminate between belligerents. It implies that Christian citizens of nations at war are disloyal to their Christian faith if they give support to their governments or armies. It ignores the reality of relative but important distinctions between the contending parties.

In contrast we offer the following interpretation:

1. For the ultimate causes of the conflicts in both Europe and Asia all nations, including our own, must share responsibility.

2. This admission of common guilt as regards the origins of the present wars must not blind us to the incalculable issues at stake in the outcome of these wars. A distinction must always be made between moral accountability for conditions leading to war and moral obligation to deal with those conditions and their threatening consequences. In the present conflicts all nations are moved largely by national self-interest. But the fact that all are involved in a sinful situation, and that human justice is never perfect or human motives wholly pure can not excuse Christians from seeking such justice as is attainable. Discriminate moral judgments are of the essence of the Christian's task in life.

More particularly, an interpretation of the present conflicts as "merely a clash of rival imperialisms" can spring only from ignorance or moral confusion. The basic distinction between civilizations in which justice and freedom are still realities and those in which they have been displaced by ruthless tyranny cannot be ignored. To equate what the Soviet Republics are doing in Finland and what the Finns are doing to defend their liberties is to deny all ethical discriminations for the sake of a purely abstract perfection. To suggest that nothing of consequence is at stake in the success of Japanese, German, and Russian designs on China, Czechoslovakia, Poland, and the Baltic States, or in the successful resistance of these latter nations, is to be guilty of moral irresponsibility. A victory for the Allied powers or for China would not of itself assure the establishment of justice and peace, but the victory of Germany, Russia, or Japan would inevitably preclude the justice, freedom of thought and worship, and international cooperation which are fundamental to a Christian world order. Therefore, Christians in neutral countries cannot evade the ethical issues involved and the consequent claim upon their sympathy and support.

3. Christians throughout the world are agreed that "War is a particular demonstration of the power of sin in the world. . . . No justification of war must be allowed to conceal or minimize this fact." (Oxford Conference Report.) Christians are divided as to the response which individuals and churches should make when their nation becomes involved in armed conflict. In every recent world conference of the churches two alternative positions have been recognized as equally conscientious, honorable, and worthy of respect. Some Christians holding that the use of violence in international relations is always sinful, declare that they can have no part in it. We respect the sincerity of those who hold this view and are ready to defend them against forcible constraint or persecution. Others, equally honest and peace-loving, believe that when Christians are convinced that their nation is engaged in resistance to aggression or in defense of international order they must obey its call. Throughout Christian history the latter has been the view of the majority in the churches. We believe it is so today.

It is mistaken to suggest that Christians have no alternative between total abstention from war on the one hand and the proclamation of a "holy war" on the other. We record with gratitude that many Christians in warring nations are facing this issue with a high sense of responsibility, are keeping alive the reality of a Christian community transcending all divisions, are cultivating contrition for the common guilt in which all nations share, are even now preparing for just and lasting peace, and are exalting, in the very midst of terrific conflict, the Christ whom no nation can claim as peculiarly its own.

4. The churches in the United States are under obligation to lead their nation to assume a responsible relationship to the present conflicts.

This must begin with recognizing that the freedom from war which the United States now enjoys is not due to greater devotion to peace or superior moral excellence, but mainly to geographical security. It is no occasion for self-righteousness, but rather for thanksgiving and the assumption of a larger responsibility in the works of mercy and the building of peace.

The United States cannot hope to have a part in determining a just and stable peace unless, during the conflicts, she proves herself alive to the deeper issues involved, sympathetic with the warring peoples in their bitter struggles, and prepared to make her contribution to a better future. That contribution cannot be merely in terms of moral preachments and lofty ideals for the conduct of other nations, but rather of responsible national participation in the long and painful task of peaceful reconstruction.

The best elements in all belligerent nations are hoping and praying for a new international order. That order must promise to every people, aggressors no less than victims of aggression, justice, opportunity, and the realization of legitimate aspirations. No lesson from recent history is clearer than that such an order is impossible unless every nation is ready to accept some

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY CLUB.

Instead of prefacing this report with an appeal from me, I am letting some speak who have sent in new pledges and donations the past week. The following are samples of some letters received:

4980 Marlborough Dr.,
San Diego, Calif.,
February 6, 1940.

Dear Smith:

According to my records and your statement we completed the payment of our pledge to the Golden Anniversary Fund with the anuary payment.

With ardent interest in its success Mrs. Rountree and I have decided to add to it $50.00, making one hundred dollars in all. We hope to complete the payment of this by commencement. You can put this in the name of Mrs. Maude F. Rountree.

Incidentally, this is 100 per cent collection for my committee, even tho I did have to make a substitution.

I regret to have to inform you that I am again confined to the hospital, this time suffering from gall stones. There is no pain comparable to it. It is suspected that this has been the cause of all my other troubles.

With best wishes for you and yours, I am,

Very truly,
H. E. ROUNTREE.

Suffolk, Virginia,
February 11, 1940.

Mr. A. T. West, Treasurer,
Golden Anniversary Fund,
Elon College, N. C.

My Dear Mr. West:

My sister, Mrs. Ben Holden of Louisburg, N. C., is joining me in giving two memberships in the Golden Anniversary Club—a memorial to our father and mother, Dr. and Mrs. William Wesley Staley. Enclosed you will find her check for $50.00. I sent check for $10.00 previously and will send the other $40.00 before commencement.

Thank you. I hope and pray that the entire sum will be raised.

Sincerely,
ANNIE STALEY CALHOUN.

1811 Claiborne Ave.,
Norfolk, Virginia,
February 13, 1940.

Dear Dr. Smith:

I am enclosing a check for $50.00 for Elon College.

You told me last year in Suffolk that I would help you out, but at the time I didn't think so. I am happy to say that I have weakened.

Dr. Hardeastle preached about Elon about two Sundays ago and pointed out why one should contribute to it, so he really has a hand in my sending this to you.

As you will note, this is not my check for the fact that I do not write checks; nevertheless, I am sending the money.

Best wishes,
JOE BRICKHOUSE,

The following pledges have been received during the past week:

	Pledged	Paid

ELON ALUMNI BANQUET.

About seventy-five alumni of Elon College gathered in the Fellowship Hall of the Suffolk Christian Church on Friday of last week for their annual banquet. The speaker for this happy occasion was Dean P. E. Lindley of High Point College. Dean Lindley is a graduate of Elon College and gave a very interesting and instructive lecture on "The Relation of Education to the Status Quo." Music was furnished by Professors Edwards and Moore of the college faculty and by Mrs. Virginia Dare Christian of Hampton, Va. Singing was led by Rev. O. D. Poythress. President L. E. Smith brought greetings from the college. Rev. Jesse H. Dollar is president of the association, and Professor G. C. Mann of Cypress Chapel, Va., was the toastmaster.

Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun serves the club as secretary. Although the club is purely for fellowship and inspiration, it did this time break away from its usual custom by making an offering for the college and thus it will be among the members of the Golden Anniversary Club.

To keep the Golden Rule we must put ourselves in other people's places, but to do that consists in and depends upon picturing ourselves in their places. If we had the imagination to do that there would be fewer families estranged by misunderstanding between the older and the younger generations, fewer bitter judgments would pass our lips, fewer racial, national and class prejudices would stain our lives.—Fosdick.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Many of you have been sending me letters and cards telling me what you thought about the Children's Page. Others who have seen me have told me that they liked it and what they liked best about it. The children in one home liked the letters best! It makes me glad to know that you do like your page and I hope that we can make it better as the weeks go by. I shall be happy to have your ideas about the page and how it might be improved at any time.

Miss Fulcher of Norfolk, Va.; Annie Byrd and her mother, from Newport News, Va.; and Allene Wyrick, from Greensboro, N. C., are on this week's letter list. Thank you! Here is what Allene writes:

"I read the Children's Page in THE CHRISTIAN SUN and enjoy it very much. I enjoy working the cross-word puzzles and hope you will continue them. I also like to read the stories. I am ten years old and in the fifth grade in school. I hope to see you sometime."

I would like to see you, too, Allene! Since we live in the same state and not so far away from each other, perhaps we shall meet some day.

Are all of you trying to keep Lent in some way as I suggested? I wish that you might have the Children's Fellowship of Prayer called "Thoughts of God." It can be secured from The Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., for only ten cents a copy. It contains many stories, Bible verses, poems, prayers, and some lovely pictures; all for children. One picture shows Jesus as a lad of twelve, standing on a hill behind the city of Nazareth. The wind is blowing his cloak and hair. His arms are outstretched and his head is thrown back as if he were thanking God for the beauty in the countryside which lies below him. Perhaps he is repeating the words of the hundred and fourth Psalm. Read this Psalm for your prayer today.

REUBEN BAR-BARUCH.

Leah watched Reuben and Samuel as they left for school. She saw both of them touch the box on the post of the door and kiss their hands. When they were gone, Leah said to her mother, "Mother, may I see the words in the little box?"

"Why, of course you may," said Mother. "It is time you were learning those words and today is a good time to begin."

Mother went to the door and got the little box that she called the Mezuzah. Then she took out a tiny roll of paper with these words on it: "Listen, O Israel; the Lord is our God, the Lord alone, so you must love the Lord your God with all your mind and all your heart and all your strength. These instructions that I am giving you today are to be fixed in your mind; you must teach them to your children, and talk about them when you are sitting at home, and when you go off on a journey, when you lie down and when you get up."

"Why do we keep these words in the little box?" asked Leah.

Mother explained: "These words are the creed of our people. God commanded that we keep them on the posts of our doors. You can read this commandment in Deuteronomy 6:9. Every good Jew can recite these words. Samuel and Reuben had to learn them before they could go to school. Since you are a girl, you will not go to school, but you must learn these things at home."

"But, what good does it do to keep them on the door?" asked Leah.

"That is to remind us of the words every time we go through the door. And to show that we do remember them and will keep them, we touch the box each time and kiss our hands. And, now, I shall help you to learn the words, if you are ready."

LENTEN SERVICES IN ASHEBORO.

For the Sundays during Lent, Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr., minister of the Congregational-Christian Church at Asheboro, N. C., will be preaching on the theme, "Sources of Power As Jesus Found Them." The sermon topics follow:

Feb. 11—"In Deeper Reverence."

Feb. 18—"Facing Life Unafraid."

Feb. 25—"Still Small Voices of Calm."

March 3—"To Will One Thing."

March 10—"The High Uses of Imagination."

Mar. 17—"Insight into Tragedy."

March 24—"The Invincible Surrender of the Human Heart."

BOARD OF PUBLICATIONS MEETS.

The Board of Publications met at THE CHRISTIAN SUN office at Elon College, N. C., on Tuesday of this week with all members present. The Board decided to call on pastors and churches to enter into a united effort to secure the quotas for the SUN subscriptions that have been apportioned by the Conferences. Date for this special service is to be March 25 to April 25. The results of this campaign will aid the Convention in deciding the future program of our church paper.

A REVIVAL NEEDED.

The Wall Street Journal of New York, a paper devoted to trade, having to do with prices of stocks, bonds and other business interests, takes time off to say in an editorial recently that what our country needs at present is a genuine revival of religion. This writer is of the opinion that the pastors and sincere laymen in our churches will certainly agree with the Journal's conclusion and will unite in declaring that there is no greater need in our country at this time than that of a personal revival of religion. One is sometimes tempted to indulge the thought that there is more said about evangelism, and less done about it, than any subject, or problem confronting the church. We agree that evangelism is needed and that the revival must come, but just how to go about the evangelism so sorely needed and to have the revival that all seem to want is a question not so easily settled and a problem not so easily solved. We hear and see in the papers about "Religious Emphasis Week," or the "Observance of the Lenten Season" and "Preparation for Easter," all of which are in line and are needed, but when all of this is over we still find ourselves in realization of the need for which the Wall Street Journal makes a plea in this unusual editorial—"A Revival of Religion."

Just how to bring about the revival and just what to do in the churches to have a genuine revival seems to be a question not so easily settled in our day. However, the church has ever and always found a way out and while its problems multiply and its difficulties increase there is yet hope because the faithful ones of the church realize that the One who founded and is building the church will not fail, and that if we seek earnestly as ministers and laymen to be co-workers with Him we shall not fail, but find a way out for the settlement of our difficulties, the solution of our problems and the progress of the church. Meanwhile, all of us who are concerned may pray daily and devoutly that our Heavenly Father for the sake of His Son will revive the church and bring about in the church a true revival of religion in and through the Christ.

Gratitude is hereby expressed for the above. We wish every contributor to know that the donations are most deeply appreciated, because they are so sorely needed to help build churches and support the gospel through which we share with others, not our individual concern and interest only, but the deep concern and everlasting interest of our Lord in whose name and for whose sake the work of missions is carried on.

Sincerely,
J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

USING OPPORTUNITIES.

At Asheville, N. C., I met a lady in the hospital—there with her first child. She was from the North, had married one of the family of some wealthy, famous tree surgeons, and had moved to the mountains of North Carolina to live. From her mansion on top of one of these picturesque mountains, she observed the poor, neglected children pass by. Her nature wouldn't allow her to sit back and see these children without making some effort to relieve their suffering. She picked up a little boy and girl in her automobile, drove them into a nearby village, and purchased each of them an outfit. This was her beginning!

There are some mountains in Carroll County, Va., just as picturesque as any in the world. These mountains, too, contain poor, neglected children. These children will not pass your door—nor will you look out your window and have compassion on them. And yet these children may be helped by you.

For Christmas you sent toys which made the boys and girls very happy. Many of you wisely sent gifts of practical value—soap, towels, tooth paste, and some clothing. One lady sent in, perhaps, a dozen suits of long winter underwear for children about six. These pieces of discarded clothing you had laundered carefully, darned, and packed so that the new owner had no difficulty in wearing them. The very spirit of Christmas prompted you to do something then. But now?

What are your missionary societies doing today? I have attended an occasional missionary society, at which the devotions were given, some study course reviewed, and then the meeting was adjourned so that the hostess could serve delicious refreshments, and all present might engage in gossip—not about missions). Do you ever feel in your society that there isn't any definite thing to do? Does it ever seem that everything has already been undertaken by some other society? Do you ever just contribute your dime and feel justified that you have made a sacrifice for missions? Have you ever given a day's energy to tacking a quilt for a gift to someone whom you will probably never see? Have you ever looked in the trunk in the attic for useable clothing which you'll never wear again? If your society might forget itself in doing for others, it might "find its life for His sake."

I'm not pleading for some lost cause. Oh! no, it's a very vital cause, but I'm not pleading at all. I'm inside the house; outside it is very cold. I cause a fire to be made, and I become comfortable. My fire cannot warm the entire world, and yet it makes one corner very cozy.

I cannot move you to action, and yet I can make a small fire at which your conscience will come to warm itself. The people of Carroll County need your help. Pray for them, and then make your prayers come true. When spring comes 'round again this year, visit our mountain churches, and see for yourself.

INTRODUCING OUR MISSIONARIES.

"In the midst of military domination and arrogance, guerrilla fighting, threatened famine, floods, and insidious persecution of several kinds, the work of the Christian Church and the Kingdom goes on and forward in North China," declares Rev. Earle H. Ballou of Peiping, the General Secretary of the Council of the North China Kung Li Hui, home on furlough from the war-torn land. During part of his furlough Mr. Ballou is to serve as Acting Secretary in the Foreign Department of the American Board. He was one of the missionaries speaking at the 130th Annual Meeting of the American Board in St. Louis.

Because his work as General Secretary of the North China Kung Li Hui (our "Church Conference" in North China) necessitates much travel and unnumbered close and constant contacts with the church workers and leaders of that area, Mr. Ballou has a clear and accurate picture of the religious and educational situation. His work is much like that of a State Superintendent in the denomination set-up in America. Mr. Ballou says:

"None of my friends are discouraged; none completely downhearted; most are optimistic and determined to carry on to a degree which looks more and more astonishing to me as I get farther away in terms of distance. I am perfectly sure that our folks out there, Chinese and missionary alike, are striving to find and do the will of God, undeterred by all the manmade obstacles that are being put in their way and that opportunities for Christian service and the responsiveness of the people who are being served, are greater than ever before in the memory of anybody on the field."

In an extraordinary way Mr. Ballou has been a part of the on-moving Christian movement in China. In February, 1937, he was lent by the Kung Li Hui to serve as a secretary under the National Christian Council of China with headquarters in Shanghai, where preparations were being pushed forward for the great International Missionary Conference scheduled to be held in Hangchow. Six months later the war struck, the conference was transferred to India and emergency needs called Mr. Ballou back to Peiping.

He was, however, sent as a delegate from China to the Madras meeting, acting as business manager for the Chinese delegation of forty-nine picked leaders. On his return to China he was impressed by the interest shown in that great missionary gathering, not alone by the church people, but by others. He was asked to speak on this significant conference before the Peiping Rotary Club and the local body of Scottish Rite Masons.

As Regional Secretary of the National Christian Council of China, Mr. Ballou has organized the North China Committee for Coordination of Emergency Relief, responsible for the distribution of over six and a half million dollars of relief money among fifty local distributing agencies, both Catholic and Protestant, secular and religious, in a wide area. He also set up the regional meeting last spring which, it is hoped, will lead to a permanent North China Regional Christian Council to serve the common Christian objectives of the Protestant Churches all through that part of the country.

As though these positions of importance were not enough, Mr. Ballou has been on the Board of Directors of the College of Chinese Studies, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Peiping American School, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Peiping Union Medical College, and a member of the Executive Committee of the China International Famine Relief Commission.

In the background of his career in China, Mr. Ballou has had educational work and much rural traveling with movies and in connection with agricultural fairs. He knew well the Five-Year Movement adopted by the Chinese churches a few years ago with its slogan, "Revive Thy Church, Lord, Beginning With Me." At times when China was doing some house cleaning, he traveled in armored launches often under a fusilade of rifle shots from bandits.

In 1936 Mr. Ballou, with another American Board worker, Harold S. Matthews, was the first Protestant missionary permitted to cross the river into the harassed territory which Nationalist soldiers had taken from the Communists in Shensi Province.

Mr. Ballou is a Vermont man, educated at Yale University and Hartford Seminary.

INTERNATIONAL SITUATION.

limitation upon unqualified national action in the interests of the welfare of all people. We believe that it is the business of the Christian church in neutral as well as in warring nations to prepare their people for the necessary sacrifices and responsibilities. For this sacrifice of a measure of national self-interest to the higher ideal of the community of nations, the American people must be prepared. Here is the special task and obligation of Christian leadership at the present time.

These obligations spring from the very heart of Christian faith. That faith commits us to the ideal of a community of nations, designed to arrest the anarchy of nations and to raise the life of all people to a new level of security, and to recognition of the claim of humanity as superior to all particular national loyalties.

A VISIT FROM DR. GRAY.

Dr. Henry David Gray, secretary of the department of young people for our denomination, is to be in North Carolina three days next week. This is an unusual opportunity for us, for it is the first time he has been in our area.

Dr. Gray is hoping to visit as many of our college students as possible while in the states. It is expected that he will arrive in Greensboro on Tuesday, February 27. That afternoon there will be an informal tea at Woman's College, University of North Carolina, where the thirty-five Congregational-Christian students and faculty members will be given an opportunity to meet Dr. Gray. Miss Frances Foster is making the arrangements for this.

On Tuesday evening at 7:45 there will be a meeting in the "hut" of the First Church in Greensboro for the young people of our churches in North Carolina. This will be our best chance to talk with Dr. Gray concerning the problems in our local young people's groups, and to learn from him what other young people in our denomination throughout the United States are doing.

On Wednesday, Dr. Gray will be at Elon College. He will speak at chapel in the morning, will have personal conferences with students during the afternoon, and will meet at night with the ministerial students and others interested in discussing religious life on a college campus.

On Thursday, Dr. Gray will travel through the eastern part of the state, meeting our members who are students at Duke, the University of North Carolina, and other colleges, and visiting Franklinton and Bricks Rural Life Institute.

BANQUET AT SOUTH NORFOLK.

On Thursday night of last week the older young people of the South Norfolk Christian Church held a banquet at the church with 120 present. This came as the culmination of a contest for attendance between the young men's Onward Bible Class, of which Rev. O. D. Poythress is the teacher, and the young women's Dorcas Class, of which Mrs. C. V. Hargrove is the teacher. The two classes now have a combined membership of 140. Since the young men lost, they had to provide the banquet. Their president, H. E. Seymour, was the toastmaster. The decorations, honoring St. Valentine, were under the direction of R. E. Brinkley. Twenty members of the boys' class donned aprons and served the banquet in fine style. During the evening a Hawaiian orchestra furnished music and Miss Slitz of Portsmouth gave impersonations—ranging all the way

NORTH CAROLINA YOUNG PEOPLE.

All young people in our churches are invited to enjoy a supper with Dr. H. D. Gray on next Tuesday night, February 27, in Greensboro. We will each pay for our own supper—cost 50c—and will eat in the private dining room of the Jefferson Restaurant on the top floor of the Jefferson Standard Building, at 6:30. You can't miss the place, for this is the tallest building within a radius of many miles! If you can go, send a card to Miss Frances Foster, 614 Arlington Avenue, Greensboro, N. C., by Monday, so that a place will be planned for you. Everyone is welcome, but officers of local young people's groups are especially urged to be present. Following the supper there will be a meeting at the First Church, Greensboro. Plan to attend that, even if you cannot be present for supper.

from movie stars to President Roosevelt. The principal address of the evening was given by Dr. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor of the Christian Temple, who used as his subject "Joseph—A Young Man Who Dreamed and Did."

FLORIDA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP RALLY.

On Sunday evening, March 3, the young people of our churches in north and central Florida will hold their annual Rally at Orange City. The afternoon session will open at 3:00 and will consist of an address by Dr. Harry Westbrook Reed, reports on activities in each local church, and highlights from the two summer conferences held last year. Henry Witte of Sanford will have charge of the fellowship supper which will be held

LIFE MADE NEW.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR MARCH 3, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: John 3:1-17.

Daily Readings—

Monday—"Dead Unto Sin; Alive Unto God"—Rom. 6:11-13.

Tuesday—Godly Admonitions—I Thess. 5:12-23.

Wednesday—The Walk of the Believer—Eph. 4:21-32.

Thursday—A New Creature—II Cor. 5:14-17.

Friday—Walking in the Spirit—Gal. 5:16-24.

Saturday—Fruit-Bearing Christians—John 15:5-11.

Make careful preparations for this meeting. Have a well-planned worship program.

The following hymns are suggested:

"My Faith Looks Up to Thee."

"More Love to Thee, O Christ."

"Oh, Could I Speak the Matchless Worth."

Notify some individual beforehand to be prepared to lead in prayer.

Encourage individuals to tell of some incident or experience which has deepened the connection of their faith or challenged them to lead a life consecrated to Christ as Lord.

The daily readings offer timely topics for discussion. Consider also the story of Jesus and Nicodemus. What is the experience of the new life? What is conversion? Regeneration? What does it mean to live a life for Christ? What changes does the new life work in and through the individual? Study Paul's statement, "Old things are passed away; behold, all things become new." What effect does the new life have upon the individual's attitude toward others?

In his book, The Church School, W. S. Athearn says, "The studies of Coe, Starbuck and Hall show that the last important wave of conversion comes at about the twentieth year, and that after the twentieth year only one in a thousand ever turns the face homeward toward God. Every effort on the part of the church should be concentrated on the securing of a consecration of life to God before the close of the adolescent period."

Get your minister to explain how Jesus' way of living changes the life of the individual, or how Jesus makes life new? How does Jesus' life affect our life?

Close the meeting with sentence prayers—omitting the "usual benediction."

S. E. M.

at 5:30. Each individual or group is asked to bring food and the Orange City young people will furnish the drink. The theme of the evening session is "International Goodwill." It

STEWARDS IN THE KINGDOM.

LESSON VIII—FEBRUARY 25, 1940.

LESSON: Matthew 24: 25.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 97: 1-6.

GOLDEN TEXT: Well done, good and faithful servant.—Matt. 25: 21.

Stewards.

Man does not own; he simply possesses. This is the basic idea running throughout both the Old and the New Testaments. Man is a steward of what he is, of what he knows, of what he has, of what he can do. It is a trust which God has committed into his care and for which he is to be held responsible. When Jesus told the story which we call the Parable of the Talents, he was simply putting in an interesting and graphic way a truth which found emphasis again and again throughout the Bible.

"To Each According to His Several Ability."

"And unto one he gave five talents, to another one; to each according to his several ability . . ." As great as the Declaration of Independence is, it is not true to the facts that all men are created equal. All men do not have equal ability; all men do not have the same talents. There are five-talent men, who are men of genius endowed with great ability and great possibilities. There are two-talent men—these might well be called the average man. Then there are what Jesus calls the one-talent men. Every man has some talent and some gift which he has received from his Maker. There is no life so humble, there is no man, however seemingly poorly endowed, who does not have in his life some gift, some talent, some capability. The trouble with so many people is that they measure themselves by others, and because they do not have as many talents as other people they overlook or despise the talents which they do have. The words, "To each according to his several ability," ought to encourage and challenge everyone of us.

A Day of Reckoning.

"Now after a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and maketh a reckoning with them." There is a day of reckoning. In one sense it might be said that God does not pay every Saturday night, nor do we have to render to him a weekly report. But sooner or later every man must give an account of himself and of his stewardship to God. This is one of the serious and sober facts of life which Jesus again and again emphasized. God is, of course, a loving heavenly Father, but there is a place for discipline in His relationship with His children. He is not harsh nor unreasonable in His demands upon us, but he does expect us to use such as we are and such as we have so that it shall yield fruit toward the coming of the Kingdom of God. This day of reckoning comes to those who have one talent as well as to those who have five talents. Everyone of us must stand before the judgment seat of Christ and give an account of our stewardship.

The Reward of Work Well Done.

"Well done, good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will set thee over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord." Thus spoke Jesus to the man who had had five talents and who by diligence and by discretion had made five other talents. "It is to be noted that the emphasis is on increased usefulness rather than on increased remuneration. The man was given a larger opportunity to exercise his talent. Work well done leads to greater work to do. Doing right brings power to do more right. The reward is in the doing, in the enlarged capacity, and in the approving conscience which bespeaks the divine approval." Life's finest rewards and satisfactions do not come from money. "The joy of thy Lord" is after all life's supreme reward. We have to use if we are to have.

Just as Jesus said, "Well done, good and faithful servant" to the man who had five talents, just so did he say the same words to him who had two talents. Not as much is expected of the man who has two talents as of the man who has five talents, but the same faithfulness is expected, and the same faithfulness brings the same reward. "Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required." But unto whomsoever less is given, of him shall less be required.

The Penalty for Work Not Well Done.

The one-talent man came, bringing only one talent. His words, "I was afraid," give the key to his character. He did not have a sense of stewardship. Like so many people, he felt that because he had only one talent that there was nothing that he could do about it. Because he could not do what he would like to do he did not do what he could do. Like so many people, fear paralyzed his life. To be sure, he did keep the original talent; he returned it to his master unimpaired. But life does not proceed on that basis. Life must grow, or it begins to die. Unless talents are used, they will be lost. Some of the world's greatest tragedies are to be found in the lives of people of one talent who, because they have only one talent, do not hold it as stewardship and do not try to develop it. The one-talent man can not hope to do as much as the five-talent men, and he is not to compete against this competition; he is to compete against his own finer possibilities. If the man with one talent had been as faithful as the man with five talents, or two talents, he would have received the same reward.

Losing Through Not Using.

"For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath." In every realm nature withdraws her gift from him who neglects it, or misuses it. To use life is to find life and to multiply life; neglect is atrophy and death.

O Lord,
I would be great—
But not in some spectacular way
For world acclaim.
Beyond my talents
Lie outstanding deeds, perhaps;
But Lord, I would be great
In faithfulness to each small task
Thou givest me,
To do the best I can
With what I have
For Thy name's sake
And if, some day, Thou sendest me
Some task that seems too big For hands that only little deeds have done,
I know that what I cannot do,
Thou canst do, through me, if I will,
And in Thy strength
I'll do the thing that is too big for me.
Help me, O Lord, to stand approved
In faithfulness to every task.
Thus, in Thy sight
I will be great.

—Hattie Bell Allen.

will consist of a worship service by the Ormond young people, a talk by Margery Chindahl of Winter Park who will give experiences from her student friendship tour to Europe last summer, and presentation of the book Union Now to be given by Rev. J. Spenser Voorhees. Young people from each of our churches in these areas of Florida are urged to attend, whether they have an organized young people's group in their church or not. Betty Chicoine is the Chairman of this district and will preside at the meeting.

MONDAY.

"CALIBRATING COMPASSES."

"Try yourselves, whether ye are in the faith; prove your own selves, that Jesus Christ is in you."—II Cor. 13:5.

Upon sailing from port one day, just out of the harbor the ship delayed its cruise several hours in order to check compasses and direction finders so that it might know that they were true. This has to be done often.

A Negro gardener, working for Col. Bob Blank, called up the Colonel one day, ostensibly a stranger, in reply to an advertisement the Colonel had made a short while back (and for which he had been employed). Upon being told that a man had been secured, the inquirer asked if he was satisfactory. This conversation was overheard by one who offered the Negro a job. He replied, "Thank y', boss, I don' want no job. I'se jes' checking up on myse'f."

Lent is a season of checking up on ourselves to see if we are on the right course.

Prayer.—O Lord, our God, we incline our hearts unto Thee this day. Be pleased to direct our paths. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE CHALLENGE OF LENT."

"Jesus said . . . If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me."—Matt. 16:24.

As we follow through the true ideas of Lent, we realize that our hope is rooted in divine suffering and a certain instinct in us recoils from self indulgence.

In addition to checking up on ourselves, we are challenged to cultivate discipline of soul. In this way we demonstrate that "man does not live by bread alone." We exemplify that Christ calls us to something far higher and nobler than physical ease.

Lent challenges us to get rid of sodden materialism and sour cynicism and live daily in faith for loftiest and loveliest things.

Lent challenges us to share some sufferings with Christ. Said the Frenchman Manod, "To abolish necessity for work, effort, struggle, sacrifice, virtue," is to "shut up sacrifice and all this in Jesus Christ alone and not let it pass to us." To share suffering with Christ holds the gospel of salvation, which bids a man stand naked, as it were, before Him in total consecration to Him and His cause.

It bids us to think of the reality and ministry of our religion as we look toward the Passion of Him who, being rich, became poor, and was a friend to the lonely and forlorn. We must share this same spirit.

Prayer.—Our Father and our God, we confess our failure to take up the Cross of Christ as we should. Forgive us and endow us this day with Thy spirit, Thy grace and Thy power, to share in this world the agonies of our Christ. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"TOWARD THE CROSS."

"I thought on my ways, and turned my feet unto Thy testimonials."—Ps. 119:59.

Lent points to the cross. We cannot truly look toward the cross without looking into our hearts in the light of the life of Jesus. In that light we find in us much that is vile and then cry for mercy.

What a kindly light! Not only pure, but purifying. The look is with horror but with hope, for then we can let Him in, we can fling away our sins and face our souls a new man.

If Lent is such a meeting with our own souls, it is good, and we cannot afford to miss it. The whole of it sums itself up in how to live before death so as to be worthy to live hereafter. That is the greatest thing known to man, for when we see ourselves as we are, there is grave doubt whether it is worth while to continue the experiment of such a life. But thank God it is possible in Christ to be Christlike and worth while.

Prayer.—Our Father, help us to see ourselves aright and to spend our days for righteousness and Thy Kingdom. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"A CALL TO SERVICE."

"Grant unto us that we may sit, one on the right hand, and the other on the left hand, in Thy glory."—Mark 10:37.

It was a very natural thing to ask for a place of preferment. Perhaps the Master was pleased with their ambition. But he did not so much as mention it. What He did say was that places of preferment are earned by the aspirant and are not bestowed. That place is earned by service to others. He who serves most is greatest.

We have said that we must share "for Him and with Him." If we would occupy a place close to Him we must go along with Him.

Prayer.—Our Father, teach us this lenten season the joys that spring from service. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"HEAD OR HEART?"

"I will walk in my house with a perfect heart."—Ps. 101:2.

"This head of mine holds up everything." This was a remark overheard once when it was time to fill an engagement. The wife was still before her boudoir mirror fixing her hair.

Isn't it true that it is the head that gives us most trouble? Worries, difficulties, problems, set-backs, sins—all give us more trouble than they would if we would but think differently. Much of our fretting is purely mental.

OUR PREACHER FOR THIS WEEK IS
REV. EMMANUEL HEDGEBETH,
NEW HAVEN, CONN.

[This sermon was preached by Mr. Hedgebeth in the First Congregational Church of Torrington, Conn., of which Rev. Carl R. Key is the pastor, on Youth Sunday.—Editor.]

SHALL WE COME BACK, TOO.

*"And when he had spent all
... he began to be in want."*
—Luke 15: 14.

How characteristic of youth was the request of the Prodigal Son for his portion of his father's inheritance, and the consequent journey away from home. As the typical young person he was likely energetic and enthusiastic; he was obsessed with the idea that life held more for him away from home; he was likely dissatisfied with the remoteness of his father's farm, and with the old-fashioned and outmoded conventions and traditions that made up his environment. So with his inheritance he went out into the world.

We can imagine how he found the the world. It was different from anything that he had ever known and fully as exciting as anything he had expected. The pace was fast, the novelty of his new-found happiness thrilled him immensely, "and he wasted his substance in riotous living." Imagine the shock of this young man when he found that all his substance was gone. When his dream faded away and he awoke to the realities of life, he "began to be in want." Never before had he come face to face with the cold hard facts of life. In his desperation he went and hired himself as a common servant. As the swine ate greedily the corn that he fed them, the pangs of hunger grew upon him. He was lost, he had no friends, and it seemed that all the world was against him.

Then a beautiful thought came to him. He would go and offer his services to his father as a hired servant. You know the story, how he returned to his father and was honored with a banquet. Then how the older brother came and was indignant over an unfaithful son.

Today young people are faced with the same problem as was the Prodigal

Son. Society gives us an inheritance whether we ask for it or not. We are proud of our heritage and we make much of it. In this heritage we have our education, our religious beliefs, and all that we have received in either a material or a cultural way. We are as restless as the Prodigal Son. We become dissatisfied with conditions around us. Things become old-fashioned. Christian youth becomes inspired to build a new Christian social and economic order, where all men may find justice and right and opportunity. We desire to find new ways of doing things, new institutions and new systems.

So we go out into the world with our inheritance, a world totally different and foreign when compared with the sheltered world of our earlier days. Full of energy and enthusiasm, we seek to realize youthful dreams and hopes. All too often we "waste our substance with riotous living" by throwing our inheritance to the wind and attaching ourselves to new movements merely because of the novelty of such movements. On the whole, however, when we go out to turn the world upside down, we are expectant and hopeful of a joyful and thrilling life.

Suddenly, like the Prodigal Son, we become aware of the realities of life, we come to understand how cruel life can be and often is. Even though we may not have wasted our inheritance, we still come face to face with hardships and difficulties we had never dreamed of. When we begin to seek the realization of our dreams and ideals, the whole world seems to rise up against us and we begin "to be in want." The hardships of living a wholesome, courageous and constructive life are just as great as they are if we waste our inheritance and find ourselves in the world without anything. Our heritage, while giving us the basic and fundamental principles that belong to it, should at the same time make us sensitive to the evils that exist in our heritage. Our religion should inspire us to correct these evils. If our Christianity is to be more than a passive Christianity, we must in the name of Christ bring about those changes that are necessary to make our physical and material life coherent with the principles of our Master. When faced with hardships and difficulties we are too often ready to return to the old established ways of doing things and become mere automatons in a static society bound by tradition and convention.

It is no longer a question of what life will hold for us in the future—too often the answer will be the W. P. A. and relief rolls. Rather the question is, What do we have to offer to society, what can we do for the total welfare of man? When faced with the real issues of life are we going to do as the Prodigal Son and retreat so that we may escape them, or are we going to answer the challenge of the poet:

Be strong! We are not here to dream, to drift.

We have work to do and loads to lift;
Shun not the struggle, face it,
'Tis God's gift.

What then is the task of the young people of our day? Certainly we can come to some semblance of a Christian social and economic order by eliminat-

Prayer.—O Thou who dost bring back the throb of life to dead hearts, quicken our dead hearts to life. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"POWER IN THE CROSS."

"Today shalt Thou be with me in paradise."—Luke 23: 43.

Let us not lose sight of our pilgrimage to the Cross. We are journeying together to Golgotha. We can see it at the end ahead of us. It is a twenty-eight-day journey yet.

"The moment of regret is the moment of hope," Warden Lawes of Sing Sing said. Misdirected lives get back in the right channels by seeing the error of their way, repenting and looking to Jesus. Though in His last agonizing heart-throb, He spent it to forgive. In the agony of death a new hope filled His heart, because a sinner repented.

Prayer.—O Lord, those whom the world rejects Thou dost seek. Thy love is wonderful. Forgive us and help us to live worthy. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE REVELATION OF THE CROSS.

"Truly this man was the Son of God."—Mark 15: 39.

This confession was that of a Roman Centurion—a mere spectator at the crucifixion. It is not supposed that he knew anything about the Christian doctrine of salvation. There is a strange power in the Cross that saves. He said, "If I be lifted up I will draw all men to me." The Cross with Jesus on it is what we need.

Prayer.—O Lord, our God, forbid that the story of Jesus is just a tale that is told. Life is more than a fitful game. Life is love, service and sacrifice. In it is our hope. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Let us talk finances some in this letter. It takes money to run an orphanage and care for children. All of you readers who have families realize this. An orphanage is just like a big family. The only difference is the orphanage has an exceedingly large family, with nearly one hundred children.

With that many children there is something to buy every day. The management is just as careful as any one can be in trying make every dollar go as far as it is possible to do so. In order to have money to run the orphanage and pay our bills promptly it is necessary to make out a budget so our people will know how much they are expected to raise. All the money that comes to the orphanage goes to meet the budget because all items of expense so far as we can calculate are put in this budget. It takes money to pay insurance on all the buildings. It takes money to recover buildings and paint buildings to keep them in a good state of repair. Farm machinery wears out and has to be replaced. Children have to have operations and spend sometime in the hospital. Salaries to pay—and a hundred other items that will come in during the year. Perhaps some not looked for at all.

After figuring everything as closely as we can we have set our budget at $22,000.00 for 1940.

We have already raised on this budget since January 1, the sum of $2,316.67. We still have $19,683.39 to raise by December 31, 1940. How can we raise it. Begin now through your Sunday school monthly offerings for the orphanage by making your offerings as liberal as possible. Remember that all your offerings count on the amount that has been apportioned to your church in your Conference apportionments for the orphanage. Surely you want to raise it as you do for all other departments of our church.

If all the churches in our Southern Convention will raise the amount apportioned to them in full, I feel sure when our final report is made at the end of the year that the goal will have been reached.

Friends who have money that they want to invest in charity I feel sure you can invest it easily in the children in the Christian Orphanage. I hope we will receive many such gifts through the year. When we invest in stocks and bonds in many cases we lose. When we invest in a dependent boy or girl and they develop into a fine citizen and make their work in the world we have an investment that we will not lose. The real joy we get out of the investment will many times repay us.

SHOULD WE TURN BACK, TOO?

ing the evils that exist at the present time. It may require new systems, and it may mean the up-rooting of much of the old. We must recognize and work for the rights of labor, we must make society realize that it is responsible for the unemployed, and we must seek to bring about an arrangement of things that will make these problems less likely. Certainly the great problem of present-day Christianity is to seek to eliminate war and the principles that lead us inevitably to war. The church with the message of Christ must answer the challenge. These things must come not only because of their practical value, but also because God demands of us that we build a more God-like world. We must come to see the spiritual value of the brotherhood of man and those things that make the brotherhood of man more possible. Spiritual values are not real values unless they have some relevance to the relationship of man to man. The Fatherhood of God is meaningless without the brotherhood of man.

Our Protestant heritage has been one of development because it gives room for men to discover new spiritual values and to realize those values in actual practice. Democracy has grown out our Protestant heritage, but it was not realized suddenly. True democracy embodies many Christian values. The power of a democracy is that it can grow and can absorb the good of the new without absorbing the evil. Our democracy must be carried into the economic realm as well as the political and social realism. To bring about changed conditions takes courage and bravery. We must not retreat when faced with hardships and difficulties. Suppose Columbus had turned back to the safety of the ports of Spain and Portugal when faced by the rough waters of the Atlantic? Suppose Paul had turned back when faced with the hardships of his missionary travels? Suppose the white man had returned to the security of the old world when faced with the hardships that characterized the early days of the history of our country? Suppose Lincoln had turned back in those hectic days that are a blot on our history? The great milestones of history were made when men carried on in their mission regardless of the hardships and difficulties that confronted them. The great moments in religion have been under the same conditions.

We have no place in the world for Prodigal Sons, for young people who feel that they must sow their wild oats before they begin a life of service. The church must not be a mere sanctuary for the old who offer their lives to God after the best and more effective years of their lives have been spent. The church needs youth, youth who are energetic and who have vision. Youth who will "put their hands to the plow and not turn back." It needs youth who will not shrink from the real issues of life, even if by so doing they might be more comfortable and secure. The fate of the world is in the hands of youth. If at the end of our lives there is economic injustice, or war, or disregard for human life, or anything that is in contradiction to the principles of Jesus, it will be because we, the youth of today, sanction those things that make for these evils. Are we, as Christian youth, willing to face life with a determination to realize our hopes and put our ideals into practice?

In Memoriam

FELTS.

Betty Lee Felts, eleven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Felts, 321 Bank St., Suffolk, Va., died Wednesday, January 3, 1940, and funeral was conducted at the residence on the following Friday.

She is survived by her parents, and two brothers, Everett and Morrison Felts. The sympathy of the community and friends is bestowed upon the bereft family, and may God bless them everyone.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

LOY.

Miss Lola Clara Loy was born in Alamance County, N. C., on May 7, 1900, and departed this life December 11, 1939. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Loy. Lola was an invalid throughout her earthly existence. She made a regular contribution to the family circle.

Miss Loy joins in the spirit land a loving mother, one sister, and two brothers. Surviving her are a beloved father; two brothers, J. L. and J. R. Loy; three sisters, Mrs. W. H. Jones, Mrs. C. E. Putnam, and Mrs. A. O. Gerringier. Also a number of nieces, nephews, and many friends.

Funeral service was conducted at Shallow Ford Christian Church by the pastor, assisted by Rev. J. W. Patton, and interment was made in the church cemetery.

May the Lord comfort all the bereaved family.
L. L. WYRICK.

McDANIEL.

Brother G. J. McDaniel was born July 2, 1848, and died December 18, 1939, at the ripe old age of ninety-one years, five months, and 16 days.

He was married to Mary Jane Vickers on July 15, 1871. To this union was born six children of whom four boys survive. His wife and two children preceded him in death. He leaves twenty-three grandchildren, fifty-one great-grandchildren, and six great-great-grandchildren. He had resided at the place where he died for about sixty years.

He was a member of McGuire's Chapel Christian Church for about forty-eight years.

He was a man of great energy and had been a great character and good citizen of his community.

God bless his long useful life and may His blessings attend those who mourn.

Funeral by this writer, assisted by Rev. Brother Pickett of the Methodist Church.

G. D. HUNT.

BRANDON.

Brother Herbert Brandon, son of the late Johnny Byrd Brandon, departed this life at his home near Ringold, Va., on November 27, 1939, at the age of fifty-two. The deceased married Miss Rubie Wells, sister of the late Rev. W. L. Wells, when a young man. She survives, together with five children, all of whom live in Ringold except the eldest, Herbert who lives in New Jersey.

Brother Brandon was a high type Christian gentleman, a splendid citizen, and a man of high integrity. He was a successful farmer and a man of good intellect. He united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, but years ago transferred his membership to Lebanon Christian Church. He leaves an excellent family and a host of friends grieved over his passing.

Funeral and burial were at Lebanon Church in the presence of a crowd of people. Floral tributes were many and beautiful.

The Coming Convention

By JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

We shall be a convention of our very own people, members of our own churches, and workers together with one another and with Christ. If I had been killed on the road from Florida the other day, most of you would have said kind, complimentary things about me, things that would have made me feel good had I been living to hear them. If anyone of you were to get killed before the sessions of the coming convention we would all be saddened, and our words would be most kindly and complimentary about you, and about the work you are trying to do. In fact I believe we respect each other. We love one another. We are brethren, and sisters, in Christ. We know his new commandment that we love one another. One can not let that be mere sentiment, not the kind of love Christ meant, for His love was faith-keeping unto the very end. Let us help one another, and work together with one another in kindness and common sense now, while it is day.

One of the greatest things our coming convention could do would be to read, and put into practice the following verses from our New Testament: "God tempered the body together that there should be no schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another. And whether one member suffereth, all the members suffer with it; or one member is honored, all the members rejoice with it. Now ye are the body of Christ, and severally members thereof." I may be unadvised but I fear that if there were as much criss-crossing in the church I have the honor of serving as there is amongst members of the Southern Convention the local church would lose its grip on its members, and its constructive program of building and progress would be defeated, and halted. The spirit of harmony and togetherness in our church makes it move steadily along, building up its membership, and other organizations, paying for its building, and raising its benevolences with a sense of joy and enthusiasm, and steadily enriching its worship services. These things cannot be when there is discord, and disunion, and fault-finding, and criss-crossing. Discord must be changed to His-cord of love binding us together in noble constructive work, and disunion must be re-spelled to mean His-union of co-workers and followers of the humble and lowly Nazarene putting our hearts together, our heads together, and our hands together to do His divine work.

"God tempered the body together"—we are not all of the same opinion, but we can all be, since we are Christians, tempered together"; we do not all see eye to eye, but we can all, since we are Christians, "have the same care (love) one for another." All our work is not disruptive, but it is rather constructive, and even if some part of it should fall behind a bit in effectiveness, we must not rejoice at it, and say "I told you so." Since we are Christians, "if one member suffers all members suffer with it." We are friends one of another, schooled and trained in a great heritage, and brought up to have a great vision of the future as the Church of Christ moves forward. We have a great Mission Board, so let us all give it our very heartiest support and cooperation, making it a joy for the spirit it generates throughout the bounds of our convention and the revenues it receives with which to carry on its great, constructive work; we have a great college, and we can all show our love and esteem for its past and present and future by giving it a boost of words and boon of funds right now to press it forward; we have a great church paper, and the only one left published weekly, it is and has been a most constructive power in our convention let us do all we can to make it the mighty instrument for the Christ it ought always to be; we have a great orphanage, doing a most noble piece of Christian work, let us properly appraise it, and bless it with our cooperation—and so could we go right through all departments, boards, committees and parts of our convention, finding the good and helpful in them all, and building on it, with joy and pride in each part of it.

"There should be no schism in the body," no feeling that the young people are divided from their elders and not a natural, definite part of the undivided whole; no feeling that the women's work was somehow separate and apart from the entire convention's program, but that they are in its center with their inspiring call to unselfishness and friendliness unto the uttermost parts of the world; no feeling that any part, person, or place, is better than another; and no notion that any one of our opinions is the last and final word on the subject or project before us. "No schism in the body." That brings pain and defeat, and saps joy, and robs us of the better, nobler sides of ourselves. It is not Christ-like. It is so like a petted child who "won't play, 'cause you don't play my way." It is not grown-up and great.

We are all tempted to it at times. I am as guilty as any; but nevertheless I am ashamed of it. I am trying to stop it, and will do my best to—even if someone dips his pen in vinegar and does what we may call "replying" to this sincere and humble hope that we look toward the coming Southern Convention with a spirit of tolerance, forbearance, progress, harmony, and respect for one another.

"Our only rule of faith and practice."

An Appeal

During half a century Elon College has charted the course of youth. On the high seas of life, harbors of hope have been pointed out, and currents that run warm with life and lead to service have been discovered. We have been among those who have received the blessings of Alma Mater. Although we have not yet reached the haven desired, we are certain that life has been richer because Elon College has guided our thoughts and helped shape our ideals.

Through most of the years, Elon College has been hindered by a burden of debt. The past decade has been among the worst years. Gradually the burden is being lifted. When the present Seniors join the Alumni next May, Elon College should be free from financial obligations.

To this end many have pledged and paid, and many more will do likewise. Sacrifice has gone into this paying, and will go into it. But the College is worthy of a liberal investment because it still charts the course of youth in a time of storm.

We, the undersigned, have recently met as representatives of the Board of Trustees of the College, Alumni of the College, and members of Congregational and Christian Churches, to consider what can be done this spring to free our College from its indebtedness—our indebtedness. Among the things that can be done, two stand out:

First, We can contribute to the limit of our ability. Some have already given, and all will do their best. We believe in the cause of Christian Education as represented by our College.

Second, We appeal to the churches, to the Alumni, and to the friends of the College to join heartily in the effort to clear the College of debt. Especially do we request the ministers and the churches to respond to the call of the College in this time of its great need and expanding opportunities. We believe that now is the time for the Church that founded Elon College to come to its support and show to the world that there is confidence and loyalty back of the institution.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Rev. R. E. Newton of West Palm Beach, Fla., has accepted a call to our churches in Page County, Valley of Virginia, where he has been working since the second week in January. Mr. Newton has been secretary of the Florida State Conference during recent years.

Miss Rebecca, daughter of President and Mrs. L. E. Smith of Elon College, is to be married in Whitley Memorial Auditorium on Saturday night, March 2, at nine o'clock, to Mr. Frederick Wild of Detroit, Mich. THE CHRISTIAN SUN joins their many friends in expressing to them good wishes for a happy married life.

The March number of Advance, our denominational paper which is published at 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass., at $1.50 a year, carries a considerable amount of help for Sunday school superintendents. The April number will deal with planning church work. The Department of Christian Education is now using Advance as a medium through which to distribute its helps.

The sympathy of their many friends will go to Dr. and Mrs. Charles Eldred Shelton, who are reported to be quite feeble. Dr. Shelton will be remembered as the much beloved pastor of the Shelton Congregational Church in Portsmouth, Va. Brief greetings from their friends will be greatly appreciated. Their address is: 1100 N. Negley Avenue, Pittsburg, Pa.

Dr. C. A. Vincent, pastor of the Miami Shores Community Church, is preaching a series of sermons during Lent on the theme: "What Does the New Testament Teach?"—

February 18—"About God?"
February 25—"About Jesus?"
March 3—"About Man?"
March 10—"About Society?"
March 17—"About the Family?"
March 24—"About the Future Life?"
March 31—"About the Church?"

Rev. L. M. Outerbridge, executive secretary of the Missions Council of our church, has resigned for personal and health reasons. Mrs. W. M. Medlicott is to direct the work of the Council for the present. The Council meeting at Evanston in January nominated Mr. Outerbridge for another term. The Missions Council is the promotional agency for the Foreign and Home Boards of the denomination, and the work of the secretary is very important and difficult. Mr. Outerbridge attended the last session of the Southern Convention, and will be remembered pleasantly by those who were there.

PERPETUATING "THE CHRISTIAN SUN."

tinued to shine with undimmed and unfailing radiance. Light and learning have been carried into every nook and cranny of the Convention. Any interruption of this service of long standing would be lamentable indeed.

The Committee on Publications finds it necessary to inaugurate some means of securing additional subscriptions in order to continue publishing THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Since many churches have failed to secure their quota of subscriptions, an additional effort has become imperative. Each conference and church is urged to concentrate and consecrate itself in this worthy objective from March 25 to April 25. Every church should secure at least two subscriptions. The conference quotas should be reached and exceeded if possible. It may be necessary to go the second mile in order to make our Church Paper what it should be. The future policy of our paper must be determined at the forthcoming Convention. Those who believe THE CHRISTIAN SUN is still needed in our Church should become aggressive in this campaign to guarantee its continuance in our united work.

If THE CHRISTIAN SUN was needed during the years of our Church's infancy and adolescence, it is most assuredly needed for guidance and strengthening during the future years of its maturity. No relic of by-gone days should be maintained merely for sentimental reasons. Antiques, both secular and religious, are expensive. All barnacles on the ship of time should be eliminated with dispatch. We should remember, however, that our need for all a church paper has to offer has not diminished, but has increased with the accelerated life of the present. If THE CHRISTIAN SUN has contributed substantially in the past achievements of our church, it may also contribute pontifically in its future development. No week would be complete without THE CHRISTIAN SUN with its medley of information: editorial erudition, the romance of the mission work both near and far, apocalyptic thunderings of the reformers, and the latest news from Ebenezer's Crossroads. Many inroads are being made on the program and influence of the church and the sanctity of the Lord's Day. It becomes increasingly necessary, therefore, to keep open every avenue for the proclamation of the Eternal Gospel.

As ministers and churches we show our true colors by our response in this time of emergency.

ROBERT LEE HOUSE, Chairman,
Board of Publications.

TALENT MONEY.

The First Congregational Christian Church of Newport News, Va., recently celebrated the tenth anniversary of the new building in a fine way. Five weeks before the Sunday celebration the church gave out 138 dollars to as many members who took them to make as much as they could legitimately for their church. When this talent money was returned, the members brought in $325.00 which had been earned. The interest created caused a contribution of $200.00 more. This amount added to the regular contributions for the building debt made it possible for the church to pay $600.00 on indebtedness, which leaves less than $4,000.00 yet to be paid. Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, the pastor, will be glad to give details of the plan to any church that may be interested in trying it.

PARI-MUTUEL BETTING.

Fifteen states have legalized pari-mutuel betting, and receive slightly more than ten million dollars annually in taxes from it, according to "Good Housekeeping." Figures seem to indicate that only a small part of the betting money goes through the machines, and that only a very small part of the money received goes into the treasury of the government. Figures further indicate, according to a forthcoming book by Dr. E. L. Tiffany entitled "War With the Underworld," that the government faces greatly increased costs in crime, police protection, and courts.

A current Bulletin of the New York Civic League carries a letter dated February 6, 1940, from G. W. Lamb, president of a bank in Springfield, Mass., which tells the experience of Springfield in legalizing pari-mutuels. Business men helped to finance a horse track and dog track because of "the argument that the tracks would bring large increase of business to Springfield with a resulting wave of prosperity, and that taxes would be lowered on account of the revenue coming to the state." The results were very different, for "The tracks had been in operation only a short time when many business men stated that new business was not coming to them, that there was an increased percentage of customers asking for credit, and that collections were slowing up. This trend continued with an increasing unfavorable effect on business and several suicides and defalcations were directly attributable to losses at the tracks."

It took only four years for this to happen, and for the county to outlaw pari-mutuels. Within a year business recovered and the moral tone of the community was restored. Such are the values of betting under the blessings of the state, and again is fulfilled the word of ancient wisdom, "Sin is a reproach to any people."

RELIGIOUS JOURNALISM TODAY.

Church papers like this one are finding it difficult to ride the waves of the present turbulent time. Labor unions make it necessary to pay high prices for printing. Daily newspapers now carry much information concerning religion and church enterprises. Pictures fill the pages of printed papers and magazines. The tempo of activities makes Americans unable and unwilling to find time for solid reading. The radio brings to nearly every home sermons, music, and prayers of both the best and the worst types. In such a time the old-fashioned religious newspaper has little place for most people.

This does not say that the church paper is no longer needed. On the contrary these very things may be indications that such papers are needed. Freedom is a prize dearly bought by the founders of America, and freedom for the future may rest largely with just such little papers as the one you are now reading. The Federal Government has control of radio. Economic interests largely control the daily press. Some outspoken editors and statesmen think that freedom of the press, which really means freedom of thought, is definitely threatened in this country, and it is a well-known fact that in most countries of the world today there is no such thing as freedom of the press. But the religious press is still free to say whatever may seem to need to be said. It is a minority group that reads the religious newspapers, but in the final analysis it will likely be this minority that will withstand the currents of control and make our country free.

And it may be that the church press will eventually teach our people that the god of speed does not satisfy the desires of the human heart. People need rest that reaches to the soul. The Christian religion offers that. People need controls within themselves. Christianity offers them. The religious press helps to break some of the tensions and to bring rest from the rushing daily duties. It has a big job. It should find a way to succeed.

THE FARM AND THE CHURCH.

More than ninety per cent of our churches within the Southern Convention are in the country or in small towns. It is thus easy to see that the farm and the church, so far as we are concerned, are intimate friends. Our churches are filled with farmers, or they are not filled. Farmers support our churches, or they are not supported. At least this is true in about ninety per cent of them.

When the Southern Convention convenes the last day of April in Greensboro, N. C., it will be necessary to consider this matter. A financial plan must be adopted. Those who usually talk in the Convention are largely from the few cities represented while the farmers either tend their farms at home or listen to those who speak with greater ease. If the Convention adopts the suggested plan of having one delegate from each church, and if those elected delegates attend the sessions of the Convention, the time will soon be upon us when farmers will dominate the Convention itself, or at least they will be the large majority of the lay delegates. This may put new life into the Convention, and certainly it will be more democratic.

Unless the farmers can produce and can sell at a profit, there is no hope for our institutions to secure support from the majority of our churches. Neither is it possible for the churches to get the needed pastoral service. Thus the economic conditions of the farmer become definitely the problems of the Southern Convention. Perhaps we never have, but it might be well to give such matters a little thought in the Convention sessions.

We seek for painless perfection, synthetic character. We wish to be children, all of us, with a Santa Claus government that makes each day as radiant as Christmas morning. . . . America must indoctrinate or die, and the church must supply the doctrine.—W. W. Ayer.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

On Wednesday, February 14, the writer had the privilege of leaving Suffolk, Va., for a few days of vacation in Florida. Mrs. H. E. Savage, Jr., of Suffolk, kindly offered to drive her car and take the Parson, his wife and sister, with her on this trip. Of course Mrs. Savage's four year old daughter, Eva Lee, is the little queen of this party, and has been the center of attraction and attention since leaving Virginia. She has added much to the joy of the trip.

We spent three days in Miami, and we are now in St. Petersburg, the "Sunshine City" of the State. The sun has been shining much of the time, beyond threatening clouds, and when it breaks through the rifts, occasionally, it is not very hot. Florida has temporarily lost its reputation for clear, warm weather in winter. The severe cold weather greatly damaged the fruit and growing crops in the trucking section.

This is our fourth visit to Florida. Orange groves, palm trees and other tropical plants, beautiful gardens, palatial residences, are all interesting to tourists. But the people have been very interesting to this writer. Their reactions to certain influences have made a deep impression. On the highway the majority of people driving cars attempt to take more than one-half of the road. The red line along the center of the highway seems to be an invitation for them to put their left wheels about six inches on the other side of it. That was not so noticeable three years ago. There is a growing tendency, at the present time, to demand the lion's share of what belongs to the other fellow. "Hogging" the road is a fair example of what men and women, in many instances, desire to do in politics, in social and economic life. The "have nots" demand that those who have must share with them to the full limit of their needs and desires.

We made a visit to the famous Hialeah Park in Miami. We did not attend the races. But one of the police guards, at the entrance, made a very significant statement. Upon being asked, "Who owns this place?" he replied, giving the name of the principal owner and promoter, and added: "This man is very rich, but it will not long be possible for any man in this country to own so much money, when hungry babies are crying for milk within this city." "Do many people attend the races?" "Yes." "How much money is spent here in one day?" He replied: "Last Saturday, $600,000.00 passed through the offices where the betting is largely handled."

Last Sunday we attended a five o'clock vesper service in a quite large church in that city. For some reason the organist did not come. The minister led the music without the assistance of any instrument, and a congregation of twenty-six people heard his prepared message. One was compelled to contrast this with the crowd of the previous day at the race track.

Florida does not permit horse-racing on Sunday, but it will come to that someday if the tide of public sentiment continues to move in the direction of an open Sabbath. As a rule people attend church in Florida on Sunday morning. St. Petersburg probably surpasses any other city in the United States in its respect for the Sabbath and its record for church attendance.

St. Petersburg is a resort of gray-haired people. It is hazardous to use the term "old people" in print or in public speech. Today the people passing a given point were counted. Out of sixty people, fifty-two were gray-haired. Several counts gave similar comparisons.

This is a great city and the spirit of the people is kind and friendly. It is a privilege to be here.

I. W. JOHNSON,

THE ANNIVERSARY CAMPAIGN.

The Elon College Golden Anniversary Campaign is on. It has been in progress for months. Its merits and demerits have been discussed by those who care and those who do not. There are plenty to wish for success and to prophesy failure. Wishes are good, and prophecy may or may not fail. But the day has arrived when if this campaign is to be successfully completed, those who care find it necessary to put themselves as well as well as their contributions into the effort. We have heard so much about millions that the talk of mere thousands fails to interest many. If talk would pay the debts, Elon College would have been in the clear months and months ago.

More than a year ago the Alumni Association appointed a committee to lay plans for and to conduct a campaign among its members for memberships in the Golden Anniversary Club. The Board of Trustees appointed a like committee for the purpose of appealing to and enlisting the interest of the church that the debts might be paid. These two committees together with a number of ministers met at Elon College Tuesday afternoon of last week at two o'clock for the purpose of ascertaining the best means of intensifying the campaign from now until commencement. The reports made to the committee revealed that the present indebtedness is $124,000 with approximately $23,000 in unpaid pledges secured in the campaign that is now in progress and from $6,000 to $10,000 in unpaid pledges secured in the Elon College Development Campaign in 1935. It was estimated that at present it will require $100,000 in cash and pledges to provide for the retirement of the total indebtedness against the college. The committee talked in dead earnest about devising plans and means by which the last dollar of this amount might be paid. It is really thrilling to those who have been wrestling with this debt to be with a group who talks seriously about paying the entire indebtedness of Elon College and to be assured that this is not altogether idle talk but that it is an achievement that really can be realized. When the alumni, church and friends of the college are made aware of the fact that we are getting in sight of the goal, there should be enough enthusiasm to complete the task. The committee representing the Alumni Association, having received its instructions from the Alumni Association in midyear session on February 10, plans to go right ahead with its campaign and seek to enroll every alumnus of the college in the Anniversary Club. The committee voted authorizing the president of the college to set up organizations in the several conferences constituting the Convention for the purpose of carrying the appeal of the college to every individual member of every church within the Convention, not necessarily as churches but as individuals, and to see that this campaign is conducted in every local church before the approaching commencement.

The president was urged by vote to carry the appeal of the college to friends who are connected with neither the church nor the alumni.

No one is to be denied the privilege of having a part in this campaign. If he cannot give as much as $50, what he can give will be gratefully received. The organization is to be formed and the campaign is to be launched on a somewhat different basis with a broader scope. The joint committees realized that the period between now and commencement constitutes a most effective appeal to the friends of the college for material assistance in this determined effort in behalf of the college. Whatever organization is formed, I am sure that it will not be adequate. The entire constituency of the church and the college will need to take a part, if any organization is to be effective. What we need now is cooperation in effort, in prayer and in contributions. If you have given, we are grateful, and hope that you will find it possible to give more if necessary. If you have not given, we need your help, and we trust that you will listen and heed our appeal.

WHAT TRUE RELIGION MEANS

By MRS. ROLLIE GAYLE.

Oakland Christian Church, Chuckatuck, Va.

"It's a tremendously big thing, this adventure we're out on together: to live God's way, to get God's strength, God's goodness, God's wisdom into our every day affairs: to remember God is always with us, and in some strange way that we cannot understand, within us, too. It makes a difference having a religion like that. It's not a little thing, not a matter of merely keeping rules, or going to services, or repeating creeds, or saying prayers. It's a way of life."

These words were spoken by Muriel Lester of England, who deciding to make her religion a serious business, left a luxurious home to live in the slums of London, and give of her life to help those in need.

Religion is indeed a way of life. It is so vitally connected with life that it touches life in every phase. What is religion any way? There are various definitions, but the one I shall point you to was given by an inspired writer—James, the half-brother of our Lord, and is recorded in James 1:27.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

This definition of true religion imposes two definite obligations upon each individual who attempts to follow this way of life—a social and a personal obligation.

The social obligation—"To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction." This means service. It means putting our abilities at the disposal of the weak for their good. It means sacrifice of our time, talents, and material possessions. It means spending one's self in the cause of social justice, peace, enlightenment at home and abroad, and waging endless warfare on all forces which tend to destroy personality and exploit humanity. It means sharing the responsibilities of citizenship, each according to his ability. It means teaching our youth the noble traditions of the past, and adventuring with them in the building of the future. It means teaching the youth of our age nobler methods of matching our strength and more effective ways of giving our lives for the flag than by the shedding of blood.

Now the personal obligation—"To keep himself unspotted from the world." How? By personal contact with God through His Word and prayer. Without this personal contact a person may be moral, but not religious. Another way—by worship and trust in God, enthroning God as King of our lives, and obeying His laws, and imitating His love.

Religion begins in the heart with a yearning for God. It brings about a heart readjustment. It means a cleansing of the heart that it may be a temple of God. Then from the heart religion spreads to life and character.

How may we test our religion to ascertain if it is real and genuine? The test of a garment is its wearing quality. This is also one test of religion. Life may be rough upon it, but it wears. It carries us along life's way through pleasures, disappointments, and suffering. It has carried many through the "valley of the shadow of death."

Another test—Are we always the same whether we are in secret recesses, or in the glare of the footlights on the pinnacle of fame? A rose is just as beautiful and fragrant when hidden from view as it is when it is being admired. The same should be true of a religious life.

Religion may be real although the type may vary with the individual. Light is real although the prism reveals different colors in it. Some individuals are meditative, others are engrossed in activity; the religion of both may be equally real, genuine, and sincere.

True religion means a close walk with God. It means sacrificial service.

It means genuine and sincere obedience to God's laws—both physical and spiritual. It means personal and social obligations. It means brotherly love. It means an increased desire to grow in grace and in knowledge of our Lord daily. It means renewed consecration to His blessed will.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE CONVENTION.

You asked for suggestions on what should be done at the next session of the Southern Convention. Here are my suggestions:

1. It seems to me that we should have a Convention Committee on Stewardship.

2. We should do something, if possible, about deciding on a name which will be used by local churches, conferences and the Convention.

3. We should get our young people's work lined up under one head, that is devotional, missionary, benevolent, educational, etc. There seems to be a confusion over the terms. Pilgrim Fellowship, Christian Endeavor, Young People's Missionary Societies, etc.

4. Get the men of the Church lined up in a program of church work; possibly this could be better handled like the Methodists are trying to do with the Young Adults (24-40) in the Wesley Fellowships.

NO RETREAT.

On one occasion a Roman lad of the ancient army of Rome was captured by the enemy and taken into camp. In order to see how well he was drilled, they ordered him to march, which he did with all the pride of his nation. He was ordered to halt, and he came to stand at once. They ordered him to present arms, and he did, to their delight. Then the officer ordered him to retreat. The lad turned upon his captors, and, with his face burning with scorn, he said: "No Roman is taught to retreat!" So we should be able to say with equal force that no Christian is taught to retreat. God would have his army march forward and into battle. It will be a sad day for us when the church retreats from any obligation imposed upon her or from any position which she has taken against sin.—Selected.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

This week's letter list includes letters from three girls from Virginia: Frances Hensley of Elkton; Mabel Collier of Dyke; and Nellie Anne Hosaflook of Harrisonburg. I was very happy to have these letters for I know the girls who wrote them. The two summers before I married Mr. Todd, I did Student Summer Service work in the Valley of Virginia. I ate at Mabel's and Nellie Anne's homes while I was working in their churches.

At Nellie Anne's home we had a party after dinner. We played pick-up. At Mabel's home we had a regular party after dinner. We played pick-up sticks, and I won the prize for picking up the most sticks. The prize was a tiny baby's bottle! It was full of milk and had a red rubber nipple on it! It was so cute that I carried it all of the way to the big city of Chicago with me. Mabel served refreshments after the game. She and her brothers and sisters had some adorable pet rabbits in a pen down in the orchard. When I was over at Elkton, near Frances' home we went cherry picking one afternoon! I climbed into a tree and ate all of the ripe red cherries I could hold. What fun we had getting down from the trees! I am glad that all three of you are enjoying your page in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Thank you for your kind suggestions! How about writing a poem or prayer or grace for meals for me to put in the page sometime?

Last week I told you about the Children's Fellowship of Prayer book. This week I want to tell you about a magazine which I wish that each of you might have in your home. It is "Children's Religion," and can be had for only a dollar per year. It comes every month and is "chuck-full" of things which will help boys and girls to be better and happier. It can be secured from the Pilgrim Press at 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. I do hope that some of your parents will give it to you for a birthday or Christmas present in advance. Tell them about it and I am sure that they will get it for you if they can.

Sincerely,
DOROTHY TODD.

REUBEN BAR-BARUCH.

The Sabbath began at sunset. The children were glad when they saw the sun sinking behind the hills. They knew that they would have to go to the service at the synagogue, and they always liked the services there. As soon as the evening meal was finished, they began to get ready. Reuben helped Samuel and Baruch helped Leah, while mother finished the dishes.

The synagogue was dim when they went in. A large candlestick with seven lamps burning on it was about all the light there was. Samuel and Reuben went in with their father. Leah went with her mother. It was the custom for the women to sit apart from the men. They all knelt and prayed as soon as they got to their places. Then they sat still, and no one spoke.

Suddenly out of the silence came a voice. A voice that sounded far away and sad. Reuben and Samuel knew that it was the voice of the cantor, and they listened as he sang:

"Oh, come, let us worship and bow down; Let us kneel before the Lord, our Maker; For He is our God, And we are the people of his pasture."

Then all of the people stood and repeated the creed of Israel. Samuel and Reuben said it with the others, for they had learned it before starting to school.

Rabbi Joseph read from a large scroll, and when he finished, all the people said, "Amen." Samuel and Reuben listened very carefully while he explained what he had read, because they knew Father would ask them about it.

As they were leaving, Father said he was proud of the way the boys behaved in the service. Leah was anxious to tell them that she knew the creed well enough to say it with the others.

VACATION AHEAD.

Sue had stayed after Scout meeting to help Miss Sanders, the captain, put away some supplies. She was very quiet as she worked. This surprised Miss Sanders as Sue was usually jolly and talkative.

"You don't look very happy, Sue," she remarked. "It seems you would, with vacation only two weeks away."

"That's just the trouble," answered Sue. "I'm not going to have any vacation."

"Why, Sue!" exclaimed Miss Sanders, "you're not going to summer school are you?"

"No, I mean I'm not going anywhere. I have to stay home all summer," she complained.

"Oh," said Miss Sanders thoughtfully, "but you can still have a vacation."

"But it won't be any fun," objected Sue. "I most always have gone to camp. Now mother says we can't afford any trips. We had a fire at our house this spring that did a lot of damage."

"Yes," sympathized Miss Sanders,

"I remember. Your mother burned her hands trying to save things, I believe."

"Yes, and of course I feel sorry about that. But I did so want to go to camp," mourned Sue.

"What do you like best at camp?" asked the captain.

"Oh, there are so many things. I like nature-study and camp-fire cooking. Swimming and tennis are my favorites. Then I shall certainly miss the council fires and stunts."

"It does sound good," agreed Miss Sanders, "but most of those things can also be done at home."

"Oh, but it wouldn't be the same!"

"No, not the same, but equally enjoyable. Let's consider each thing you mentioned and see how it can be carried out. Take nature-study. Here in the city you have a wonderful opportunity. The parks are filled with birds, squirrels and various plants. Then there are opportunities for excursions into the country.

"But what about instruction?"

"Why not teach yourself? You can get helpful materials at the libraries."

"I believe I could do that," responded Sue. Perhaps I could earn a merit badge."

"I'm sure you could. You should be able to earn one in cooking, also. It is almost as much fun to cook at home as over a camp-fire."

"I already know how to cook some. I'll get mother to let me cook a whole meal. If only there were some way to manage the swimming. I won't be able to afford to go to the pools much."

"Here is some good news for you, then. I happen to know that over at the East Pool they are looking for a girls to watch the small children's pool. You have your junior life-saving badge. I am sure you can obtain the position. In return, you will get a season's ticket and free diving instruction."

"Oh, how wonderwul!" cried Sue. "I'll see about it tomorrow. I do believe I'll be able to do everything I do at camp. Perhaps I can forget about the rest."

"That may not be necessary. Sue, there must be some other girls who are staying home."

"None I know very well. Judy, Beth, and Jill are going as usual."

"You know, Sue, I've been thinking lately that it's too bad that you four always stick together. You are missing a lot by not becoming acquainted with the others. I've noticed Lysa, the new girl, looking at your group with wistful eyes."

"Why," said Sue in surprise, "I have thought I'd like to know her. But I didn't know how."

"Why don't you find out at the next meeting what girls are going to stay home," suggested Miss Sanders. "Then you can meet and form a club."

"Oh, that will be fun! Miss Sanders, you are lovely. I would never have thought of this myself."

"Yes, you would, if you had given yourself a chance. But you were like most of us; you were too busy thinking about what you couldn't have instead of what you might do. Now I'd like for you to do one more thing. Write out what you consider the objectives of a vacation, whether at home or away."

The Finns, Their Traits and Temperament

By HUDSON STRODE in the New York Times.

In Finland the stranger senses security and fair dealing straight off. Even in the cities he feels no necessity for bolting doors, and above the Arctic Circle it is an unwritten law that doors be left unlocked, for in winter nights the difference between a locked door and one that opens quickly may mean the difference between death and life to a freezing traveler. Oft-told tales of found purses being nailed to trees and retrieved by their owners months later are not exaggerations.

A Finn cannot see why people praise a man for anything as natural as honesty. In regard to the famous war debts to the United States, the Finns think it is pointless to make such a fuss. "Is it such a wonder," they ask Americans, "if I repay the money you have lent me? We did not intend to keep it, of course."

The Finns are relentless against boasting and pretentiousness. They do not encourage "personalities" among their compatriots. They are apt to discredit all "chiefs," and particularly those who rise too fast.

Rich men's sons are not pampered in Finland. Their fathers train them for the business of meeting life. "No tennis courts are allowed at our country place," the well-to-do son-in-law of Jean Sibelius said to me. "My boys can play tennis at school if they like. At home in summer they are in the fields with the laborers at 7 o'clock every morning. They work until the laborers quit in the evening, and the boys get the peasant's point of view."

The Finns are grounded in their folk-ways and cling to customs that reach back a thousand years. Yet there is no nation today more alert to new ideas. The Finns are not afraid of experiments. They were the first to try out prohibition. Some of their

Sue was busy for a while. When she had finished her friend asked her to read what she had written.

"I believe that a vacation should help one to:

"1. Build good health through plenty of outdoor exercise;

"2. Learn something new;

"3. Make new friends;

"4. Participate in various activities;

"5. Establish new enthusiasm that will last through the next year."

"That is fine, Sue. I'd like to read that to the girls next time."

"Thank you so much, Miss Sanders, for helping me. I can hardly wait for vacation to begin!"—Elizabeth Moon-ey in "Girls' World."

schools and hospitals and cooperative shops are so replete with modern equipment they seem to belong to future decades. Their factories and laborers' houses, often designed by their foremost architects, are calculated to beautify the district as well as to be models of efficiency.

History has taught the Finn in the brutal way which is her own not to hurry needlessly. Finns do not like haste, but they always arrive in time. An old proverb says, "God made time but man made haste." The Finn often is phlegmatic. When it is necessary, however, he can hurry.

Though Finns are not big talkers, they can be excellent conversationalists. And they can be eloquent with passionate appeal when something that matters is at stake—something that touches their patriotism. Patriotism is the Finn's real religion.

The Finnish passion for education and self-improvement is another kind of religion. The Finns feel a responsibility to uplift themselves and their fellowman. There are more university students in Finland in proportion to the population than in other country in the world. There are more books published annually per capita.

They savor living in their own peculiar way. A man of infinite patience, a Finn can be passive with the utmost calm. Yet without any prompting, he seems to know when it is his cue to act. And for all his cold-blooded rhythms and serene, poker-faced appearance, there is something dangerous in his make-up to be mightily feared if it is loosed. He himself does not fear death or destruction. When a situation looks particularly dangerous or grim, the Finn laughs and says, "Oh, well, nothing fiercer than death can come of it."

CIVILIZATION.

We are reminded from various sources that the civilization of our day is breaking down. This is spoken of as if it were a thing to be dreaded, or feared. The fact is that there is much in our civilization that should break down and the sooner the better. The world seems to have reverted to the civilization that ancient Rome and the Romans built, a civilization based on the principle that might makes right. Rome somehow fixed it in the minds of its rulers and people that their civilization based on force was to rule the world. If there was a territory, or section of country, that Rome desired she used her mighty engines of war to take that territory and use it as her very own. This at the time may have meant progress in many particulars, since Rome did make a real contribution through its civilization to law and to order wherever it was established. But Rome became mad with power and felt like she with her force of arms was to rule the world.

The world has passed beyond this now in the minds of very many, but it really seems that there are nations who have reverted to the Roman idea of civilization, feeling that might makes right. Such a civilization is doomed sooner or later to failure and may be our civilization, or that part of it based on this idea, is today on the very verge of decay and ruin.

There is a civilization that can and will endure, but no nation has yet been able, or willing, to adopt it and apply it as a thorough going principle in government and the conduct of its citizenry. Our Lord Christ had the vision and through the three years of His ministry taught the principles and the practices of a civilization that could and would endure. His "Sermon on the Mount" delivered a long time ago, and transmitted to us, by the grace of God, enunciated the principles on which a civilization could and would endure and we will never have a civilization that will endure until these principles are at the heart of it and direct its activities. We are a long way yet from adopting such principles; and the nations, even so-called Christian nations, with their idea of civilization are willing to spend millions on the principle "kill and subdue others, or others will kill and subdue you," rather than "do unto others as you would have others do unto you." We are spending millions in building battleships, for example, which battleships themselves unless used or destroyed in the effort to kill, or be killed, will go to the scrap heap in a few brief years as useless and out-moded. If the United States, Great Britain, France and Germany, thought of and usually classed as Christian nations, would spend one-tenth as much to give the gospel of the Son of God to the nations who know Him not as they spend for weapons of war, death, and destruction the world would soon have a civilization that would endure. No civilization with any hope, or prospect, of enduring can get around the prophesy uttered through revelation a long time ago, "The government shall be upon his shoulders and of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end forever."

Even the small pittances that Christian people are giving for missions mean far more in bringing about this government that shall endure and this civilization that cannot be destroyed than all the armies and navies of the world.

Again our gratitude is expressed to all who had a part in the above donations. This gratitude is the deeper because we realize that donations to missions mean and result in donations to the other enterprises and institutions of the church. Half of our money, unless otherwise designated, goes for Home Missions and immediately that we use this Home Mission money to start a church, or congregation, that church and congregation, even while they are being supported by Home Mission Funds will invariably begin to make their contributions to the other institutions and enterprises of the church. We haven't a church, so far as this writer now recalls, which is being helped by Home Mission funds that does not already make its regular contribution to the other enterprises and institutions of the church. In spite of this fact, however, there are yet Sunday schools that will take an offering for some other enterprise of the church and decline to take an offering for missions. To this extent they defeat their own purpose without stopping to think that when we obey our Lord's command to be co-workers together with Him in building His church we will give an attentive ear and liberal hand to help the other interests of the church. Furthermore, it has been truly said that "The light that shines furthest from home shines brightest at home" and the individual or a church most ready and willing to give, to share the gospel with those who worship idols and know not the love and life of our Lord are the very ones who are always most willing to give to the other enterprises of the church. This makes the missionary church a growing and a going church, because a real missionary Sunday school, or church, will always help all the interests and enterprises of the church. Such consideration makes us grateful beyond words for every dollar received for missions because we know that it means help to the whole church and all that the church is undertaking to do.

Gratefully,

A seven hundred-year-old Greek the order of Mark, Luke, John, and University from a London dealer.

This thirteenth-century codex is the work of two scribes, one having written the first three Gospels, while at least part of the fourth was done by another hand. Two portraits of the evangelists Mark and Luke, the latter badly flaked, have been inserted before the Gospels of Mark and Matthew. These portraits are not as old as the book itself, but are probably 500 years old.

The volume is further illuminated with gilt initials and ornaments. The whole is bound in much-worn red velvet over thin wooden covers, with a more recent red velvet back pasted over.

This is the first four-gospels manuscript in Greek to be acquired by the Duke library. In the last ten years there have previously been acquired a rare complete New Testament, a Paraxapostolos (containing the book of Acts and the Epistles), a lectionary of the four gospels, and fragment of Mark, with a portrait of Mark, all in Greek, the original language of the New Testament.

In past years a number of school of religion students have studied these manuscripts as a part of their theological training.

Envy is an ill-natured vice, and is made up of meanness and malice. It wishes the force of goodness to be straitened and the measure of happiness to be abated. It laments over prosperity and sickens at the sight of health. It oftentimes wants spirit as well as goodness.—Collier.

"Youth at Work in the Church"

Emily Carleton Lester, Editor

OBSERVANCE OF EASTER.

In a list on this page you will find several suggestions for young people's groups to follow in the Easter season. You may feel that your church is handicapped by lack of a pastor living on the field, or because you are temporarily without a minister, or because you lack materials with which to work.

Last year the young people in one church in the Valley of Virginia, led by a young woman, held services in their church during Holy Week. Their minister was holding services at another one of his churches and could not be with them. Study the things Jesus did on each day of the week from Palm Sunday to Good Friday, and plan a worship service for each night centering around that. You will find that it was on Thursday that Jesus instituted the sacrament of the Lord's Supper and you would have to have an ordained minister with you to conduct your commemorative communion service.

Several of our churches held Sunrise Services last Easter for the first time. We are interested to hear that those churches are eager to have one again. If your minister is not available for this service, plan one yourself made up of the joyous hymns and poetry and scripture passages which tell of resurrection and immortality.

The Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., has some Easter plays and pageants which may be borrowed. When you write, please specify what group is to use it (such as whole Sunday school, a young people's missionary society), and about what age and size group it is. Then you will be more likely to get suitable material. The Board will also be glad to secure helpful materials for you in planning services for Holy Week or an Easter Sunrise service.

WELCOME, DR. GRAY.

This week the young people of our churches in North Carolina and Virginia are delighted to welcome Dr. Henry David Gray, secretary of the Department of Young People of our denomination, on his first trip to this area. For many years we have known and loved Miss Lucy Eldredge, the other half of our team of young people's workers, and we are sure that Dr. Gray lives up to our estimation of the high standard of his fellows in denominational leadership.

On Tuesday night the North Carolina young people had an opportunity to meet Dr. Gray in Greensboro. On Wednesday he met with various groups of students at Elon College.

Tonight, Thursday, he is to be in Suffolk, Va., for a meeting at the Christian Church at 8:00, with the young people of Eastern Virginia. At the last minute it was found that he could go there and still have time to make his next appointment in Arkansas.

We regret that he will not be able to meet our young people in the Valley, but will put that on his list of "musts" for next time.

THINGS TO DO IN MARCH.

[From the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship Program Guide.]

1. The Observance of Easter (In cooperation with the church):

- A. Play, pageant, or pantomime.
- B. Holy Week Devotional Services.
- C. Easter Sunrise Service.
- D. Use of Lenten Devotions for Young People.
- E. Assist the pastor in personal visitation campaign.
- F. Seek to win others to Christ.
- G. Pray for great personal witnessing.
- H. Share in the church offering for Missions.

2. Continue the study of missions on topic of Christ and the World Community.

3. Give an Easter Egg Hunt to an under-privileged group, or a younger group in your own church.

HEARING THE "STILL, SMALL VOICE."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR MARCH 10, 1940.

Daily Readings—

- Monday—A Boy Who Heard—I Sam. 3: 1-10.
- Tuesday—Wait Upon the Lord—Psalm 27: 11-14.
- Wednesday—An Unexpected Healer—John 12: 27-30.

Thursday—A Prophet's Urge to Listen—Isaiah 51: 1-5.

Friday—Private Devotions—Matthew 6: 5, 6.

Saturday—Jesus' All-Night Communion—Luke 6: 12.

Even though God is revealed to individuals today differently from the Old Testament method, nevertheless His revelation is sure. He speaks to individuals, calling them to definite tasks of service. God may speak in a more convincing manner and more directly to us today than He spoke to Samuel. We recall that it was Eli, the priest, who caused Samuel to answer the voice of God.

The story of Elijah on Mt. Horeb hearing the "still, small voice" is very fascinating. The voice that spoke at Jesus' baptism, and the voice which Saul (Paul) heard on the road to Damascus are both indications of God dealing with individuals.

God calls ministers to proclaim His message; missionaries into labors in the heart of China, Africa, India; social workers into the slums of our cities and country areas; and reformers to the task of improving the world order.

God uses many ways to speak to us:

1. An urgent or distressing need is one of God's methods of challenge to us.

2. God speaks to us through His Word.

3. God speaks to us through friends.

4. God speaks to us through meditation.

At York Chapel, Duke University, is a slogan: "Sincere worship helps you start the day right." Each morning a group of students have a short period of worship called "morning watch." They do the same at Elon College.

You might discuss the value of the "morning watch." Each Christian Endeavorer will seek to make this a part of the daily task. Let those present tell of the benefits of private devotions in personal experiences.

To Think About—

1. Does a scientific approach to life cause God to be any less real to us?

2. Can we be sure that God speaks to us today?

3. Should we ever act contrary to our convictions?

3. Of what value is a conviction without action?

5. Why is necessary to pray?

Suggested Hymns—

- "Come, Thou Almighty King."
- "Open My Eyes That I May See."
- "Have Thine Own Way, Lord"

IN THE UPPER ROOM

LESSON IX.—MARCH 3, 1940.

LESSON: Matt. 26:1-30.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalms 73:14-28.

GOLDEN TEXT: "This do in remembrance of me."—I. Cor. 11:24.

Lest We Forget.

The Passover was a very meaningful observance in the life of the pious Hebrew. It looked back to the time when God had delivered the Hebrew people from the bondage of Egypt, and it had been kept more or less faithfully through all the centuries as a reminder of God's goodness and faithfulness, and of their dependence upon him. It is a good thing for an individual or for a church to have some reminder which keeps alive in them a sense of God's goodness, and their dependence upon him. The man who neglects these means of grace does so at his peril. Although members of the Church may be unfaithful and irregular in their attendance at the services of worship, they ought to attend the Communion Service. Perhaps nothing else can be had to come closer to the heart of Christianity than this simple but significant service.

Making Ready for the Communion Service.

"Where wilt thou that we make ready for thee to eat the passover?" One should not come unprepared to the communion service. As a matter of fact there are branches of the Christian Church which have preparatory services before the Lord's Supper, thus to prepare the minds and hearts of those who shall participate. Perhaps one reason that we do not get more from our services of worship is because we do not come to them prepared in heart and mind. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. It is quite difficult to live on a low level during the days of the week and then suddenly to rise to higher levels. It is not so simple a matter as shifting gears from low to high in an automobile. We should seek to make ready our hearts as we come to any service of worship, but especially as we come to the Communion Service.

Doing As He Said—Finding As He Said.

When the disciples obeyed the instructions, they found it even as He had said. It is always thus, Those who set out to do what Jesus tells them to do find that He is always able to keep his word. Those who obey Him come to the truth. Much of our confusion and much of the lack of joy in our religious experience is due to the fact that we do not try to do as much as we know. We wait for more light while we do not use the light which we already have. Let it be stated here once and for all that Jesus is able to keep his promise, that when He tells us to do a thing our experience will conform his word if we do it, that when He makes a promise He will always keep his promise.

"When Even Was Come."

We usually observe the Lord's Supper at a morning service of worship. It is, of course, perfectly proper to do this. It is well to keep in mind, however, that the original service was held in the evening. It is an impressive service whenever it is held, if it is done reverently and quietly. Perhaps the communion service is more than impressive when it is done in the evening, and especially as a candle-light service, or in a subdued light.

A Traitor in the Midst.

"And as they were eating, he said, Verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me." These words must have come as a bomb shell. Think of it—here was Jesus with his intimate band of disciples having fellowship in one of the most significant institutions of their religion. It was the high tide of their spiritual life. And then to have the Master say that one of that little group should betray him! No wonder they were, as Matthew says, "exceeding sorrowful." The words came as an icy blast. But they are a parable of life. Christ is often betrayed by those who are his own disciples. Through the centuries he has sometimes suffered more at the hands of his friends than at the hands of those who were his enemies.

"Is It I?"

It is a tribute to the members of that little band that when Jesus told them that one of them should betray him that each man instinctively asked the question, "Is it I, Lord?" How natural it would have been for each of them to think that it was one of the others. But perhaps for the first time they realized that anyone of them might have been capable of doing this terrible thing. In that dramatic moment each examined his own inner life, testing himself to see if perchance it should be he who should betray his Lord.

In a very tactful, perhaps in a secret way, Jesus made known to Judas that he knew of his perfidy. He announced that the Son of man indeed would do even as it had been foretold by the Scriptures, and he added, undoubtedly with a note of sadness in his voice, that it would have been better if Judas had never been born. One can hardly imagine the effect which all of this had upon that group.

" . . . My Body."

"And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it; and he gave it to his disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body." The devout Catholics and some high church Episcopalians, together with some other groups of Protestants, take these words literally. They believe in the miracle of the Mass, that is, they believe that when the priest blesses and sanctifies the bread that by a miracle the bread becomes the actual body of Christ. Needless to say the communion is for these people a very solemn and sacred occasion. Protestantism in general, however, interprets these words in a symbolic sense. They believe that the bread represents the body of Jesus broken and given for the sins of the world. For the sincere Protestant the service is just as impressive and as sweet.

" . . . My Blood."

"And he took a cup, and gave thanks, and gave to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; for this is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many unto remission of sins." In the thinking of his day blood represented life. Here again there is a difference of interpretation between the Catholics and Protestants. The former believe that the wine becomes the actual blood of Christ; the Protestant believes that it is a symbol of the blood of Christ. Both believe, however, that there is something real back of the fact that Christ would give himself for others. Through the centuries devout souls have felt as they came to the communion service that they had found remission of sins because Christ had loved them and given himself for them. Whatever else the communion service may be, it symbolizes sacrifice, it emphasizes vicarious suffering.

Coming Victory.

"But I say unto you, I shall not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it (Continued on page 14.)

MONDAY.

A MIGHTY WARNING.

"The multitude crying aloud."—Mark 15:8.

A mob having its way. The mob mind ruling. The voice of the mob dooming Jesus.

It has been said that intelligence and morals of a mass of men are always at the level of the lowest. It seems so, indeed. These days of ours are much of the mob mind. The tragic result of industrial activities shows shortsightedness and "collective unthinking." We in our homes removed from this sort of thing are also feeling the fever and pull of agitators about us. The lynching of Jesus is a mighty warning. Will we also crucify Him by leaving Him out? Does His word "Trust ye also in Him and He will direct thy path" mean nothing?

Prayer—Our Father, O God, our Father, grant us a right understanding of Thy way and a far-seeing eye of faith to know, that to follow Christ, Thy Son and our Savior, is wisdom and happiness. Amen.

TUESDAY.

ONLY A POLITICIAN.

"Pilate, willing to content the people."—Mark 15:15.

For the sake of passing popularity Pilate threw away his judicial ermine and became a political rabble-rouser.

Let us examine ourselves. We do not have to refer to the rabble, or to political crooks to find betrayers. Have we not been guilty of lending ourselves to something not just straight, or some base scheme? Pilate was our predecessor at this. He was just a politician. What do we more than these?

Prayer—O Lord, by the lust of men our Lord was crucified. O God, forbid that we in ever so small a thing shall lend ourselves to do wrong. Grant a double portion of Thy Spirit upon us. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

WHAT A PRICE!

"When they had mocked him."—Mark 15:20.

They scourged Him—crowned Him with thorns, smote Him, spat upon Him, mocked Him—that was their worst. The most sensitive of all spirits subjected to the coarsest insults and abuses by lowest of mankind. It moves us to tears. He descended to Hell. He tasted the world's bitterest of dregs.

But we thank God today that this price was our redemption—"that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life." What is your hope?

Prayer—O Lord, by the great price of our Savior's love constrain us to love Thee, and to serve Thee forever. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GOOD STILL.

"Which of you convicteth me of sin?"—John 8:46.

The goodness of Jesus maintained in the face of fierce temptations and dire trials, overcomes us. No wonder one of the centurions at the cross said, "Surely He was the Son of God." His goodness is like a river of water through barren fields; like rain to parched earth; like bread to the hungry. Jesus was good. He did good. He made others good. He makes us good.

Said Walter Russel Bowie: "He loved to take bad men and make them good. He loved to take good men and make them better." How much bigger and beautiful our lives when we let God's unchanging love come in.

Prayer—Our Father, O Lord, how kind is Jesus in all His Wisdom. Hold before us the vision of the things we ought to be and draw us tenderly to Thee. Hold sway over our hearts now and ever more. Amen.

FRIDAY.

HOW GOOD?

"Who was in all points tempted as we are yet without sin."—Heb. 4:15.

Jesus was good not because He was born that way, but because He kept himself without sin. Deep down in His heart He loved good, He hated evil and He was determined to please God. Thus He overcame every obstacle or could take any bitterness.

Therein lies the truth of our goodness. If we are ever to faintly approach sinlessness, it will not be by its growing up in us; but it will be by our desire for it, and our fight for it. And the struggle may lead us whence it led Him, through barren places, through tears and to sacrifices. But, like His, that desire and determination will determine our destiny.

Prayer—O Lord, out of the heart are the issues of life. Help us to keep it. Give us love for honesty, truth, love, joy, peace, or that we may never dare to be untrue even to ourselves. In Jesus' name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"Father, forgive them for they know not what they do."—Lk. 23:34.

"I have compassion on the multitude."—Matt. 15:32.

The compassion of Jesus for fallen men and His sacrificial willingness to serve their needs unlocks the mystery of salvation. Take these traits and add to them a measure of divinity, and what is the result? Words and a feeble mind fail to express it. All those who have the experience know the truth of a God-saved soul.

Would we yet feel a greater thrill, recall His promise: "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do."

Prayer—Thou Lord art the King of love. Thy love doth exalt our souls and fill our lives. Thy praise shall continually be in our mouths. Amen.

GLORIOUS DOINGS.

"... And all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him."—Luke 13:17.

[Notes of a sermon preached at the First Congregational and Christian Church, Des Plaines, Ill., during the Mid-Winter Meeting by Rev. James R. Clinton, D. D., our pastor-at-large under our National Board of Home Missions.]

Actions surely speak louder than words. What a man does counts far more than what he professes or promises to do. So is it with religion—the ordinary man is concerned more with what it accomplishes than what it sets forth in creed or articles of association.

"What doest thou more than others?" is the test.

Christianity has been with us for nearly twenty centuries. What has it done?

Look out upon the world today and compare it with the world of our Christian dreams. Are we not all tempted to say that Christianity has not accomplished very much? Force and fraud seem still able to pay fairly good dividends. Instead of turning their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning hooks, there are nations going without bread and butter in order that they may purchase guns.

Whose fault is it? Can Christianity be blamed because it has not accomplished more? We shall do well to consider how much truth there is in the word of a recent eminent critic—"Christianity has not been tried and found wanting; it has been found difficult and has not been tried."

Wherever the message of the Gospel of Christ has been accepted and its program courageously and consistently adopted, glorious changes have taken place. Let me mention three.

The Child in the Midst.

What a changed attitude there is today on the part of most people towards little children. It is absolutely inconceivable today that we should deliberately expose, neglect or abandon the child of the poor or the defective children of the rich. But ancient Rome did this without a sigh—polished and cultured Rome. A few of the abandoned little girls who escaped death were brought up by sorcerers and trained for a fate worse than death. And pre-Christian Rome saw nothing wrong in this. It was Jesus who changed the world's attitude towards little children. "... for of such is the kingdom of heaven." As Christianity penetrated through the Roman empire, the systematic abandonment of helpless children gradually ceased. And "whosoever shall offend one of these little ones" today, "it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and that he were cast into the depths of the sea." In the direct line of the scattered churches of the Apostolic age, we have schools, clinics for child welfare, and all sorts of institutions for the protection and training of our child life. Glorious doings!

Women and the Gospel of Christ.

What a different attitude we have today on the part of the world toward women. It is a simple fact of history that in the ancient world woman was considered definitely inferior to the male. It is so today in lands where the New Testament conception of life is unknown. Aristotle was a courageous thinker in his day, yet he placed woman mid-way between the slave and free-men. She was too good for one and not good enough for the other.

In the records of the Master's ministry I like to read the account of his "talking with a woman." The disciples had left him alone having gone for a time to a neighboring city. When they returned they found him in conversation with a woman and "they marvelled." That illustrates the thought of the ancient world about women. There would have been no marvel if he had been talking with a Pharisee or a politician! ... but a woman!

This changed attitude towards woman is a glorious change. It affects the very foundations of society. And such a change might never have been accomplished if Jesus Christ had not come to earth and declared and insisted on the dignity and rights and worth of womanhood. Paul had a little trouble in dealing with some of the more aggressive ladies of the church, but even in that early day I rejoice to hear him say "help those women who laboured with me in the gospel" ... Glorious things!

The Worth of Men.

What shall we say of the rights of men everywhere. Visit ancient Ephesus. See the markets of the world. You might buy all sorts of things there. Merchantmen of every variety.

Pearls, linens, corn, cattle, odours, ointments ... everything that ministered to the needs of the body. There was another market you could not possibly miss. It was the slave-market. What has loosed the chains of men? Who is the deliverer of bondsmen? Christianity did it. It took a long time to do it, but it is done. "And all the people rejoiced."

In the city of Rome today there is an old Mosaic which, the experts tell us, must have been constructed as far back as the 12th or 13th century. It portrays Jesus Christ seated between two captors. One is a white man; the other is a black man—"a man for a that"; and in the Mosaic Jesus is represented in the act of striking the fetters from the limbs of both. We do not know the name of the artist; but whoever he was he knew "the mind of Christ" and the purpose and the passion of his Gospel. For "in Christ there is neither Greek nor barbarian, neither Scythian nor bond nor free." "In Christ there is no east or west—in Him no north nor south—but only one great brotherhood throughout the whole wide earth." Another of the glorious things that Christianity has done.

Not all that we had hoped has been accomplished. It has not ended the menace of war. It has not established the kingdom of brotherly love. But multitudes rejoice in what has been done and we take heart of courage for the future.

And "we have this ministry ..."

THE QUIET HOUR.

SUNDAY.

THE AGONY OF GOD.

I listen to the agony of God—

I who am fed,

Who never went hungry for a day.

I see the dead—

The children starved for lack of bread—

I see and try to pray.

I listen to the agony of God—

I who am warm,

Who never yet have lacked a sheltering home.

In dull alarm

The dispossessed of hut and farm

Aimless and transient room.

I listen to the agony of God—

I who am strong,

With health, and love, and laughter in my soul.

I see a throng

Of stunted children reared in wrong,

And wish to make them whole.

I listen to the agony of God—

But know full well

That not until I share their bitter cry—

Earth's pain and hell—

Can God within my spirit dwell

To bring His Kingdom nigh.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

It has been the custom of the good women of our Missionary Societies, Ladies Aid Societies, and many others to make and send to the Orphanage on or near the Easter Season dresses for the girls up to eighteen years of age, so all of them can have a new outfit for Easter Sunday morning.

It is a real pretty sight, if the day is pretty, to see all the children marching off to Sunday school and church on Easter Sunday morning. I know if you who send dresses to us could be here and see for yourselves you would be real happy that you had a part. I truly hope many of our good and faithful women will remember us again this Easter season. We are very short on dresses for girls fourteen to eighteen years of age.

We have often been asked if we don't have lots of jealousy as some girls would naturally get nicer dresses than others. My answer is no. This is the way we handle the situation. All dresses come to the office and are checked and counted. When practically all dresses are in they are sorted as to size. The matron who has charge of the dresses will select dresses for girls fourteen to eighteen years and put them in assorted piles across tables and the girls of that age are invited from all the buildings to come at the same time to make their selections. They always get a fit in something. As all come to make their selection at the same time, they all have an equal chance. After the larger girls have made this selection of three dresses each (one for Sunday and two schools dresses) the remainder are put in the wardrobe.

Then dresses for ages ten to fourteen are put on the tables and girls of that age are invited to come and make their own selection, and so on down the line. If some girls fail to get a fit we make or buy them dresses of equal value. We have no dissensions or hard feelings. I thought our readers would be interested in knowing how we handle this kind of a situation.

Friends, these children are some mothers' children whose hands are cold in death. She can no longer do for them. God has spared you and you can. This is a challenge to you to give in His name.

new with you in my Father's kingdom." These words must have come back into the memory of the disciples again and again as a source of strength and inspiration. A few hours later they were to see the apparent end of all of their hopes and their dreams. But they must have remembered the calm and confident words which the Master had spoken, reminding them that there would come a good and great day when he should drink it new with them in their Father's kingdom. It was an assurance that out of this feat he would bring victory, that love should triumph over hate, that good should triumph over evil.

"They Went Out."

"And when they had sung a hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives." What a significant statement! Jesus knew what he was facing. But as he went forth to face it he went forth with a song upon his lips. What a difference the spirit of the man makes when he faces difficulties, discouragements, and defeats! Those who have a song in their hearts and a song on their lips can face the disasters of life calmly, confidently, and courageously. Music has power not only as evidenced by the use which is made of it in connection with military operations and with war, but in many other realms of life. No-

Marriages

PAYNE-NEALE.

A quiet home wedding took place on February 15, 1940, at the home of the bride's mother in Winston-Salem, N. C., when Miss Mila Flynt Neale, daughter of Mrs. Maynie Neale, was united in marriage to Mr. Clarence Payne of Route 2, High Point, N. C.

The ceremony was performed by the writer in the presence of a few friends. Mrs. W. M. Jay played the wedding march. The bride is a member of the United Congregational-Christian Church of Winston-Salem and is employed at the County Court House. The groom is a prosperous young farmer. A bridal trip was taken to Washington, D. C., and other places. Best wishes go out to this young couple in their new relationship of life.

W. M. JAY.

WALKER-SAUNDERS.

Miss Gladys C. Saunders became the bride of Mr. D. S. Walker on February 17, 1940, at the residence of the writer.

Miss Saunders is the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Saunders of Route 1, Elon College, N. C. Mr. Walker is the son of Mrs. W. L. Miller, Route 2, Elon College, N. C. These young people are very influential in their respective communities.

Only intimate friends witnessed the ceremony. Their many friends wish for them a long, prosperous, and happy life. Mr. and Mrs. Walker will make their home temporarily with the bride's parents.

where is this seen more clearly than in the hymns of the church and in their power to undergird men and women, to strengthen and to sustain them in the hour of stress and storm, and to bring them out more than conquerors through Christ that loves them.

WHEN WERE THESE CHURCHES ORGANIZED.

The Convention Secretary would appreciate information regarding the date of organization of the following churches:

Eastern North Carolina Conference: Cary, Christian Chapel, Christian Light, Good Hope, Lee's Chapel, Martha's Chapel, Moore's Union, Piney Plains, Pleasant Hill, Shallow Well, and Turner's Chapel.

Eastern Virginia Conference: Eure.

North Carolina and Virginia Conference: New Hope.

Valley of Virginia Conference: Bethlehem, Concord, Island Ford, Joppa, and New Hope.

Western North Carolina Conference: Big Oak, Hank's Chapel, New Center, Patterson's Grove, Spoon's Chapel, and Zion.

In Memoriam

JOHNSON.

Minie Oates Johnson was born November 13, 1885, and died on January 4, 1940, at her home near Highview, W. Va., following a brief illness. She was a life-long member of the Timber Ridge Church, where services were held Sunday, January 7, conducted by the pastor and the Rev. C. H. Anderson. Mrs. Johnson is survived by her husband; two sons, Doring and Russell; and the following sisters and brothers, Mrs. Fred L. Oates, Mrs. C. A. Nelson, A. C. Oates, E. C. Oates, W. N. Oates, and W. E. Oates.

Burial was made in the Timber Ridge Church Cemetery.

ROBERT A. WHITTEN,
Pastor.

MORRIS.

William Henry Morris, son of James and Mariah Wilkerson Morris, departed this life at his home near Virgilina, Va., on January 31, 1940, at the age of 71 years. The funeral and burial were at North Fork Church, conducted by Rev. E. R. Harris and C. E. Newman. He had been a member of the church for several years.

In 1894 he married Miss Lucy Boyd who survives him together with ten children and thirty-six grandchildren. The children are John, Walter, Willie, Asa, Fenton, Elmo, Mrs. W. O. Glascock, Mrs. Arthur Rice, Mrs. Walter Rice and Miss Annie Sue Morris, all of Virgilina, Va.

A useful man has passed to his reward. He was a good husband, a devoted father, a useful neighbor and citizen.

C. E. NEWMAN.

GLASSCOCK.

Nathan Samuel Glascock passed to his reward at his home near Virgilina, Va., on December 13, 1939, at the age of eighty-nine. He was twice married. The first marriage was to Miss Frances Shotwell. To them were born four children. He is survived by his second wife, who was Miss Hattie Averett. To them were born eleven children. There are ten living children, thirty-eight grandchildren and twenty-six great-grandchildren. The deceased was a member of Union Christian Church. He was a very industrious man, a good neighbor, and was blessed with a host of friends. The funeral was at the home and burial in the Averett Cemetery. A large number of friends were present to give evidence to their friendship for the deceased and to express sympathy to the sorrowing.

C. E. NEWMAN.

TAYLOR.

Mr. L. L. Taylor of Gasburg, Va., age 75, died suddenly at Roanoke Rapids, N. C., January 28, 1940. His funeral service was conducted at Williams Funeral Home by Rev. C. T. Rogers, assisted by Rev. Gordon L. Price. He was buried at Antioch Christian Church, Elams, N. C., where he was a member.

For a number of years Mr. Taylor made his home with his niece, Mrs. S. B. Spragins. Surviving are four daughters, Mrs. C. L. Allsbrook, Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. Frank Carpenter, Broadnax, Va.; Mrs. Jim Walker, Washington, D. C.; and Mrs. James Cozzan, Washington, N. C.; one son, Linwood, of Kinston, N. C. He leaves a host of friends and relatives to mourn his loss.

The blow was hard,
The shock severe,
I never thought death so near;
But only those who have lost can tell,
The pain of parting without farewell.

Mrs. S. B. SPRAGINS.

DAVIS.

Mrs. Elizabeth Spaid Davis was called from her labors on earth to her eternal home on December 26, in the ninetieth year of her life. She was born on August 24, 1850, near Yellow Springs, W. Va., a member of one of Hampshire County's most substantial families. Her husband, the late John W. Davis, preceded her several years ago.

Mrs. Davis was a life-long member of the Christian Church, uniting with the Timber Ridge Church in her early days. When Winchester Church was organized she became one of the charter members and remained a member as long as she lived. Funeral services were held at her home in Winchester, December 28, in charge of the pastor and the Rev. Carl A. Honeycutt, pastor of the Grace Lutheran Church. The body was laid to rest in the Mount Hebron Cemetery, Winchester.

ROBERT A. WHITTEN,
Pastor.

WHITE.

We, the members of Bethlehem (Eastern Virginia) Christian Church, the Ladies' Aid Society, and Woman's Missionary Society, wish to pay tribute to our beloved member, Mrs. Eugenia M. White, who left us to be with Jesus on September 6, 1939.

She was a faithful member of Bethlehem Church for sixty-five years. She was always present until her health failed; then she was still interested in her church organizations. She supported them with her prayers and substance.

We bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well, and extend our heart-felt sympathy to her children.

We recommend that a copy of this tribute be sent to her children, a copy recorded in our church, Ladies' Aid Missionary Society records, and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Mrs. J. W. FOLK,
Mrs. T. U. SAVAGE,
A. C. HINGERTY, Sr.,
Committee.

KIRBYE.

Dr. J. Edward Kirbye, minister and educator, who spent eight years as pastor of the United Church, Raleigh, N. C., passed away at the home of his daughter on November 13, in Memphis, Tenn. His life was one of service, his absorbing interest in the underprivileged classes, his natural aggressiveness and initiative directing extensive efforts in their behalf.

He was born in Eureka, Mich., on December 23, 1873, and was educated at Hillsdale College and the University of Virginia. He began his career as pastor of the old Circular Church of Charleston, S. C., from which he moved to Atlanta, Ga., in 1901, to organize the Atlanta Theological Seminary. From Atlanta he was called to the presidency of Drury College, Springfield, Mo. After a few years there he took the pastorate of the Medina Congregational church of Medina, Ohio, from which he was called to the large Plymouth Church of Des Moines, Iowa, in 1911. He traveled extensively in this country and abroad. He served as a representative of the Near East Relief following the World War, traveling in Russia, Turkey, Greece, and Italy.

Boundless enthusiasm and optimism were among his outstanding personal characteristics and the many tributes paid him upon his death give evidence of the help and inspiration he gave to the many people with whom he came in contact.

His last literary work was titled "Southern Sketches," having to do with the historical background of the independent church movement in the South. His last public address was given at Talladega, Ala., September 26, 1939, and material used at that time will be found in this book.

Honorary degrees were given Dr. Kirbye by Rollins College, Temple College, and St. Louis University. He was a Mason and a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. He is survived by his wife, Isabelle Clarke Kirbye, of Memphis, Tenn.; a brother, Darwin E.; a son, John E. Kirbye of Richmond, Va.; and a daughter, Mrs. Ira B. Schmidt of Memphis, Tenn.

Toward Solution of Convention Problems

By JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE, D. D., Secretary.

There will be many important matters to come before the Convention, but one should be brought to our attention now. Attendance on the Convention is a matter of vital importance.

Whether or not our next sessions will be well attended will depend upon the attitude toward their office of those who have been duly elected as delegates. Probably some of these do not know they have been so elected. And of those who do know about their election there are doubtless many who are indifferent and many others who have given only a little time to the consideration of the question of their attendance. Let us analyze the situation somewhat.

We have in the Convention fifty preachers who give their full time to the ministry. To these fifty can be added another fifteen ministers whose relationship to the ministry is such that they can be put in the same category as the fifty. From these sixty-five preachers, an attendance of fifty can be asked and expected. It is their duty.

We have in the Convention forty-seven other preachers who farm, teach, engage in business, or are retired. From these forty-seven, twenty could attend the Convention regularly and should. It is their duty.

This would mean an attendance of seventy of our one hundred, twenty-two preachers, or 57.4 per cent. But what a difference this seventy would mean. There were times at the Portsmouth Convention when not that many delegates and visitors were present. But this should be a foundational attendance, attendance upon which the Convention could depend. And this should be. It is their duty.

The lay delegation for the 1940 Convention will probably number seventy-five. Of these surely as many as forty could attend the sessions regularly. The laity of other denominations can and do attend the meetings of their denominations, and our laity are engaged in the same pursuits as they are. Here is a matter to which the ministers should give their attention. After the minister has himself resolved to attend, he should then ascertain whether he has members of his church or churches who are delegates, and then seek to secure their attendance.

This is surely not asking too much of our ministers and laity for the Kingdom of God and the Southern Convention. But it would assure our Convention of an attendance of one hundred, ten, and of course this would be augmented by the visitors and by those delegates who find it humanly impossible to attend all the sessions of the Convention, so that our Convention would make a fine appearance and possess a fine spirit.

But this can be only as we preachers accept the endeavor to build up the Convention attendance by ourselves resolving to go and by putting forth an effort to have our lay delegates attend. It seems to this writer that here is a bit of promotional work to which our conference presidents could give some attention, and profitably.

This attendance should be distributed over the Convention, and every conference should be represented. This, too, seems essential if it is our hope that the programs and plans of the Convention are to find rootage in the work of the conferences.

Two matters among others that will come before the Convention and that are vitally important, are the continuance or the closing of the office of Promotional Secretary, and the problem of publishing "The Christian Sun." It seems that these two matters should be given a place early on the program and each allotted sufficient time for a full and thorough discussion. This observation on these two matters relates only to their place on the program.

From remarks overheard and from articles published in "The Sun," it seems to be the thought of some that our Convention does not have a program and that objectives have not been established for us to work toward. Personally I feel that we have a program and established objectives that manifest a magnificent faith on the part of the Convention. For thirty thousand constituents, scattered over two states and with membership in one hundred, ninety-seven churches to undertake to support an orphanage which cares for one hundred children, a college with an enrollment of over six hundred, a religious weekly, a board of Superannuation, a program of Christian Education, a participation in world-wide missions, a plan of home missions, besides caring for the needs of the local churches and having these function as such in the communities where they serve, sizes up as a pretty extensive program to me. At least, I have always found it big enough to keep me busy as a pastor within the bounds of the Convention.

And as to objectives: there is the matter of evangelistic goals, of "Sun" subscriptions, of apportionment raising, of devotional morale. I think these should be made clear at the sessions of the Convention.

One of our officials states that the difficulty is that only about ten per cent of our ministers are working at the program, and if he is correct, then to me there seems the point of difficulty. And there is another reason for attendance on the Convention.

"Our only rule of faith and practice."

O Master of the Waking World

O Master of the waking world,
Who hast the nations in Thy heart—
The heart that bled and broke to send God's love to earth's remotest part:
Show us anew in Calvary
The wondrous power that makes men free.

On every side the walls are down,
The gates swing wide to every land,
The restless tribes and races feel
The pressure of Thy pierced hand;
Thy way is in the sea and air,
Thy world is open everywhere.

We hear the throb of surging life,
The clank of chains, the curse of greed,
The moan of pain, the futile cries
Of superstition's cruel creed;
The peoples hunger for Thee, Lord,
The isles are waiting for Thy word.

Thy witness in the souls of men,
Thy Spirit's ceaseless, brooding power,
In lands where shadows hide the light,
Await a new creative hour:
O mighty God, set us aflame
To show the glory of Thy Name.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The Promotional Secretary enjoyed being with the pastors and preaching for the people at Cypress Chapel, Bethlehem (Nansemond), and Suffolk Churches on last Sunday.

Mr. Sam Riddle, a member of our church in Danville, Va., is serving the New Lebanon Christian Church near Dendron, Va., and is living in the parsonage at Dendron.

Rev. Joe A. French and his people at Berea (Norfolk) are hoping to build Sunday school rooms and other additions to their church in the near future, possibly next summer.

Rev. Robert Lee House, who, since February 1, has been pastor of First Congregational-Christian Church in Richmond, Va., will preach at the Portsmouth Church Sunday evening.

Mrs. J. M. Harris, president of the Woman's Board of the Southern Convention, announces that Dr. Walter H. Judd, will be one of the speakers at their Mission Conference to be held at Elon College, N. C., next June. Dr. Judd has served our church in China as a medical missionary, and is an excellent lecturer.

Rev. J. Herbert Owen, pastor of our church in Worthington, Mass., preached last Sunday at the Ramseur Christian Church, Ramseur, N. C. He will be the guest speaker at the Elon College Chapel on Friday and will preach there next Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Owen are spending their vacation in our area.

The mission secretary has sent envelopes to each of the churches so that every person connected with our churches can make a special offering for Missions at Easter. Readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will please be sure that the envelopes get into the hands of the people, and that an urgent invitation is given for a large contribution. Our missionaries deserve our help.

Much of this issue of this paper is given to the "Principles and Government of the Christian Church" with the hope that those interested will keep it for study in the coming Convention. Comments will be made next week on changes that should be made before the book is reprinted. The Convention has voted to change the name to Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, but the printing in this paper is just as it appears in the latest edition of the book.

EASTER COMES.

With every rising sun the dawn of Easter comes a bit nearer. Yes, but what of it? This, and more. Today the world is being crucified as definitely as was Jesus on Calvary. Not for the same reason, may be, but just as effectively. Bloody murder rules the world. Death is all about us. Will there be a resurrection? Will better life follow the present

PLACE OF MEETING OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

The First Congregational-Christian Church of Greensboro, N. C., has very graciously invited the Southern Convention to be its guest for the approaching session which will convene April 30. The Executive Committee has accepted the invitation and voted to hold the session with the First Church of Greensboro. Careful consideration is to be given to every detail of the program. Certain standing committees are working faithfully upon the reports which they are to make to the Convention. We should like, however, to call attention to the fact that for a convention session to be a complete success, every minister and every lay delegate elected by the various Conferences has a responsibility that should be met. The people of Greensboro can be counted upon to do everything possible for the success of the Convention and the comfort of those who attend; but if one delegate fails to attend, to that extent the Convention falls short of complete success.

STANLEY C. HARRELL,
President.

TO PASTORS AND CHURCH SECRETARIES.

Why not begin now to make it easier to fill out next year's report blank? If some information asked for in the report could not be given, why not begin now assembling that information for the 1939-'40 report?

Many churches did not report the date of organization, the number of male members, the number of absentee members, the average attendance on the chief or principal church service, the Sunday school enrollment, the young people's organizations, and detailed financial statistics. This information is not difficult to secure, nor the records to keep, but both will require a little time and some co-operation on the part of the pastors and church secretaries.

Are reports of any value? Should records approximate accuracy and should they be clear? Anyhow, the Conferences, the Convention, and the General Council, ask for them. And certain ones are asked to keep, compile and edit them. It is an obligation and a responsibility. Let us who are under these keep faith and do our work as unto the Lord.

As a pastor, your secretary has made it a practice to keep a record of the church or churches he serves for each conference year. At the end of the year this record assists and checks against the record of the secretary. The record of the Burlington Church for the months of November, December and January, is before me. In it are listed members lost and received, the sums given to the various missionary and benevolent causes, and pledges made to the same. If all pastors would do this, it would greatly assist the secretaries, inspire them, and assure the Conference secretary of better reports.

Yours for better reports,
J. H. LIGHTBOURNE,
Secretary Southern Convention.

"The Quiet Hour"

By CHAPLAIN H. E. ROUNTREE

MONDAY.

A LENTEN PRAYER.

"Save yourselves from this untoward generation."—Acts 2:40.

Reflecting our past lenten meditations and feeling their urgency, prayer for ourselves seems to force itself upon our spirits, lest we fill our meditations with mere thoughts and words, and miss the blessing.

The word, "untoward" means "without any objective," "cracked," "perverse," etc. It is easy to judge others and conclude that this is an untoward generation. It is not so easy to examine ourselves and judge the untowardness of ourselves. Untoward circumstances may influence us and by them we may become untoward. We are in this danger always.

How can we be saved from this? The objective of Christ is the way. Let us pray for it. We need to be born again. Let us pray for it. We need to give to others the friendship, the good will and the kindness that Christ gave. Christ has set us apart to do that. Let us pray for this.

Prayer.—O Lord, our God, we are as nothing before Thee. Forgive us. Endow us with the Christ Spirit. Make us sensitive to His Spirit. Set us free from sin and death and release redemption of the world through us. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE EFFICACY OF SILENCE.

"Commune with your heart and be still."—Ps. 4:4.

"Be still and know that I am God."—Ps. 46:10.

When we listen to the radio voices that are heard in advertising; when we listen to the noise of the ball games and the parades through the city afterwards; when we listen to the rabble characteristic of this talkative generation; and then contemplate the scenes of Jesus before Pilate and on the cross when He "answered them nothing," we are shamed and rebuked into penitence.

We do not say that there should be no "rooting" and noise at ball games, nor that there should be no talking. But we do affirm that life is unbalanced and departed from a sense of true values. On various occasions Jesus conveyed the finest truths in silence. Our greatest moments are often those in silence. Words serve a purpose and are useful, but beauty of character is not dependent upon words. Instead of talking so much, instead of always being careful to explain or defend ourselves, would we not do better simply to lead Christian lives and move on our way in silence, just as Christ did.

Prayer.—Amid the noise and turmoil of the day, dear Lord, and despite many voices that call, may we ever hear Thy voice, accept it as Thy call, and answer it with the devotion of our lives. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

MY CHIEF CONCERN.

"He answered him nothing."—Luke 23:9.

"What I must do is all that concerns me, not what people may think. It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of his solitude."—Emerson.

Jesus might have blasted Pilate, but He kept silent. His time for utterance would come later when He would sit on the throne of the final Judgment.

Prayer.—O Lord, be with us in everything we do. May the power of silence make outstanding the true values of Christ in our lives. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE CHIEF CONCERN OF THE CROSS.

"Woman, behold thy son."—John 19:26.

If our observations are correct, the agonies of suffering and the pall of death are apt to make one introspective. It is easy to feel sorry for one's self and moan. But in the agonies of the cross, tender even unto tears, is our Master in his thought and feeling for those about Him and especially His anguished mother. Life had been cruel. The torturous nails burned his flesh without relief. But this does not dim His memory, His love, nor His passion for those He loves and those He lived for. Yea, the cruelty of that hour served to render more beautiful than ever their love for Him and His love for them. This fact lifts itself above every influence that would drag it down, even death.

He who, in His last agonies, stoops to heal sorrow and to comfort hearts, will stoop even now to heal the universe of its diseases and sorrows, and you and me of our faithlessness.

Prayer.—Our Father, pour out Thy love and forgiveness upon our barren lives. Make us responsive to that love and to the world's great need. Make us a little like our Christ. Amen.

FRIDAY.

DIVINE RESTRAINT.

"I have given you an example."—John 13:15.

So Jesus does as much for mankind by what He didn't do as by what He did do. In this He is the living proof of the forbearance of the Father, which forbearance is extended unto us in this day, and will be till cruel hearts shall cease from sin and come and surrender to Him.

O Self-restraint, passing all human thought, To have all power, and yet as having none.
O Self-denying Love, which felt alone For needs of others, never for its own.

Prayer.—O Lord, we would turn our thoughts to Thy patience toward us and humble ourselves before Thee that we, too, may be patient, loving and good. Amen.

SATURDAY.

DESPAIR—PRAYER.

"My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken me?"—Mark 15:34.

Our subject-word is that of Hocking's in his comment on the text as applied to the "abiding gifts" of the cross to the world. Though Jesus did shrink naturally from the anguish of the cross, beyond this His soul marched on toward one great end for which He came into the world. Paul calls it, "obedience unto death."

Prayer.—O Lord, our Blesser, and Jesus, our Savior and Redeemer, give us definite objectives for life, and endow us with the courage and faithfulness to stick to those objectives always, let the price be what it may. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE KING.

"The King of the Jews."—Mark 15:26.

William T. Ellis has said in one of his illuminating comments that he could not avoid "brooding, as every thoughtful person must do, upon the present plight of the world's Jews." Said he, "There recurs to my mind the awesome phrase of the leaders of Jewry at the trial of Jesus, 'His blood be upon us and upon our children.'"

Those Jews of Jesus' day certainly did not know what they did. Whether or not they still suffer for that crime, it was a sin passing knowledge.

Prayer.—Our Father, we would accept and acclaim Thee as King of our lives, and we would live as Thy loyal subjects. Amen.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

March is here and that makes us feel that spring is just a flower or so away! Already the yellow blooms of the sturdy forsythia are nodding their petals in the breeze. We feel the wind in our hair, tugging at us and we want to run away to play with it instead of going into those stuffy school rooms!

I wonder if there are boys and girls in your community who will not be able to see the spring come unless you help them. Not long ago I was in a home where there was a little crippled lad. His bones are slowly turning to stone. His little brothers and friends wheel him out in his wheel-chair, which the ladies of his church got for him, so that he can watch spring come. Each of you try to find someone whom you can help to see spring come. It may be some older person who would give so much to have a bunch of violets brought by the kind, thoughtful little hands.

In Thoughts of God I found the following story of someone who helped a little crippled boy:

LOVE IS VERY PATIENT.

There once lived on a big Southern plantation a family whose youngest child, a little boy named Charles, became very ill. His mother was ill at the same time and she could not care for her little son. She could not even go into his room. When after a long time the doctors saw that Charles would live, they left him to the care of "Aunt Leal," a gentle and loving colored nurse. They told Aunt Leal that Charles might never use his arms or legs again but maybe certain treatment would help him. They showed her what to do.

Aunt Leal loved this helpless little crippled child. Hour after hour she rubbed his poor little arms and legs and supported him while he tried to move them. She kept up his treatments no matter how tired she became nor how often people told her it was useless.

After a long time she began to see a little improvement and finally everyone saw it. Charles could hobble around; he could use his hands, even his fingers a little. For years he could not use them like other people but Aunt Leal kept right on rubbing and bending and urging him to try harder. Even when Charles grew tired and cross and wanted her to stop, her patience never failed.

The years passed and Charles was a grown man. He could walk and run almost as well as any of his friends. And his hands? Ah! his hands were wonderful, for Charles was a great surgeon. He liked best to work with crippled children like he had been and he often said, "When I have a very difficult case, I try to be as patient as Aunt Leal."

Will all of you make his prayer which follows the story in Thoughts of God, your prayer for today?

"Dear God, we thank you for all the patient and loving care we receive from those who love us. Forgive us when we are unkind or thoughtless. May we be patient and considerate of others at all time. Amen."

REUBEN BAR-BARUCH.

When mother called Reuben to get ready for school he was fast asleep. Samuel and Leah were already up and dressed. Reuben wished he could sleep all day; he was so very tired. But he knew that he must get up right away. He had been taught to always obey older people, especially his parents. So, before his eyes could go together again he jumped up.

Zenas waited for Reuben and Samuel at the cross-roads, and they walked together to school.

"Did you learn the Psalm we have today?" asked Zenas.

"I surely did," said Reuben. "I saved it until the last thing last night. It took longer to learn than I thought it would, and I could hardly wake up this morning."

"Samuel, what did you have to learn for today?" asked Zenas.

"I've just finished learning the Ten Commandments. But I didn't stay up late like Reuben. I did my lessons before supper."

When everybody was in school, Rabbi Joseph came in and said, "Let's see how many know the Psalm for today. We shall all say it together."

The Lord is a great God.

In his hand are the deep places of the earth;

The heights of the mountains are his, also.

The sea is his and he made it;

And his hands formed the dry land.

Oh, come, let us worship and bow down;

Let us kneel before the Lord our maker;

For he is our God,

And we are the people of his pasture.

When they had finished, Rabbi Joseph said, "I have a very good story to tell you today. It is the story of a boy your own age. He was named Samuel."

"Reverence my temple,

I am thy Lord."

He hath commanded

Thus in his word.

Help us, dear Master,

Reverent to be.

Make all our service

Pleasing to thee.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The two weeks of vacation and trip to Florida ended last Wednesday in a safe return to Suffolk. The rest and change of climate greatly benefitted us. We are grateful for the opportunity to visit the land of flowers, fruit, and sunshine.

We attended services in the First Methodist Church of St. Petersburg, Fla., last Sunday (Feb. 25), where 2,600 people were present. The first floor of the auditorium was filled long before 10:45 A. M. We were in our pew one hour and a quarter before the organist began playing the "Prelude." About two hundred persons were in the church when we entered. The pastor of the church is Dr. Allen Moore, a young red-headed, attractive preacher. The guest preacher for the morning service was Bishop Ainsworth of Macon, Ga. The choir director appeared to be about sixty-five years old. Seven of the fifteen male members and five of the twenty-one female members of the choir were gray-haired. Youth and old age sang together. Tourists and residents, church members and visitors seemed to enter into a sincere spirit of fellowship. A stranger who said she was a widow, fifty-eight years old, whose fingers were adorned by several large diamonds, sat by my wife, informed her that she was paying $350.00 a month for a room in one of the hotels, and invited her (my wife) to be her guest for lunch. She said: "I always invite some one to take lunch with me after coming to this church." We thought that was indicative of a fine spirit, in a great church, where the rich and the poor meet together.

We had the privilege of a visit with Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Harper, who are spending the winter in St. Petersburg. About two years ago Dr. Harper was stricken by paralysis which affected his right hand, his sight and his speech. Vanderbilt University gave him a one year leave of absence, on half salary, to permit him to seek renewed health and strength in Florida. He has improved, but is a very sick man. A brilliant student, an outstanding scholar, a great teacher and a man of wide experience and far-reaching vision he has made a great contribution to the churches of the Southern Convention and the cause of Christian education by his superb leadership while president of Elon College. The great buildings and equipment on the campus at Elon College stand as a monument to his genius, his faith, his energy, and his devotion to his church. The unfortunate financial depression which wrecked many other institutions engulfed the college and threatened to destroy its usefulness. The president of the college became the target of much criticism and his present condition is largely due to the stress and strain of those trying experiences. Many people are more willing to stone a martyr than to crown a victorious hero. In the building of any great institution the martyrs are painfully marked, and the cruel stones of unrelenting persecution are strewn along the pathway where many shining lights have blazed the way to glory for others. Some sow and others reap. The people of the Southern Convention owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Harper for his monumental work for Christian education. Silence is better than bitter criticism and appreciation is more desirable than fault-finding.

We return to our field of labor with renewed strength, with gratitude in our hearts for the friendship and fellowship of loyal members of the church, and with the fervent prayer that the kingdom of God may be extended unto the uttermost parts of the earth, and into every activity of human life.

NEWPORT NEWS ANNIVERSARY.

The First Congregational-Christian Church of Newport News has the custom of observing the anniversary of the erection of their present house of worship. Special programs for Sunday school and both church services are arranged for the day of celebration. In this way the interest and affection of the congregation for their church have been increased. It affords an opportunity to remind the community that the church is there as a spiritual force and that those who constitute the church are jealous for its reputation and service.

It has been the writer's privilege to be with this congregation on anniversary occasions for the past three years. It is always a pleasure to worship with these good people. Rev. Jesse H. Dollar has been pastor of the Newport News Church since 1936. He has done a good work and is in a position to do even greater work as the years pass. His people are devoted to him, and they follow his leadership in a fine way.

The anniversary service was held this year on Sunday, February 18. In preparation for this historic occasion talents (dollars) had been distributed to the congregation with the instruction not to bury the talents but to put them to use that they might earn. The goal was for each talent to earn five, each person receiving the talents to put forth his best efforts to see that the talents earned, and then on February 18, the day for their anniversary celebration, talents were to be surrendered, the increase to be used for a payment on the church's debt. There was much interest in the plan and considerable anxiety as to what the results would be. When the time of reckoning was over, the writer understands that the goal had been reached and the payment made on the church debt as planned. It is a good idea and certainly a Biblical plan.

For the past three years, at least, the Newport News Church has raised all of its conference apportionments, and on the anniversary occasion, which happens to come during the College Period, the full amount of conference apportionments for the college has been paid. This year the Newport News Church was the first to pay its college apportionment in full. The college greatly appreciates the cooperation and help of the Newport News Church as it does that of all the churches. There has been a steady growth in the membership of the church, and in every way the church has made commendable advancement. They are now in the midst of their plans for Easter services. As an expression of their gratitude for the assistance that the Convention has given the church through its Mission Board, this congregation is now planning for its mission offering to be received on Easter.

While they have been dealing with organization, apportionments, things material, and money matters, they have not overlooked the more important thing, that for which the church really exists. They are putting the emphasis on the spiritual and are planning to uplift Christ in a very definite way. They will also go out to give their witness and make their appeal for all who will to come and enter into the joy of Christian service and of worship together with them. May the Lord bless and guide pastor and people in their plans to seek and to save that which is lost and to send His gospel to the ends of the earth.

NORTH CAROLINA YOUNG PEOPLE MEET.

More than sixty young people, representing churches in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference and in the Western North Carolina Conference met with Dr. Henry David Gray for supper in Greensboro last week. Although it was a rainy night, more than one hundred young people were at the First Congregational-Christian Church for the meeting following the supper. Ministers present with their young people were: Rev. W. J. Andes, Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Rev. M. A. Pollard, Rev. Kenneth Register, Rev. D. M. Spence, and Rev. W. E. Wisseman. Mr. Henry Wise, acting pastor at Monticello, and Miss Tora Rudd, assistant to the pastor at Burlington, were also present with young people from their churches. Happy Home had thirteen present at the supper, the largest number from any one church.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND PARENTS MEET.

The Ladies Guild of the Shelton Congregational Church, Portsmouth, Va., gave a supper on Tuesday evening, February 27, to the members of the Christian Endeavor society and their parents. This unusual banquet was given in order that the parents might have a chance to see for themselves just what their young people were doing.

The members first brought their parents into the parsonage, so they could see our informal as well as beautiful meeting place. They were taken into the adjoining parish house for the supper. Yellow and green to emphasize the freshness of youth, as well as of springtime, were used for the color scheme. The tables were in the shape of an "E" for endeavor.

The following "Grace," which we always use at our buffet suppers each Sunday night, was said in unison: "Heavenly Father, we hope never to forget our dependence upon each other and upon Thee. For all our daily blessings we thank Thee, and ask that our meeting tonight be a time of refreshment to body and soul. For food, friends and fellowship we return thanks in the name of our Master. Amen."

The toastmaster, Dr. Poulson, introduced the officers and a few other members who told the parents just what Christian Endeavor was and what it meant to them. Dr. Hardcastle of Christian Temple, Norfolk, was the guest speaker. "Thermometers and Thermostats" was his topic and he compared these two instruments to people.

Great Spirit of Truth, who, within and about us,
Gives color and meaning to life;
To find Thee, to mind Thee, we're banded together
To honor and serve Thee through life.
With high hope inspire us,
Uplift us and lead us,
That we may grow stronger and bold
To serve Thee and know Thee.
We pray and beseech Thee
To teach us, Great Spirit of Truth.

TEA AT WOMAN'S COLLEGE.

Dr. Henry David Gray met with twenty Congregational-Christian students at Woman's College, Greensboro, N. C., on the afternoon of February 27. The girls represented many different churches and parts of the country—from Massachusetts to North Carolina. Two members of the faculty, Miss Gunter and Miss Stout of Sanford, N. C., were also present. Dr. Gray discussed with the group the reasons for an active organization of their own on campus and stressed the importance of cooperation between the college girls and the local churches and Conference. Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, Rev. W. J. Andes and Mrs. F. C. Lester were guests at the meeting, which was arranged by Miss Frances Foster.

Those churches that want help in conducting Vacation Bible Schools next summer are asked to write the Board of Christian Education at Elon College, N. C., making the requests.

INTRODUCE YOUR FRIENDS TO CHRIST.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR MARCH 17, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: John 1:35-46.

Daily Readings—

Monday—A Transformed Servant—Phil. 8-21.

Tuesday—Christ's Mission to Save—Matt. 18:11-14.

Wednesday—Blessing of Soul-Winning—James 5:19, 20.

Thursday—A Tragic Condition—Psalm 142:1-4.

Friday—A Heathen Won by Kindness—II Kings 5:14-19.

Saturday—One Whom Christ Won—John 8:1-11.

Followers of Christ must of necessity be witnesses for Him. To fail to witness for Him means that we are not devoted followers. For instance, we would not think of slighting our best friends. We would introduce all our friends to special guests and acquaintances.

Young people have favorite screen stars, athletic stars, heroes and heroines in many other fields of endeavor. They talk to each other about these leading personalities in their special fields. The greatest personality and hero of all ages is Jesus. We need to introduce our friends to Him. Remember, Andrew found Simon Peter; Philip found Nathaniel.

Introducing one's friends to Christ need not be an unnatural or difficult task. There is no better way to do this than by inviting friends to Christian Endeavor meetings and winning them to active membership, so that they willingly subscribe to the articles of the pledge.

Let three persons speak on the following topics: (1) The importance of evangelism, (2) Evangelism is a normal method of winning for Christ, (3) Methods which young people may use to introduce their friends to Christ.

No doubt you would like to form a class to study and discuss evangelism under the leadership of your pastor. Win someone by Easter Sunday. Become personal workers for Christ.

Make a religious survey of your community to discover those who have not been reached for Christ. Plan to reach them by some method.

When we realize that less than half of the people of our country are church members it is astonishing. "The fields are white unto harvest." "Go, work in my vineyard." These are challenges to us.

Principles and Government of the Christian Church

Excerpts from The Manual

When the Southern Convention meets in Greensboro, N. C., on April 30, it will face the necessity of making some changes in its methods of procedure. Because the "Principles and Government of the Christian Church" is out of print, the debated sections are given below. Please preserve this SUN for future use, especially if you are a delegate to the Convention. EDITOR.

PRINCIPLES.

CHAPTER I.

THE CHURCH.

The Church is composed of all who exercise repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ (Acts 20:21).

The Savior came into the world to establish one Church (Matt. 16:18), the members of which belong to various denominations differing widely in doctrine and government, yet they form but one body, of which Christ is the head (Col. 1:18).

All the redeemed are brethren (Matt. 23:8), and members of the Church (I Cor. 12:20). The Church is spoken of in the Scriptures as a family (Eph. 3:15), of which God is the Father (Eph. 4:6), and as a household (Eph. 2:19), which should not be divided against itself (Mark 3:25; Matt. 12:25).

All the principles, operations (I Cor. 12:6), and officers (Rom. 12:4-8) of the Church ought to harmonize in the administration (I Cor. 12:5) of the Redeemer's Kingdom on earth, to the end that all the members (I Cor. 12:12, 13) may be brought into fellowship (I John 1:3, 6, 7) and communion with one another.

CHAPTER II.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Christian Church may be composed of any or all who constitute the body, of which Christ is the Head (Col. 1:18).

But at present it embraces only a part of those who desire the reformation of the wicked (Isa. 55:7; Matt. 9:13), the spiritual worship of God (John 4:24), and the union of the great Brotherhood of Christians (John 10:16; 17:11).

It is opposed to contentions and schisms in the body (I Cor. 12:25). Envy, strife, and divisions (I Cor. 3:3, 4) are hurtful to the Church, and antagonistic to the teachings and spirit of Christianity (I Cor. 1:10).

Its purpose is to propagate the fruit of the Spirit (Gal. 5:22, 23), and to cultivate brotherly love (I John 4:7).

It fosters the essential doctrines of evangelical Christianity, by which the Church has been established and maintained.

It remands to private judgment the peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and divided the Christian world, and hence they cease to be matters for debate, when such debate tends to strife (See I Cor. 1:13).

It requires no compromise of faith on the part of any follower of Christ in order to have communion or fellowship (Matt. 23:8; Luke 9:50). In it denominational distinctions cease to exist and Christian love binds the Brotherhood together (I Thess. 4:9).

Its mission will be consummated in the conversion of the world (Psalms 2:8), the union of all the followers of Christ (Eph. 4:13), and His reign in human society.

CHAPTER III.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Scriptures contain an abundance of indisputable (II Tim. 3:16, 17) truth sufficient for the moral guidance and spiritual enlightenment of man, and adapted to the comprehension of all (Isa. 35:8; Prov. 8:5 and 9:4). The Christian Church, therefore, remands to private judgment those doctrines and tenets which divide the followers of Christ (Gal. 5:15), and takes the following cardinal principles as the groundwork of organization:

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church (Eph. 1:22, 23).

(2) Christian (Isa. 62:2; Acts 11:26) is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice (II Tim. 3:16, 17; Psalm 19:7, 8, 11).

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership (Matt. 7:21; John 3:15; 1:12).

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all (Rom. 14:4; Matt. 15:9; Gal. 5:13).

GOVERNMENT.

CHAPTER I.

SECTION I.

A CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

A Christian Church is an autonomous body of the followers of Christ, organized for religious instruction, spiritual improvement, the worship of God, and the propagation of the Gospel.

SECTION II.

ORGANIZATION OF A CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Those wishing to organize a Christian Church shall enter into the following agreement:

We, whose names are hereunto affixed, members, as we trust, of the body of Christ, having exercised repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ (Acts 20:21), being desirous of associating ourselves together as a church, agree to be governed by the following principles:

(a) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(b) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(c) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(d) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(e) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all. (See Chapter III, Principles of the Church.)

Those who have signed the above agreement should elect a secretary, a treasurer, and other officers or committees, as may be necessary. They should also elect two, or more, deacons. Respecting the election of deacons time should be had for consultation, reflection and prayer that the choice may fall upon those best suited to the office.

After organization, members may be received from any Christian Church, or other evangelical denomination, by letter, or other evidence showing their full connection therewith, or by exercising repentance and faith.

SECTION III.

DUTIES OF A CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Every Christian Church should procure a pastor for full time, or associate itself with other contiguous churches in the employment of a pastor (Heb. 13:17). The call should preferably be for an indefinite period, and when a change is desired by either party, three months' notice should be given.

The church should faithfully teach the duty of Scriptural giving, that it may provide for the liberal support of the pastor (Luke 10:7; I Cor. 9:14), current expenses, and the general work of the Kingdom.

It shall be the duty of every church, as early as practicable after its organization, to unite with the Conference in whose bounds it may be located, and to comply with all requests of the Conference to which it may belong.

Every church should celebrate the Lord's Supper at least four times a year, and hold four conferences for the transaction of business.

The church should observe the ordinances and maintain gospel worship in its purity and simplicity.

SECTION IV.

DUTIES OF MEMBERS.

1. It is the duty of every member of the church to give of his substance to the support of the church and its enterprises as the Lord hath prospered him (I Cor. 16:1, 2).

2. All members should attend, if possible, the stated meetings of the church, especially every church session, or quarterly conference (Heb. 10:25), and identify themselves with the Sunday school.

3. They should read the Bible and engage in private devotions daily, visit the sick, and minister to the needy (James 1:27).

4. The members should earnestly endeavor to keep peace and unity in the church (Eph. 4:3).

5. They should bear one another's burdens (Gal. 6:2).

6. They should endeavor to prevent one another's stumbling (Rom. 14:13).

7. They should steadfastly continue in the faith of the gospel (Acts 2:42) and the worship of God.

8. They should pray for and sympathize with one another (Eph. 6:18).

CHAPTER II.

SECTION I.

OFFICERS OF A CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The necessary officers of the church are pastor, deacons, secretary, and treasurer.

SECTION 2.

DUTIES OF A PASTOR.

1. The pastoral office is the highest and most important in the church, and the person who holds this office is, in Scripture, charged with various duties (Acts 20:28; Jer. 3:15; I Peter 5:1; I Cor. 4:1; II Cor. 5:20; Titus 1:7).

2. It is his duty to be a member of some Christian Church and of the Conference in which he labors.

3. It is the duty of the pastor to give himself continually to prayer and to the ministry of the Word (Acts 6:4), and to study to show himself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed (II Tim. 2:15).

4. It is his duty to see that the churches to which he ministers, and also the members thereof, discharge the obligations imposed by the Holy Scriptures and by the Church government.

5. It is his duty to comply with all the requests, and to execute to the best of his ability all the orders of the Conference.

6. It is his duty to be present at every annual meeting of the Conference and submit a written report of his labors. If prevented from attending he shall report by letter.

7. It is his duty to promote the peace and unity of the church, to study its interests, and labor for its prosperity.

SECTION III.

DUTIES OF DEACONS.

1. It is the duty of the deacons (Phil 1:1; I Tim. 3:8-15) to minister to the needs of the poor, and to have charge of the temporal affairs of the church (Acts 6:1-6).

2. They should make suitable arrangements for, and assist the pastor in the administration of the ordinances.

3. One of the deacons, in the absence of the pastor, should preside in all business meetings of the church, and conduct the public worship of the congregation, when desired to do so, by reading the Word of God, singing, prayer, and exhortation.

4. They should counsel with the pastor in the government and spiritual affairs of the church.

SECTION IV.

DUTIES OF THE SECRETARY.

1. The secretary shall record all the transactions of the church, whether at stated, or called sessions or conferences thereof.

2. He shall record all admissions into the church, and state whether they be by letter or upon profession of faith; if by letter, state from what church or denomination the applicants came, always affixing the date.

3. He shall keep an account of all deaths, change of name by marriage, dismissals, suspensions, and expulsions, with marginal remarks on the church roll, and by order of the church shall issue the following letter of transfer and commendation:

CERTIFICATE OF MEMBERSHIP AND COMMENDATION.
.....19..

This certifies that is a member; in good standing, of Christian Church, Conference, and is, at own request hereby dismissed from this church to unite with Church, and when so received responsibility to this church will cease.

Done this the day of19..
....., Secretary., Pastor

4. He shall attest all the acts and proceedings of the church.

5. He shall have in charge and carefully preserve all the records of the church, which shall be open to the inspection of the pastor and the church, and which he shall deliver to his successor in office.

SECTION V.

DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

1. The treasurer shall receive the dues of the members of the church, and the contributions of the friends. He shall keep a full account of all moneys received and paid out by the order of the church, to whom paid and for what purpose. He may serve also as collector, to whom the church may appoint one or more assistants.

2. He shall report in writing, quarterly, or as often as the church may require, all receipts and disbursements.

CHAPTER III.

MINISTERS.

SECTION I.

CANDIDATES.

1. A candidate for the ministry in the Christian Church shall make application to the Educational Committee of the Conference to which his church belongs.

2. Such candidate shall be of approval moral character and religious experience, shall give promise of ability to make suitable preparation, and shall be recommended by the church of which he is a member.

3. The Committee on Education shall examine him as to his fitness and qualifications, and, if admitted to the class, shall have oversight of his training and preparation; and he shall report annually to the committee. Failure to report himself or to make satisfactory progress shall be sufficient ground for dismissal from the roll of candidates.

4. All applications for aid from the Conference shall be through the Committee on Education.

SECTION II.

LICENTIATES.

1. A licentiate is one authorized by the Conference to preach the gospel as a probationer until he shall give proof of his ability to teach efficiently the great doctrine of salvation (I Tim. 5:22).

2. Special care should be taken that the candidate for licensure possess the moral, religious and literary qualifications necessary to fit him for the responsible position to which he aspires (II Tim. 2:2 and I Tim. 3:6).

3. He shall, therefore, be a man of unblemished Christian character, have a good English education, and be recommended by the church of which he is a member.

4. That there may be no doubt of his qualifications, he shall be carefully examined by the Committee on Education as to:

(a) His religious experience, and his call to the ministry (Rom. 10:15).

(b) His knowledge of the Principles and Government of the Christian Church.

(c) His knowledge of the Scriptures, and of the leading doctrines of Christianity.

(d) His knowledge of arithmetic, geography, English grammar, history of the United States, physiology and elements of rhetoric.

5. The committee shall report to the Conference as to the qualifications of the applicant, and his fitness for licensure.

6. The Conference, being satisfied with his proficiency, shall provide for his licensure during the session of Conference or some subsequent time and shall issue a certificate of licensure, signed by the president and the secretary.

7. When a licentiate shall have preached for a reasonable length of time, and his services do not appear profitable to the churches, the Conference should revoke his license, and demand the return of his credentials.

SECTION III.

ELDERS.

1. The importance and responsibility of the office of an elder require that the incumbent possess an unsullied Christian character, a good education and a ready capacity to teach (I Tim. 3:2).

2. Every candidate for ordination shall have preached a sufficient length of time to give ample evidence of usefulness to the church (I Tim. 3:6, 7), and be recommended by one or more of the congregations to which he has ministered.

3. He shall also be carefully examined by the Educational Committee of his Conference upon the following three years' course of study, the examination to be held at each successive Conference until the course is satisfactorily completed:

First year—(1) English and American literature, (2) general history, (3) church history, (4) theology—revealed, (5) homiletics.

Second year—(1) physics, (2) mental science, (3) history of the Christian Church, (4) Biblical literature, (5) theology—pastoral.

Third year—(1) higher rhetoric, (2) astronomy, (3) geology, (4) moral science, (5) history of the Protestant Reformation, (6) theology—natural.

4. Those who have certificates of satisfactory examinations on the literary studies of this course, or have a diploma from a college of recognized standing, will be required to stand examinations only on the theological studies of the course. If the candidate can stand these examinations satisfactorily in less than three years, he will be permitted to do so.

5. When the course of study shall have been completed, the Committee on Education shall report to Conference with recommendations as to ordination.

6. Conference, being satisfied with the qualifications of the candidate, shall appoint an ordaining presbytery of three elders to set him apart to the sacred office of an elder in the church. Persons so ordained thereby become members of the Conference.

7. Ordained ministers of other evangelical denominations may be received as elders, without reordination, provided they pass an approved examination and show satisfactory knowledge of the Principles and Government of the Christian Church and are recommended by the Committee on Education.

CHAPTER IV.

CONFERENCES.

SECTION I.

MEMBERSHIP.

1. A Conference shall be composed of all ordained ministers and all churches organized upon the cardinal principles of the Christian Church, within certain specified bounds.

2. Every church shall have lay representation, and each Conference shall fix its own ratio. Provided, that each church shall have at least one delegate and that no church shall have more than four.

3. One-fourth of the ministers belonging to the Conference, and as many delegates as may be present having met at the time and place appointed, shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

4. Ministers and messengers from sister Conferences and representatives of church institutions shall be entitled to seats as deliberative members, but may not vote. Ministers in good standing in any other evangelical church may be introduced to Conference as visiting brethren.

SECTION II. ORGANIZATION.

1. Conference shall meet on its own adjournment, and be called to order by the president; or, in his absence, by the vice-president. Then shall follow religious exercises.

2. The secretary (or, in his absence, any one invited to act pro tempore) shall then proceed to read the roll of ministers and churches belonging to Conference, and if a quorum be present the fact shall be announced and the organization completed.

3. A president, vice-president, secretary, assistant secretary, and treasurer shall then be elected in a manner approved by Conference; after which an appropriate address or sermon should be delivered by the president.

4. All officers shall be elected for a term of one year.

5. Conference shall be governed by such rules as usually govern deliberative assemblies; or it may adopt such rules and regulations as appear best suited to its needs.

SECTION III. DUTIES OF OFFICERS.

1. The president shall call the Conference to order, sign all the proceedings of Conference, and perform such other duties as his office may require.

2. In the absence of the president, the vice-president shall perform the duties of the office.

3. The secretary shall have charge of, and preserve all the books and records of the Conference, attest all its proceedings, and see that they are duly recorded, and do whatever else may be imposed on him by the duties of his office.

4. In the absence of the secretary the assistant secretary shall perform all the duties pertaining to the office.

5. The treasurer shall have charge of, and safely keep all funds belonging to the Conference, and shall invest, dispose of, or pay out these funds only on order of Conference.

SECTION IV. BUSINESS OF CONFERENCE.

1. Conference shall meet annually for the transaction of such business as may advance the interest of the church and the cause of God.

2. Business shall be transacted in the order of time in which it may be presented, or in accordance with a program previously arranged under the direction of Conference, except a matter that is made the special order of the day.

3. Conference shall appoint the following standing committees: On Education, Home Missions, Foreign Missions, Sunday Schools, Christian Endeavor, Evangelism, Social Service, Religious Literature, Woman's Board, Christian Union, and on other subjects when deemed advisable.

4. The Committee on Education shall be composed of elders; all questions and matters pertaining to education shall be referred to them; all candidates for the ministry shall be under their charge; all applicants for licensure or ordination shall be examined by them; and all ministers applying for admission into Conference shall be referred to them. They shall also report upon the general educational interests of the Conference.

5. The Committee on Home Missions shall have charge of all matters pertaining to Home Missions within the bounds of the Conference.

6. The Committee on Foreign Missions shall keep in touch with and report upon the Foreign Mission interests of the Christian Church.

7. The Committee on Sunday Schools shall report the general condition of Sunday school work and make recommendations for its development.

8. The Committee on Christian Endeavor shall have the general superintendence of the Christian Endeavor work in the Conference and strive to make this organization for Kingdom training effective in all the churches.

9. The Committee on Evangelism shall endeavor to intensify the spiritual life of the churches, to awaken a general evangelistic spirit among them, to furnish evangelistic information, and to suggest a program.

10. The Committee on Social Service shall suggest service programs for the churches, that the church may be the community center in ministering to the whole life of the membership.

11. The Committee on Religious Literature shall assist in circulation of the church organ, denominational publications, and recommend the best literature for the people.

12. An Executive Committee of three, two of whom shall be elders, the president of the Conference being chairman, shall be appointed to transact necessary business between sessions of Conference.

13. Conference shall require every minister to make a full report in writing of his ministerial labors during the year; and if he neglect to make such report for three consecutive years, his credentials shall be revoked.

14. Conference should provide for the support of aged and infirm ministers.

15. If deemed advisable, the above committees, one or all, may be incorporated as Boards, in which case they should be elected. Such Boards are competent to transact the business specified in their charters, to which Conference must first assent.

CHAPTER V.

CONVENTION.

SECTION I.

MEMBERSHIP.

1. The Convention should be composed of representatives from all the Christian Conferences admitted into membership, and shall bear the title of the Southern Christian Convention.

2. The Convention shall consist of all the officers of the Convention, the presidents and secretaries of the Conferences, the chairmen of all boards of the Convention, the presidents of all church institutions, and an equal number of elders and laymen, chosen by the Conferences in annual session, in the proportion of one delegate to every two hundred members; but every regularly organized Conference shall have the right to send two delegates—one elder and one layman. The delegates shall be elected for two years.

SECTION II. ORGANIZATION.

1. The regular meetings of the Convention shall be biennial, at which a president, a vice-president, secretary, assistant secretary, and treasurer shall be elected, whose term of office shall continue for two years, or until their successors are elected.

2. One-third of the members of the Convention, half of whom are ministers, having met at the time and place appointed, shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but a smaller number shall have the power to adjourn to some future day.

3. At every biennial session each member shall furnish the Secretary with a certificate of his election, signed by the secretary of his Conference.

4. At the opening of every regular meeting of the Convention, a sermon, or address, appropriate to the occasion, shall be delivered by the president.

5. In cases of emergency, the president may call an extra session of the Convention; and it shall be his duty to do so when requested by one-third of the members of the Convention, half of whom are ministers.

6. Three months' notice shall be given through the public press of any meeting of the Convention in extra session unless such meeting shall be agreed to by the body on adjournment.

SECTION III.

DUTIES OF OFFICERS.

1. The president shall preside at all the meetings of the Convention, sign all the proceedings of the body, visit annual Conferences, and confer, counsel, and advise with the brethren, and perform such other duties as his office may require. The vice-president shall perform all the duties of the president in his absence or in case of death.

2. The secretary shall duly record all the proceedings of the Convention, attest all its acts, take proper care of all documents, records, and writings belonging to the body, countersign all drafts on the treasurer for the payment of money, and publish the time and place of meeting when directed to do so by the president.

3. The treasurer shall receive all moneys for the Convention, keep an accurate account of all receipts and expenditures, pay money only on orders drawn by the president and countersigned by the secretary; and at every regular session of the body make a full report in writing of all assets, receipts and expenditures.

SECTION IV.

BUSINESS IN THE CONVENTION.

1. The Convention shall have the supervision of all the general enterprises of the denomination within the bounds of the Conferences of which it is composed.

2. The Convention shall appoint a Board, consisting of five, on Publications, whose duty shall be to provide suitable matter for reading and religious instruction, carefully examine all manuscripts and other matter designed to be published by the Convention, provide for the publication of a religious newspaper, to be issued weekly, as the organ of the Convention; provide suitable Sunday school literature, and shall be governed by such rules and regulations as the Convention may prescribe. The board shall continue in office for two years, or until its successor is appointed; and shall make a full and complete report in writing, at each regular session of the body. The Convention should place at the disposal of the board sufficient means to give success to the publishing interests of the Convention.

3. A Board of Education, consisting of five, shall be appointed, whose duty it shall be to examine all plans and projects for the establishment of schools and colleges, and to devise means and suggest ways by which the educational needs of the Convention may be supplied. This board shall be appointed for two years, and be governed by rules and regulations prescribed by the Convention, and report in writing, at every regular session of the body.

4. A Mission Board of ten members shall be elected, five to represent Home Missions, and five to represent Foreign Missions: this board shall have charge and control of the Home and Foreign Mission affairs of the Convention and make a full report of their work to the Convention in its regular sessions.

5. Standing Committees shall be appointed on Evangelism, Social Service, and other subjects that require mature deliberation, with such duties as the Convention may prescribe.

6. The Convention shall elect a Board of ten members on Religious Education, five to represent the Sunday School Department and five to represent the Christian Endeavor Department; and this board shall have charge of the Religious Education of the Convention.

7. The Convention shall elect a board of five members on Superannuation. The duties of this board shall be to administer the funds raised by the Conferences, the Convention, or from other sources for superannuation in the bounds of the Southern Christian Convention.

8. Woman's Board. The Convention shall elect as one of its standing boards the officers nominated to it by the Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Christian Convention, and this board shall have charge of the Home and Foreign Mission interests of the women in the various churches and conferences of the Convention, and report at each regular session to the Convention.

9. The Convention shall have an Executive Board of five members, consisting of the president, who shall be chairman, ex-officio, and four other members, elected by the Convention, to whom shall be referred all matters of business which require attention between the sessions of the body. This board shall report in full its work biennially.

10. The Convention shall devise plans for raising funds to prosecute successfully the various enterprises under its control.

11. All difficulties arising in the local Conferences may be carried, by appeal, to the Convention, whose decision shall be final.

12. The Convention shall determine the boundaries of the local Conferences.

13. For the division of existing Conferences, or the formation of new ones, application shall be made to the Convention; and when the good of the cause demands the division of an old Conference, a division may be ordered, or a new Conference may be formed, when a number of ministers and churches sufficient to give influence and perpetuity to the cause are widely separated from any other Christian Conference.

14. The Convention shall also appoint a Commission on Christian Union, whose duty it shall be to serve as a medium of information and communication for the Convention.

Chapter VI deals with "Discipline." It is omitted here because of lack of room.

CHAPTER VII.

AMENDMENTS TO GOVERNMENT

All amendments or changes in the Principles, Government, or Official Forms and Ceremonies, shall be authorized by the Convention; and all motions and resolutions for this purpose shall be published in the Church paper three months before the session at which the subject is to be considered, and all changes may be determined by a two-thirds vote of the Convention.

TRIUMPH THROUGH SURRENDER. (GETHSEMANE.)

LESSON X—MARCH 10, 1940.

LESSON: Matthew 26:30-56.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 42:1-5.

GOLDEN TEXT: Not as I will, but as Thou wilt.—Matthew 26:39.

The World's Most Decisive Battle.

Gethsemane was the scene of the world's most decisive battle. To be sure there were no vast armies drawn up in battle array; there were no airplanes flying over head, or tanks rumbling along the ground; there was no sound of guns, or bursting of bombs, or clashing of swords. There were no vast numbers of people waiting breathlessly the outcome. There was simply one man alone in a simple garden dotted with olive trees fighting this decisive battle. To be sure he had a little group of eleven men with him, but these men did not seem to be particularly interested, for they fell asleep during this significant battle. And yet in a sense the destiny of mankind hung upon the outcome of that conflict. The conflict itself was really an inner conflict—the heart of Jesus was torn by two great issues, and if he had followed his human and his selfish instincts the whole history of the world would have been changed. It was because Jesus won the victory in Gethsemane that he was able to save the world, and it was because of that victory that we have the Christian Church. The issue was whether Jesus should follow his own wishes or whether he should accept the will of God. Thanks be to God that Jesus won the victory.

It can not be said too often, or with too much emphasis, that Jesus could have lost. He was no mere automation; he was not simply caught up in a great impersonal machine without any choice in the matter. Jesus was a free moral agent; he had the power of choice, he could have done otherwise. Gethsemane finds its true significance in the fact that Jesus deliberately and out of love chose to do the will of God no matter what it might cost.

Alone, But Not Alone.

When Jesus came into Gethsemane his eleven disciples went with him. Leaving eight of them near the entrance of the garden he took three of them a little deeper into the garden. But even these three most trusted, most intimate disciples were left behind, and Jesus went a little further, and there alone he fought his great battle. There are some burdens which others can help us to bear, but there are some burdens which every man must bear for himself. After all is said and done the great issues of life are fought in secret and alone. We may get advice from others, we may get help from others; but when we come to our Gethsemane, when we come to the place when we have to choose between our wills and the will of God, every man must face the issue alone. Yet not alone! The Father was with Jesus in the garden, for if it had not been for the Father's help Jesus could not have won. Let every man know that when he faces the great issues of life, and the great crises and the emergencies of life, that although he may be alone in one sense, he is not alone in another sense. The spirit of God is near, and with him.

Sorrowful Unto Death.

Jesus himself said that his soul was "exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." Matthew said that he was sore troubled. This is no reflection on Jesus. Although he was divine, he was also human. He was subject to the ebb and the flow of human feelings and human reactions. He came to the garden physically tired out as a result of the ordeal through which he had been passing, conscious of the ordeal through which he was yet to pass, feeling a sense of loneliness, depressed by the scorn and the envy and the bitterness of his enemies, disappointed because of the unfaithfulness of one of his inner circle, filled with sorrow over the sin and the suffering of the world. Then, too, Jesus was a normal human being, and he loved life. There was an instinctive reaction toward the thought of such an untimely and tragic death, and in the background of it all the unbearable burdens of the world's suffering and sin. Thus it was that he came to the place with agonized spirit and broken heart.

"If It Be Possible."

It is to be noted that Jesus did not think of prayer as getting something from God which God did not want to give him, but rather of finding out God's will and of finding grace to do God's will after it was known. In sincerity and in humility he simply prayed that if there were some other way by which he could accomplish his saving mission that God would reveal it to him, but in every instance he put in the words, "if it be possible."

Sleeping in Gethsemane.

It hardly seems possible that Jesus' most intimate friends could sleep through his agony in Gethsemane. But on three occasions when he returned from his prayer he found them sleeping. Here is a parable of life. Men are often asleep when great spiritual issues are being fought out. And often those who are closest to us know nothing of the great conflicts in which we are engaged and the great agony of soul which we experience. But he that keepeth Israel neither slumbers nor sleeps. His ear is ever open to the cry of his children.

"Arise, Let Us Be Going."

These are tremendously significant words. Jesus did not wait fearfully and he did not accept passively the coming events. By strength, by prayer, having found the will of God and having experienced the grace and the power of God, he went forward to meet the worst that the world could do to him, confident and unafraid. Instead of being a victim, he became a victor. This does not mean, of course, that Jesus deliberately sought trouble, or that any man should deliberately seek trouble or suffering. It does mean that those of us who are Christian, as we face the duties, the demands, and the disasters of life, should meet them in conquering and radiant spirit, seeing in them not so much as enemies but as challenges to victorious living and to inspiring witness. Jesus had found power through surrender. He knew that when he put himself in the will of God that he had all of the resources of God.

The Secret of It All.

One may wonder at the poise and perfect self-control of Jesus throughout all of the hectic experiences leading up to his crucifixion. Even Pilate, a cold-blooded, calculating Roman governor, marvelled at his poise and self-control. The secret of what Jesus did in public was the fact that he had won the victory in private. Back of Gethsemane there was a long series of victories in the so-called little things of life. It is a terrible mistake for an adult or a young person to think that he can go along through life compromising and losing in the little things of life and then be victorious in the great emergencies of life. Gethsemane shows us the importance of victory in little things. He who conquers his temptations today, and he who surrenders his will to the will of God today, is thereby making possible victory in the great crises and emergencies of tomorrow.

OUR PREACHER FOR THIS WEEK IS
REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.,
SUFFOLK, VA.

WITH AND WITHOUT HIM.

“I go a fishing.”—John 21:3.

The text is taken from one of my favorite passages of Scripture. It has so many lessons in it. Here I find, First, Lives that had left the Lord. How many there are! Men and women who have under the fine impulse of the Holy Spirit chosen to follow Jesus. That is what these disciples had chosen to do—to follow Jesus. The world has long since learned that that is the finest possible course, even though it does not do it. Those who really follow Him find it blessed. And their testimony is filling the earth. But these lives had left the Lord. Through many disappointments they had now said, I am going back to my old mediocre ways, to my unlit, uninspired paths! And so they went out into the night.

The night was perhaps the right time for fishing at that season of the year, and on that lake; but is it not remarkable how many of the instances of men turning away from the Lord tell of them “going out into the night?” And these lives that had left the Lord found a dark and dreary, and gainless business. “And that night they caught nothing.” Many more nights away from the Lord, and they would have caught something, but it would have been worse than nothing. What danger there is in turning our lives from the Lord! And how easy it is to do. Going fishing was not bad. It was from their duty, and their calling! Reading the Sunday morning newspaper is not bad, but missing church on Sunday morning is deadening to the spiritual welfare of the individual, and damning to the church’s influence and power in the locality. Listening to the radio is not bad, but listening to it when we should be worshipping God in the church is hurtful. The thousand and one little things that interrupt our worship on Sunday, and that interfere with our daily devotions throughout the week, seem innocent enough, but if they lead us away from the Lord they will empty our lives.

Second, Empty lives, empty boats. Their lives were without their Lord, and their ship was without its load. What a picture we have here! The hands of Jesus cupped about his mouth as he calls across the slight wisps of morning fog to the men out yonder on their empty boat. Jesus and morning came to together! It was sunrise when he stood at the end of their night watches! And it is sunrise for any man who will hear the call of the Christ and heed it. And what beautiful lake-shore language, “Boys, have you any meat?” No meat! No! Only the memory of the long weary night. The tiresome toiling, the rowing and hunting, and finding not. Empty hearts and empty boats. During the night they had not eaten their midnight meal of broiled fish; they had none to eat. And now morning and no breakfast.

Have you tried walking out on God? It’s lonely. It’s desolate. It may be shrouded with some false glister at first, but away from God leads into the night, and into emptiness. Men pull out into the night of absence from God looking for happiness; through many tests and roads they travel; they may even pile up this world’s goods, and surround themselves with the clanging of many cymbals; but when the test of real food for their souls comes, and the friendly question, “Boys, have you any meat?” is asked, they will have to reply, “None,” if they have walked out on God.

Third, A fire, and fish, and bread! All they sought they could find in Jesus—and more! All they needed he had. But do you notice that the fire, and the fish, and the bread, came after they had heard his voice, his command, and obeyed? Obedience is better than sacrifice. Ah! Better than food! That is what I covet. To hear his voice, and obey it! I know that he stands at the door of every life—every empty life—and knocks, and if his voice is heard he will enter the life and there shall be supper! Not hunger but food. He told them to cast on the right side of the ship and they would find. They did, and they did! They obeyed and their empty boat was loaded. And then the fire, and the fish, and the bread—and then “no one durst ask him, Who art Thou? knowing that it was the Lord.” Obedience brought more than fish, it brought faith; it brought more than loaves, it brought the Lord himself and his loving presence.

“Jesus then cometh, and taketh bread (taking bread again!), and giveth them (yea! and through them and the like of them he would give it to the whole wide world!), and fish likewise.”

Is something taking you away from the Lord? Sorrow, disappointment, pride, vanity, wealth, leisure, talents, time, sin, what? What is taking you away from the Lord—from the risen and powerful Lord, able to bring food, and fullness of life? Be it sin or sorrow, or disappointment or wealth, whatever it is, he can change your darkness to dawn, and your emptiness to a life filled with blessing, and helpfulness to others, and joy and happiness for yourself, if you will turn to him.

It came at the price of obedience—hearing his voice and obeying it.

Our Missions Corner

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Mission Secretary

At Easter, Jesus gave his life for the Church. It would seem that a dollar from each church member at Easter for the mission of the Church would not be too much to expect. That would be a big help to our four hundred missionaries around the world. Will you and your church do that much? EDITOR.

The above offering speaks for itself, though it does not tell all that it stands for and represents. Though the offering for the week is not large it means that there are very many who had some part therein and thus made a contribution to the wholly unselfish and divine task of sharing the love and the life of our Lord with others. For this we are grateful beyond expression.

Sincerely,

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

After all the rough weather we have had since before Christmas, on this morning of March 4 the clouds have passed by, the sky is clear, and the sun is shining bright and beautiful. The birds, too, are singing in harmony with the beautiful day. We trust we will have some days of clear open weather so we can begin to plan our farm work and get our vegetable crop planted. We try to raise all we can on the farm to help save our small bank account.

We have a great many appeals to take fatherless and dependent children. We have room for more if we had funds to support them. We try to run on our income and take children as funds come into support them. We admitted three little fellows last week. The father died about a year ago. The mother was reared near Elkton, Va. She was left with four children all under nine years of age. She appealed to the orphanage to come to her rescue and the committee authorized us to take them. They are fine little fellows, bright and full of life.

When we take in a child this thought always comes to us. What will it develop into by the time it reaches eighteen years of age? Will it be a child we will feel proud of, or will it not?

No one realizes the responsibility the workers and superintendent of our orphanage have on their shoulders. It is a responsibility that we carry day and night. The life of a child is at stake. Its success or failure depends largely on the training it receives during its young and tender years.

It is always a real joy to us when a child reared in the Christian Orphanage goes out and becomes a graduate nurse, or a secretary to some official in some big business concern, or has some other useful employment. We feel that our work has not been in vain. I wish our people would take more interest in helping to support the orphanage so we could reach more children and do a larger work.

C. D. JOHNSTON,

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

DR. TRIPP TO BE AT HOME.

Dr. Thomas A. Tripp, director of Town and Country Department of our denomination, is to be at Duke University next week to speak to students of the School of Religion and any others who are interested. His schedule is as follows:

March 11—11:30 A. M., in Room 301, School of Religion Building; 12:30 P. M., in York Chapel, School of Religion Building; 7:30 P. M., in Recreation Room, School of Religion Building.

March 12—11:30 A. M., in Room 109, School of Religion Building; 13:30 P. M., in the University Chapel.

Ministers and others interested in rural work are invited to hear Dr. Tripp when he speaks at Duke. Many of our people heard him at the Conferences in 1938 and will be delighted to have the opportunity of hearing him again.

RURAL CHURCH AND COMMUNITY CONFERENCE.

The Rural Church and Community Conference, conducted annually by the Vanderbilt School of Religion will open Monday, April 1, for a four-day session.

The mornings of the Conference at Vanderbilt, Nashville, Tenn., will be devoted to a forum on church and community problems and to special classes. Subjects for the forum discussions, led by authorities in their fields, are: "The Rural Church and Its Young People," "Community Building," "Preventative Public Health," and "Financing the Country Church." Dr. William F. Frazier, executive vice-president of our Board of Missions, will discuss "The Minister's Message" during each of the mornings, while other classes will be on "The Minister's Art" and "Rural Church Trends."

Each evening during the conference Dr. Edwin E. Aubrey, chairman of the Theological Field at the University of Chicago, will deliver the Cole Lectures, using as the general theme of his addresses, "Man in Search of Himself." The afternoons will be left free for denominational meetings, sightseeing, recreation, and special features to be announced later.

Ministers in North Carolina and Virginia who are interested in attending this conference, are asked to write Rev. F. C. Lester for further information.

Goliath is not to be feared if there be a David in the camp. A shepherd lad, trained in heart by communion with the Eternal, and trained in hand amid the pursuits of peace, is a bigger asset than implements of war. It is a significant fact that Israel's most picturesque leader and king got his early training, not in the council chambers of war, but under Syrian stars when keeping the sheep. The American nation, like early Israel, turns to the fields and the open country for its leaders, in business, in political affairs and in religious activities. The shop, the store, the bank, the political arena, the pulpit all turn for reinforcements to where frugality, industry and good morals are enthroned.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

There are few signs in a soul's state more alarming than that of religious indifference—that is, the spirit of thinking all religions equally true, the real meaning of which is that all religions are equally false.—Robertson.

Elon College Golden Anniversary

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY FUND.

The campaign is progressing slowly, but it is still moving. We are hoping that it will come with a rush as we near May 1. If you plan to join the Anniversary Club, and surely you do, your pledge or contribution would be of great assistance at this particular time. Quite a number have paid on their pledges recently. This will enable us to make further payments on our debt. If you have made a pledge and have not paid and find it convenient to do so, your check will be greatly appreciated, particularly before April 1. It is possible for this debt to be paid entirely. I still believe that it will. May the Lord put it into the hearts of the people to do their duty by the college.

CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS FOR THE COLLEGE.

I am sure that we do not need to remind ourselves that the weather for practically the entire college period has been somewhat unfavorable for church attendance and less inviting for personal contributions. I sincerely hope that the friends of the college may take this matter of offerings for the college seriously, as I am sure many will.

We are considerably behind what we were last year at this time. In fact, I imagine that the most of us are ashamed to look at the figures. The college period is over. The offerings amount to $909.90. The amount apportioned is $12,500. Needless to say, the college sorely needs the help of the church at this time. It is now making an earnest appeal. I hope that this appeal will not fall on deaf ears or irresponsible hearts. Won't the Sunday schools and churches please come to our assistance.

Easter and Missions

By J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Mission Secretary, Southern Convention.

Easter, which celebrates the greatest event in the history of mankind, approaches; coming as it does this year on March 24. If our Lord Christ had not arisen from the dead He would simply have gone down in history as another man and would thus have been numbered among the wise ones of His day just as Plato, Aristotle and Socrates were numbered and given their lasting names to history. But Lord Christ arose from the dead and thus proved that He was more than a mere man. The Apostle Paul speaking of this event says, "If we believe not in the resurrection, we of all men are most miserable." It is the resurrection that sets Him apart from all others who ever lived and proves Him to be what He said He was: "I am the way, the truth and the life. No man cometh unto the Father but by me." To make Him and His resurrection known among all peoples and nations is the supreme task that He committed to the church, promising the church if they would do this that He would be with them always even unto the end. We sometimes forget, or ignore, the fact that Satan himself was once in heaven and caused the same disturbance there that he causes on earth today. And the world today is to drive him out from among men and the children of men in the same way that they drove him out from the sacred courts of heaven, namely: "And they drove him out by the blood of the lamb, and the word of their testimony." Thus it is by believing in the shed blood of our Lord Christ and giving our word of testimony to that belief that the kingdom of heaven is to be built up on earth and Satan himself is to be driven out.

The glad Easter season gives us renewed opportunity to express our belief and give the word of our testimony by making an offering of self-denial with which offering we may go, if not in person, then through the support of the brave and noble souls who have gone out for us, to give their word of testimony in His name and about the power of His resurrection. Thus our church has most wisely designated Easter as the time for a special offering for missions that through this offering we may share with others less favored than ourselves that which really makes our life worth living. Just as Tanksgiving in the fall is designated as a period of giving to our Orphanage, that needy children may be fed and clothed, so Easter is designated as the time when those who are hungry for the bread of life may be fed and clothed with the spirit and the word of God. Nothing should be allowed to interfere with the Sunday schools and churches in making this offering just as liberal as possible in order that through self-denial we may show our gratitude, not to mankind only, but to our loving Heavenly Father, Who gave His Son to the world because of His love for the world. Through our Easter offering in His name and for His sake we not only obey the most emphatic command of our Lord, but join with Him in building His church on earth, against which church the gates of hell (all forces of evil) shall not prevail. Here's hoping, trusting and believing that all of our faithful pastors who wish to help make this a better world in which to live and to drive out Satan from this earth, may by their gifts show their belief in the blood and give their word of testimony in His behalf. We shall be grateful beyond all words for every pastor and every person who shall take a part in this holy and heavenly task.

No. 11.

Junius E. West,

The above picture will show SUN readers the fine and friendly face of Colonel J. E. West, Suffolk, Va. In all our membership we have no more devoted layman and none more loyal and faithful than Colonel West. The Southern Convention created a Mission Board in 1906 and at the second meeting of this Mission Board in June, 1908, Colonel West was elected President of the Board and has served faithfully and efficiently in that capacity ever since. Although a very busy citizen and business man, he has never found his own affairs too pressing to keep him away from the regular and called sessions of the Mission Board. All this he has done for the church without charging even a penny for his services. Through these years he has also served as Chairman of the Home Mission Committee of his own Eastern Virginia Conference. His unstinted and loyal devotion to the cause of missions and the church, which he has served so faithfully through all these years, should certainly be a source of inspiration to other faithful laymen in the church as no doubt it is. Here is devoutly hoping on the part of all of us that Colonel West may be spared many years yet to give the rich and rare experience of the years to the cause of missions and all that the church of his choice stands for. Too much cannot be said of a layman who without any earthly reward, or hope of reward, serves so faithfully the church of his devotion.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Don't forget the mission offering at Easter.

The Mid-Year Session of the Valley of Virginia Central Conference will be held on Thursday, March 28, at Bethlehem Christian Church.

Miss Muriel Lester, one of England's best-known Christian leaders, will speak at the United Church in Raleigh, N. C., on Tuesday evening, April 2, at 8 o'clock.

Our new church at Asheboro has bought a nice corner lot on which to erect a building, and the group of thirty-five already have a few hundred dollars in the building fund. Congratulations and good wishes! Rev. A. Lanson Granger is the pastor, and the work was begun last summer.

Rev. F. C. Lester was the guest of the Wake Chapel Sunday School, Fuquay Springs, N. C., on last Sunday, when he taught the adult and young people's classes and spoke to the entire school on the purpose of a Sunday school and the relation of the local church to the denomination.

Since the quadrennial convention of the World's Sunday School Association, which was to have been held next July in Durban, South Africa, cannot take place because of the war, the North American Administrative Committee will meet May 8-10, at Lake Mohonk, New York. Arrangements are being made by the Rev. Forrest L. Knapp, the new associate general secretary.

Radio news from Raleigh includes the following statement: "For almost a year WRAL has carried a feature known as a 'Review of Religion,' a weekly broadcast of the news of the world of religion with the Rev. Allyn P. Robinson, minister of the United Church, as commentator. The program has called forth so much interest and favorable comment that the local station will now originate it as a network feature. Beginning Sunday afternoon (March 3) the religious news broadcast will be heard weekly over the Carolina and Southern broadcasting system. The program has been heard previously on Tuesday evening at 7:45." THE CHRISTIAN SUN wishes Mr. Robinson good success in this extension of his religious news broadcasts.

Declaring that New York, as the "wealthiest state in the nation," is best able to sustain decent, if not ideal standards in its vital social services, Bishop Francis J. McConnell of the Methodist Church and ten other religious leaders appealed to State legislators not to reduce the executive budget in a statement recently. The statement asserted that a reduction in State aid to education and for relief, or a slackening of the enforcement of social and labor legislation because of economies, would be "inconsistent with any sound concept of democratic government." "We are wholly in ac-

"We recognize, however, that human values must be conserved and that human health, welfare and security cannot be measured alone in terms of dollars and cents."

Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches, announced recently that the Council was launching a nationwide radio campaign "to check misunderstanding, fostered by hate propaganda in the United States, with the stress on better cooperation among religious and racial groups." Dr. Cavert said the campaign would be conducted over local stations in cities and towns throughout the co-operation of leading clergymen. The talks will not consist of "trite appeals for more tolerance," he said, "but will stress factual information on the contributions made to American democracy by peoples of widely different cultures and faiths." He explained further: "The primary aim of this radio campaign is to lay essential facts before the American public, in order that, through an educated public opinion, we, as a people, may profit from the example of many less fortunate. Communion Service for Maundy Thursday

By AUBREY C. TODD.

Such splendid suggestions have been made in THE CHRISTIAN SUN regarding the observance of Lent and Easter, that I shall try to avoid unnecessary repetition by devoting this article solely to the observance of Maundy Thursday. I have been asked to give suggestions for a communion service to be used on that day, which would be different from the ordinary, yet adaptable to the average church. Before I do this I should like to issue a warning. Too much liberty cannot be taken with the traditional order of the communion service. If everybody feels free to make his own innovations, this service will lose something of its solemnity and mystery. Before one makes changes he should acquaint himself with the history of the communion service, and be sure his change is not too far afield from the practices of the Universal Church.

For this service, I suggest that the communion table be placed on the raised platform, and not left on the floor level. Since this is the week that we are thinking about the historical Jesus, it may add to the effectiveness of the service to have the celebrant or minister to sit behind the table with the deacons on either side. Two candles may be placed on the table for their symbolical value. Although the altar arrangement, with the celebrant facing with the people toward the altar, is more desirable at other times, the informal grouping about the table is good for this particular occasion, since it is suggestive of the meal of fellowship in the upper room.

THE ORDER OF SERVICE.

PRELUDE (Soft music to call attention to reverence of the service).

CONFESSION OF SINS (By the minister, or if a printed bulletin is used, a general confession in unison).

HYMN: "The Fairest Lord Jesus" (Or some other hymn that emphasizes the historical Jesus).

READING OF THE SCRIPTURES (Optional).

DEVOTIONAL PREPARATION:

Minister: Hear what comfortable words our Savior Christ saith unto all who truly turn to him:

Come unto me all ye that travail and are heavy laden, and I will refresh you.

So God loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, to the end that all who believe in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

THE OFFERTORY (Lifting up the bread the Minister prays the following):

"Accept, O Holy Father, Almighty, Everlasting God, this stainless host, which I, thine unworthy servant, offer unto Thee, my God, living and true, for mine innumerable sins, offenses, and negligences, and for all here present; as also for all faithful Christians, both living and dead, that it may be profitable for my own and for their salvation unto life eternal. Amen."

(After pouring the water and wine into the chalice, he lifts up the chalice and prays the following):

"O God, who hast wonderfully created human nature, and still more wonderfully restored it: grant us, by the mystic signification of this commingling of water and wine, to become partakers of His Godhead who vouchsafed to become partaker of our manhood, Jesus Christ, Thy Son, our Lord; who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Spirit, God, world without end. Amen."

(If the custom of mixing water and wine, with its rich symbolism, is not used, a prayer may be substituted in which the chalice is offered for salvation, in a manner similar to that when the bread was offered.)

SANCTUS (By the choir and people, seated. This may be prefaced by suitable versicles, if a printed service is used. If the Sanctus is not familiar, a hymn may be used).

THE CONSECRATION:

Minister: Let us pray.

"O Lord and Father, according to the institution of Thy Son Christ our Lord, we celebrate before Thee, with these gifts which we have offered unto Thee, the memorial thy Son hath commanded us to make. Here also we offer and present unto Thee, O Lord, ourselves, our souls and bodies, to be a reasonable, holy, and living sacrifice unto Thee, humbly beseeching Thee that we and all others who shall be partakers of this Sacrament may worthily receive it to our souls' good, be filled with Thy grace and heavenly benediction, and made one body with Thy dearly beloved Son, our Lord Jesus Christ.

Who, the day before He suffered, took bread into His holy and venerable hands, and with eyes lifted up towards heaven, unto Thee, O God, His Almighty Father, giving thanks to Thee, did bless, break, and give unto His disciples, saying: Take and eat ye all of this. (Lifting the bread with both hands here.) For this is my body. (A slight pause.)

In like manner, after supper, taking also this excellent chalice into His holy and venerable hands: and giving thanks to Thee, He blessed, and gave to His disciples, saying: Take, and drink ye all of it. (Lifting the chalice.) For this is the chalice of my blood of the New and Eternal Testament: the mystery of faith; which shall be shed for you, and for many, for the remission of sins. As often as ye do these things, ye shall do them in remembrance of me. Wherefore, O Lord, admonished by Thy saving precepts, and following Thy divine institution, we make bold to say:

OUR FATHER (By minister and people).

AGNUS DEI (While the choir sings the Agnus Dei softly, the minister reverently takes of the bread and wine, and ministers unto the deacons, who receive the elements seated).

THE COMMUNION (Before giving the bread to the deacons to pass to the people, the minister says):

"The body of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was given for thee, preserve thy body and soul unto everlasting life. Take and eat this in remembrance that Christ died for thee, and feed on Him in thy heart by faith, with thanksgiving."

(Before delivering the Cup, he shall say:)

"The blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was shed for thee, preserve thy body and soul unto everlasting life. Drink this in remembrance that Christ's blood was shed for thee, and be thankful."

THANKSGIVING (Either a closing prayer of thanksgiving or a hymn).

BENEDICTION.

POSTLUDE (Soft music in keeping with the rest of the service).

Japanese War Minister General Shunroku Hata recently declared before the Diet that the Salvation Army must be placed under "proper regulations" for prevention of "espionage." He said the military authorities had started watching the organization's activities. What guilty secrets are they fearful the Army lassies will uncover? The Japanese Salvation Army has about 240 members, five of whom are foreign co-workers. They operate 134 chapels and their communicants number about 14,000. The organization first achieved recognition in arousing public opinion against Tokyo's licensed quarters.

It is one of the highest tributes to music that religion can use it. It is one of the highest proofs that religion brings joy into the heart that when men have found God they want to sing. It is no slight authentication of our Lord that the angels sang at his birth.—Noble.

"Self-denial is the quality of which Jesus Christ set us the example."

CONVENTION PROBLEMS.

Much is being said among our people about the problems of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. One who is not familiar with our work might get the impression that these are new conditions that have come upon us and press for solution. In very truth the problems have been with us through the years. Some of them may be a bit more acute, but one is inclined to believe that members of the Convention are becoming more aware of conditions that have been needing consideration and change for years.

The work of the Convention is done by boards and committees and by elected officials. In the final analysis, the work centers around individuals. All of these individuals are known by most of the members of the Convention. It is very difficult to separate the work from the workers in our thinking. But if discussions are to be fair, and if those who have served the church faithfully are not to be injured, and if progress is to be made, it will be necessary to discuss the problems of the Convention without reference to the persons involved. By vote of the Convention this writer is one of the workers. He has done his duty as he has known it daily since election. His opinion has not agreed with that of others equally as faithful in service. When the work of Promotional Secretary is discussed it should be done on the basis of the work done and the things that need to be done. The Convention should outline the things to be undertaken and then select the person that will best accomplish that job. This can certainly be done without injury to the person now working at the task. The same principal will apply to all other phases of the Convention work.

When the delegates meet in Greensboro on April 30 they should seriously consider the things that need to be done, and the methods by which they can be accomplished, and then elect the persons best suited for the work to be done.

CONVENTION PROMOTION.

It is often stated that resolutions are passed by the Convention and by the conferences and that nothing is done about them afterwards. This should be no surprise because for many long years the Convention has had no one to bring to the attention of the churches the things to be done by them in order to keep in line with the resolutions. Of course the minutes are printed, but they are distributed long after the meetings are over and the resolutions are forgotten, and even then there is no one to call to the attention of the churches the resolutions adopted by the larger body.

Two years ago the Convention elected a Promotional Secretary with the hope that he would bring to the attention of the churches the plans and programs of very busy trying to do this—and the many other things committed to his hands.

The working out of pastorates and the securing of new ministers for churches or aiding churches in doing so, editing and selling "The Christian Sun," the distribution of good literature, the development of Sunday schools, Christian Endeavor societies, assisting conferences, Sunday school conventions, missionary conferences, and Pilgrim Fellowships, and being the contact man between the Convention and the denominational and interdenominational agencies have been some of the activities of the Promotional Secretary. A simple enumeration of only a few of the things that are to be done makes it clear that one man cannot do effective work among two hundred churches along all these lines.

Because the work has not been too effective, because it takes money for salaries and expenses, and because the Convention has nothing in its budget for this as such, there are those who feel that the office should be discontinued and not be a charge on the boards or the churches. The Convention will need to decide what should be done. If effective work is to be done, more workers will be needed and the cost will be increased. If the Convention wants to spend its money as it has in the past and make no increase in contributions, then this work cannot be continued. This would put us back where we were two years ago with no one responsible for getting before the churches the entire program of the church. Success does not seem to lie in this direction.

SOME SUGGESTIONS.

The following suggestions are made not to push over personal desires, nor to say that all the wisdom lies here. Rather the ideas are presented so members of the Convention may be thinking constructively as they prepare to share in the work to be done in Greensboro.

The Southern Convention should have an office of education and promotion. The one in charge should be clothed with the power of the Convention so he can act as an official along many lines. He should be responsible for printing minutes of the Convention and conferences, and for getting the plans of these bodies before the churches. He should be ex-officio member of all boards and committees of the Convention but without vote. (This will let him know what is being undertaken.) He should be responsible for presenting to the churches the claims of the various enterprises of the Convention, but should not be a financial agent of any board or institution. He should be a friend of the churches and aid them with their problems without charge. Anything that would help the churches and thereby make more effective the Convention should come within the work assigned to him.

There should be a director of religious education on the staff of the Convention office. This person would work with the secretary but would have as his or her major job the development of religious education and young people's work in the churches, conferences, and Convention.

The Board of Publications should be given a free hand to deal with "The Christian Sun" and other publications of the Convention. This board should be given money with which to work (as is authorized by the government of the church), and directed to produce a saleable paper that will aid the churches in doing their work. The board should contract with an editor elected by the Convention and a printer selected by the board. All institutions and boards that use "The Christian Sun" for promotional work should help to pay for the publication of the paper. The cost to each should be in proportion to the space used and the income received from the churches.

The emphasis for the next five years in the Convention should be on the development of better local churches. This will involve the formation of pastorates, training ministers and members young and old, developing financial plans that include stewardship and result in larger giving, broadening the outlook and activities of churches and church members, and the elimination of friction. It may mean that for a while less money will be invested in buildings and institutions and more in people who will go in and out among our churches bringing new ideas and inspiration. It will take several of our best workers to render the service that the churches need, but it will pay big dividends to the Convention.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK.

We now have a Board of Christian Education charged with the whole educational work of the Convention, a Woman's Mission Board and a Mission Board charged with missionary work. All of these boards have claims on the loyalties of young people. In each conference has been organized a people's group, now called Pilgrim Fellowship, that undertakes to direct the activities of young people in all phases of church work. Conflicts in ideas and programs were inevitable.

Now that we have recognized the conflicts, it is time to get together and clear the difficulties. To say that either group was wrong is beside the point. We simply need to find the kind of organization that will function without conflicts, and then in the spirit of love go on with the work.

The young people have not yet organized as a Southern Convention group because they have not seen the need of it. The conference group has made plans for local churches, and the Southeast Fellowship and the National Pilgrim Fellowship have given the necessary larger outlook and fellowship.

It is suggested by some that there should now be set up by the Convention a Council for Young People's Work. This council might be composed of the presidents of each conference Fellowship, an elected member of each conference Fellowship, a member or members of the Board of Christian Education and the Woman's Mission Board. A further suggestion is that a young person should be a member of each board of the Convention, and that these young people should be members of the youth council. It is believed that this council can coordinate the work of young people in the Convention.

It appears to be necessary for the Convention to take some action relative to young people's work. The above suggestion is only one of many ways to start the process of coordination. This phase of our work is very important, and we must discover the way to work so the young people themselves will find delight in serving the Christ through the church.

THE MISSIONARY TASK REQUIRES A MORE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

If the church is to serve effectively as God's missionary agent in promoting the Christian way of life for men and nations, she has to become more vitally Christian herself. "Tarry ye" and "Follow me" are just as truly imperatives from the lips of Jesus as "Go ye." "Ye shall receive power when the Holy Spirit is come upon you," is always a basic condition for missionary success. Irresistible spiritual power, always and everywhere has a divine source, but is regularly channeled through human lives. No matter how efficient our organizations, how skillfully planned our field work, or how busy our typewriters may be, these are all secondary matters and mere tools of our labors. A missionary church must be in the deepest, truest sense a thoroughly Christian Church. The living God must be in the midst of her. What St. Paul possessed as the basis of a holy, untiring zeal must be the possession of all our churches.

What faith in God is needed! What super-human power is offered! What mountains of difficulty must be removed! What revolutionary religion is demanded! "Never since its struggle with the Roman Empire has Christianity been so seriously challenged in so many lands," says Latourette in "Missions Tomorrow." Our current humanistic theology and over-confident social schemes are not enough to guarantee that the Christian cause shall conquer. An amiable type of sentimental piety, all too common among us, is too mild. It does not equip people to live, and tirelessly toil, and even die for bringing God to men as Christ, or Paul, or John Huss have done. Only a God-centered religion, such as Jesus lived and taught and made vital for his disciples, as they faced the Roman Empire, will at all suffice for the work that lies ahead. Whatever will generate and develop the mood and the might of New Testament religion throughout the millions of church members calls for our first missionary concern.—Adapted from an article by Lewis C. Wright in "North Carolina Christian Advocate."

We are told that each new language we master gives us another life to live. The same may be said of each new friendship. To be a friend you must interest yourself in someone else. You must desire good for that person. You must do what you can to enrich that person's life. By simply multiplying the number of your friendships you multiply the number of lives you can live and enjoy.—Henry Curtis.

The young man who has the combination of the learning of books with the learning which comes of doing things with the hands need not worry about getting along in the world today, or at anytime.—William S. Knudsen, President of General Motors Corporation.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The last issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN (March 7) contained the organic law of the Southern Convention and the Conferences composing the same. It was a fine idea to print this for several reasons: (1) Many ministers and delegates do not have a copy of the last edition of the Principles and Government; (2) The next session of the Convention should give careful consideration to adopting some amendments to the present book; (3) A new edition of the book should be issued at an early date; and (4) If an examination were held, and the papers were closed graded, it would be surprising how many people in the Convention would "flunk."

The Convention from time to time has made a number of "Amendments" which did not appear in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. A number of these "Amendments" were adopted during the last regular session in Portsmouth, Va. They were not adopted, as amendments, but the nature of the motions or resolutions passed was directly in line with an amendment.

Two of these items should be mentioned in this connection. The first was the consolidation of the Board of Education and the Board of Religious education. The form of the resolution passed affecting this consolidation does not clearly indicate the distinctive duties of the Board of Christian Education. By a stretch of one's imagination it may be possible to accept the statement that Elon College, or any other church college, is the head, logically, of the religious education work in the various churches and Sunday schools of the denomination. But the actual facts do not substantiate this claim. There is a great gap—too wide and too long—between the Sunday schools and a standard college, and no arbitrary vote of a church governing body can bridge that gap.

In the next place it was a mistake to include in this consolidation a requirement that the president of Elon College shall be the Chairman of the Board of Christian Education. The present president of Elon College is thoroughly capable of doing that work. Succeeding presidents of Elon College may be also be capable. But president of Elon College is not the Chairman of the Board of Trustees of said institution. The Board of Trustees of Elon College is required to consider matters in which the president is personally concerned. The Board of Christian Education will be called upon to deal with some things in which the Chairman is likewise involved. He may or he may not be in a position to give unbiased attention to all the matters pertaining to the work of Christian Education in the local churches because of his personal relation to one great institution. The Convention should be free to make nominations and elect the personnel of this Board upon the judgment of the delegates, from time to time, and not by constitutional arrangement. It is requiring too much of the president of Elon College to demand that he shall be Chairman of any Board by fixed law.

The Convention provided two years ago for a new officer—Promotional Secretary. The duties of this officer were not definitely and clearly indicated. The next session of the Convention should give consideration to this matter. In this connection the Convention should determine whether it is the function of this officer to act as a superintendent of pastors and churches in the various Conferences of the Convention. This writer devoutly believes that it is not the function of any Convention officer to be involved in trying to find places for idle ministers and pastors for vacant churches. This work should be done by Conference officials and not by a Convention secretary. Pastors and churches and would-be pastors often need assistance, but not that kind in our Convention. This is not said in criticism of our present Promotional Secretary. It is not a personal matter in any respect. It is simply a question as to the propriety of assigning this kind of work to a Convention officer, when it properly should be the duty of Conference officials.

I. W. JOHNSON.

DELEGATES TO THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

An article in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, March 7, 1940, by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, president of the Convention, announces the place and time for the biennial session of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. We shall all be very happy to go to Greensboro, and the date of the meeting is ideal.

I have been greatly interested in discussions through THE CHRISTIAN

SUN regarding problems confronting the Convention and possible procedures in an effort to find the proper solution of these problems that confront us. In interest of the work of the Convention and effective planning for the days that are ahead, I venture to raise the question of official representation in the approaching session of the Convention. I am aware of the fact that representation in the Convention was determined years ago and printed in the Government and Principles of the Church. I am aware also of the proper and orderly procedure necessary for the changing of any item governing the church in every particular. I have no contention with anyone on these points. I am, however, of the opinion that without adequate representation in our Conference and Convention sessions, it is hardly possible to acquaint the constituency with the spirit and purpose of the governing body of the church.

According to reports made to the several Conferences in 1938, the churches constituting the Southern Convention have a total membership of 30,289—102 ministers. According to the secretary's report reporting for the Portsmouth Convention, there were present during the entire session of the Convention forty-six ministers and forty-two laymen, making a total of eighty-eight delegates. I realize that there were others in attendance at the Convention who were not delegates, but when it came to official action, these eighty-eight were the only ones who could legally cast ballots. I call attention to the fact that one Conference was represented by one minister only and that not a layman was present as a delegate, and I believe that no one was in attendance at this session of the Convention from that Conference other than this minister. The matter of representation in the Convention was discussed at length, and the Convention voted a change in the representation to include all officials of the Convention and Conferences constituting the Convention, all ordained ministers in good standing, and one delegate from every local church elected by the local church. According to the Convention's record, page thirty-nine, this item was "made a referendum to the several Conferences of the Convention for their consideration." The minutes are silent as to any report back to the Convention.

The writer attended all annual sessions of the Conferences constituting the Convention last year. These Conferences approved the referendum with some minor changes. The writer does not object to the changes and is glad to concur with the Conferences in their decisions. If there had been no change in the plan for representation adopted by the Convention by either of the Conferences, in the writer's judgment the new plan would ordinarily have gone into effect and the session of the Convention would have opened, and the approaching Convention would have been constituted on the new plan of selecting delegates. With changes having been made, it will be necessary for the Convention to approve the plan as changed either through its Executive Committee or by vote of the Convention in session. Since the purpose of the Convention's action has not been seriously altered, it seems to me that the Executive Committee might approve the actions of the several Conferences constituting the Convention and through its secretary issue a call in keeping with the new plan of representation to be approved by the Executive Committee in order that there may be a more adequate representation of our churches in the approaching session of the Convention. We cannot accomplish what we should without a program and without having the church interested in that program. The best way to assure the kind of program we ought to have for our church and to secure interest and cooperation in the execution of that program is to have the churches adequately represented. I think that it is a serious mistake to have fewer than one hundred representatives of our great church participate in the findings and plans for the church's program in the days that lie ahead.

This article is not intended to take issue with anyone, to raise any kind of contention, but it is an effort to see if we cannot get more of our people together that together we may face our problems and plan for a solution of the same.

L. E. SMITH.

TAKING CHRIST SERIOUSLY.

We should take Christ more seriously. It was serious business with Him, giving His life for you and me, and for the world. He meant to be taken seriously or not at all. He gave His life for us, and He expects us who believe that, and who therefore appreciate it, to give our lives for Him. By that I do not mean that we should all be preachers, or missionaries, or church workers in some professional sense, (I fear that a goodly number of them do not take Christ seriously, and give Him their lives) but I do mean that we should consider the fact of Christ in the world, and seeing that fact fully investigate it, and if when finding it true we appreciate it, then working and living as though we did.

Dr. Lewis Rawls did a great deal for me in the very patient way in which he, along with others, attended with all his wit and skill my wife when she was so ill last winter. He did something for me. That is a fact which I appreciate, and my heart thrills whenever I have the slightest opportunity to do something for those near and dear to him in turn. And I could cite full many a dear, dear friend who has helped me so very much. They are facts. Their services to me is real. Now likewise I know that Christ has done something for me, and for all the world. Now ought I not take Him seriously? I should. And so should all we who know Him, and realize that He has done something for us.

Now again, if He has done anything at all for us, He has done that which He claims, namely, redeemed us (clothe it in whatever language you like) and since He has redeemed us then we should indeed take Him seriously. To do that we must accept that exercise known as prayer. We cannot do it of ourselves, single-handed. We shall need His Spirit, which comes through prayer. And then in due time it will be manifested unto us how we can take Him seriously, and just what it will mean to us. Do we appreciate what He has done for us? Let us take Him seriously.

WHERE THE MONEY GOES.

This is the period in which all our churches are called upon to prepare for and to take on Easter, or the nearest service thereto, an offering for missions. Those taking this offering and those giving to it will naturally wish to know something of where the money goes. First of all, let it be borne in mind that in giving to missions we are obeying the most emphatic command our dear Lord ever gave while here on earth.

Now unless the church designates otherwise the money donated through the Easter offering goes half to home missions and half to foreign missions. In the home field we are at present doing a purely home missionary work in Carroll County, Va., where we have a regular pastor for the two churches with their Sunday schools which we have organized and for the three preaching places, since we have not yet built a church at the third preaching place.

Then at Ocean View, Va., we are helping to support the pastor since the population there is not permanent, but many are reached by the gospel, especially in the summer months when Ocean View has many tourists.

In the home field we are now assisting very materially in the organization and support of our church at Asheboro, N. C., Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr., pastor. The organization has purchased and paid for a lot and hopes to build at an early date. Between thirty and forty members joined the organization even before a lot was purchased. The need for our church in Asheboro was very obvious since our members from the rural churches in Randolph County were constantly moving, and are constantly moving, to the growing industrial city of Asheboro.

We are building in Winston-Salem, North Carolina's largest city, where we should have had a church and where there was a demand upon us for a church of our denomination years ago.

We are also assisting in maintaining our growing and promising work at Lynchburg, Va., where we too long neglected our opportunity there.

We are also assisting materially in helping to maintain our church in Richmond, Va., where we now have a beautiful and adequate building, but whose congregation is not able financially to sustain the church and support the pastor.

We are also helping to support some of the weaker pastorates in our Valley of Virginia Conference.

This will give some idea of what we are doing with our mission money in the home field.

In the foreign field we are helping to support through the American Board (by the way, the oldest Mission Board in the United States) 430 missionaries in active service, in addition to 6,354 native workers. There are thirteen distinct missions with 2,779 places of service. On these fields we have 815 churches with 115,955 members. There are 1,301 Sunday schools with a membership of 69,352. Our missionaries and only those whose lives are dedicated and consecrated to the service of their Lord are sent out as missionaries, or will go out, are working in our fields for us in Africa, China, India, Japan, and the Near East.

We should indeed take a pardonable pride and a most loyal and devoted interest in this work, worldwide in its scope, thus carrying out directly the command of our Lord, who said, "Ye shall be witnesses of me unto the uttermost parts of the earth." The church is not poorer, but richer financially and spiritually, as it obeys our Lord and seeks to share the good news of His earthly pilgrimage, crucifixion, and resurrection of Him with others not blessed as we are whom to know aright is life eternal.

Conditions in China

By DR. JOHN E. BAKER.

[Dr. Baker of Shanghai, China, one of the world's authorities on transportation, irrigation, flood, famine, and refugee relief problems, is the technical adviser for the American Advisory Committee in China. This committee distributes the relief funds of the Church Committee for China Relief, 105 East 22nd Street, New York City. Dr. Baker is now in this country lecturing on behalf of China Relief.]

It is impossible to exaggerate the story of China's sufferings or to overestimate the tremendous and appalling needs for relief among her children and adult civilian population. During these two years of war, China has suffered more casualties of dead and wounded than all the belligerents in the World War. And added to these casualties are the ravages of flood, drought, and famine in the North.

The area of greatest relief needs at present is the flooded area of Hopei Province, where two rivers, the Wei and Yungting, submerged a vast expanse of land equal to about half of the area of New York State and drove from five to eight million people from their homes. These flood waters are frozen in the dead of winter, but in some cases the ice only adds to the hardships of the homeless refugees.

Much of the land that was deeply flooded last fall is now drained. However, there is no food, for last year's crop was swept away by the floods. This area also flooded the year before and consequently the wheat crop was short. The other principal food crops of this region, including "kaoliang" (Egyptian corn), beans, and millet, are completely lacking in the area flooded by the Sha and Wei rivers.

Last year's food situation in North China was complicated by an abnormal drought which preceded the flood. This flood was due to rains back in the mountains and to a cloudburst in Shansi. In another area, the flood of 1939 was a secondary flood, for in 1938, when water from the Yellow River came down to the Hwai Basin and the Grand Canal and on to the farm lands of Anhwei and North Kiangsu, it rendered homeless about 12,000,000 people. The Yellow River continued the same course in 1939, but only a portion of the 1938 victims returned to their homes when the waters fell.

The breaking of the Yellow River dikes—which the Chinese and Japanese seem to blame on each other—has acted as an effective war defense measure but has resulted in the inundation of wide areas of fertile fields, with the resulting serious loss of normal food crops.

Relief in China is distributed on the basis of need alone, without regard to belief or creed. Protestant and Catholic missionaries in more than two hundred mission centers throughout China are working side by side in the administration and distribution of these civilian relief funds. They provide food, shelter, warm clothing, and medical and surgical care for millions of homeless refugees and others in desperate need, due to the ravages of war, flood, famine, and drought in China.

Nearly all of the missionaries have stuck to their posts throughout these tragic, dangerous years of war, and often at great personal risk have continued to minister to the sick, wounded, hungry, cold, and dying. These Christian missionaries deserve the supreme faith in their integrity which is attributed to them by all the Chinese.

Missionaries may have failed to work miracles when the people hoped for them, and thus may have disappointed some of the Chinese in rural areas, but they have never failed in their personal honesty and honor regarding the handling of funds and supplies, no matter whose these might be. If a missionary should ever break faith with the Chinese, in this respect, it would be tragic for the whole missionary cause—but to my knowledge, not one of these missionary men and women has ever broken faith! No one questions the missionaries' unselfish and sacrificial service in giving food to the hungry, clothing to the naked and shivering, and medical and hospital care to afflicted minds and bodies, shattered by the horrors of war, famine, and flood. And no one hesitates to entrust large sums of money to these missionaries to be placed to the credit of persons in far-off cities or even countries, in order that the relief of China's sufferings may be carried on without interruption.

Those of us who have been in China a long time know that China will come through this crisis and survive. In disaster and distress, you may not be sure how the Chinese are going to survive, but if a man lives through, he will eventually make the grade and come up on top.

Any contributions to the Church Committee for China Relief will be administered through missionaries to the best of their ability, and will help the sufferers in that great country. One dollar will save a life in China for a month.

"Discipleship is a practical matter—and not only it is practical, but painful to the flesh as well. Does your daily life exhibit the marks of crucifixion?"

"If you would take the real measure of a man, note the size of things that make him mad."

AN AMERICAN WOMAN WORKS IN INDIA.

Fresh from seven years of work among the Marathi people of India, Miss Lucille E. Day of Sholapur brings a vivid story of an awakening people catching a vision of the Christian way and weaving it into their daily life and problems when she speaks in the churches of America during her present furlough. Miss Day was one of the five missionaries who addressed the great 130th Annual Meeting of the American Board in St. Louis in October.

Living in Sholapur, a mill city whose factories use cotton from Africa, Egypt, America and India, and whose problems include unemployment and relief as do those in the United States, Miss Day, a trained social worker, sees the permeation of Indian life with the Christian ideal.

From childhood Lucille Day has been interested in people of other lands. Her aunt was the famous heroine of Sivas, Miss Mary Graffam of Turkey. In college Miss Day found her best friends among girls of other races. Born in Colorado, Miss Day was educated in New Mexico State College and Oberlin College.

MISS LUCILLE E. DAY.

With an international background, for before she went to India under the American Board of Foreign Missions in 1932 Miss Day had served in the Near East teaching in Turkey and Greece, plus a careful study of the culture and customs of India and Indian religions, Miss Day is in a position to interpret with unusual ability, that great country to the Congregational-Christian Churches of America.

She has lived in an ashram similar to the famous Gandhi ashram where "people live a simple life together and go on a corporate spiritual quest." She has studied village life and the history and ceremonials of the Buddhist, Jain and Hindu temples. Miss Day has visited and talked with the great Indian poet, Rabindranath Tagore and met many of India's outstanding men and women.

In India she has taught in the mission schools, developed adult education, worked with the local Indian Christian Church, and served on the staff of the Gates Memorial Hall Settlement or as it is called in Marathi, "Christa Seva Mandir," a Christian social center. She is most closely connected now with the Christa Seva Mandir which has a baby clinic, Scout groups for boys and girls, lectures, classes, sports, an employment bureau, library and other much needed social service features.

The March issue of The Missionary Herald carries an article by Miss Day, "Seeking God in a Garden" which tells of one example of Christian work in India.

We are grateful indeed and sincerely trust that as Easter approaches, the time for the general offering, the donations will very largely increase. It is on or about Easter, the special period appointed by the church to take the offering, that we may help share the power, the glory and the blessing of our risen Lord with those less favored than ourselves.

Sincerely,

J. O. ATKINSON,

Pilgrim Fellowship

"Youth at Work in the Church"

Emily Carleton Lester, Editor

EASTERN VIRGINIA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

MEETING WITH DR. GRAY.

On Thursday night, February 29, one hundred and fifty young people from Eastern Virginia met in the Suffolk Christian Church to hear Dr. Henry David Gray, superintendent of young people's work in our denomination. Following his talk concerning the aims, ideals, methods and organization of Pilgrim Fellowship there were many interesting questions from the floor. Dr. Gray did a fine job of clearing the thinking of those present in regard to young people's work. His definition of Pilgrim Fellowship is "The young people of Congregational and Christian Churches in the United States."

PLANS FOR SPRING RALLY.

On Saturday, March 30, the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship will hold its spring rally at our church in Richmond. This is to be in the form of a "Little Amsterdam"—learning about the great gathering of young people in Amsterdam last summer. Miss Virginia Gaines, a representative of the Protestant Episcopal Church at Amsterdam, will be present to tell our group about that meeting. Miss Gaines is from Richmond.

Miss Lucy Eldredge, co-worker with Dr. Gray in our denominational young people's program, is planning to be present for this meeting. She has not been with the young people of Eastern Virginia in a meeting recently and they are looking forward to having her with them.

REIDSVILLE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR BANQUET.

On Friday evening, March 1, our Reidsville Church was the scene of their annual Christian Endeavor banquet. St. Patrick furnished the inspiration for the decorations and color scheme. Miss Ruby Wright presided as toastmaster. Guests included Rev. J. L. Neese, pastor of the Reidsville Christian Church, and Mrs. Neese; the Rev. Mr. Ballard, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church in Reidsville, and Mrs. Ballard; Mr. Luther Medlin, field secretary of the North Carolina Christian Endeavor Union; Burrow Fleming, business manager of the Tarheel Christian Endeavor Bulletin; Miss Elberta Murray, president of the North Carolina and Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship; and Mrs. F. C. Lester, counselor for the North Carolina and Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship. Fifty were present to enjoy the delicious and evening of fun.

The main address of the evening was made by Mr. Medlin who discussed points of emphasis in the Christian Endeavor program, including loyalty, cooperation, and organization.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND MISSIONS.

We are now in the "Mission Period" so far as our churches are concerned. Usually the special offering for missions comes at Easter-time when we express our gratitude for the risen Christ by our gifts made that others might know about Him. This year Easter comes much earlier than usual—March 24—and the time for raising money for missions in our churches is short. We hope that young people in our churches will feel the Easter spirit in such a way that they will want to give liberally in the offering of their church for missions.

KIRBY PAGE IN FLORIDA.

On the first Sunday in March Dr. Kirby Page, world-renowned author of religious books and leader in peace movements, spoke at night in the First Congregational-Christian Church of Winter Park, Fla., under the sponsorship of the Pilgrim Fellowship of that church. The offering received at that meeting is to help pay the expenses of young people from that church to the Summer Conference next summer in Florida.

"Perhaps the beam is in our own eye, the astigmatism? Get our optics righted, the mote may disappear in the eye of the other fellow,"

EASTER: LOVE INVINCIBLE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR MARCH 24, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: Luke 24: 46, 47;
Matthew 28: 1-10.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Love on the Cross—Luke 23: 39-43.

Tuesday—The Victory of Love—I Cor. 15: 53-57.

Wednesday—The Depth of God's Love—Romans 5: 6-9.

Thursday—The Human Evidence of Love—I John 4: 7-12.

Friday—The Exalted Name—Phil. 2: 5-11.

Saturday—Christ's Love in Action—Matt. 15: 29-32.

The Christian Endeavor World has a beautiful service of worship outlined for this meeting. Some groups may plan to present an Easter pageant which dramatically relates the meaning of Easter. Many groups of young people will have part in Easter sunrise services. You might plan one for community. A symbolic candle lighting service will be very appropriate for either a sunrise or evening service.

Easter is the time when we may renew our faith in a living Christ; also a time when individuals may accept the way of a living Christ, one whose love is invincible. His love for us caused Him to submit to the way of the cross. It was a love so great that the tomb could not contain Him. The Eastern morning miracle affirms the invincible power of love.

In these difficult days when nations are trying to destroy each other we need to be reassured of the overcoming power of love. We need to exercise the spirit of love in everyday affairs of life. Love, expressing itself as kindness, mercy, generosity, sympathy, brotherliness, and service, makes our relations with our fellowmen beautiful and good. Love in human relations is able to overcome hate in every instance.

Ask your pastor to speak on "Invincible Love." Let each have an opportunity to express himself on the following:

(1) Instances I have seen where Christian love has been invincible in the face of hatred and ill will.

(2) An important issue in the church, or community, or nation, or world which needs an application of invincible love.

Suggested Hymns—

"Christ the Lord Is Risen Today."

"Love Divine, All Love Excelling."

"This Is My Father's World."

FOR THE CHILDREN

FUZZY FUR AND THE MAGIC MUSIC.

Fuzzy Fur, the little brown bear, was very much surprised, and for two reasons. The first was that some other bear had visited his very best patch while he was away and had eaten all the berries. The second was that as he went rumbling, grumbling down the hill he suddenly heard a most entrancing sound that was not like anything he had ever heard before.

The sound was more soothing than the sighing of the wind in the trees. It was more entrancing than the tinkling of the brook, as it tumbled down the mountain side. It was more melodious than the song of the mockingbird, swinging on the topmost bough of the oak in the moonlight, or the roundelay of the golden throated oriole singing in the flower-be-jeweled thicket.

To Fuzzy Fur it was more wonderful than anything he had ever heard. He forgot his hunger, as the sound floated to him across the valley, and suddenly he decided he would go and find that music.

Now, when Fuzzy Fur wished to find anything, he had a sure and easy way of doing it. He wrinkled his nose and followed the scent, as it floated by on the breeze, and when his nose got there the rest of him would be right behind it. So Fuzzy Fur turned his nose to the breeze and sniffed.

He smelled many things, but nothing that was new to him. Apparently this magic had no scent, by which he could find it. He could smell things at a much greater distance than he could see or hear them. It was just as well that he could, for the dangers that lurked in the forest were usually silent dangers.

Fuzzy Fur knew that a mountain lion, crouching on the branch of a tree high above the trail, could remain motionless and silent for hours, but his nose told him the lion was there long before he came to it. He knew, too, that some things have no scent. A baby deer, for instance, weak and helpless and unable to protect itself from enemies, has no scent, and if it kept perfectly still and silent an enemy could pass right by it and not know it was there.

This magic music, then, must be something like that, for there was no strange scent on the air.

"Well," thought Fuzzy Fur, "if I can't smell nor see it, I can hear it so here goes."

Up came one foot and up came another. Down went one foot and down went another. Over fallen trees, through tangled vines, over slippery rocks, those feet took Fuzzy Fur, until he found himself on the trail that led to the house where Billy lived with his Uncle Jim, the forest-ranger. But Fuzzy Fur kept right on, until, when he turned a corner, he saw Billy and Uncle Jim in the garden under the apple tree.

There was a scent of cake and jam and sugar and all kinds of good things now, but Fuzzy Fur's nose took no notice of them, which was most unusual. Nor did he pay any attention to Uncle Jim and Billy, though at any other time he would have stopped and hidden among the trees, or gone away again.

Fuzzy Fur thought of only one thing, and that was the magic music that held him spell-bound. He saw Bill with a queer looking thing tucked under his chin. Billy was sawing away at it with a funny looking stick, reminding Fuzzy Fur of the lumbermen he had once seen sawing trees. But instead of the harsh, rasping noise the lumbermen made, Billy was making the magic music that had lured Fuzzy Fur and made him forget his hunger.

Uncle Jim and Billy had their minds on the music, too. Billy's fingers twinkled up and down the violin as the bow swept across the strings. Uncle Jim's feet tapped to the music, as it was wafted away to blend with the whisper of the breeze and the rustle of the leaves in the treetops, where the first stars were beginning to show.

Then, suddenly, abruptly, the music ceased.

Uncle Jim looked up with a startled, "What's wrong?"

Slowly and deliberately Uncle Jim turned his head.

"It's that rascal Fuzzy Fur," he said. "But he's not up to mischief this time, so we won't frighten him away. Quick! He's going! Start playing again."

Fuzzy Fur had indeed been going, thing, and that was the music that held him spell-bound. He saw Bill with a queer looking thing tucked of wire, he opened his mouth and put out his tongue as though to see if he could taste the music.

"Bears are extremely fond of music," said Uncle Jim, as Billy kept on playing the violin. "They will forget all about food, and even about possible danger, when they hear music. It seems to fascinate them in some strange manner, so that they can think of nothing else."

Uncle Jim turned again and saw Fuzzy Fur standing up on his hind legs gazing eagerly at the musician. Sometimes Fuzzy Fur would pat the fence post with his paw, as though beating time, and sometimes he would mark time with his hind feet until he almost seemed to be dancing.

"Are all animals as fond of violin music as that?" Billy asked.

"Not all animals," said Uncle Jim. "But bears will forget everything else, when they hear violin music. If there was a big bone put right under Fuzzy Fur's nose at this moment, I'm sure he wouldn't know it."

"Isn't he enjoying himself, though," Billy chuckled.

"I believe," said Uncle Jim, "that if you moved slowly and deliberately, and kept right on playing, you could walk up to him."

"I'm going to try!" Billy got up slowly to his feet.

"Don't make any jerky move," warned Uncle Jim. "Just move steadily."

Slowly, one deliberate step after another, Billy advanced, keeping his fingers running up and down the violin strings and the bow sweeping back and forth across them, until he stood where he could have reached out a hand and touched Fuzzy Fur. For several minutes he stood playing, with Fuzzy Fur swaying his head from side to side delightedly, and padding away with his feet on the pine needles.

And then, when Billy's fingers were so tired that he couldn't play any longer, he stopped.

For a moment no one moved. Then, with a sigh that seemed almost human, Fuzzy Fur dropped to all fours, nodded at Billy, as much as to say, "Thank you for the music," and trundled off along the trail.

"I just couldn't keep playing a moment longer," said Billy, rubbing his fingers to get the stiffness out of them. "I'm glad we didn't frighten him away."

"I think Fuzzy Fur enjoyed his visit immensely," chuckled Uncle Jim. "And I don't think you will ever be as close as that to a real wild bear again."

"Oh, I'm not so sure," replied Billy. "I think I'll try it again some evening. I know we all had a good time, you and I and Fuzzy Fur."—Alfred I. Tooke, in The Presbyterian of the South.

MONDAY.

GETHESEMANE.

"They came to a place which was named Gethsemane."—Mark 14:32.

The meaning of Gethsemane has suffered at the hands of artists and theologians. The artists have pictured it a scene of beauty, when it should be one of sorrow and horror. The theologians have elaborated interpretations beyond understanding. The simple story of the experience is compelling and convincing. Let us reduce our understanding of it this week to its simple God-intending meaning, viz.: Gethsemane is the supreme expression of Christ's hate for sin, of His love for man and of His faith in the triumph of right, let the sacrifice be what it may.

Let us hate sin as He did. Let us love man as He did. Let us have faith like His. In these experiences Gethsemane is understood and through these experiences we see God.

Prayer—O Lord we desire to be Thy children and to have each day a perfect relationship with Thee through Christ. Amen.

TUESDAY.

A CRUCIFIED WILL.

"Not my will but thine be done."—Luke 22:42.

Gethsemane was the crucifixion of the will of Jesus. He undoubtedly wanted to live like all others. He prayed to the Father to let this cup pass. But He would not be misunderstood; He was in a world to finish a work for the Father and immediately he nailed His will to the cross of His Father's. This makes these words not a cry of agony, but a shout of triumphant victory. "The spirit of sacrifice stays not to count the price. Such was Christ's giving." Many a soul, in his search for God, in his last extremity, has found Him by merely crucifying his own will and taking up full obedience to the Father.

Prayer—O Lord, we know that Thou didst lay down Thy life for us, Thy sheep. Help us to give our all to Thee. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

BEYOND GETHESEMANE.

"Father, forgive them: For they know not what they do."—Matthew 23:44.

The meaning of Gethsemane in its estimate of sin, its love for men, its faith in ultimate good and in its submission to the Divine Will would seem to be enough and yet that is not all. Midst the agonies of the cross He is heard to say, "Father forgive them." This situation finds no parallel in history—a sinless man, a perfectly good man, a God-trusting man crucified, abused, mutilated and dying, forgiving his executioners. Such forgiveness is unique in grace and glory.

However, Jesus represents God, and in this He reveals divine mercy in which man can ever trust. Can we trust Him?

Prayer—O God, as Thou dost reveal Thyself to us in Christ's passion this week, help us to see, to know, and to understand. In His name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

ETERNAL LIFE.

"They that passed by railed on him."—Mark 15:29.

"That they might have life."—John 10:10.

Nothing was lacking from the complete ignominy of the crucifixion. Although suffering such physical torment as only His delicate fibre could know, He still goes on beyond the limits of salvation to give more light to man in his understanding of an eternal hope. He died this death that we might live the life. It has been called a bloody transaction, yet by that blood sin-blackened souls are made white.

Prayer—O Lord, at Calvary we bow in confession of our sins, in sorrow and anguish for our sins, and we plead for forgiveness. O Lord, help us to love Thee up to the level of the cross, if we can. In His name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

LENT CHANGES LIFE.

"It is finished."—John 19:30.

Jesus came not only preaching repentance and salvation but that His chief aim was to finish His work (John 4:34). To this end he prayed continually (John 5:36). Just before the sad catastrophe of His death He stated in that magnificent prayer of John 17, "Father, I have finished the work." That work is now crowned with the eternal halo of his sacrifice.

The supreme task of life is the finished task.

Prayer—Pray as you feel.

SATURDAY.

THEY STILL LIVE.

"And he said to me, these are they which came out of great tribulation . . . therefore are they before the throne of God and serve him day and night."—Rev. 7:9-17.

"It is impossible to say," said Stopford Brooke, "that the dead have no influence on our lives. They touch us from the past." Memory and love invite them and they come. We renew our courage from their brave spirits, our faith from their confidences and charge ourselves to realize their hopes. We know that they are with God—and with us—and ask no more than to be worthy of their love.

Prayer—We bless Thee, Lord of Love and the enduring, for our friends beyond the veil. Grant us such an assuring sense of their dear presences, that being true in spirit now to them, may we be true in trust to Thee. Amen.

CALVARY: TRIUMPH THROUGH SACRIFICE.

LESSON XI—MARCH 17, 1940.

LESSON: Matthew 26:57-27:56.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 22:1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT: He was despised, and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief.—Isaiah 53:3.

The Alchemy of Jesus.

Before the days of scientific chemistry, there was a group of men called alchemists who were constantly trying to find some particular substance, or element, which would change the baser metals into gold. But Jesus is the great Alchemist. He took the Cross, the symbol of degradation and disgrace, shame and suffering, and transformed it into a thing of beauty and of power. Indeed he made it the central symbol of the Christian religion. In his day it stood for everything vile and shameful; in our day it stands for everything pure and holy. This is because of who Jesus was and of what happened on a cross on Golgotha nineteen hundred years ago.

Where Golgotha was, or is, nobody really knows. There are several traditional sites pointed out as the possible or probable place of the scene of the crucifixion. It is difficult also to explain exactly what happened at Calvary. Indeed, there have been several theories of the atonement. But in spite of the mystery as to the place and as to the actual meaning, Christians are agreed that something happened on Calvary which has made a profound difference in their lives and in the history of the world. Instinctively they feel that what he suffered and what happened there have a personal significance as well as a universal meaning. They see in the Cross of Christ not simply a single historical event, but a revelation of an eternal process back of the universe. They see here the awfulness of human sin, the extent to which love will go, the power of vicarious sacrifice, the willingness of God to take upon himself the sorrows and sufferings and sins of his children, the ultimate victory of good over evil, and the redeeming power of self-giving love. No man can stand before the Cross of Christ and feel any sense of self-complacency or of pride.

Facing Life's Issues Clear-Eyed and Clear-Headed.

Before he was nailed to the Cross, they offered Jesus wine to drink, mingled with gall. It was a kind of drug which was given to condemned criminals to lessen their suffering and pain and to deaden their finer sensibilities. But Jesus refused it. He went to his last earthly adventure cleared-eyed and clear-headed. He was fully conscious of all that went on during those terrible hours. He gave himself with the last full measure of devotion to his cause. He was sustained and strengthened not by artificial stimulants, and he was not deadened by drugs as he faced life's most meaningful experience. How unlike so many modern men and women who have to resort to all kinds of stimulants and drugs to brace themselves up for the unusual experiences of life, in fact, even for the ordinary experiences life.

They Crucified Him.

There were many factors and many forces which entered into the crucifixion of Jesus. A man has written a book entitled, They Crucified—And Crucify, in which he lists the motives and forces which nailed Jesus to the cross—selfishness, greed, covetousness, love of special privilege, bigotry, pride, etc. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin in another stirring book has shown how certain interests were involved—the militarists, commercial interests, civil authorities, religious aristocracy. We must not think, however, that these forces ceased when Jesus was crucified. They are still alive in the world, and again and again they are crucifying the Son of God afresh.

Unbelievable Indifference to Human Suffering.

One can hardly believe that people could be so cold and callous as were some of the people gathered around the cross. For instance, the soldiers cast lots, or, as we would say, threw dice for the personal belongings of Jesus. Those who passed by on the road that ran by the cross poked fun at him and taunted him with jeers. The priests made sport of him, mocking him and assuring him that if he came down from the cross they would believe on him. Others simply sat there and watched him stolidly, indifferently, in a detached way. It is an index to the callousness and coldness of the world of his day, an index of how coarse and sodden life had become. And yet there are many of us who have become so sophisticated and who have become so accustomed to hardship and to suffering on the part of others that we reproduce the very scenes which took place on the Cross of Calvary.

The King of the Jews.

Over his head was written a superscription, "This is Jesus, the King of the Jews." It was written in three languages, which made its message universal—in Hebrew, in Greek, and in Latin. It was meant, of course, as hollow mockery. As a matter of fact, it was the profoundest truth. To be sure he was not a king of the Jews in the sense that the Jews expected a king. But whatever else the Jews may have been they had a genius for religion. And that strange man on the cross was the world's final authority of the spiritual life of the race. He would be king, but not by force. His kingdom was not of this world; it was righteousness and joy and peace in the Holy Spirit.

"If Thou Art the Son of God."

The priests and the scribes and elders told Jesus that if he would come down from the cross that they would believe him. They also intimated that the fact that he was on the cross was evidence that he was not the Son of God. "If thou art the Son of God, come down from the cross." And they must have put a world of meaning in that word, "if." As a matter of fact, it did look rather strange to them from their materialistic view of life that God would allow his Son to be nailed to the cross, if he were truly the Son of God. Why did he not now manifest his Sonship by some supreme miracle! If he did this, it would be easy to believe that he was the Son of God. Thus they reasoned with themselves. Of course, they would have done nothing of the sort. If Jesus had come down from the cross, he would have failed at the the Son of God. It was just because crucial point of showing that he was he voluntarily went to the cross and there suffered and died that we can believe that he was the Son of God. In no other way could God have possibly shown the absolute love which he bore for his children than by giving himself in Christ to the shame and suffering of the cross. There are people today who are looking for some spectacular and miraculous revelation of the love and power of God. They think that they would believe in Christ and in God if they had some visible manifestation

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Last week the writer had an opportunity to visit an old colored woman who is one hundred years old. She was a slave in her early life and belonged to my grandfather. She was one of the servants in grandfather's home. The writer has always known her as "Aunt Mary." She is now blind and cannot see her friends, but she can recognize the voices of those with whom she is well acquainted. She is now ill and confined to her bed. It was real touching as she held the writer's hand and said, "I am too weak to talk much. I wish I could talk to you a lot. I am soon going to leave. I am going home. I am praying that God will call me soon. I want to go home."

"Aunt Mary" has lived an honest upright life and was a faithful servant to the white people. She reared a family of children and taught them her same good traits.

"Aunt Mary" will soon leave us and I believe she will shine in glory as a redeemed soul. Only a few of the old slaves are left. We will miss them when they are gone. Their masters taught them to be honest and polite—a lesson they never forgot. To have the opportunity to visit one who has lived one hundred years and hold them by the hand and talk with them is a rare opportunity.

of his miraculous power. But after all, God is not revealed in such demonstrations. He finds his fullest revelation in the cross and in the spirit of those who like Christ take upon themselves the sorrows, sufferings and sins of others and bear them for the sake of others.

Numbered with the Transgressors.

They thought they were adding insult and injury to Jesus by crucifying him with two men who were robbers. As a matter of fact, they were thereby dramatizing an eternal principle. If Jesus had been the only one crucified, there would have been a certain majesty and dignity about it which would have made a different impression upon some of those who saw it. Just as he came into the world partaking of the load of common humanity, just so in this last tragic act of his earthly life did he again partake of the experiences, of the sufferings, and of the shames of humanity. In his own body he bore our sins upon the tree, and by his stripes were we healed—thus wrote the prophet hundreds of years before the event happened, and thus wrote Simon Peter later in the light of what happened.

Forsaken of God.

Perhaps the most agonizing cry which came from the heart of another were the words of Jesus, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" In the final and closing moments of his earthly life it seemed that God himself had forsaken him. He felt cut off from all fellowship, both human and divine. Thus did the weight of the sorrow and sin of the world weigh heavily upon his heart. It is significant, however, to note that Jesus a few minutes later when he realized that the end finally had come said, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit." Thus he died as he had lived—in quiet confidence that the Father's wisdom, and the Father's power, and the Father's love overruled all, that His spirit was in the Father's hands, and that ultimately God would vindicate him and through him make known his redeeming love.

Going Home.

"Into thy hands I commend my spirit." Here are some of the most comforting words that Jesus ever spoke. Death was for him a doorway into a new experience with God. In quiet confidence and trust he yielded his spirit unto the Father, quite confident that God was able to keep that which he had committed unto him against that day. Thus can we as we face life's final adventures confidently and quietly yield our spirits into the Father's hands, knowing that he doeth all things well, and that he will also keep that which we have committed unto him against that day.

WHAT EASTER MEANS.

"Who is made not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life."—Heb. 8: 15-17; I Cor. 15: 53-58.

This is faith's challenge to death; today is only the present tense of the endless life. In the light of Easter morning death is only a door; the road goes on beyond its shadowed portals. We ought, then, to live as those who are already about the high task of an endless life, making much of duty, rejoicing in friendship, rejoicing in every good thought, holding every blessing subject to correction and enlargement, and loving without any fear that love will have an end.

Those who thus live can bear light afflictions gladly, lay ample foundations for character and knowledge and care most for that for which we may always care. For those who thus live fore-gleams of heavenly beauty will pierce the mists of time and eternal meanings bless and hallow each new day. This is the message of Easter and thus to live is to practice immortality.

Prayer—O Thou in whose steadfastness our lives are established, we praise Thee for life and immortality brought to light in Jesus Christ. Let our Easter faith be so manifest in our daily lives that goodness may become our habit and love our law. In His name. Amen.

In Memoriam

LASSITER.

On December 31, 1939, the "Death Angel" visited our community and took from our midst Wallace B. Lassiter, Jr., one of the most faithful members of our young people's missionary society of Berea (Nansemond) Christian Church.

W. B., as he was known by all, was a loyal and devoted friend to everyone, and was loved by all.

Therefore, let it be resolved:

1. That we record our sincere appreciation of his Christian character and faithful service to the society and the cause of Christ.
2. That, while we miss his presence which was ever a joy and inspiration to us, we know that he is safe in the arms of Jesus where there is neither sorrow nor suffering.
3. That we extend to the family our deepest sympathy, and pray that God may sustain them in this dark hour.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family a copy spread upon the minutes of our young people's society, a copy placed on the minutes of Berea Christian Church, and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

HICKS.

On January 20, 1940, there passed from the labor of the Lord here on earth to her reward above Sister L. W. Hicks, aged sixty years. She was staying at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. J. Perry, Route 2, Wake Forest, N. C. Mrs. Hicks had lived virtually her entire life in the vicinity of Wake Forest, holding her church membership at Oak Level Christian Church for many years until two years ago, at which time she and her husband transferred their membership to Beulah Congregational - Christian Church.

The writer, with the assistance of Rev. H. O. Baker, Baptist minister of Rolesville, N. C., conducted the funeral service on January 22 at Beulah Church, with the burial in the cemetery at Oak Level Church.

E. M. POWELL.

SHELTON.

Mrs. O. P. Shelton was born on May 3, 1869, and passed away on February 19, 1940. She was an active member of the First Congregational - Christian Church in Greensboro. She was interested in all the activities of the local church and the denomination as a whole. She was a faithful reader of "The Christian Sun."

Mrs. Shelton is survived by four sons, Fleet of Gibsonville, Ned of Fayetteville, Worth of Durham, and Fleming of Greensboro; three daughters, Mrs. L. H. Richardson and Mrs. P. A. Robinson of Greensboro, and Mrs. G. W. Putnam of Raleigh; one brother, Mr. John Rippey of Altamahaw; and fourteen grandchildren.

W. E. WISSEMAN.

STEWART.

Mrs. Mary B. Stewart died on February 18, 1940, at the age of thirty-one. She leaves behind to mourn her going her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. French; her husband, Walter Stewart; three children, Margaret June, Joel Melford, and Jimmie Elliott; four sisters, Mrs. Cora Daniel, Mrs. Alice McManeous, Mrs. Nona Mae Benefield, and Miss Lois French; five brothers, Rev. Joe A., Jimmie Larkin, Floyd and Alton French.

We cannot understand why a young wife and mother is cut down in the bloom of life, but God works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform, and all things work together for good to them who love the Lord. She suffered untold pain and bore it with patience for six weeks. Then Jesus, the one whom she loved and served, came as he had promised and took her back where she rests with him.

Her funeral was held at Noonday Christian Church, of which she was a member, in the presence of a house filled with sorrowing relatives and friends. Burial was in the cemetery of the church. The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. H. Harris. May God bless and keep the sorrowing loved ones.

Our Easter Offering for Missions

The Southern Convention through the Conferences asks each church for an offering for Missions at Easter.

THE REASONS:

1. The offering expresses love for Jesus Christ.
2. Our church has 440 missionaries in foreign countries depending on us for support.
3. Pastorates, churches, and communities in North Carolina and Virginia need our help.
4. Sharing with others brightens our own religious experience.
5. The message of Easter is needed in our world.
6. Missionaries build international friendships.

THE METHODS:

Churches will use various methods of giving their members an opportunity to share. Among them may be the following:

1. A simple offering in the regular service of the church.
2. Reception of envelopes distributed ahead of time.
3. Offerings raised by Sunday school classes and other groups.
4. Large gifts from individuals.
5. An offering at the close of a fine pageant or play.
6. A canvass of the entire membership for this special purpose.

WHAT DOES EASTER MEAN TO YOU?

What does Easter mean to you?
Stately church with cushioned pew,
Where, Lenten season gone at last
And days of self-denial past,
Richly-clad, devoted throngs
Of worshipers unite in songs
Of praise in lily-scented air?
Is this what makes your Easter fair?

Does it mean the end of winter's reign,
Bright skies and welcome warmth again,
Singing of birds, budding of trees,
Sweet spring odors on the breeze
From daffodil and crocus bed
And balsam branches overhead?
Sad is the world and cold and gray
If this is all of Easter Day.

But if this blessed season brings,
A firmer faith in holy things;
Assurance of a living Lord;
A strengthening of the tender chord
Of love that binds us to the life to come
Where loved ones 'wait us in the heavenly home,
No pain or loss can e'er efface the bliss,
Dear friend of Easter, when it means all this.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The Woman's Missionary Society of Turner's Chapel, near Sanford, N. C., had their foreign mission study book reviewed on last Sunday afternoon by Mrs. F. C. Lester of Elon College.

Rev. R. E. Newton, pastor of our Page County (Va.) churches, is spending a few days with his family in West Palm Beach, Florida. Rev. C. G. Scannell will supply for him at Joppa and Dry Run on next Sunday.

Dr. E. M. Halliday and Rev. T. A. Tripp, officials of the Home Boards of our denomination, have recently made a survey of Negro work in North Carolina. They also visited in Ashboro and were favorably impressed with the success of our new church there.

Rev. W. J. Andes is holding pre-Easter services at Happy Home, near Reidsville, N. C., on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday nights of this week. The young people's society will present a pageant entitled "The Way of the Cross" on Saturday night.

Rev. Emmanuel Hedgebeth, student in Yale Divinity School, is spending his spring vacation with his parents in Holland, Va. On last Sunday Mr. Hedgebeth was the guest speaker at Elon College, from which he graduated last spring.

Hank's Chapel, near Pittsboro, N. C., will hold a sunrise service at 6:00, have Sunday school and morning worship, and have presented a missionary pageant by the women's society on Easter Sunday. The Promotional Secretary recently enjoyed meeting with the Women's Missionary Society there.

Rev. Herbert G. Council, Jr., has accepted a call to the pastorate of First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va. Mr. Council is now pastor of the Congregational Church at Canterbury, Conn. He graduated from Yale Divinity School last June and is a native of Franklin, Va., where he is a member of the Christian Church.

The Mid-Year Session of the Valley of Virginia Conference will convene at ten o'clock in the morning on next Thursday, March 28, at Bethlehem Christian Church, Broadway, Va. Among the speakers will be Rev. W.

J. Andes, Rev. F. C. Lester, and Rev. R. E. Newton. Mr. Roy A. Larriek of Winchester is the president.

Mr. Henry Wise, acting pastor of Monticello Christian Church, Brown Summit, N. C., is spending his college Easter holidays by conducting Holy Week services in his church each evening during this week. The Promotional Secretary will conduct communion service for him and the church on Thursday night.

The Upper Alamance Fellowship will meet at Berea Christian Church on the fifth Sunday afternoon. The children from the Christian Orphanage will present a program, and reports will be made by all of the churches in that area concerning their Easter services. It is the time for the election of office. A full attendance is urged.

Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor of the First Christian Church of South Norfolk, Va., is assisting Rev. Aubrey C. Todd in a series of services at Sanford (N. C.) Christian Church this week. Mr. Todd gave a series of studies on the Gospel of John at Hope Chapel, Norfolk, Va., last week. Rev. F. C. Lester filled his appointment in Sanford last Sunday morning.

On next Sunday the Promotional Secretary will lead the sunrise service at Bethel, preach at the morning service at Mt. Olivet (R), and at the evening hour will preach and conduct communion for the Mt. Olivet (G) Church in the Valley of Virginia.

Rev. C. G. Scannell preached at Bethel last Sunday, and on that Sunday Rev. and Mrs. J. Herbert Owen of Worthington, Mass., visited in this field.

Rev. Joe A. French, executive secretary of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention, has recently sent to the ministers a "Calendar for Christian Education," which lists special days to be observed and things to be done from now until July. These suggestions will certainly prove helpful to the leaders of religious education. Mr. French also sent a letter to his members, telling of the Easter program at Ocean View and Berea. He says that the service of Mr. R. B. Wood of the Christian Temple is aiding greatly in the promotion of our Sunday school work at Ocean View.

HAPPY HOME.

Despite the fact that Happy Home is a rural church, and the fact that there has been much sickness in the community, the pastor has filled all his regular appointments these winter months. We are sorry that one of our most loyal members who is on the Board of Trustees, Mr. George Hill, has been confined to his room. His improvement makes us look forward to welcoming him back.

The young people have been carrying on their work. Members of the older young people's class, taught by Miss Clarice Gunn, have been furnished copies of "Lenten Devotions for Young People." Thirteen enjoyed meeting and dining with Dr. Gray, secretary of the department of young people for our denomination, at Greensboro, February 27.

The World's Day of Prayer was impressively observed. The program was led by Miss Ruth Stephens, vice-president of the Missionary Society.

In commemoration of Missionary Month the first part of the worship program on the first Sunday in March was in charge of Mrs. H. E. Robertson, president of the Woman's Missionary Society. She asked the superintendents of various departments to tell the congregation something of the work we are doing. "Aunt Betty" Wall, our oldest member, read a beautiful poem. The choir was composed of members of the Missionary Society.

Our pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, preached a missionary sermon. His appeal was made to the men as well as to the women. As in other services, he had a passion for lost souls and, as usual, invited such to accept the truths of Christian faith.

REPORTER.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Do you know what last Sunday is called in our church year? Yes, that is right! It is called Palm Sunday. Do you know why we give it that name? Our Bible has the story of that first Palm Sunday in it.

It was on the Sunday before Easter, long ago, that Jesus came riding in triumph into the big city of Jerusalem. Great throngs of people gathered about him as he came. They marched along the road by the side of him. Some of them lay their cloaks on the road for his colt to tread upon. Others broke branches from the date palm trees and spread them in the way. Perhaps the children who were too small to break the branches from the trees gathered the bright, gay blossoms to scatter upon the road before him. The people and the children sang this song as they marched with him into Jerusalem:

"Hosannah to the son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosannah in the highest."

So, it is in memory of Jesus that we keep Palm Sunday. We call it Palm, because of those first palm branches which were broken and strewn in his way to do him honor.

This week is known as Holy Week because this was the week that Jesus suffered and died. On Thursday of this week he met with his disciples for a last meal with them. This last meal was eaten in the same way the meal was eaten in your story of Reuben. When you read this story remember that Jesus ate in the same way.

This meal is eaten every year by the Jews in memory of the passover in Egypt. Bread made without yeast is always used because when the Jews fled from Egypt they did not have time to put leaven in their bread. When the head of the table serves the lamb he is very careful not to break any bones because this was commanded of the Jews in Egypt by Moses.

When you read the words of the last hymn in your story, think about how Jesus must have felt as he sang them at the last supper with his disciples.

On Easter you will enjoy your Easter eggs and you will no doubt see the Easter bunnies. We have these because of the fact that the egg and the bunny are symbols of fertility or new life. During the past some religious faiths in the European countries have used these symbols and some of our ancestors brought the same ideas to America where they are still very much in use today. Both of these tell us that Easter is near. I do not know where the idea that the bunny lays the eggs comes from. Do you? I think that perhaps it got its beginning somewhere in America.

Easter is a glad time and if we listen we may hear the song that the Easter flowers sing as they grow and bloom. Here is a poem that we used to sing at Easter time about the growing flowers:

Down neath the pure, white snow
Where tiny star flakes so brightly glow,
A golden sun beam found its way,
And listening heard strange things one day;

Up from this wonder-land so fair,
Came sweetest voices in words of prayer;
In clear, soft tones the blossoms said
As each so lovingly hung its head:

"Dear Father, help us quickly grow,
Thy love and goodness to others show;
Day by day to tell of Thy care,
Thy many blessings with others share."

So from the earth these flowerlets wee,
Come with a message for you and me,
Their voices blend as sweet bells chime,
Singing His praise at this Easter time!

To all of you the gladdest of all Easters. Do not forget the greeting which you should give to your family and friends on Easter morning!

Greeting: "Christ is risen!" Response: "He is risen indeed!"

REUBEN BAR-BARUCH.

Baruch, his good wife Sarah, his two sons, Reuben and Samuel, and his little daughter, Leah, sat down to eat the passover supper together. Sarah had worked hard all the week to prepare for this meal. The house had been cleaned throughout and she had spent much time in preparing the food.

First of all, Baruch asked God's blessing upon the meal. Then each of them dipped their fingers in their wine and drank it. Next, they washed their hands and their arms. Before partaking of the bitter herbs, Baruch prayed a prayer of thanksgiving. After the herbs were eaten, Sarah brought in unleavened bread, sauce, the lamb, and thank offerings. At this time Baruch explained to the three children the meaning of the passover feast. Then they all sang together Psalms 113 and 114.

They ate of the things on the table, saving the lamb until last. When they had finished eating they washed their hands again. At the close of the meal they all sang the "Great Hallel," which goes like this:

The Lord is on my side;
I will not fear; what can man do unto me?
They compassed me about like bees;
They are quenched as the fire of thorns.
I shall not die, but live.
The Lord hath chastened me sore;
But he hath not given me over unto death.
Open to me the gates of righteousness;
I will go into them, and I will praise the Lord;
The stone which the builders refused is become the head-stone of the corner.
Bind the sacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar.

HOLY WEEK.

This week from Palm Sunday to Easter has long been observed by the church as Holy Week. Clustered about these days are many memories sacred to those who love the Lord Jesus. It was during that last week of His earthly life that He rode into Jerusalem as a triumphant conqueror, cleansed the temple, received Gentile seekers after truth, disputed with the leaders of the Jewish Church, observed the Passover feast, instituted what we know as the Lord's Supper, prayed in Gethsemane, died on the cross, and arose from the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea. Well may we look at the events of that great week with awe and reverence, for in very truth much that was holy was crowded into it.

But our week is not holy simply because of the historic events centering around Jesus. Our week is holy because we, seeing the purity of His life, seek the way of holiness for ourselves.

ATONEMENT.

Atonement simply means "at-one-ment." The Creator and the created—God and man—became separated. The very ancient story in Genesis is one description of how they lost their fellowship. It was a long and dreary road from the Garden of Eden to Calvary and the garden in which Joseph's tomb received the body of Christ.

Just what happened when Jesus was crucified is difficult for the wisest of men to describe in detail. Doubtless we shall never know so long as we dwell on earth. But through the centuries men have believed that something happened which brought back the old friendship and fellowship of God and man. God and man became one in purpose again. According to John 3:16 it was the love of God which sent Jesus into the world. It was the searching of the Good Shepherd for the lost sheep that gave purpose to the life of Jesus. One can hardly believe, therefore, that the death of Christ on the cross changed the mind of the Father, or in any way made Him more anxious to forgive and redeem than he always had been. On the contrary, it seems to be fair to say that "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself," that the magnetism of deity was drawing men unto the Father through Christ, that yearning love was reaching out to take hold on the minds of wicked men and to bring them into fellowship with the Father. The atonement, therefore, seems to have been the gracious outpouring of God's love that draws to itself reverent worshippers.

LIFE EVERLASTING.

When the disciples had buried Jesus they buried their hope of the Kingdom of God coming to earth under His leadership. Apparently they did not expect Him to arise from the grave. They were afraid of the Jews who had had Jesus killed, and were ready to return to their old jobs of collecting taxes and catching fish.

A few faithful women came early on Sunday morning with a love-offering to present to the dead Christ. They fully expected to find His body in Joseph's tomb and to anoint it with costly spices which they brought. Their loyalty would not let them leave, even though hope had been blasted. Their faithfulness was rewarded by discovering that death could not destroy the Master of Men.

The message of the resurrection deals with life everlasting. Dr. Henry B. Wright, a late professor in Yale Divinity School, said that the resurrection of Jesus was as fully attested as any event in ancient history. If we can believe in other historic documents, we can believe that the body of Jesus arose from the tomb and lived among his friends here on the earth.

Those who knew the Master and those who followed Him later joined in the belief that because He lives we, too, shall live. His resurrection does not necessarily guarantee this, but it certainly does indicate that life is not finished when the body is laid to rest in the tomb. There is something about personality that lives on. Goodness cannot be destroyed. Beauty and love are immortal. Our life everlasting depends upon the goodness, beauty and love which come into our experience and become part of us.

"GO, TELL."

Doubtless flowers bloomed and birds sang in the garden of Joseph that first Easter morning when Jesus called Mary by name. Churches are usually filled at Easter with fragrant flowers and singing people. This is well. It is beautiful.

But the message of the Master to Mary of Magdala was "Go and tell." He had a message to be delivered. She was the messenger.

In like manner those who worship in the church on the coming Sunday should remain among the beautiful surroundings until the Master speaks some word, gives some message that can be delivered. When that message is received, it is our business to go in haste to deliver it.

In fact, we know already the message of Jesus. We know of the cross and of the triumph. We know of the sacrifice and the joy. We know of the sorrow and the happiness. We know of death and life everlasting. It is our business, therefore, to go in haste to deliver the message which the Master has given us.

It is for this reason that our churches are asked to make a contribution for Missions on Easter Sunday. Because we believe in the resurrected Christ, we want others to know about Him. Because we have tarried until he has said a forgiving word to us individually, we needs must go to proclaim His divine love to all of His children around the world. Let us therefore bring an offering and come into His courts with thanksgiving on the Holy Day which we keep in memory of His Resurrection.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Easter ranks with Christmas in religious importance. The birth and resurrection of Jesus are the two outstanding centers of Christian faith. The miraculous is predominant in both events. The enemies of Jesus have tried to eliminate the Annunciation, the Virgin Birth and the song of the angels. These features are too deep and mystic for reason and philosophy. And the account of the resurrection is also full of mystery and elements beyond the reach of ordinary human experience.

The enemies of Jesus nailed Him to a cross in an effort to get rid of Him. That cruel execution was the worst a sinful world could plan. Death has always been considered the short route to extinction and oblivion. Not so with Jesus. The cross could not destroy His soul. The grave, though sealed and guarded, was unable to retain His body. All the fetters of Roman soldiers were not adequate to curb the strength or silence the tongue of Omnipotence. An empty grave, a woman's discovery, the disciples' warmed hearts, the identified person of our Lord beside the sea—all bear witness to a fact—the greatest fact of that age—Jesus arose from the dead.

After nineteen centuries of criticism and investigation, and skepticism and unbelief—millions of people read the story of the resurrection anew at Easter, and join with men and women, boys and girls around the earth—singing: "He is risen, the Lord Omnipotent reigneth." And well they may sing. For the hope of the nations centers in the abiding faith that Jesus, the Son of God, actually arose from the dead. Pity the carping critics who vainly seek to destroy faith in the Son of God. That story is still printed in the Bible. It will remain for the centuries to come.

Why do teachers in high schools, colleges, universities, seminaries and churches seek to undermine a simple faith in these great fundamental tenets of the Christian faith? Why should any teacher of science and philosophy discredit the doctrine of the Bible? One answer is: "This is a scientific age, and men must not accept dogma without being able to give a reason for their faith. Religion is too dogmatic." To which one may reply: "Science becomes dogmatic—more dogmatic than Christianity—by its method of approach to these statements of truth." And one may ask: "Why does not the unbelieving teacher ask the students to discredit all the scientific dogmas and deductions of the laboratory, until they are proven by reliable investigation?"

Young men and young women are not called into the chemical laboratory for the purpose of trying to disprove the discoveries of scholars in the field of chemistry or physics. They are required to prove certain formulas by reason and experiment. And all these proofs rest upon certain cardinal principles, long accepted as true and trustworthy, in the laboratory. And in this age of superficial thinking and thoughtless living there is a need to re-discover the eternal verities of divine revelation. Young people will find much available material for such an investigation. It will mean a new discovery of human talent and spiritual power. For all life, whether we accept it or not, is ultimately governed by spiritual law. Discarding the Bible, persecuting the preacher and the church, absenting ourselves from the worship services and destroying the religious significance of the Sabbath Day—will not abolish the existence of the inexorable spiritual laws of God, under which all men are compelled to live, and which, in simple faith, we are commanded to love and honor.

Jesus lives! Praise His name! Words and definitions change. He is unchanging. He survives criticism, denial, betrayal and death. He is the Way of Life. I. W. JOHNSON.

THE CONVENTION.

The president of the Convention, Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, is much concerned about the program for the approaching session of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. Everyone interested in the achievements and progress of the church is. There are certain things that of necessity must enter into the program.

Various departments, boards, and committees will be expected to make reports evidencing successes or losses during the biennial now coming to a close. Discussions of failures, losses, debts, etc., will occupy our attention. These matters, it seems to me, should be properly considered in group meetings and given to the public only with a constructive program whereby the church, recognizing its failures and losses, may easily atone for the same with the cooperation and help of the entire constituency. I do not believe that this is the time for recession or retrenchment in our church's program, but a time for optimism, determination, and plans that will carry us forward rather than discourage progressive programs.

The church moves forward not by putting the emphasis upon the mechanical and material but by emphasizing the spiritual in such a way as to challenge the faith of its members. The path of victory for the kingdom is still the highway of faith that challenges and commands the entire resources of the ones of us who constitute the church on the earth. All things are possible to those who believe. Faith does not look backward, but it moves forward at all times, confident of victory for the right.

This does not mean that the church is to have nothing to do with things material. It has everything to do with our money and our money's worth. It is impossible to give God your heart and bank your harvest. What we have and are at his disposal. He is the Master of us all and the Master of all that we possess. Until we as a church can realize that not only we but what we have are His, I know that spiritual achievements are practically impossible, but when we put what we have at His disposal, somehow, though not understandable by us, what we have is made sufficient for our needs. As a church we are not poor in this world's goods unless we are poverty stricken in things that are spiritual. At this moment our church and the institutions of our church have great financial needs. At the same time the constituency of our church has great material resources.

I make no apology for holding before our people the privilege of the tithe. If we as a church and as a people would bring a tenth of our income

OBEDIENCE.

The supreme and emphatic word of the Bible, both of the Old and New Testaments, is obedience. From beginning to end of this Book of books, revealing as it does the infinite love of our Lord, this word obedience is put down as a condition to the benefits and blessings of an all-wise God. It is recalled that Moses, one of the two best and greatest of men, was permitted to see, but not allowed to enter, the land of Canaan to which he was leading the children of Israel, because of one single act of disobedience. Along with this stands the fact that the children of Israel, fleeing from Egyptian bondage, had to wander forty years in the wilderness rather than some forty days, because of their wilful disobedience and hardness of heart against the will of their Heavenly Father. All through the Old Testament the faithful preachers and prophets of God warn the people and with agonizing pity and anxiety begged them to obey the will of God, declaring that there was no other way to His love and care than the way of obedience.

In this connection it may be recalled that David loved his son, Absalom, to the extent that he would gladly have died for him, but he could not help, and could not save the life of Absalom, because Absalom was rebellious and refused to obey the wish of his father, David, and sought his own way rather than that of his father. Again and again the prophets of the Old Testament point out the fact that God in His loving compassion prefers obedience, even to their sacrifice, and the prophets declare that God despises their meal offerings and peace offerings and other vain tokens of devotion and will have none of them because they will not obey Him. Israel was a hard-hearted and stiff-necked people through many generations, preferring to go their own way rather than that clearly pointed out by the Lord who had brought them out on eagles' wings unto Himself. He would have kept them unto Himself, but they rebelled and would not obey.

The same story runs through the entire New Testament as well. With infinite compassion and pity Lord Christ sought with zeal to bless and to benefit all those who He came in contact with, but only those who would obey Him could receive the blessings and benefits of His grace and unlimited compassion.

Now the Son of God and the best friend that man-kind ever had reserved His most emphatic, His supreme and superlative command to obedience, until after His crucifixion and resurrection. "Go ye," said our Savior just before His ascension, "and teach all nations to observe whatsoever I have commanded you." That, the reader will see, is not a request, nor a petition, but an emphatic command. St. Luke puts the command in these words, "Ye shall be witnesses of me unto the uttermost parts of the earth." That also is a command, an emphatic command, requiring obedience and not just a simple request.

Those of us who profess Him as our Savior and Redeemer have not obeyed Him and thus nearly two thousand years after this command was given we find a large part of the world rejecting and refusing to obey and as has recently been pointed out, about three-fourths of the world's population are at war with each other trying to kill and being killed. This has come about because the peoples who have known Him and the power of His resurrection have not done their duty in making Him known and sharing His love and life with others.

All of us are not called to go out individually and preach His gospel to those who know Him not, and worship idols instead of the true and living God, but all of us may go and should go through our donations to missions to help send out and support those loyal, true and devout souls who have gone out in His name and for His sake. They are our representatives, and our Lord's representatives, and in helping to send them out and support them we are obeying His most emphatic command. At this glad Easter time it should indeed be counted a privilege and a joy to make an offering in His name and for His sake that others who do not know the power of His resurrection shall know Him, whom to know aright is life eternal.

Call to Worship :

O Lord, we come this morning
Knee bound and body bent
Before thy throne of grace.
O Lord—this morning
Bow our hearts beneath our knees
And our knees in some lonesome valley.

We come this morning
Like empty pitchers to a full fountain
With no merits of our own.
O Lord—open up a window of heaven
And lean out far over the battlements of glory
And listen this morning.

The World Needs th

THE MESSAGE

About God

"God Is Love."

It is important to believe in God, but the kind of god in which we believe makes the difference. There are gods of wood and stone and gold. Worship of them makes people hard and cold. There are gods of pleasure. The worship of them makes one light and frivolous. The god of war sends people out to kill and destroy.

The God of Christ is a Father who cares for all his people, for he is love. The worship of him makes people loving. Love is active, creative, constructive. It is full of power and reverence. Sacrifice is true to its nature. Because God is love he gave himself to his people in the Christ of Calvary and Easter. The message of the Church concerning God is that he is working through all the ways of love to make this a good world.

About Us

"Now Are We the Sons of God."

The gods of wealth and pleasure and war destroy the values of man, but the Christian message says that he is a child of God. The God of love has made us in his own image. We may have lost much of our likeness to the Father, but always he is trying to get us to become like him. "We know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him."

This is the message of Easter. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son," said Jesus. "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself," said Paul. The sins of men sent Jesus to the cross, but the love of God raised him from the dead and sent his spirit to dwell in human hearts always. "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain."

About Our World

"One Shepherd, One Fold."

Race, culture and wealth tend to divide the human family, but love and grace and God bring them together. Some religions and religionists break human fellowship and put men into classes, but the founder of Christianity tears down the walls of partition and binds people of all races, clans and classes into one family. The children of God, those who are made in his own image, are one family with the same Father.

In Jesus' day there were many shepherds and many flocks of sheep. There were many religious leaders who thought that people were so different that they should be divided. Jesus said the time would come when there would be one fold for all the sheep because the sheep would all know their Master's voice. The message of love is the magnet that draws all men unto God. Color and race and nation fade when the Good Shepherd calls his sheep.

THE NEED

Physical

"If Thine Enemy Hunger, Feed Him."

Hungry people tramp the highways and shiver in hovels in this fair land of plenty. There are probably more of them in North Carolina and Virginia than there are members of our churches. All over America children grow to maturity with physical handicaps they can never overcome. And America is a land of plenty. Other nations are many times worse off than we. Probably half the people of the world today never eat a good meal.

Hunger, pain, and poverty write themselves deep on the hearts of men. Jesus knew this and said, "If thine enemy hunger, feed him." Relieve the physical need. Show friendliness by giving bread. Thirty million homeless people in China today call to us for bread. Half of India is hungry. "The good shepherd gives his life for the sheep." What will we give?

Mental

"What Think Ye?"

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Think you are sick, and you are likely to become so; believe in goodness, and spiritual health is likely to be yours. It makes a difference how people think. Those who believe that the Emperor is divine must obey without question, even to the extent of worship. If "might makes right," then the stronger may take from the weaker whatever he likes. But if men are "sons of God," then they must be regarded in that light and respected as such.

The minds of men in our world of today are confused, disturbed. Think of Russia, Poland, Finland, Germany, Ethiopia, China! What can the non-Christian think of those who say they are followers of Christ? As mad men, multitudes tear at each other's throats. Human life is cheap because the minds of men are crazed. "What think ye?" Will the Church bring peace, sanity?

Spiritual

"Grow in Grace."

Degrading poverty, cruel war, excessive greed, and religious ignorance are crippling our Father's family, and crushing the spirits of those who can find no peace until they rest their souls in God. Nerves crack and minds give way because the spirit cannot stand the strain. Suicide is much too prevalent around the world. Men, women, and children lose heart because there seems to be no light behind the dark clouds.

Growth in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, will heal the broken-hearted and give new spirit to our weary world. Men of courage and daring are needed. This is not the time for hermit souls that dwell apart and feast on God. Broken and battered people need to know of the redeeming love of God. Then they, too, may grow in grace and become like the Father.

AN OLD EASTER HYMN.

In the center of this page you will find the words of a great old hymn, yet one that many of our young people's group have never used. This hymn, "The Day of Resurrection," was written in 750 A. D., by John of Damascus, but was not translated into English by John M. Neale until 1862. It may be sung to the tune of "Lancashire," which was composed by Henry Smart in 1863. This is familiar, for we sing "Lead On, O King Eternal" to this tune.

In the great hymn given here the author describes the resurrection of Jesus from the dead as the "passover of gladness." We know that this has really become true in the life of the church, for multitudes of joyous people come to worship the risen Lord on Easter day. Try to sing this hymn which has come down to us from ages past and see if it does not express your feelings today.

SHALLOW FORD CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR BANQUET.

On Saturday, March 16, the Christian Endeavor Society of Shallow Ford Christian Church, near Elon College, N. C., entertained the County Christian Endeavor officers, the North Carolina and Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship officers, and the deacons, Sunday school officers and teachers of the local church at a St. Patrick's banquet.

The president of our society, Samuel Barber, was toastmaster and he filled his part of the program in a very entertaining way. He is active in County and State Christian Endeavor work.

The waitresses were members of the local society and were dressed in the Christian Endeavor colors. Their service was very efficient.

Christian Endeavor songs were sung by the group in an enthusiastic manner. Mr. W. E. Walker made several moving pictures of the speakers and group. A fine spirit of fellowship was manifested throughout the program.

Rev. George Dillinger, pastor of the First Evangelical and Reformed

Church of Burlington, was the principal speaker of the evening. He presented the Christian Endeavor as a part of the church, primarily concerned with winning souls for Christ. Secondly, Christian Endeavor is a standard for social development. His remarks were appreciated by the young people.

The banquet was held in the newly constructed basement of the church.

THE DAY OF RESURRECTION.

The day of resurrection,
Earth, tell it out abroad;
The passover of gladness,
The passover of God.
From death to life eternal,
From this world to the sky,
Our Christ hath brought us over
With hymns of victory.

Our hearts be pure from evil,
That we may see aright
The Lord in rays eternal
Of resurrection-light;
And, listening to His accents,
May hear, so calm and plain,
His own, "All Hail!" and, hearing,
May raise the victor-strain.

Now let the heavens be joyful,
Let earth her song begin;
Let the round world keep triumph,
And all that is therein;
Invisible and visible,
Their notes let all things blend;
For Christ the Lord hath risen,
Our joy that hath no end. Amen.

Feature a Bible exhibit as a part of this meeting. Collect as many different sizes and translations as possible.

Let individuals make posters about the Bible. Display these at the meeting. Make posters advertising the exhibit.

Topics for Short Talks—

1. The Bible shows us the nature and purpose of God.
2. The Bible gives us help for our personal problems.
3. It is our source-book of knowledge about Jesus.
4. How God's Word influenced the Psalmist. (Consider such expressions as, "A lamp unto my feet," etc.)
5. Help I have gained from the Bible.
6. The Bible truths are practical in personal experience and in daily life.
7. The Bible has influenced the prevailing moral standards of the Western world. (The Ten Commandments, the Golden Rule, some of the teachings of Jesus, have been universally regarded as patterns of conduct.)
8. The Bible has been a source of comfort and peace of mind, of hope and encouragement for multitudes of people. Distressed people in every age of the Christian era have found saving help in the Holy Scriptures.

For Discussion—

1. Why is the Bible not more appreciated?
2. Why is it not more widely read by people who know it and realize its worth?
3. To what extent do you think the Bible is influencing world events of today?
4. What plan of study and reading of the Bible is best for personal devotion?
5. How may we use the Bible more effectively in our homes, schools, social affairs and church?

Suggested Hymns—

"Come, Thou Almighty King."
"Thy Word is as a Lamp."
"Break Thou the Bread of Life."

THE SEPULCHRE: TRIUMPH OVER DEATH.

LESSON XII—MARCH 24, 1940.

LESSON: Matthew 27:57-28:15.

DEVOTIONAL READING: I Corinthians 15:20-28.

GOLDEN TEXT: Now hath Christ been raised from the dead, the firstfruits of them that are asleep.—I Cor. 15:20.

Was Crucified, Dead, and Buried.

In countless churches throughout the world countless numbers of men and women in repeating the Apostle's Creed say "was crucified, dead, and buried." They may say these words quite absent mindedly, and they probably would not pick them out as some of the most important words in the Apostle's Creed. As a matter of fact, they are very significant words. The resurrection of Jesus would have little or no meaning if he had simply swooned or fainted, or gone into a coma. Jesus died on the cross. He was actually dead even before the soldiers thrust the spear into his side. He was dead when he was put in the tomb. The glory of the resurrection lies in the fact that Jesus came back from the realm of death, that he overcame the last enemy, that he conquered death.

A Rich Disciple.

We do not know much about Joseph, who, with Nicodemus, paid the last loving rites to the body of Jesus. We do know, however, that he was a rich man and that he was a disciple of Jesus. Perhaps in a quite unobtrusive way Joseph faithfully followed the teachings of the Master and was a devoted disciple. He probably used his wealth as a steward; indeed, it is not at all unlikely that he was among those who supported Jesus and his twelve disciples in their work. To be sure, he was not known as well as some of the other disciples, the twelve for instance. It is well to remember, however, that here and there, and everywhere, Jesus has his disciples who quietly and modestly, but sincerely and faithfully, try to practice His principles and to express His spirit in their personal and in their social relationships. Jesus has a great number of rich men who are sincere and consecrated disciples.

One can imagine how tenderly and lovingly Joseph and Nicodemus prepared the body of Jesus for burial. And when the body was ready they laid it in Joseph's tomb, a new one, and then rolled the stone before the door of the tomb. And then Matthew states simply, "They departed." There was no doubt in their minds that Jesus was dead. And it must have been with heavy hearts that they turned away from the tomb and left their Friend behind. It was not simply the fact that he had died; his death involved the very break-down of the world in which they lived. It seemed as if all of his hopes, his ideals and his dreams had been mere fancies, without any reality and without any hope of fruition. It was a dark, dismal world to which these disciples and the other disciples turned at the close of that Friday.

Women Last at the Tomb.

"And Mary Magdalene was there, and the other Mary, sitting over against the sepulchre." Women were last at the tomb. Even after the men who had lovingly paid the last rites had gone away, the women continued to sit there. With what emotions they must have sat there! One wonders if with their discouragement and despair there was not a woman's intuition that somehow it could not all possibly be final. In any event it was typical of womanhood at its best that they gave the last full measure of devotion to their Lord.

That Deceiver.

Matthew gives us a very interesting insight into the minds of the chief priests and Pharisees in the account which he gives of the extra precaution to which they went to see that nobody molested the tomb. They seemed to have remembered that while he was alive Jesus had said something about coming back again from the dead, of rebuilding the temple, the temple of His own body. They referred to him as "that deceiver." Yet they seemed to have a haunting fear that he wasn't such a deceiver after all. In any event they didn't want to take any chances. It would knock their chances completely if this man should appear on earth again, or what would be just about as bad, to have the disciples steal the body and then assert that he was alive again, pointing to the empty tomb as a witness to that fact. They, therefore, with the permission of Pilate, sealed the stone which guarded the entrance to the tomb, and thus put the authority of Rome as a safeguard against any effort to break open the tomb. Furthermore, they appointed a guard so that even if the disciples had attempted to steal the body they would not have been able to do so. Unconsciously, they were thus adding another link in the chain of irrefutable evidence that Christ would rise from the dead. Not only did his disciples not expect it, but his enemies took every precaution to see that it did not happen.

Women First At the Tomb.

Mary Magdalene and the other Mary were the last to leave the tomb. They were the first to appear again at the tomb. Here again we see something of the love and loyalty which has been a beautiful product of the Gospel of Christ in the lives of women through all the centuries. Christ has done a great deal for women and for womanhood, and women have been among his most faithful and sacrificial servants.

The Open Tomb.

In every one of the gospels one faces the fact that no direct description is given of the resurrection itself. Of course, no account could be given. There was no one there to see it, and hence no one to describe it. Matthew intimates, however, that it was something similar to a great earthquake and lightning—it would seem that all nature conspired in this dramatic event. It was a terrific experience, and the guards which watched by the tomb of Christ shook and became even as dead men; as we would say, they did freeze with fear, or were scared to death. The stone was rolled away, and the tomb was thus opened.

The Empty Tomb.

Seeing the stone rolled away, the women went up to the entrance. There the angel made known unto them the great fact that Christ was alive again. Seeing their fear, he told them to be afraid not, that Jesus who had been crucified and who had been laid in that tomb, was not there any longer. He had risen. If they wanted evidence, let them come in and see the place where He had lain. According to Matthew, the first appearance of Jesus was to women with their sensitive, responsive spirits, and womanly intuition.

"Fear Not."

The Gospel is a great antidote to fear. When angels appeared to the shepherds announcing the birth of Jesus, they sang "Fear not." Again and again as Jesus moved among men, his message was "Fear not," or "Be

LIKE A TREE.

"He shall be like a tree."—Ps. 1: 3.

We have heard a great deal of the Christian's resort of Winona, Montreat, Estes Park, Moody Summer School, Massanutten Springs, etc. . . where youth may gather for conferences, study, prayer, and spiritual impounding for the tasks of the Kingdom of God.

Who did all this? Who fostered and made possible these retreats of Galilee? It matters not. They have been men of Galilee. They have fulfilled the promise to "Go and bring forth fruit." That fruit is yours in your home. There you may have a miniature conference, study, prayer session, and spiritual impounding for your tasks. God grant it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

ONE BY ONE.

"The government shall be upon his shoulder."—Isa. 9: 6.

We are very fussy about the conglomeration of individual, municipal, state, and national affairs. In this we often lose sight of the plan of the Bible. This plan, we are told was upon the shoulders of Christ now handed down to us, through us, each bearing his own part.

When there are enough friends of Christ in the world, our fears will be at an end. The mind of Christ, which is the mind of love, will dominate, and all will be peace and happiness.

Prayer—O Lord, Thou hast promised an increase in Christian thought and living. Help us to do our part for Thee, through Christ. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"GOD NOT FAR AWAY."

"Before they call I will answer."—Isa. 65: 24.

We were being shown through a hospital not long ago. The latest and most approved appliances were installed. Among them was the system by which patients could summons attendants. This system is so nearly perfect that a patient too weak to lift his arm may touch a button, and instantly four lights flash on—one in the office, one in the great hall, and two others in different parts of the building. It is impossible for anyone to turn out these lights until the call has been answered and the room visited.

If human skill and mercy encompass such as these, can we question that the heavenly Father hears our prayer.

Prayer—Our Father, earth nor hell can burden the signal which our prayers offer unto Thee. O Thou, most high and so near. Bless us with the consciousness of Thy presence. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"I LOVE TO READ."

"Give heed to reading."—I Tim. 4: 13.

Do you? And what do you read? It has been said that what one reads is indicative of his character. The most of the reading found at the magazine stands, and also a great many books, is nothing but shoddy reading, and shoddy reading makes shoddy minds. Only reading that gives light and lifts is worth while. Our text is not an injunction to read everything, but it is an injunction to use discrimination.

Prayer—O God, we pray for our poor useless selves. We would put ourselves in Thy hands, that Thou wouldst make Thy Book our lamp and our light. Amen.

FRIDAY.

INVISIBLE FORCES.

"Open his eyes that he may see."—II Kings 6: 11-17.

Discouraged Christians need to be reminded that God has His hosts of faithful ones everywhere. Our recent Easter was convincing of this. The sunrise services everywhere, the churches, and religious gatherings, all were crowded. Midst all the sin of the world we see around us there are millions whose supreme desire is to do the will of God.

Prayer—Dear Lord, our Father, number us this day among Thy true children. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE DUTY OF GLADNESS.

"For the same cause also do ye joy, and rejoice with me."—Phil. 2: 18.

St. Francis, it is said, made it his chief study, "apart from Prayer and the Divine Office, to have continually spiritual joy both inwardly and outwardly." St. Paul said much the same thing; joybells ring through the New Testament.

Gladness is a duty though its roots must go deep if its flower is not to wither. One should meet difficulties with a glad confidence, resting serenely on the assuring foundations of faith and hope. It is a duty to meet high challenge with some radiance of soul. It is a duty to make others glad. It is a duty in such times as these to remember that the happiness of a little child may be the God-given test of policies and administrations, and that when workmen sing at their tasks our economic foundations are secure. If happiness be a task, the glory of life is victoriously to accomplish it.

Prayer—Teach us, Lord of the joy of life, the secret of gladness even in the Valley of the Shadow. Forgive us, we pray Thee, our sins against happiness, hasten the day of a glad world and lead us to find our joy in seeking and serving it. In His Name, who left us the bequest of His own joy. Amen.

FIVE BLEEDING WORDS.
(A GOOD FRIDAY SERMON.)

"He was wounded for our transgressions."—Isaiah 53:5.

"And it was the third hour, and they crucified Him."—Mark 15:25.

Wounds signify suffering. And, oh, what suffering our Lord endured upon the Tree of Calvary. There was the physical pain of the cruel process of crucifixion. There was also "the contradiction of sinners against himself" (Hebrews 12:3), the unbelief and opposition of His people Israel that had culminated in His final rejection. But more than this, our Lord was now bowed down in awful agony of spirit as He dies as propitiatory sacrifice to satisfy divine justice and to reconcile us to God. (Romans 3:25; II Cor. 5:18, 19.)

Jesus the Eternal Christ of God bore our sins in His own body on the tree. This is the statement of Peter, the chief of the disciples (I Peter 2:24), who no doubt was present and from the outskirts of the crowd watched the sorrowful scene of our Lord's death. Ah, this is redemption. This is vicarious and substitutionary atonement in the fullest sense of the word. The sinless one is "made to be sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him" (II Cor. 5:21). He, the Perfect One, receives the disgrace, the blows, the punishment, the penalty that rightfully was mine, and that was meant for me.

The man who is too stubborn or too proud to admit that he is a sinner denies his need for a Savior. What a fool he is to blindly reject the divine plan of salvation just because his philosophy of life will not include the doctrine of redemption. But the sinner who sees his true condition before God realizes that he needs not only a Savior, but a sacrifice, a substitute and a sin-bearer as well. This is the essence of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Anything less than this is not the full Gospel. There is no Gospel apart from redemptive sacrifice. "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin" (Hebrews 9:22). "For Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us" (I Cor. 5:7). "Having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself" (Col. 1:20).

Five bleeding wounds He bears,
Received on Calvary;
They pour effectual prayers,
They strongly plead for me:
Forgive him! O forgive, they cry,
Nor let that ransomed sinner die!

He tried to carry His cross up Golgotha's Hill, but His strength was not equal to the task. He fell under the weight of the burden. Then there was drafted in His service one Simon the Cyrenian, who bore His cross for Him. The procession winds its slow and torturous way to the Place of the Skull. Now they are at the top. The tragic journey ends. Now a dreadful suspense. O, my God, the sound of hammers! O, my Savior, the cruel blows! Now they raise Him up, a King upon His cross. Jesus Christ,

CALVARY AND EASTER.

A song of sunshine through the rain,
Of spring across the snow;
A balm to heal the hurts of pain,
A peace surpassing woe.
Lift up your heads, ye sorrowing ones,
And be ye glad of heart,
For Calvary and Easter Day
Were just three days apart!

With shudder of despair and loss
The world's deep heart is wrung,
As, lifted high upon His cross,
The Lord of Glory hung—
When rocks were rent, and ghostly forms
Stole forth in street and mart;
But Calvary and Easter Day,
Earth's blackest day, and whitest day,
Were just three days apart.

—Author Unknown.

the lamb for sinners slain. Jesus Christ, the world's ransom and redemption. Jesus Christ, our atoning sacrifice. Jesus Christ, my Savior and my God.

Four bleeding wounds the Son of God now bears, not because of any sin in Him, but because there is sin in us. God have mercy.

And the fifth bleeding wound! Our Lord had hung upon the cross for three hours. At sundown the Sabbath would begin. These bodies upon crosses must be removed, else the Holy Day would be desecrated according to Mosaic law. So the priests sought out Pilate with the request that the legs of the crucified be broken to hasten the death of the dying, and that they might be taken away.

The hardened Roman soldiers broke the legs of the first and second man, but when they came to Jesus they "saw that He was dead already" (John 19:33). The death of the Christ was a reality, and not a fainted swoon as some theorists would like to make us believe. It was the business of the Roman soldier to see that this third Jew was dead, and no faint-hearted sentimentality would deter him from breaking Jesus' legs. But there was no need. He was already gone.

But another soldier took a spear and pierced His sacred side, "and straightway there came out blood and water" (John 19:34). This was in direct fulfillment of two Old Testament prophecies concerning Christ. "He keepeth all His bones; not one of them is broken" (Psalm 34:20). "They shall look upon Him whom they have pierced" (Zech. 12:10).

He suffered. He bled. He died. Our Redeemer!

Five bleeding wounds He bears,
Received on Calvary.

These wounds were made two thousand years ago. Yet today they pour out their effectual prayers for you and for me, for those of us who have been ransomed by His death. Yea, those great jagged wounds opened in the Son of God strongly plead for us today. They cry out, "Forgive him, O forgive!"

THE QUIET HOUR.

SUNDAY.

THE GREATNESS OF GENTLENESS.

"Thy gentleness has made me great."—Psalm 18:35.

By these tests we have now little wisdom from above, our tragic world sees no connection between gentleness and greatness, and listens to little entreaty save the persuasion of guns and bombs. For the most part gentleness has fled our world.

It takes such self-control and clarity of insight to be gentle that its very exercise is the finest kind of strength. We need cushions of gentleness so terribly now in our world of hostile contacts. We shall need the healing of gentleness so pitiously when pride and power have ruined themselves. Only the strength of gentleness can rebuild what heartless power destroys.

Prayer—Lord, let us ever be courteous, easy to be entreated and desirous to be reconciled. So may the wisdom from above guide and heal us and may Thy gentleness to us, who need it so much and try it so sorely, establish our spirits. In His name. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Easter will be a happy occasion for the orphanage children. We always have eggs and chicken for Easter dinner. The girls will want their Easter slippers to go with their new Easter dresses.

The good women are sending in boxes of nice dresses and the girls are anxious to be called to the sewing room to be fitted out in a pretty new Easter dress. I often think if you who make and send dresses to the orphanage could see and know the real joy and happiness they bring to the little girls, you would be real happy, too.

Last Saturday a box of dresses and other garments came in for one of the little girls who is clothed by a good lady who takes a good deal of pride in sending her real nice clothes. It was real interesting to see the beautiful smile that covered her face when she opened that box and took the garments out one by one and looked them over. We did wish the good lady who made them and sent them to her could have been present and witnessed the real joy she brought in the life of this little innocent child. She was so happy she hardly knew how to express herself.

Little dependent children with no mother to make them a new Easter dress wish for one just as much as any other child. It seems to us that any good women would get a real joy out of making and sending a dress to the orphanage to make at least one child happy. It is not what we keep in this life that is going to count in the life to come, but what we give away. This good lady who fitted the little girl in new Easter dresses will never know how much joy she brought to this little girl's heart; but the kind Master, who loves little children, knows and it will be remembered in the world to come. Isn't it a pity that so many people live for self alone.

The writer remembers well a conversation he had with a man of wealth some years ago. We made a special visit to see him to get him to give us a donation for the orphanage, but to hear him talk and make excuses why he could not give would make one feel that he was miserably poor. Worth thousands of dollars, yet in his own mind very poor. He could have donated a nice building as a memorial and been the richer. He could have lived in the minds and hearts of a hundred children for years to come and have been a blessing to the fatherless, but he was too poor. The death angel knocked at his door one day and he answered the call; but he left his thousands here. He could not take them with him.

not afraid." Here at the open tomb the message of the angel is "Fear not." Nothing so undergirds life with courage and with hope as the Gospel of Christ.

Even As He Said.

"He is not here; for he is risen, even as he said." These are significant words. As the disciples looked back, they realized that again and again, long before the event happened, Jesus had calmly and confidently asserted that he would rise again from the dead. And he kept his word. If he could keep his word at this crucial point, is there any reason to doubt for one minute that he will keep his word in all the other exceeding great and precious promises?

The Place Where the Lord Lay.

The glory of the Christian Church is an empty tomb. No one can go to any spot on earth and say, "Here lies the body of our Lord." The Christian faith rests upon faith that the tomb was empty. And the Christian faith is grounded in Him who came alive from that tomb.

SUN'S PULPIT.

Friend, see the Lord Jesus Christ, as in His dying agony He looks down on you, and then rolls His eyes up to His Father and prays, "Nor let that ransomed sinner die."

Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures (I Cor. 15:3). Christ died instead of us, to present us faultless before the throne of God (Jude 24). Thank God for the perfect and eternal issue of Christ's redeeming work.

Let the water and the blood,
From Thy riven side which flowed,
Be of sin the double cure,
Save from wrath, and make me pure.

Membership in the club continues to grow but not so rapidly as we would like. The amount this week is most encouraging, but the number of members could be easily increased. If you are contemplating joining the club, it would be of great encouragement to send your membership in now. If you have already joined and have not paid, it would be of great help if you could make your payment before April 1.

Since our last writing we have paid another $1,000.00 on the debt, reducing the amount owing to $123,000.00. We are grateful indeed for the new members received the past week:

Not for many years has the weather during the months of January and February been more unfavorable for church attendance than this year. It is to be hoped, however, that our friends will not entirely forget the college. Our offerings are far behind what they were last year at this time. Many of our churches and Sunday schools that contribute at this time of

There is scarcely a church in our Convention whose offering for all purposes including pastor's salary would not be doubled if every wage earning member of that church would contribute his tithe. The minister must of necessity lead in this important undertaking. As professed followers of Christ and as members of His church, can we see His church hindered for the lack of funds when a mere tenth of what we have would send it further in triumph?

I hope that when the program for the Convention is finally in shape, its ultimate purpose will be spiritual

Easter Memories of Jerusalem

By REV. J. M. McKNIGHT, Pastor,
Armstrong Memorial Presbyterian Church,
Norfolk, Virginia.

I shall never forget a prayer meeting we held one night in the Garden of Gethsemane. A group of fifty of us sang "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer," "Sweet Hour of Prayer," and other old hymns of the church. Then we had a long season of prayer. It was a beautiful moonlight night, and we could look down on the city of Jerusalem nestled at our feet. I shall never forget the feeling that passed over me as I realized that here our Savior wrestled in the agony of Gethsemane. Around us were the gnarled and knotted olive trees, many of them over a thousand years old. Some of them were said to be sprouts from the roots of the trees that were there in the time of Christ.

The Mount of Olives.

The Mount of Olives, just beyond the Eastern Gate, is another scene that comes back at Easter time. Here it was that He spent the night in prayer. Here He wept over Jerusalem. It was down the slope of Olivet He came on His triumphal march into the city. Olivet was the last point on earth touched by his pierced feet as He ascended into heaven. And, according to the Scriptures, it will be the first point touched when He returns King of kings and Lord of lords. There are two churches on the Mount, one a Franciscan Chapel and the other a Russian. The interior of the Franciscan Chapel was very beautiful with a color scheme of lavender and gold. The lovely lavender stained glass windows and the magnificent paintings of the "Arrest in the Garden," "Christ Healing Malchus' Ear," and "The Agony of Gethsemane" were very impressive. From the Mount of Olives one can see Bethlehem, where Christ was born; Calvary, where He was crucified; and the Tomb of Joseph, where He was buried.

Gordon's Calvary.

The simplicity of the site impresses one. The hill has the form of a skull, with two big eye sockets, a nose and a mouth. The caves in the side of the hill form the eyes and mouth. General Gordon was standing just outside the Damascus Gate when he first noticed the striking resemblance of the whole hill to a human skull. He started excavations, which were later completed by the British Society of the High Anglican Church. It is the old Jewish place of stoning outside the city. It was here that our Savior was crucified on a cross for your sins and mine.

The Garden Tomb.

Then, just a short distance away, is the Garden Tomb. It is a beautiful garden kept up by the Anglican Society. Over the gates are these words, "I am the Resurrection and the Life." There is the tomb hewn out of solid rock on the mountainside, with a window cut in the top to let light in. It is an unfinished tomb. One can see overhead where the excavators had been chiseling away on the rock and had stopped. Joseph of Arimathea was having it built for his own family, but had not finished it. There are places for three bodies. Perhaps he had intended them for himself, his wife, and a child or some other relative. But an emergency arose. Christ was crucified, the one whom he believed to be His Lord; he went and asked for the body and for the privilege of burying it in his tomb. Here is the spot where the highest Protestant scholarship says Christ was buried. I entered the Tomb and stood for quite a while looking at the place where our Lord lay. An inscription found on a tomb nearby says, "Buried Near My Lord." It could not be the grave of a slave, for a slave would not have had an inscription on his tomb. It is thought to be the grave of an early Christian who wanted to be buried near his Lord and Savior. It was here that He broke the bands of death and rose again on the third day.

If, at this Easter season, we could take down our New Testament and read over and over again those events of Christ's last week on earth, if we could enter again into the experiences of Gethsemane, the Mount of Olives, Calvary, the Rugged Cross and the garden Tomb, we would feel the surge again of His spirit in our hearts and lives calling on us to live more sacrificially for Him today.

Springtime In The Church

The calendar says that it is spring in the U. S. A., and the weather in this area confirms that statement. Singing birds, budding trees, and blooming flowers speak more eloquently than words of the new life that nature produces when the earth turns its face towards the sun again. Farmers are ploughing and planting in preparation for the harvest next fall. New life is expressing itself in new activities all about us, and music sings in our hearts because it is springtime.

But what of the churches in North Carolina and Virginia, that area we call the Southern Convention? Is new life to be found there? Easter is just gone. We have remembered the resurrection of the Master and we have held lovely services in the churches. Is there now something tangible that shows the reality of the life concerning which we have heard and about which we talk? In nature there is growth, harmony, and beauty because of the new life. Is that true in the churches?

The churches report a membership of more than thirty-one thousand people. Perhaps there were many more added at Eastertide. These people have assumed certain responsibilities in the Kingdom of God. We have a world-wide mission. We have a college with six hundred students. We have this paper. We have a Southern Convention that undertakes to serve the churches through the efforts of a Promotional Secretary.

The Mission Board asks for $10,000 during the year, part of which comes at Easter. The college needs $100,000 to finish paying debts. This paper needs $3,000 in new subscriptions. And the Convention should have $3,000 to put it in good shape. All of this except part of the mission money is needed this spring.

Impossible? Not at all. To pay everything in full and have a neat sum left over would cost us less than four dollars ($4.00) per member. Can't do it? Of course we can. North Carolina has just turned in nearly twelve million dollars for income tax for last year. Our people helped to pay that amount. We buy fertilizer for the farms, radios for the homes, and automobiles to use for pleasure. We buy the things we want for ourselves even though they cost much more than the church with all its enterprises. Why should we feel too poor to do the work of the church?

"The Christian Sun" would like to challenge the churches to show some new life, to demonstrate that springtime has come to them, that they have turned their faces towards the Sun of Righteousness (the Son of God), and that Easter has really meant a new birth of enthusiasm for the Christ whose resurrection we celebrate. Talk in our time means little or nothing. It is life that counts. If there is really springtime in the churches, missions, the college, the church paper, and the convention will know it by the help they receive. If there is no new response to the call of God through His Church, then springtime means nothing but talk, for life has ebbed away.

Let there be life, for it is springtime in God's earth!

NEWS AND VIEWS

Next Sunday is the fifth Sunday—the time for Sunday school offerings for Elon College, and the district rallies in North Carolina.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN extends sympathy to Rev. S. W. Phillips and his people at Elm Avenue, Portsmouth, Va., in the loss of their church by fire last week.

Rev. and Mrs. Carl R. Key of Torrington, Conn., are announcing the arrival of a son, John Chase Key, on March 17, 1940. Congratulations and best wishes!

In addition to his regular pastorate, Rev. R. D. Coulter is preaching once a month at Mt. Olivet (R) and Island Ford Christian Churches in the Valley of Virginia.

Rev. Herbert G. Council, Jr., will begin his pastorate at First Church, Portsmouth, Va., on the first Sunday in April, coming to that church from Canterbury, Conn.

First Church, Norfolk, Va., of which the Rev. John H. Knight is pastor, reports a fine Easter service with 165 present. The choir made its first appearance in vestments.

The Woman's Missionary Rallies of Eastern Virginia are being held this week. Those in North Carolina will be next week with Miss Lucy Eldredge as the guest speaker.

An Easter play: "Blessed Are They—" was given on last Sunday night at Ingram Christian Church. It was under the direction of Miss Avis Dunn. The offering for missions was taken at this service.

The churches in the Eastern North Carolina Conference will hold their regular fifth Sunday rally at Fuller's Chapel, beginning with a morning program. Rev. and Mrs. F. C. Lester will be the guest speakers.

The Promotional Secretary will visit with Rev. S. E. Madren, Franklin, N. C., this week-end and will help the following local churches in solving some of their problems: Oak Level, Saturday night, 7:30; New Hope, Sunday afternoon, 3:00; Pope's Chapel, Sunday night, 7:30.

The First Congregational-Christian Church, Lynchburg, Va., whose pastor is Rev. J. Howard Smith, had a fine Easter service, with bulletins expressing the Easter story in picture, special music by the choir, a poem, "A Ballad of Easter," and the sermon by the pastor on "Easter Makes a Difference."

Rev. E. M. Powell of Henderson, N. C., has accepted a call to be pastor of our church at Morrisville, N. C., for this Conference year. He is the pastor of Beulah Christian Church, where an Easter Sunrise Service was held this year for the first time. A large group were present, and following the service in the church a brief service was held in the homes of two sick members.

ON YOUR MARK—GET SET—GO!

Get those subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Get them now while you think of it. Get them, rain or shine, snow or blow, from early in the morning 'til late at night. Get them or "get."

Treat yourself and your church to success. Your church, every church, has a goal or quota. It can be reached. Delicately decline "no" as an answer. "If you succeed, try again." Think, pray and talk success.

The campaign is on from now until our Convention meets. Failure is the penalty of indifference. In the boundless hope and optimism of Easter, CHRISTIAN SUN devotees should resolve to utilize their recuperated powers in this definite, constructive way.

We must have subscriptions if we are to have a church paper. We must have a church paper if we are to continue as a church. During these great days from Easter to Pentecost all our emotion and enthusiasm should be harnessed in this practical program of kingdom building and kingdom extension. We must not fail our church and our Christ in such a crucial hour. Persistence is the price of victory.

Chairman, Board of Publications.

A TELEGRAM.

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, pastor of our Newport News Church, sent us a copy of that which he was pleased to call a Telegram, sent to each and every member of his church. The Telegram is self-explanatory, and because we believe THE CHRISTIAN SUN family will enjoy and appreciate it as much as did the members of our Newport News Church we pass it on to them through this column.—J. O. A.

To Members of First Congregational-Christian Church:

You will receive this message in time to attend the special Communion Service at your church Thursday night at 7:30.

You are notified that your Cent-A-Meal Box is due next Sunday. Nothing short of real sickness should keep you away from your church next Sunday. Here is the program: Early morning worship and Communion at 7:00; Sunday School at 9:30; Special Easter service at 10:30 (fifteen minutes earlier than usual); Vesper Service and Cantata at 5:00 P. M.

Easter is also the time when we are asked to show our love for Christ by making an offering to Missions. Pennies are good, as far as they go, but we can't save the world for Christ with pennies alone. We believe our membership will make a liberal offering on Easter Sunday, and if we do, it will mean that the Apportionments for this church year will be assured and we will not have to make another call in order to meet our apportionments in full. You can assure such a response with your offering. Your church, your Lord, and millions now without Christ wait for you. Will you disappoint them? I don't believe you will.

If you refuse to share your religion with others through missions, you are admitting that your religion isn't worth sharing. Is it? Of course it is, and let's prove it. All gifts, with our Cent-A-Meal Boxes, will be placed on a White Altar Sunday morning. Please use the enclosed envelope for your special Easter Offering for Missions.

Win a soul to Christ this week and bring them to church Sunday so that they may be received into church membership along with those whom others are winning.

I look forward to seeing you, and I pray that in the services we shall experience in our hearts a glorious and triumphant Easter.

Jesse H. Dollar.

"Prejudice squints when it looks, and lies when it talks."

FOR THE CHILDREN

TALKING WITH GOD.

Once upon a time while Eli was High Priest in the Temple at Shiloh Hannah came into the Temple, alone, to talk with God. Every year Hannah and her husband Elkanah, came up to the Temple to worship God and to bring the gifts which they gave as a sacrifice to God.

Each time they came Hannah spent much time in prayer in the Temple. She was very sad and it seemed that the only place that she could find comfort was in the Temple where she talked with God. Her husband loved her very dearly, but Hannah had no children to love her and for her to love. She especially wanted a little boy. So every year when she came to the Temple she prayed that she might have a son.

Elkanah tried to get her to stop crying and eat her food; but Hannah would not eat, even after their long journey to Shiloh, until she had prayed in the Temple. "Why do you grieve so? Am I not better to you than ten sons would be?" Elkanah asked. But even that could not make Hannah forget the longed-for son.

When the meal was finished Hannah got up and went into the Temple to talk with God. The Priest Eli sat upon a seat by a post in the Temple. Hannah did not see Eli, but Eli watched her. She went up to the altar and kneeling she wept and prayed. This time she made a vow, promising God that if a little boy were born to her, she would give him to the Lord. He would learn the life of the priest in the Temple.

Eli saw Hannah's lips moving but he could not hear the words which she said in her heart. When he asked her why she was in the Temple, she told him of the prayer which she had just prayed. The Priest told her to go in peace and that God would answer her prayer.

When Hannah's and Elkanah's son was born, Hannah named him Samuel, because she had asked God to send her a son. She cared for Samuel until he was old enough to take up to the Temple. Each year, after Hannah had taken Samuel up to stay in the Temple, she brought him a cloak which she had made for him.

Samuel learned all about the Temple; for he was always asking Eli questions about the Temple and the life of the Priesthood. Samuel tended the light before the altar and saw that it burned brightly, day and night. He dreamed of a time when he might be a Priest in the Temple, or a great Prophet like those of whom Eli had told such thrilling stories.

One night as Samuel lay sleeping upon his mat in the Temple he heard a voice calling him, "Samuel, Samuel." "Here am I," Samuel called as he went to Eli, for he thought Eli had called him. "I did not call, go lie down," Eli told him. So Samuel went and lay down. But the voice came a second time and again Samuel ran to see if Eli did not call him. Still Eli had not called, so Samuel lay down again. The third time the voice came, Samuel jumped up and ran to Eli. "You must have called this time!" This time Eli knew that God must be trying to talk with Samuel. He told Samuel the next time he heard the voice to say, "Speak, Lord; for thy servant heareth."

This time when Samuel heard the voice he lay very quietly and said: "Speak, Lord; for thy servant heareth." And there in the Temple where his mother had talked with God, Samuel talked with God. God gave to Samuel the first message which he was to deliver as the next great prophet of Israel.

Hushed was the evening hymn,
The temple courts were dark;
The lamp was burning dim
Before the sacred ark;
When suddenly a voice divine
Rang through the silence of the shrine.

O give me Samuel's ear,
The open ear, O Lord,
Alive and quick to hear
Each whisper of Thy word,
Like him to answer at Thy call,
And to obey Thee first of all.

POVERTY.

Poverty often deprives a man of all spirit and virtue. It is hard for an empty bag to stand upright.—Franklin.

Poverty palls the most generous spirits; it crows industry, and casts resolution itself into despair.—Addison.

Poverty is very good in poems, but it is very bad in a house. It is very good in maxims and sermons, but it is very bad in practical life.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Few things in this world trouble people more than poverty, or the fear of poverty; and indeed it is a sore affliction; but, like all other ills that flesh is heir to, it has its antidote, its reliable remedy. The judicious application of industry, prudence, and temperance is a certain cure.—Hosca Ballou.

Lord God, I thank Thee that Thou hast been pleased to make me a poor and indigent man upon earth. I have neither house nor land nor money, to leave behind me. Thou hast given me wife and children, whom I now restore to Thee. Lord, nourish, teach, and preserve them as Thou hast me.—Luther.

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION—DICTATOR OR SERVANT.

Difference of opinion calls for clarity of thought. There seems to be a wide variety of opinion concerning the Southern Convention, and therefore those who live here should seek to clarify their thoughts so each may understand the other.

Suggestions here and there have made some afraid that the Convention is simply a dictator to tell the conferences and the churches what they should and should not do. If conferences, churches, young people, women, or any other group can do only such things as may be specifically voted by the Southern Convention, then said convention becomes a dictator of the kind not relished by free men and certainly not in keeping with a democratic church.

On the contrary, the Convention may be a servant of the churches. Since it is composed of representatives of the churches, it can decide the lines along which the churches will work cooperatively. It can prepare or secure and distribute literature that will aid in the development of good persons, homes, churches, communities, and nations. It can educate leaders in local churches and prepare ministers and religious educators in its college. It can be a guide to youth and an inspiration to age. It can assist churches in securing ministers, organizing for service, financing their program, and educating their people. The Convention can be a clearing house for the work the churches are doing cooperatively. In this way the Southern Convention becomes a servant of the churches.

WHERE ARE OUR CHURCHES?

There are five conferences of Congregational and Christian Churches in the Southern Convention. Two are in Virginia and three are in North Carolina. Two hundred churches are included. Where are they?

Congregational Churches are more scattered than those founded by the Christians. In the Valley of Virginia all except three are in the area centering around Luray to Harrisonburg. In Eastern Virginia the churches center about Suffolk and Norfolk—all except four are within forty miles of Suffolk. In North Carolina the churches are in the area from Henderson and Raleigh on the east to Sanford and Southern Pines on the south, Winston-Salem on the west, and Danville, Va., on the north. Only a few churches are beyond this small area. Asheville, Tryon, Albemarle, Hope Mills, and Lynchburg are rather lonesome so far as our churches are concerned. We have concentrated in small areas and are not well known beyond those narrow limits.

Perhaps the time has come for us to expand. If we are really to serve the people in our states, we face the necessity of starting a campaign to build new churches. Since only half of the people in these states are churchied, it is likely that we can find many places where churches can be of real value. New areas are building up rapidly. We have lost our opportunity in many places, but there are others still awaiting us.

This matter might well come to the attention of the Convention when it meets in Greensboro. Four new churches have been started during the past biennium. More than that can be begun within the next two years. Convention officials should have this as part of their work, and churches may well consider their individual responsibility for areas near them.

CONCERNING SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The Board of Publications has specified March 25 to April 25 as the time in which to launch a campaign for new and renewal subscriptions to "The Christian Sun." Such a campaign seems to be necessary so the Convention will know when it meets in May what the people want to do with the paper. If the churches, led by their pastors, will plunge in and secure the quotas which have been voted by the conferences, then the paper can continue to visit the church homes, and may even be a better messenger for the church. If nothing is done about it, or if subscriptions cannot be secured, the Convention will certainly take care of all subscribers of the paper, so no one need fear to subscribe.

The reason for "The Christian Sun" is the education and inspiration of the members of our churches. It is important for the departments and institutions to be kept before the membership, but the purpose of the paper certainly is not simply to promote those departments and institutions. The church paper is a medium of expression, of understanding, and of helpfulness among the people of the church. News, plans and programs, devotional materials, and inspirational articles all have their place in our paper. Those who read may receive information and inspiration that will express themselves in larger giving, but the reason for the paper is not simply to get more money.

The church paper should be just as truly a means of grace and of Gospel preaching as is the work of the pastor who visits the homes and preaches from the pulpit.

It is on this basis that the present "Christian Sun" seeks renewals and new subscriptions. It is on this basis that it has the nerve to ask pastors and church workers to take time within the next month to solicit subscriptions to our only publication within the Southern Convention.

"Defeat may serve as well as victory
To shake the soul and let the glory out.
When the great oak is straining in the wind,
The boughs drink in new beauty, and the trunk
Sends down a deeper root on the windward side.
Only the soul that knows the mighty grief
Can know the mighty rapture. Sorrows come
To stretch out spaces in the heart for joy."

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

When the Congregational Churches and the Christian Churches of the Southeast united a few years ago, it was specifically stated that local churches in this area should have the privilege of being designated "Christian," "Congregational," or "Congregational-Christian" as each church preferred. They are all a part of what is now called a Congregational and Christian denomination or fellowship. There are people in both "Congregational" and "Christian" Churches who claim that neither was a denomination before the union—and that the united group is only a "fellowship" of churches. We leave that discrimination to wiser heads. It is not a matter of great importance.

In the Southern Convention the churches are regarded as "liberal" in that no specific definitions of creed or theology are prerequisites to becoming a member of the church. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice. Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a privilege and a duty which should be accorded to all. Christian character is the test of fellowship. Some ministers are Calvinistic in their interpretation of Biblical doctrine. Others are Arminian. In this there is liberty, and yet we are united.

But this liberty should not be misunderstood. Ministers and members are not free to bring into this church every conceivable kind of interpretation, and proclaim their personal "isms" as the position of their church. The Bible—the Holy Scriptures—should always be regarded as the fundamental foundation of our faith and practice. In the Southern Convention, as in other sections, there are certain rules, regulations and requirements which have been agreed upon, in orderly Conferences and Conventions, and these statements should be the basis of conducting the various activities of ministers, officials, and members of local churches.

There are diversities of gifts and differences of opinion in any large group of churches or church members. Many of these differences are expressed in criticisms which are not always constructive in spirit or purpose. Looking back over thirty years of service as Secretary of Conference and Convention sessions, it is surprising how many resolutions and motions have been offered in these meetings whose only effect was simply to make a change in some existing order. Many constructive resolutions have been offered, but they have, in many instances, apparently been forgotten, before they appeared in print.

There are people who have spells of mental - spontaneous - combustion whenever they meet in Conference or Convention sessions. Under a sudden impulse created by other speakers, some motion takes shape in their minds. Without careful consideration it is offered and adopted. In the quiet of private meditation many of these "sudden inspirations" would be discarded.

There are some great tasks, yet unfinished, which challenge the churches of the Southern Convention. Elon College should be cleared of its indebtedness, with the distinct understanding that no sizable debts shall be incurred for the next few years. If there are visions of growth which seem to demand expansion involving new indebtedness, let these plans wait. There are many church debts which should be paid. Many local church buildings should be improved. New buildings should be erected in other places. THE CHRISTIAN SUN should be put on a sound financial basis, the subscription list should be doubled, and ministers and laymen should read the paper. Religious Education should be improved in our Sunday schools. A greater spirit of unity should be cultivated. And a great evangelistic movement should be undertaken to increase our membership. These are worthwhile projects.

ELON RECEIVES GIFT OF $1,500.00.

The largest single gift to the Golden Anniversary Fund now being raised by the college for the purpose of liquidating the entire indebtedness of the college was received last week and reported in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. This gift was made by Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Rawls of St. Louis.

For a number of years Mr. Rawls was very active in the Christian Church in the South. He is the son of the late David Nathaniel Rawls and Annie Cofer Rawls, both of Virginia. Walter is a member of a large family and most unfortunately was the victim of infantile paralysis at the age of eighteen months. This disease left him with a seriously afflicted left side. The family and physicians feared that he would never be able to walk again. However, with a persistent determination he overcame as nearly as possible the affliction and for the most of his life has been able to walk with a cane, going where he pleases. In 1922 he was married to Miss Ella Townsend Freeman of Gates, N. C., who has been of great help to him in business and social life, and of course of great joy in the home. Walter was received into the Christian Church, Suffolk, Va., by the late Dr. W. W. Staley. These two were very close friends during Dr. Staley's lifetime. While living in Norfolk the writer had the privilege of receiving Mr. and Mrs. Rawls into the Christian Temple. They remained members of the Temple until recently when, on account of their children and with a desire to have a church home in St. Louis, they transferred their membership to Pilgrim Congregational Church, at which time both children, Thompson and Walter C., Jr., were received into the church with them. Walter has always been a very generous supporter of his church. When Dr. Atkinson made his campaign for missions, he made a generous contribution to this worthy cause. In every call that the college has made, Walter has endeavored to do his share. In making this recent contribution he made it plain that he was doing this because of his interest in the church and his conviction that the college is a very necessary institution for the efficiency and progress of the church. Mrs. Rawls shares with him this feeling and is happy to make this contribution. This contribution comes at a most opportune time and is of great encouragement to the ones of us who are vitally interested in the success of the campaign. It is the largest single contribution made during the present campaign. There was a gift of $2,000.00 made by May Hosiery Mills, but this gift was to represent the contribution of Messrs. W. H. and B. V. May. It is to be hoped that many others will follow this generous example that the goal set may be realized in cash and pledges before the approaching commencement is over. This gift of $1,500.00 will make a total of practically $10,000.00 contributed by Walter to various causes of his church in addition to his contributions to his local church for current and benevolent causes.

Walter was educated in the high schools of Virginia and in different business colleges. He has a thrifty turn of mind and possesses the ability

THESE SUMMER CONFERENCES

By JOHN LESLIE LOBINGIER, Secretary,

Department of Adult Work, Division of Christian Education.

How difficult it is to interpret an experience! When we are really moved by some unusual event we have a feeling for it ourselves, although we may not be able to describe this feeling. We have only to look into the deepest experiences of our lives to know how true this is. And many can testify that among these experiences must be included some week by a lake, or in the mountains, or on a campus, or at the seaside as a member of a summer conference family.

The adults of the church have abundant opportunities for enrichment and training. Some of these are in the local church itself—meetings, forums, classes, activities that are open to all the men and women of the parish. A smaller number of people can take advantage of similar opportunities for a larger geographical area, requiring travel to another community or another section of the state. When it comes to a still longer trip to a summer conference center, requiring additional travel and a week's absence from home, the number of those who can go is still smaller. This third type of experience, however, requiring greater effort and sacrifice, may be infinitely more rewarding. At least this is the testimony of those who know; for men and women do attend summer conferences. In the reports of the 1939 conferences that came to the office of the Division of Christian Education the number of adults enrolled (not counting faculty members) was 694. This is not the real total, however, for we know of a number of conferences that sent no report. Considerably over a thousand men and women of the Congregational and Christian Churches enrolled in 1939 summer conferences.

Why do some of us think that this number ought to grow to two thousand in the summer of 1940? What values are to be found in the summer conference? In the first place, it gives us a sense of direction; it gives perspective for our lives and for our work; it helps us to see the way we ought to go. In the second place, it furnishes the guidance and leadership all of us need; its group work and courses and its interchange of experience help us to discover the methods we need; it helps us to know how we may go along that way. And finally it furnishes a distinctive type of inspiration; its whole atmosphere and program produce an "indefinable something" that enters into our very being; it helps us to feel a motivating power to go forward through the coming year along the way we have learned to go. The summer conference does this kind of thing and ought to come into the thinking and the planning of every church of our fellowship.

Summer conferences for adults are of many different types. (1) Some are planned on a denominational basis. Thus in a few states our Congregational-Christian Churches conduct conferences just for adults, and in at least one instance this has been for young adults only. Sometimes there are family conferences for all ages. In still other instances a conference includes both an adult section and a youth section. The Layman's Fellowship also has its summer gathering. (2) Many interdenominational leadership schools have been doing splendid work for years—some conducted by state Councils of Religious Education, others by independent interdenominational boards. (3) A large number of women's missionary conferences have furnished inspiration and training on an interdenominational basis. These, together with one or two missionary conferences for men and women, are open to and supported by members of our Congregational and Christian Churches. Significant international relations institutes in various sections of the country have also enlisted men and women of our churches. (4) For three years the United Christian Adult Movement has held significant sessions at Lake Geneva, Wis. In 1940, however, there will be a number of regional conferences of the U. C. A. M. in different sections of the United States. Information as to the location of these regional gatherings may be secured from the Division of Christian Education, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

What can a church—your church—do to enjoy the benefits of this adult summer conference movement?

1. Plan to send one man or woman to a 1940 conference. Larger churches can easily send more than one.

2. Choose that one (or those two or three) with care. Usually a delegate should be a person with some leadership ability who will return a more efficient worker.

3. Help pay the expenses. Almost any church could pay the registration fee and this would prove its cooperative interest.

4. Ask for a report of the conference when the delegate returns. In some instances this may be at the church service, but more often it will be in connection with a church night program.

5. Plan some specific forward steps on the basis of this report, so that both the delegate and the church may feel that this conference experience is really counting in the life of the church.

BEFORE JERUSALEM.

(Mark 10: 32-34.)

They were in the way going up to Jerusalem, and Jesus was going before them. Ah! On the way to Jerusalem, yes, but to what else? Many times they had been on that way, and to that city, but now they were headed to something else. And when? How soon would that something that was standing stark in their way become a terrible reality. They were in the way toward it. And Jesus, ah! He was pressing on like one mad. He went before them. There was no stopping Him, He moved as if by some mighty impulse, some power that made Him go. They were amazed. What did they do to show their amazement? How did they express it? What did they whisper among themselves, and behind His back. They were afraid. They must have pushed up close to Him and expressed their fear. They must have shuddered as they told Him of what they were afraid. Some of them must have begged him to stop, or turn around, for men do such things when they are afraid. They must not have helped Him one bit as they begged Him to stop. He was evidently fighting alone, but not altogether alone!

And He began to tell them what things should happen unto Him. He did not mince words. He recognized their amazement. He saw their fear. He made a frontal attack, lest they become cowards. He spoke plainly; if the worst came to the worst, it could not be that He had not told them what was going to happen. They might run, but they must not run yet. The cup was bitter enough as it was. He told them that they would deliver Him to the chief priests, and scribes, who would promptly condemn Him, and in turn deliver Him to the Gentiles, who would mock Him, spit upon Him, scourge Him, kill Him. Yes, kill Him! Hang Him up on a tree, and stab Him with a spear in His heart. They might as well know the truth, the whole truth.

And on the third day He should rise again! They must not have heard. Do we?

JOHN G. TRUITT.

NEW LEBANON (N. C.)

Since our last report we have been experiencing a change of pastors. Rev. J. L. Neese of Reidsville, who has served us so faithfully for the past eight years, resigned last year before Conference so we would be free to join a group of churches. This group was completed the first of this year and includes Mt. Bethel, Howard's Chapel, Kallam's Grove, and New Lebanon. Rev. F. E. Church, a ministerial student at Duke University, has been called to serve this group. We hope to be able to render better and more efficient service for our Master as we work together. Mr. Church and his wife have already moved to our community and he has begun his work as pastor of this group.

Rev. J. L. Neese has, through the eight years, proven to be a loyal and obedient servant of our Heavenly Father. He has at all times been a good shepherd. During this period our church has been steadily growing. He preached 180 times. We had many conversions, 106 additions to our church, lost 20 by letter and death, had a net gain of 86 members. Amount of money raised, $6,350.77.

Our Sunday School Superintendent, W. T. Moore, has been confined to his room for over a year. We regret that his condition does not improve. Our assistant, J. I. Sharpe, has been loyal in this capacity.

May the work of our church be pleasing to our Heavenly Father.

SUBSCRIPTION CAMPAIGN.

The churches are now asked to join in a campaign for new and renewal subscriptions to this paper. This is our one publication in the Southern Convention. It now goes into fewer than 2,000 of our 10,000 church homes. This ought not so to be!

The quota for each church is listed on the back page of this issue. Some of the churches have already gone beyond their quota. By April 25 many more will have done so, and it is hoped that all will be in that class.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN office at Elon College, N. C., will gladly furnish the mailing list by post offices to any pastor or CHRISTIAN SUN representative in a local church. All money received should be sent to the above office promptly, giving name and address of subscriber and church to which credit should be given.

to succeed in business. He has been engaged in some kind of banking practically all of his life and has been connected with some of the leading banking and investment concerns in this country. He is at present resident manager of the St. Louis branch of E. H. Rollins & Sons and has held this position for a number of years. This firm is one of the largest underwriting houses in America, and the St. Louis branch covers the central midwest and southern states. Rollins' name is old and outstanding in character and integrity in the high grade investment bond business in America, having served in a large way in the financing of many of America's leading industries, railroads and public utilities as well as participating in the public financing for many states, counties and cities in the United States. The business of this office has multiplied at surprising proportions since Mr. Rawls has been manager.

STEWARDSHIP.

There is nothing in the New Testament that our Lord Christ taught and preached more than the subject of money and the relationship of one to one's money. Again and again He, our Lord, showed the absolute folly of those who accumulate money without regard to their obligations to use a stipulated portion of that money to advance the kingdom of our Lord on earth and for the enrichment of our souls. The law laid down in the Old Testament and confirmed by our Lord and others in the New Testament is that we absolutely owe one tenth of our income to the Lord to be used for the building up through the church of the kingdom of heaven on earth. Any reader of this at all familiar with the parables of our Lord will readily recall his story of the rich fool, whose land yielded abundantly and all of whose income this man wished to use upon himself and for his own pleasure. He said to himself, "I will pull down my barns and build bigger and there will store my goods and will say unto my soul, Thou hast much goods laid up in store, eat, drink and be merry," but his Lord said unto him, "Thou fool, this night shall thy soul be required of thee and whose then shall these things be?" It must be remembered that with our income we may feed, clothe and shelter this body of ours, but the soul is more than the body and will endure when the body has returned to its native earth. Well and wisely did our Lord speak when He said, "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"—That is to say shall allow his earthly possessions to cause his soul to shrivel and shrink till it is worthless.

We may think that we can rob God, that is to say have our own way with all our income, but the good Book shows us that this is impossible and that the law of stewardship is plainly and unmistakably to the effect that a tithe (one tenth) of our income shall be given to the Lord for His use and building His kingdom on earth. The Prophet Malachi through revelation from God made the law of stewardship and the tithe so plain that no one need mistake its meaning. Read Malachi, Chapter 3, verses 8 and 9: "Will a man rob God? yet ye rob me, but ye say, Wherein have we robbed Thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with the curse; for ye rob me, even this whole nation." Then comes the glorious promise recorded in verse 10: "Bring ye the whole tithe into the storehouse that there may be food in my house, and prove me now herewith, sayeth Jehovah of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

Our Lord's teaching is as plain and as direct as that of the prophets for he says, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth where moth nor rust doth corrupt: but lay up for yourselves in heaven where neither moth nor rust corrupt and where thieves do not break through nor steal, for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

That which we give to the church in obedience to the command of our Lord is treasure not thrown away, but invested in the savings account of a bank that cannot fail. We shall meet again one day that which we invest in the church of the living God even when our earthly possessions shall have failed us. Shrouds have no pockets. "We brought nothing into this world and it is certain we can carry nothing out." We save for time and eternity only those earnings which we invest in bulding up the kingdom of heaven on earth. The happiest people on this earth are those who realize that they are stewards for a season to whom the Lord has entrusted goods; and one day an account of his, or her, stewardship will be required. More of the parables and teachings of our Lord have to do with the way one spends one's money than upon any other subject whatever.

A close observer and one of wide experience said in the hearing of this writer the other day that the people did not give to the church as they once did. The reply to that statement was that the church is losing its grip upon the people, for incomes are abundant and sufficient as is evidenced by the spending for pleasure, comfort, and ease, and no wonder the nations are at war and are spending millions in killing and being killed, for many of them have ruled God out and no longer realize their obligation to Him.

As will be seen from the above the churches have begun to take the Easter offering for missions and we sincerely trust, as well as devoutly hope, that all the churches have now taken, or will take, this offering in the name and for the sake of our risen Lord. It is His resurrection that we celebrate at Easter and it is most fitting indeed that we make an offering in His name and for His sake in order to glorify Him and share His love and life with others less fortunate than ourselves. We are indeed grateful for everyone that had a part in the above donations.

Gratefully,

Pilgrim Fellowship

"Youth at Work in the Church"

Emily Carleton Lester, Editor

AFTER EASTER—WHAT?

If there are boys and girls joining your church at Easter, be sure that you welcome them into the church, into your young people's group, and into your fellowship. They should be given a place to work in the church, and should be made to feel welcome in your society.

Perhaps you have worked hard to give an Easter pageant, and you feel rather "let down" now that it is over. Remember, though, that there are shut-ins in your community who would be glad to have a visit from you or brief programs from your society. Perhaps they could not enjoy an Easter service in the church, and you can take one to their homes.

Conference groups in Eastern Virginia and in North Carolina are to have spring rallies soon after Easter. Now that spring seems really to be here, and traveling is pleasant, it ought to be a treat to be able to take a trip to your rally. The Eastern Virginia group will meet in Richmond on March 28. The North Carolina group will meet on April 6. Miss Lucy Eldredge, beloved leader of young people in our denomination, will be present at these meetings and will aid you in solving your problems and in giving you inspiration for the work that lies ahead.

"LITTLE AMSTERDAM" AT RICHMOND.

The young people of the Eastern Virginia Conference are planning their Spring Rally in Richmond, Saturday, March 30, in the form of a "Little Amsterdam." As you will recall, last summer an international young people's conference was held in Amsterdam, Holland, to which our denomination sent delegates. This Spring Rally will be a "reflection" of the Amsterdam session in more ways than one. Miss Virginia Gaines of Richmond, delegate to this world conference, will give her word-picture of it. Then the Eastern Virginia group will divide into seven groups, using the seven topics discussed by commissions at Amsterdam.

The Rally will begin at 10:00 in the morning with sight-seeing (and many are the places of historic interest in Richmond) and other interest groups. Our church in Richmond, where the rally is to be held, is located at 3000 Grove Avenue. The young people may bring their lunch and eat in the social hall of the church if they desire to do so. The afternoon session will begin at 2:00 and will consist of the abovementioned "Amsterdam echoes" and a fellowship period when friends will talk over "old times" and new acquaintances will be made.

There will be a Fellowship Supper at 5:45. Miss Lucy Eldredge will be the guest speaker at this supper period, and will be available during the day for consultations with individual young people or with groups.

The President, Charles Heath, has invited young people from the Valley of Virginia to come to Richmond for this meeting. It is not much farther from them than from many of the Eastern Virginia young people and it would be a fine opportunity for fellowship between the two groups. North Carolina young people who can come will be most welcome. The meeting will close at 7:00, which gives time to get home before too late.

NORTH CAROLINA YOUNG PEOPLE TO MEET AT REIDSVILLE.

On Saturday, April 6, there is to be a meeting of North Carolina young people at the Reidsville Christian Church. This is the regular time of the North Carolina and Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship Rally. However, since Miss Lucy Eldredge is to be the guest speaker it has been decided to make this the meeting of the North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship, too. Those of you who were present a year ago last fall at the meeting at Liberty (Vance) will remember the valuable aid given by "Miss Lucy" there.

All young people in our churches in North Carolina are urged to attend this meeting. Those of you who have heard Miss Eldredge know how fine she is. The rest will enjoy getting acquainted with her. The meeting will begin at 2:30 with a worship service.

HEALING THE SICK.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

FOR APRIL 7, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: Matt. 4:23; Luke 9:1, 2; James 5:14.

Daily Readings—

Monday—A Foreign Daughter Healed—Matt. 15:21-28.

Tuesday—An Invitation to the Burdened—Matt. 11:28-30.

Wednesday—The Apostles Heal—Acts 5:12-16.

Thursday—Prophecy of the Healer—Isaiah 61:1-3.

Friday—Ten Lepers Healed—Luke 17:11-14.

Saturday—Reliance Upon Christ—I Peter 5:6-9.

This is the first of a series of three topics dealing with the missionary tasks of the church. These topics have a timely setting in the total program of the church, since this is the period wherein the church places special emphasis upon the missionary enterprise as well as make a contribution to the cause of missions.

In this topic we are dealing with medical missions. The medical missionary wants to help bring in the Kingdom of God. He does not consider his work subordinate to any other phase of the missionary enterprise. The missionary doctor is serving Christ when he heals and administers to the physical ills of men and women. It is the example of the Great Physician, who went about "healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among people."

Give assignments to various persons as follows:

1. The life and work of medical missionaries of our denomination.

2. To what extent is our church sharing in medical missions through its offerings to missions?

3. What examples do I know in my own life, or in what I have heard from others where physical health has had much to do in mental and soul health?

4. People in our neighborhood who need medical or nursing care. What our Christian Endeavor can do to carry out the Christian ministry of healing?

If possible secure a missionary to speak to your society on missions during this series of topics.

Suggestive Hymns—

"All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

"We Would See Jesus."

"O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

THE CONTINUING TASK.

LESSON XIII—MARCH 31, 1940.

GOLDEN TEXT: Ye shall be my witness . . . unto the uttermost part of the earth.—Acts 1:8.

LESSON: Matthew 28:16-20.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 116:1-9.

Keeping His Engagement.

"Then the eleven disciples went into Galilee, unto the mountain where Jesus had appointed them." Before He was crucified, Jesus told his disciples that He would rise from the dead, and that He would meet them again in Galilee. When the two Marys went to the tomb on Easter morning the angel told them that Christ had risen from the dead, and added, "He goeth before you into Galilee." In obedient faith the disciples went back to the mountain which Jesus had appointed as a meeting place. They took Him at His word. And as is always the case, Jesus kept His word. There are some exceeding great and precious promises in the Scriptures, there are some almost unbelievable promises, but if one reads the stories of the life and ministry of Jesus one can take them at their face value. Nowhere in the record is there any evidence that on any occasion Jesus broke His word, or failed to keep His engagements. Is not this a very comforting and challenging thought as concerning prayer? Whenever and wherever a man or woman in sincerity and in simplicity seeks to keep an appointment with Jesus he or she may be sure that the Master will meet with them.

Of course, this applies also to the life which is to come. Jesus said that in the Father's house there were many mansions, that He was going to prepare a place for us, that He would come again and receive us unto Himself so that where He was there we may be also.

Worshipping, But Doubting.

"And when they saw Him, they worshipped Him; but some doubted." Here is a strange mixture. They recognized Him and in adoration they worshipped Him. They knew that He was no mere man. They recognized Him as the Son of God. It is significant that Jesus allowed them to worship Him. Thus did He indicate that He was not a mere man, but in accepting worship for Himself He was leading them into the presence of God himself. But even as they worshipped, some of them doubted. It all seemed too good to be true. One of the most convincing facts about the resurrection of Jesus is the fact that He had to convince the disciples that He was alive by overcoming every possible handicap and barrier. There is no evidence anywhere that the story of the resurrection of Jesus was a creation of fancy or a cleverly fabricated lie. The disciples were absolutely convinced in spite of their doubt that it was Jesus and that He was alive again.

All Authority.

"All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth." Jesus had been absolutely obedient to the divine will. He had conquered the last enemy, which was death. He had risen in newness of life and in newness of power. All authority, or all power, had been given to Him. As the lesson titles for the past two or three weeks have intimated, He had triumphed through surrender and through sacrifice, and the Father had given all authority and all power into His hands. We do not have a weak or impotent Christ; we have one who has all power and who has all authority.

"Go Ye Therefore . . ."

Because He had all authority He told His disciples to go. It was the risen, authoritative, all powerful Christ who gave what we call the great commission, or who sent His disciples out in what might be called "The continuing task." If it had been merely a human enterprise there would not have been much chance for success. It was because they had back of them the authority and the power of Christ that they succeeded in making such a profound influence upon the life of the world.

Disciples of All Nations.

The Gospel is from center to circumference. When Jesus was born the angel said, "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." When Jesus rose from the dead He told His disciples to go tell others. Now the risen Lord sends them out to make disciples of all the nations. There is no favorite people, no favorite class, no favorite color in the mind or heart of God. His gospel is universal both in the sense that it is for all men, and that it meets the needs of all men. The custom of receiving a special offering for missions at the Easter season is in keeping with the central genesis of the gospel of Christ.

"In the Name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit."

This is the formula which is now commonly used in Christian baptism. It is quite likely that originally disciples were baptizing in the name of Jesus, but soon the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit was used. Here we have summed up three phases of the personality and character of God. God revealed himself as a Father through his Son Jesus Christ, and after Jesus went back into the spiritual order He made known His continued presence and His power through the Holy Spirit. In brief and simple terms this is the doctrine of the trinity.

Teaching.

Jesus sent His disciples out to teach. To be sure this did not mean that they were not to preach, nor that preachers have not been divinely commissioned by Him, but the great commission specifically states that they were to teach all nations. The Christian Church in its emphasis upon Christian education is distinctly in line with the original commission of our risen Lord. These disciples were to teach men and women to observe all things whatsoever he had commanded them. The content of the curriculum of Christian education, and the teaching ministry of the church, was to be based on the spoken words of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Divine Presence and Companionship.

"And lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Some years ago a travel-worn man stood before the students of the University of Glasgow at the commencement time and said, "Shall I tell you what sustained me in my exile life among strangers whose language I could not understand? Thus asked Dr. Livingstone, home after sixteen years in Africa. And then in the hush that followed he said, "It was this that comforted me, 'Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.'" "The effect of that solemn text, unexpected, evidently, by everyone, could hardly have been surpassed on any occasion since its first utterance in Galilee," said one who was present. "Every heart felt the power of the grand promise, the grandest of all time. Livingstone was both its witness and its example."

Let this be understood that wherever a man goes and whatever he undertakes, if he does it at the command of the Son of God, he may be sure of the presence and power of the Living Christ.

MONDAY.

"LOVE."

"Give and it shall be given to you."—Luke 6:38.

"Give to him that asketh."—Matt. 5:42.

"Freely ye received, freely give."—Matt. 9:24.

Love that is hoarded moulds at last,
Until we know some day
The only thing we ever have
Is what we give away.

And kindness that is never used,
But hidden all alone,
Will slowly harden till it is
As hard as any stone.

It is the things we always hold
That we will lose some day.
The only things we ever keep
Are what we give away.

—Louis Ginsburg.

Prayer—We thank Thee, our Father, for that door which no man can close and by which our souls may find their way to Thee—the door of service and of helping others with what Thou hast given us. Grant us a double portion of our Savior's Spirit. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"I TRIED TO MAKE GOOD."

"Do lead a life worthy of the Gospel of Christ."—Phil. 1:27 (Moffatt)
Read Phil. 1:19-30.

We saw the motion picture "San Quentin." San Quentin is California's prison. This picture represented the superintendent as trying to see always the prisoners' viewpoint and give them a chance. He continually endeavored to win their confidence in his ideas of justice and to convince them of his sincerity. Under subversive influence his most trusted man broke. He was shot and wounded. Realizing that he had broken faith with his best friend, he made his way back to the prison and fell dead at the entrance. As he expired he was heard to say, "Tell Jamison I tried to come back and make good."

We may not be able to determine the degree of success we can attain in the fulfillment of our purposes. But we can at least make sure of the quality of our living with which we attack the task that confronts us every day, so that at the end we can say, "I have fought a good fight. I have kept the faith."

Prayer—Our Father help us to dedicate our lives to the kind of living that is worth while. Forbid that we shall ever compromise. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"WALKING IN SERVICE."

"He that doeth the truth cometh to the light, that his work may be made manifest, and that they have been wrought in God."—John 3:21.

There is no way in which we walk more closely to God than in service. So wrote the poet Calvin W. Laufer:

We thank Thee, Lord, Thy paths of service lead
To blazoned heights and down the slopes of need;
They reach Thy throne, encompass land and sea,
And he who journeys in them walks with Thee.

Amen.

THURSDAY.

"A TRAIN."

"Who among you is wise and learned? Let him show by his good conduct, with the modesty of wisdom, what his deeds are"—James 3:13 (Moffatt).

A Christian ought always be readily distinguishable from a non-Christian. It is said that a train is a train not when it consists of engine, cars and caboose, but when "markers" are placed at the rear of the last car.

So, one becomes a Christian, not necessarily when he attends church or reads his Bible, but when he shoulders the Cross of Christ in his daily life and bears the marks of a follower of Christ. Those marks are: "Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, meekness," and according to James, wisdom from above, mercy, fruit, peace-makers, service.

Prayer—Heavenly Father, guide us this day in all our thoughts, words and deeds, that we may be more nearly like Christ. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"FAITH AND WORKS."

"Faith without works is dead."—James 2:17.

"If we really believe in a thing, we must act accordingly. One believing in Christianity does his utmost to follow that faith to the end."

A spirit-led, a spirit-strengthened, and a spirit-triumphant life is our heritage in Christ.

Prayer—O Lord, we pray for power and the courage to live the Christ-like life. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"A SORRY SPECTACLE."

"The ship was now in the midst of the sea, tossed with waves."—Matt. 14:24.

"That we henceforth be no more children tossed to and fro."—Eph. 4:14.

We have been in storms at sea when the waves were so great that the rudder was useless for a time. Under these circumstances one's heart sinks in futile hope as the feeling of utter helplessness and the sense of imminent destruction looms.

A professing Christian of these unusual days is much like the ship in storm. Without the sustaining power of the Christ, his plight is deplorable, and the more so because so needless. Today's call is "Let Jesus come into your heart" in His fulness of power.

ROY D. HELFENSTEIN, D. D.,
MASON CITY, IOWA.

"PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY."

Practical Christianity is Christianity expressed in right human relationships in daily living. Practical Christianity lays its major emphasis upon life rather than upon creed. It is the attempt of people to practice the religion of Jesus Christ today—the acceptance of his faith in God as "a loving Heavenly Father," and the acceptance of his regard and hope for humanity. Practical Christianity is concerned about practicing the teachings of Jesus in everyday life. Jesus taught that no man was big enough or good enough to be able to get along in life without God's help, and that prayer was man's responsibility as well as his privilege. Jesus taught that human personality was God's supreme concern and should likewise be man's supreme concern; that human values were the highest values, and that a man's soul is of more consequence than everything else in the world. Christ put the question pointedly—"What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

Christian theology has its place and an important place, but it can never take the place of practical Christian living. Many people have lived their way into religious thinking, but it is a question if any have ever thought their way into religious living. One of the greatest theologians in the English-speaking world, Dr. L. P. Jacks of Oxford University, recently declared, "It is doubtful if ever a person has become religious by reasoning his way into the religious life."

It is possible for a person to have correct theological ideas and still not live the Christian life. Practical Christianity is more than belief in the doctrines about Christ and the teaching of Christ—it is the exercising of faith, the practicing of faith in Christ's kind of life, faith in Christ's God of love, faith in the ultimate victory of truth and right, faith that "God shall supply every need of ours, according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."

Discipleship with Jesus means more than giving intellectual assent to his teachings and to the doctrines about his person—it means to invite his spirit into one's life, to put into practice his love for God and for humanity, to practice his faith in prayer, and to follow him in service to others. Many men have believed in the doctrines about Christ but have utterly failed to express the Christ spirit in their lives. They have substituted theory for practice.

It makes no difference how many tears a man may shed when he hears about the sacrifice of Jesus, or how many doctrines of the church he may claim to believe. If he does not have the spirit and love of Jesus in his heart, inspiring him to live in a filial relation to God and in a brotherly relation to his fellow men, he therefore proves that he is not a disciple of Jesus.

A man's creed is not prima facie evidence of Christian discipleship. A Christian life is. The orthodoxy of life is the only orthodoxy that God recognizes or that mankind is concerned about. It is far better for a person to have the wrong kind of theology and the right kind of life, than to have the right kind of theology and the wrong kind of life. Both should be right, but the right kind of life—the right attitude toward God and man—is the supreme "right" which all should seek. The sun's rays are not withheld from men until they have the correct ideas about the sun. Neither is God's divine power in human lives conditioned upon right notions about Him, but upon a right attitude toward Him.

Only practical Christianity—practicing the presence of God, practicing the love of God, doing the will of God as revealed in the life and teachings of Jesus Christ our Lord—can bring happiness, peace, and security to humanity. "He is able" to enable mankind to give the world that demonstration of practical Christianity which would turn the world's night into God's Day.

Prayer—We desire, our Father, above all things attainment of the power of the Spirit. Grant this we pray Thee. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"VICTORIOUS LIVING."

"And Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit."—Luke 4:14.

Luke's account of the temptations of Jesus reveals clearly the way to victorious living. He was full of the Holy Spirit in the beginning. He kept full of the Holy Spirit and in the conclusion he was still in its power. His baptisms meant a full dedication to, and a complete obsession for, His Father's cause and His prayer life kept Him in touch and in harmony with the Father's will.

Dedication, passion, His word and prayer—simple and creative strength that triumphs for you and me.

Prayer—O Lord, help us to keep constantly alert to the simple means of maintaining our contact with Thy vast resources of spiritual power. Through Christ. Amen.

EVANS.

Edward William Evans, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Evans of the Happy Home Church, near Reidsville, N. C., died on December 1, 1939 and was buried at his church. Edward was fourteen years old. He was quite a popular young man among all who knew him and he held high ideals before him as he began life in earnest.

Edward is survived by his parents, two brothers and one sister. May the peace of God rest upon this home to help them find a peace that passeth all understanding.

W. J. ANDES.

ROBERTSON.

Harold Edwin Robertson, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Robertson, passed away on January 8, 1940, and was buried at the Happy Home Church, near Reidsville, N. C. Harold was only eleven years, eleven months, and eight days old. He, too, was at the beginning of earnest life and was leading a fine life in his youth.

Harold is survived by his parents and four sisters. May the God of light shine into the darkened gloom, caused by the loss of their son and brother, and bring them peace.

W. J. ANDES.

FRANKS.

On January 19, 1940, Mrs. Endora Marks Byrum Franks fell asleep. She was the beloved wife of Rev. J. E. Franks. They had lived together for about six months, being united in marriage in July, 1939. Although this union was short, it was one of deep peace and happiness, since both were devout Christians and therefore had much in common in spiritual things.

It was the writer's good pleasure to know Sister Franks intimately but a short while, but I can truly say I have seldom met such a devout soul. She had the light of life in her face that never wore off, not even during two severe attacks of pneumonia the last of which took her away.

Brother Franks has been put to the test, but has victory in his soul. May it please the Father to keep him with us many years and use him to comfort and bless others.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

PAYNE.

Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Payne died January 23, 1940, at the age of ninety-three. "Gran-nie" Payne, as she was familiarly known, was the widow of the late G. M. C. Payne. She leaves to mourn their loss six children, forty-nine grandchildren, ninety-nine great-grandchildren, and twenty great-great-grandchildren.

She was the mother of J. W. Payne, the esteemed treasurer of the East Alabama Association.

She was a devoted companion, a loving mother, and friend to all. She was a faithful and loyal member of Noonday Christian Church. We shall all miss her, but we bow in humble submission to Him who had provided some better things for her. She died praying for the salvation of the lost. Hers was a life of unselfish service.

The funeral was conducted from the Liberty Grove Methodist Church by the writer and her body was laid to rest in the cemetery there by the side of her husband. May God bless the sorrowing loved ones.

J. D. DOLLAR.

WHITE.

Seldom does a church and a community experience the loss of a father and mother within one week. The Hank's Chapel Christian Church and community felt this experience the first week in February. Mrs. Doctor B. White died on February 5 and Mr. White on February 10. Mrs. White had been sick for thirteen years, three of which were spent in bed. She lived to be seventy years old. Mr. White, eighty years of age, had been sick for the past two and a half years but was able to sit in his chair part of the time. Throughout all of their suffering their sons and daughters, with their families, attended them with unselfish devotion. Six sons, Bun, Jack, Dan, Sam, Glen, and Mallie, and two daughters, Mrs. Bruce Burns and Mrs. Inez Petty, survive their parents' passing. Mrs. White is survived by two sisters and one brother. Mr. White is survived by one sister.

On December 10, 1939, Mr. and Mrs. White celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary and they never seemed happier than at that time. Many relatives and friends came to visit them. The Hank's Chapel closed the celebration with a service of gratitude to God for his blessings on them.

MR. AND MRS. WHITE.

Mr. and Mrs. White were members of the Hank's Chapel Church nearly all of their lives. As long as their health permitted, they were always there and leaders in the church. Health failing them, they were blessed to have active sons and daughters to carry on their leadership in the church. One can never estimate the good which these two Christian people have wrought in their lifetime.

A host of friends and relatives gathered at the church for the two funerals. The funerals were conducted by the writer, who was assisted by a number of ministers of the family's acquaintance.

W. J. ANDES.

MARBLE.

R. C. Marble, aged seventy-eight, Suffolk, Va., died February 27, and the funeral was conducted by the writer the following afternoon at three o'clock at the funeral home of I. O. Hill and Company. Brother Marble was a member of the Bethlehem Christian Church, and made his home with his son, Jesse Marble, who survives him. He is also survived by two daughters, Mrs. J. G. Basler, and Miss Mary Marble; two grandchildren and two nieces. Most of the surviving members of his family are members of the Suffolk Christian Church, which with its pastor extends love and sympathy, praying that God may comfort and bless each of the bereaved.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

WILKERSON.

David James Wilkerson, son of the late D. Y. and DREWRY Ann Wilkerson, was born March 5, 1883 and died at his home in Person County, N. C., March 15, 1940. In 1905 he married Miss Mary Tuck. The following children survive: Frank, Willie, Taft, Felix, Peyton, Mrs. Arthur Fox, and Rosa Lee, all of Roxboro, N. C. The funeral was conducted by the writer at Union Christian Church on Sunday, March 17, and burial was in the church cemetery. A large crowd of people attended from both Roxboro and Virgilina. There were many beautiful floral tributes. May the Lord bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

C. E. NEWMAN.

GERRINGER.

Shallow Ford Christian Church finds its sad duty to record the passing of Mr. Lyman David Gerringer on January 8, 1940.

He was a faithful member and deacon of Shallow Ford Church, also president of the Memorial Association. He had served as Sunday school superintendent.

In his going the church has lost a faithful and beloved member.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we hold in loving remembrance his faithfulness to his church and community.

2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on our records, one sent to the family, and one to "The Christian Sun."

MADREN.

We, the undersigned, members of the Board of Deacons of the Bethlehem Congregational-Christian Church, wish through these resolutions to express our appreciation of and sincere thanks for the life and labors of our good and faithful friend, fellow-deacon, trustee, and member of the above-mentioned church, Mr. Alfred Capus Madren. For fifty years he was a regular attendant at church services and his voice was a controlling factor in the life and affairs of the church. He served for more than twenty-five years as chorister, more than thirty years as trustee, more than twenty years as deacon, and for the past number of years as superintendent of the memorial society of the cemetery.

Therefore we wish to adopt the following resolutions:

1. That in his going Bethlehem Congregational-Christian Church has lost a valuable and faithful friend and member, but our loss is heaven's gain, and therefore we submit to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

2. That out of our hearts go deep sympathy and a warm prayer to his good wife and other members of his family, as well as to his kindred.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the secretary's book, a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be sent to the family.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The good women from all of our Southern Convention, and from Alabama even to Urbana Ill., sent in dresses for the girls in the orphanage so that they might have new Easter dresses for Easter Sunday. All of them were given dresses on Thursday before Easter in order to have time to make alterations (if necessary). The dresses were many and beautiful. All the girls were fitted in a new Easter suit, and all were happy to receive their new dresses. It was very, very kind of the good women to do this for us. It will help a lot. We are grateful. Easter Sunday slippers was the job of the Superintendent and what a job—to fit and to please. But after a strenuous effort the job was done.

The boys, too, had to have their annual Sunday oxfords and trousers and sweaters. Some few had to have suits; by eight o'clock Saturday night the last little boy was fixed with new trousers and sweater so all could go to Sunday school on Sunday morning. And to the disappointment of all Sunday morning, just before time to go to Sunday school, the beautiful snow began to fall thick and fast and all day long it continued to fall; but most of the little fellows braved the storm and went to Sunday school.

If next Sunday is a pretty clear day they will have an opportunity to shine out in their new Easter clothes. We want to thank each and every one who had a part in making the children happy for the Easter occasion. It was good of you, and I only wish I could thank you in person for your kindness. If you got as much joy out of sending the dresses as the little girls got out of receiving them there are a lot of happy souls in the Southern Convention. May God richly bless each and every one.

The cash offerings from the Sunday schools have been short since the first of the year on account of so much bad weather. As the weather clears up and the sun shines warm and people can go to church, we hope you will remember the Sundays you have missed and make your offerings large enough to make it up. Remember the children eat as much when finances are low as they do when we have a large bank balance, which we don't have. The continued cold, rough weather has forced us to run the furnaces at full blast and it has taken much more coal than we usually burn (extra expense).

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

Following this Miss Lucy will speak and lead a discussion on practical phases of Pilgrim Fellowship—helping you with any problems you may have in your local groups.

At the business session new officers will be elected for the North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship and the possibility of sending a delegate(s) to California will be discussed. Then, instead of dividing into the regular discussion groups, each Conference group will have a meeting. This is especially important for the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, since their officers are to be elected.

The Fellowship Supper will be in charge of Miss Elberta Murray, and will begin at 6:00. The evening session will consist of an installation service for the new officers and an inspirational talk by Miss Eldredge. The meeting will close about 8:00, so that those coming distances can get an early start home.

“There is a something, call it what you like, a something that silently steals into the message that has been born in the soul of the preacher when he is on his knees. Do you know it? You may.”

“This chrome religion—this taffy-on-a-stick method to induce people to come your way and to your church, is a poor investment when it comes to religious principles. No self-respecting organization can afford to stoop to such methods.”

The First Item on Your Church Budget

By REV. J. M. McKNIGHT, Pastor,
Armstrong Presbyterian Church, Norfolk, Va.

When your finance committee or church conference meets to consider the budget for the new year, suggest to them as the first item on it, before Foreign Missions, Home Missions, Christian Education, Orphans' Home, or Pastor's Salary, important as all these are, a sum of money sufficient to send a church paper to every home of the church.

I can hear someone saying that it is sacrilegious to put a church paper before Foreign Missions or Home Missions or the orphans. They would rather send that money to one or the other of those causes. You will get more per dollar of investment from that than any other cause, for it informs your church membership and keeps them interested in all of the work of the church. When you think that not one family in ten throughout the average church takes a church paper, no wonder the average pastor finds it hard to keep interest in all of the many causes of our benevolent budget.

Three or four times a year I send out a letter to all the families of my church, telling them of the work of our church. But I cannot in my letter tell them of all the interesting things that have been happening on the foreign field, the home missions fields, the orphanages, the colleges and universities. Only a church paper can do this.

Your finance committee should simply charge this up to advertising and forget about it.

No wide-awake business concern can hope to stay in business long today without advertising. The church cannot expect to hold its membership without advertising. The church cannot expect to hold its membership without adequate and intensive advertising. If they are indifferent, they certainly won't pay for a church paper and keep informed. The informed good church members that will voluntarily take it and read it don't need it, nearly as much as the indifferent.

Then, you can have your own pledge cards printed. On the current expense side of the card have it read like this: "Current Expenses, per week; Church Paper, per week. Total, per week."

Ask each person to raise the weekly pledge enough to cover the cost of their church paper. A lot of people not now pledging would like to pay for the papers that the church sends them.

In our drive for new subscribers we found families that said they would love to take the church paper if they could pay for it by the week like they did their newspapers. So our church advanced the money to the papers and they repaid us. They take the daily paper and pay 20 cents a week for it, but very few of them would pay $10.40 in a lump sum for a year's subscription to it. The newspapers know it and have changed their policy.

The individual pastor is not responsible for the ignorance of the whole Southland on church matters, but he is responsible for this lack of information in his own field. His own church is the field that God has given to him to till and water. He can't send a church paper to every home of the Conference, but it is humanly possible for him to devise ways and means to have every family of his church take a church paper.

What our church officers need today is a little courage and daring, a willingness to try something new. Wonderful results have been achieved in the fields of chemistry, aviation, radio, and the business world, because men dared to do the impossible, and the thing that never had been done before. Church work becomes monotonous, because new ideas and plans are inhibited by the leaders. The old way seems the best way, because we have done it that way so often. If you have the courage to put this item first in your budget, your benevolence and pastor's salary may drop behind temporarily, but before the year is over, you will discover that that item has more than paid for itself. Be game. Try it one year and see how you come out.—Adapted from "The Presbyterian of the South."

NEWS AND VIEWS

Rev. R. D. Coulter of New Market, Va., was unable to attend the Mid-Year Conference last week because of sickness. Here's hoping that he is able to go about his work again.

Rev. R. A. Whitten received seven members into the Winchester (Va.) church on Easter. Dr. H. S. Anderson of Washington, D. C., conducted pre-Easter services there March 10-15.

Within eight days recently the Promotional Secretary spoke in twelve different churches, edited this paper, conferred with dozens of people, and sent more than three hundred letters out of the office.

Miss Mae Ginn Ng, a Chinese girl of Norfolk, who is a student in the College of William and Mary, was the guest speaker for the Woman's Missionary Rallies in Eastern Virginia last week.

New Hope Christian Church, near Harrisonburg, Va., has called the Rev. P. B. Sanger to become pastor of that church. This completes the pastorate for Mr. Sanger, who is expected to move to the field after the close of this school year.

Five South Norfolk (Va.) churches joined in a seven o'clock service Easter Sunday morning at the Christian Church. A Baptist minister, Rev. R. M. Pleasants, gave the message. The high school choir sang. About five hundred people were present, most of them young people.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN family extends sympathy to Mrs. H. S. Hardeastle of Norfolk, Va., whose father, J. S. Miller of Luray, Va., died suddenly on March 26. The news reached Norfolk while Mrs. Hardeastle was attending the Woman's Missionary Rally at Portsmouth.

Rev. R. E. Newton, the new minister of the Page County Pastorate, was received into the Valley of Virginia Conference last week pending the receipt of his letter of transfer. The Rev. Mr. Newton reported a very pleasant recent trip to West Palm Beach, Fla., to see the members of his family. He went to Virginia soon after Christmas, was called to the work there, and went to work at once. The family will move to Virginia in June.

April 28 is Rural Life Sunday as observed by the churches of America. It is hoped that both city and rural churches will enter into the program. Materials can be secured to aid with the service by writing the Promotional Secretary at Elon College, N. C.

Twenty-eight members were received into Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., and two babies were baptized on Easter Sunday. A beautiful Baptismal Font was received as a gift from the family of Mr. T. E. Brickhouse. Dr. H. S. Hardeastle is the happy pastor of this fine church.

Rev. John G. Truitt was not able to attend services at his church in Suffolk, Va., on Easter Sunday. At last

ATTEND THE CONVENTION AND MAKE CHANGES.

By REV. J. FRANK MORGAN.

As President of the Eastern Virginia Conference I want to urge every minister and lay delegate of this Conference to attend, if at all possible, the approaching session of the Southern Christian Convention. There will be matters of vital importance to be attended to during the Convention, and I am especially anxious for a good attendance at all the sessions.

The Convention will need to emphasize in a clear and an easy understandable way our young people's work.

I favor organization of a Young People's Fellowship of the Southern Convention, with definite organizations in the churches of the Convention. For example, Young People's Christian Endeavor Fellowship, Young People's Missionary Fellowship (for missionary societies), and Young People's Boy Scout Fellowship, etc. When such organizations are effected in the local churches they may then become a part of the Young People's Fellowship of the Southern Convention by their own vote. This will give definite contact between the General Fellowship and the local church, which is not found in the Pilgrim Fellowship.

I also favor the combining of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and the present Elon College publication, and that the managing, editing, and publishing of the combined paper be entrusted to the college.

Then, too, I favor the discontinuance of the office of Promotional Secretary, unless a more satisfactory way be found to finance it. I do not believe it is well to use money given for other purposes to keep this office going.

To help properly solve these and other problems that will come up at the Convention sessions, I urge a large attendance.

VALLEY CONFERENCE MEETS IN MID-YEAR SESSION.

The Valley of Virginia Conference met in mid-year session at the Bethlehem Church, in Tenth Legion, on March 28, 1940, at 10 a. m. The president, R. A. Larriek of Winchester, presided with dignity and urged the Conference to do its best during the coming days. The theme of the Conference was "The Church in This Present World." Seventeen churches out of the twenty-two were represented by delegates, and the Bethlehem Church was ably filled with these delegates and visitors.

Mr. J. C. Bradford, of Bethlehem, welcomed the Conference. Mrs. C. M. McCoy and Miss Goldie Dofflemyer of the Bethel Church led the opening worship service.

One of the highlights of the Conference was the address by Rev. F. C. Lester, the Promotional Secretary of the Southern Convention. He spoke on "Training Church Members." Excerpts from his address are as follows: "We get excited about getting church members, but we fail to be interested in them to any great extent after they are in the church. They should be trained to walk as

OUR CHURCH PAPER.

Perhaps this paper should not speak so much of itself, but it is the child of the Southern Convention, and must look to its parentage for guidance and help.

For ninety-six years this paper has been living, and it is eager for life. There seem to be those who are willing to see "The Christian Sun" fade out, either instantly or by degrees. Is it not possible for the paper to take on new life by changing the editors, by making a new allotment of articles, by increasing the number of pictures and news items, by definitely seeking a larger constituency, by getting the churches to really undertake the sale of the paper, by reducing the price and including it in the local church budget (by vote of the church, of course), or by some other honorable method?

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

A partial survey of our churches shows that less than half of our church members are related to the Sunday schools. It is perhaps safe to say that half or more of the superintendents and teachers in the Sunday schools have had no preparation for their work. This is particularly true in the rural churches from which we continue to draw our ministers and church leaders.

Several years ago the Southern Convention through its Board of Religious Education put a worker in the field who visited the churches and aided them in training leaders, selecting literature, organizing the schools, and in other ways stimulating the educational work of the churches. We are now feeling very keenly the effect of withdrawing that worker. Many of the churches are anxious to get such a helper.

Something along this line is now being done by the Promotional Secretary and the office of the Board of Christian Education, but there is not time to do this work adequately and do the many other things that must be done.

Would it be wise for the Convention to make plans for a person to do religious educational work among our churches?

FORGOTTEN CHURCHES.

In most of our Conferences in the Southern Convention there are churches that have no pastor. They are little churches that have lost their ability to pay enough to secure the services of a minister. There are some members left, but not enough with vision and money to make the church program effective. These little churches bear the name of our denomination, but add nothing to the glory of the church. One of them has been blown from its foundation and lies twisted and torn as the storm left it. Passers-by and members of the community know this as the Christian Church. But it is practically forgotten by the leaders of the church.

There are other churches that still have some pastoral service, but are nearing the time when they, too, will be numbered among the forgotten. They call a minister for a year. He serves his time out and finds that it costs him more to make the long journey there to preach than he receives for his services. He cannot continue this drain upon his meager income. Several of our smaller churches are on the road to the limbo of forgotten things unless the Conference or Convention render services to them.

Would it be wise for the Southern Convention to consider this matter and make arrangements for these forgotten churches to be cared for and strengthened?

FORWARD, OR BACKWARD?

From various sources there come the comments that the Southern Convention meeting in Greensboro at the end of this month will have great problems to consider.

Your editor is being bold enough to suggest several matters himself. All of these things that have been suggested by one and all are important.

But in reality there is just one big question coming before the Convention. The answer to that will determine the success or failure of the others. Small churches may be forgotten or remembered, religious education emphasized or neglected, new ministers sought and trained or left to find their own way, church finances definitely considered or left to drift, the church paper made secure or left to flounder, young people directed by the Convention or left to plan for themselves, the office of Promotional Secretary continued or eliminated, the financial goals continued as at present or changed, these and other matters are important and should be seriously considered.

But the greatest question the Convention will have to answer is: "Are we going forward or backward?"

If we are afraid, if we are jealous, if we cannot work with those who think differently, if we are selfish, if we desire our own more than the success of our church, then we are headed for a backward movement.

But if the present world challenges us to unselfish devotion to the cause of Christ, if we really want to launch out on a program of progress, the world awaits our service. And it will welcome our friendship.

All about us other denominations are increasing their service to their churches and to the world. Methodists and Baptists are putting in the field the best men in their fellowship, and their papers are improving. The church is on the march. We must move forward, or fall out of line.

It is devoutly to be hoped that the delegates to the Convention will attend, and that they will go to the Convention with their hearts set on the progress of our churches. It is fine to have a history, but it is far better to have a future.

Adjustments may need to be made before the machine of the Convention will work at high speed and most successfully. They can be made without injury to any person, board, or institution. They will be made if we are determined to move forward.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Twentieth Annual Session of the District Meeting of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches for the societies in Gates, Nansemond, Isle of Wight and Southampton Counties, was held in Holland Christian Church, Wednesday, March 27, 1940. About 200 delegates and visitors were present. The theme: "Toward a World Christian Fellowship" was nicely woven into the addresses, devotionals and Forum discussions of the day.

Mrs. E. P. Jones, Franklin, Va., the District Superintendent, presided. Mrs. Ayler J. Holland, Holland, Va., was Secretary. The devotional period for the morning session was conducted by Mrs. E. F. O'Berry, assisted by Mrs. James Barnes and Mrs. H. E. Savage, Jr., all members of the Liberty Spring Christian Church. The theme was "Peace." Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. Savage sang a very appropriate duet. Following this Mrs. E. P. Jones, District Superintendent, spoke on: "Is Christian Missions Alive Today?" She answered the question in the affirmative and gave the audience an optimistic outlook for the future. Miss Mae Ginn, a native Chinese who is a student at William and Mary College, spoke on the outlook in China.

An address on missions, prepared by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, and read for him by Mrs. John G. Truitt, gave inspiration to go forward in this great work. The remarkable energy and optimism of our Mission Secretary should encourage others to dedicate themselves to this primary task of the followers of Jesus Christ. His long affliction has not weakened his enthusiasm for the cause of missions. Special prayer was offered for him and other sick ones who could not be present.

The Promotional Secretary, Rev. F. C. Lester, was called upon for a brief address, and he gave some very interesting facts relative to the work in China.

A vocal solo rendered by Miss Eloise Holland of the Holland Church added to the interest of the morning session.

In the afternoon session the devotional period was conducted by Mrs. J. Leonard Byrd, a former member of Liberty Spring Church, who is now an active member of the Suffolk Christian Church. It is remarkable that so many of the workers in our city churches had a part of their training in a country church. A solo was sung by Mrs. Vernon Holland of Holland, Va.

An interesting feature of the session was a Forum in charge of Mrs. E. L. Beale and Mrs. Oscar Byrd of Franklin, Va. Many questions were asked and answered to the pleasure and profit of the audience. This was helpful to the officers in the various societies.

There were eight pastors in the territory of this District. Five of these were present. One of the absentees was kept at home by illness; one was helping to care for a ten-day-old daughter and mother who had just returned home from the hospital; the other was prevented by circumstances over which he had no control.

It was not unusual for the ministers to get a bit of criticism. They sometimes deserve it. But the good women should remember that, in this day of larger freedom, they do not depend very much upon the advice or leadership of men, including the preachers. If the women succeed in their work they usually take the credit for their achievements. If they fail, it is very easy to blame the preacher, who must listen attentively and then forget it. The ministers are interested. They cannot always be present in these meetings, when so many duties demand their attention and call for their services in other places.

I. W. JOHNSON.

OUR PROBLEMS.

In a few brief weeks our churches in the South will be assembling in biennial session with First Church, Greensboro, North Carolina. Every minister and layman vitally interested in his church is aware of certain problems confronting us, problems that should be considered carefully and wisely as we meet from day to day. Perhaps everyone could make a list of the problems confronting us as a Convention, a church, and individuals, no two of which would agree entirely. However, as we face the responsibilities that are ours, there must be at least three problems contained on every list—the problem of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, that of the office of the Promotional Secretary, and the problem of the spiritual life of our people—these three—and the greatest of these is the spiritual life.

These problems are not new, save that of the office of Promotional Secretary. THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been a problem with us since its founding. About two decades ago church papers began a program of retrenchment, and under that program many of them have been eliminated entirely, not because the need disappeared nor because they were unable to serve beneficially, but because there were no funds with which to pay the cost of publication. Our own church paper has suffered from this program of retrenchment, or more properly for lack of funds. Some among us are contending that the time has come either to make radical changes in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, or to cease its publication altogether. I do not agree. THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been an influential agent, an evangelizing force, and a unifying factor for our people all through the years. I vote for its continuance. A great church like ours ought to be able to devise ways and means for the continuation of our church organ.

The office of Promotional Secretary (this discussion is without reference to personalities) was authorized during the last session of the Southern Convention. It represented the best thought of the representatives of the church assembled for the Convention. It seemed to us then that our Convention needed such an office, and someone in that office who possessed the ability and the disposition to point the way to a more inclusive program and a fuller life for the church. All that we had hoped for has not been accomplished. Much that has been done, some feel could have been done better. The major emphasis may have been put on other things with greater profit. We are all willing to concede that much more might have been accomplished.

On the other hand a great deal of good has been done, enough certainly to prove the wisdom of the Convention in its departure from previous plans and in establishing the office and electing a secretary whose business it is to promote and direct the affairs of the church as a unit. Aside from the ordinary routine and detail work that of necessity goes with an office of this kind, for the first time in our history we have made an effort to think of our church program as a whole headed up in one office, not as a dictator, but in the spirit of a counsellor and an adviser. There are those who say today that we made a mistake, that it has been a very expensive experiment, and that the office should be discontinued. I do not agree. I am not willing to concede without further effort that we as a church erred in authorizing the office of Promotional Secretary. Two years is hardly sufficient time to prove the wisdom or the lack of wisdom of such an undertaking.

The other problem, our spiritual life, has been a problem since the beginning of the kingdom on earth, and always will be so long as we are in the flesh. I think, however, that we could do a great deal more about it than we are doing. Standing on Elon College campus and looking out on our church with a heart hungering for the coming of the kingdom and a passion for the intensifying of the spiritual life of our church, it seems to me that we as a church and as a people are missing a great opportunity and, I fear, are putting the emphasis on the wrong things. We have had a disposition to soft-pedal evangelism, to apologize for the lack of growth in the membership of the local church by contending that we do not want to receive members in large numbers, that we cannot induct them into the Christian life and take care of them as they should be taken care of, that when we receive members in large numbers, we lose too many of them. A study of our churches will show that very few of us can be guilty of receiving members in large numbers. To win people to Christ requires effort, sweat of brain and sweat of soul. We have to pay the price to win, and the price is a life in communion with God through Christ, such a communion that will lift us above the world and in the atmosphere of the freedom of the spirit where we become consciously possessed of the power of the living God.

I hope sincerely that we will not enter the approaching session of our Convention with a mind closed to progress, with a mind set on retrenchment and eliminations, closed to progress and avenues that will bring us power resulting in successes for the church and the kingdom. I venture to raise the question if we as a church have a right to curtail our program and handicap our church on the contention that we are not able. We are able! God in heaven knows that we are able! If the membership of the Christian Church would bring its tithe into the church and put it on the altar, we could not only continue to carry our program, but we would multiply that program over again and in the exercise of our stewardship to the full, we would suddenly realize an outpouring of the Spirit that would evidence itself in a power sufficient to carry the bounds of our church far beyond its present borders.

In the spirit of consecration, with inquiring minds and with obedient spirits, I pray that we may enter the larger councils of our church in faith.

L. E. SMITH.

THE CONVENTION PROBLEM.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN has carried discussions of a number of problems which we are to face in the approaching sessions of the Southern Convention. It is the purpose of this article to concur in the opinion of the writers insofar as the existence of the problems discussed is concerned, but it seems that we may be forgetting that these problems have a common origin. Not a single problem mentioned so far can be traced to its source without recognizing that they are of common origin. That origin has not been discussed, and we go there to get the heading for this article. There is one great problem that we must face. When we find the solution for The Problem, all others will vanish. That may seem an exaggerated statement, but let us examine it.

Take the problem of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It is as old as my memory of church affairs. It is no worse, perhaps, than for years, but it is no better. Its problem, as always, is where to get money to continue. The problem of Elon College has not changed, but perhaps it is growing more acute so far as the churches meeting their apportionment of $12,500.00 as interest on the bonds issued by the Convention. We paid less last year than the year before, and less than $1,000.00 is reported on apportionments to the college this year, with the College Period past. The problem is still money.

Several local churches are laboring under indebtedness contracted in "better days" (?) and are calling on the Mission Board for help. The Mission Board wants to help, but has to depend very largely upon the churches of the Convention to pay their apportionments as its source of strength. The churches are not paying in full and so somebody has to suffer the embarrassment of unfilled promises. Our problem is still money.

It seems to this writer that the Southern Convention should put its missionary program in line with the denominational program of Home Missions. It seems that our position is not fair. We keep all our Home Mission money within the bounds of the Southern Convention while we call on the National Office to help us supply pulpits, build churches and carry on our young people's work. Yet we would be the last to admit that we of the Southern Convention are yet on the missionary aid list of the denomination. We are a missionary church, but we are operating contrary to the true spirit of missions when we keep everything for ourselves. Where does the purpose of our conference Missionary Associations come in? Of course we need all the money we are now getting, and more, but as it now stands we, as a Convention, are violating the principle of Christian Stewardship and are adopting as our program that which we condemn in individuals for their lack of vision in a denominational-wide, world-wide missionary program. We have so little patience with the person who claims to be enthusiastic for "Home Missions" but to have no interest in "Foreign Missions," and yet as a Convention we are following just that plan. We need all our money within the Convention and therefore the needs of the other forty-six states hold no interest for us. Of course our problem here is lack of money to share, or is it only money we lack?

Now comes our newest venture—the creation of the office and ministry of Promotional Secretary. The "baby" is only two years old, but we are finding fault with the venture because the effort has not solved all our problems and put our enterprises on "easy street." How could we expect so much in so short a time? The office and ministry still has all the virtues and holds all the promise we saw in it two years ago. We are expecting too much of a venture so young, and if given time to take root and grow into the life and program of the Southern Convention the wisdom exercised in the creation of that office will show itself in the life of our churches and prove its worth a thousand times. But our problem is still, where can we get the money. Truly the love of money is the root of all evil, and the lack of it is the root of every problem we face.

Still we have the Convention Problem left. It is this, or my judgment is all wrong and my experience of no value: We lack the spiritual dynamic to put our program over. The trouble is not with our organization, our boards, our committees as such, nor with our enterprises, for they are all worthy. Our trouble is in our hearts. We are not spiritually minded. We are not sacrificial. We are without a vision so clear and challenging that we are made willing to do the things we desire according to God's plan. What has the Convention offered as

Thoughts on the Experience of God Through Christ

(Gospel According to St. John, Chapter 15.)

By REV. CLATON S. RICE, D. D.

I am sure that no one can come before this group of superintendents, prepared to lead in devotions, without feeling his inadequacy. I respect, and at times, stand in awe, of this group. Surely I can make no claim to special fitness because of experience or of preparation, which enables me to meet your group in these important devotional hours. But I know that no group in the church needs the hours of quiet and meditation more than we need them. Therefore, I am undertaking to lead you in these devotional periods, inadequate though I am.

The superintendent, who is the executive of the Conference, and a business man as well, finds himself too often engaged in tasks which lead him away from the normal habits and practices of a minister. Insofar as we allow ourselves to become wholly business-minded, we destroy our power to perform that function which, in the final analysis, is the most important function we perform, that of pastor of pastors. How greatly the power to sympathize, advise and encourage, the pastor who is at the end of his resources is needed you know full well. From the smallest church to the largest one, we meet ministers who call upon us to perform our greatest service—that of listening to, sympathizing, or advising with our brethren, who themselves are leaders of men, and who have no human place to go to for help save to us. Who is sufficient to combine these two almost antithetical functions, that of directing the affairs of a state conference, and guiding its business policies in a competitive economic and church world, a world which, all too often, gives the lie to "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," and at the same time that of maintaining the high place of unselfish living and spiritual insight which enables us to be helpful to our distressed, puzzled brothers in the ministry, who look to us for inspiration and advice, and the possession of a confidence which cannot be shaken even though the world itself trembles.

Before going further I must speak a personal word, for I want you to understand the background from which I speak. I come from nine generations of American Congregationalists, one whose paternal ancestor settled in Sudbury, Mass., in 1639, whose ancestor's sons and sons' sons each succeeding generation moved west or north into the new untried country. My people have been pioneers for generations, felling forest and breaking sod. I cleared sagebrush from the virgin land of Idaho, and fought drought and long-eared hungry jack rabbits, dangerous only to growing things.

Now there are those who feel that there is a special virtue in this pioneering. I cannot forget, however, that Anna Louise Strong, a Congregational minister's daughter, who went to Russia and became a Communist, in her book I Change Worlds called attention to the fact that perhaps there is no special mark of strength in pioneering. Instead, she feels it may denote weakness. It might be the mark of those who found themselves unable to compete with the difficult conditions people face in the highly competitive situations found in the older, well-organized communities. Some pioneers, she says, generation after generation, move into new territory to escape that which they have to face in the older countries.

Whether this be true or false in each case, I am one whose experience has been primarily that of the new, open country, with all the crudities and uncertainties which this involves. Coming out of this background of Congregational ancestors and the open country, there has been added to the picture college and seminary training in Presbyterian schools. In the pioneer areas, you know, there has been no competition between the Presbyterian Church and ourselves, at least in the small towns. When I was quite young, my father moved into territory where there were no Congregational Churches, only Presbyterian. A thorough-going, old fashioned, predestinarian theology was the theology I heard preached and taught for years. I sat under Ben Warfield and John DeWitt and Francis Landy Patton for three years at Princeton Theological Seminary, and I survived it, mirable dictu! Later I sought admission to the church of my fathers, when I found I could not be happy in a creedal church. I speak to you, then, out of what you may think an abnormal experience.

I have been made very much aware of the fact, recently, that many of my friends in the Congregational ministry, formerly liberals, are speaking the language which I heard in childhood. It is modified a bit—but I understand it. Out of the frustrations and despair of humanism, has come a group of our younger and middle-aged Congregationalists now proclaiming a modified Calvinistic position. They name Karl Barth as their patron saint and talk about a crisis theology.

There is strength and power in this new viewpoint for those who had lost touch with the God of wisdom and power and justice, in a soft, non-theological, Pollyanna age, an age which knew all too little of the blood and iron which the average man experiences in life's battle. My judgment is that these positions are being carried too far to the right for thinking ministers of the free church to retain forever. Man is still free within limits, and responsible within limits, in spite of our almighty God, or better, because of Him. Nevertheless I rejoice in this new sign of vitality. It is heartening. Perhaps after all we shall at last have a group of ministers in our churches whose confidence will be centered in a God of power and wisdom—ministers who will not be stampeded into panic fear even by an editorial in "Fortune," partly true and partly false!

Why should we be swept off our feet into the abyss of shrinking self-depreciation when an editor, who probably has laughed at the church through many years of his life, until world-wide crisis forced him to understand the futility of material things and materialistic philosophy, speaks, blaming the church for her faults. We recognize the justice of some of his criticisms, but we are aware of the fact that if these very critics had held up our hands in bygone days, there would be less to criticize in the church today. We are weak partly because they made us weak! I for one refuse to cringe before them.

"Any pleasure which takes and keeps the heart from God is sinful, and unless forsaken, will be fatal to the soul."

"When a man makes such enormous growth that he outgrows his church—he is too big to ever worry over again."

"Working amid coal dust, the only part of a coal pitman's body that is kept clean is his eyes, owing to the constant flow of the tear ducts. Thus the precious blood keeps clean the trusting soul."

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

My last letter to you I wrote while I was in Norfolk, Va. My husband went up there to preach a series of sermons at Hope Chapel in Brambleton. This is the section of Norfolk where the poor and needy make their homes. Hope Chapel is a lovely, very worshipful little church which is run by a devoted couple, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Sousa. A retired Presbyterian minister, Mr. Wesley, preaches at the chapel for the Sousas. At every service in the chapel during our week there many boys and girls were present. The junior choir sang for some of our services.

I want to present to you a red-headed, freckled-faced young fellow who stood up and led that junior choir just as well as a grown-up person could have done. Tommy was about ten or eleven years old. He sang bass in a deep voice as he directed the others with a sure and steady hand. After the service I asked Mrs. Sousa about Tommy and she told me that he was also the leader of her junior church which meets in the basement of the chapel each Sunday morning. She told me that he delighted in the privilege of leading the junior church in worship as well as song. If you could only see his earnest, puckered smile once, I am sure that you would never forget him.

You would have enjoyed being with me on Friday evening when I went down town in Norfolk to Levi-Page's Temple of Music to a musical concert. Boys and girls dressed in the costumes of boys and girls from all over the world, played the music which the boys and girls of all nations know and love. My niece, Barbara Phipps, was a little Polish girl who played her stirring, Polish selection very nicely. There were two little "pickaninnies," a little boy and girl, who looked as if they had been brought from the cotton field, who played medleys of our Negro spirituals.

On Saturday afternoon a friend of ours took us to see the interesting churches of Norfolk. We visited the Christian Temple where our friend Edna Fulcher showed us the church. We went into an Episcopal Church which was all decorated with palm branches for the Palm Sunday service, and the organist was there rehearsing her Palm Sunday music; it made us feel that Palm Sunday had already arrived! We went into a beautiful Catholic Church. The central symbol of the altar, Christ, of the Crucifix, was veiled in black. This meant that the church had been in mourning all during Lent because of the suffering and the death which Christ experienced long ago. Many people were kneeling in prayer in the church. I love to go into all churches because it makes me feel as if I knew the people of other denominations better. There was something in the atmosphere of all of those churches which we visited that made me breathe a silent prayer.

On Friday before Easter, back home in Sanford, I went to the three-hour Good Friday service which all of the churches in town took part in. This service was held in the theatre down town so that there would be room for all who came. Seven ministers gave seven meditations on the seven last words of Christ as spoken from the cross during the three last hours of his life. This was a beautiful service, but sad, too, because of the memories which it brought.

Then on Easter morning I got up at five o'clock to go to our Easter sunrise service at our church. There to hear that "He is Risen," and to know that again the Easter message was filling my heart with new hope. I hope that you, too, had a beautiful and glad Easter; and that you did not let the snow which followed the morning service make you unhappy.

Sincerely,

DOROTHY TODD.

REBECCA KEEPS LENT.

Rebecca was a little Jewish girl who lived in Norfolk. She wanted to keep Lent this year as she has always kept it. But, she wanted to find something which would be interesting to do and yet something which needed to be done. Rebecca had been trying to decide for many days just what she would do. Her parents gave her a fifty cent allowance each week. So she wanted to share this money with some little boy or girl who did not have any money to spend.

One night Rebecca was reading the newspaper and there she found a story of the poor boys and girls in Norfolk who were suffering with a flu epidemic and who had neither food or clothes with which to fight off the sickness. "Mother, said Rebecca, "Here is something that I can do during Lent!" Mother read the story and early the next morning she called up Mrs. Sousa of Hope Chapel to find out what Rebecca could do to help. Mrs. Sousa told Rebecca to meet her that morning in Brambleton and she would take Rebecca around to some of the homes so that she might choose the boys and girls she would like to share the fifty cents a week with.

Rebecca decided upon the ones whom she would like to help. That night after she went home she told her parents about some of the homes which she had been in and of the SNOW AND EASTER.

Those who keep up with the calendar and such, tell us that last Easter (March 24, 1940) was the first time Easter had fallen on this date since the year that George Washington died, 1799, and that Easter will not come again on this date till about one hundred years hence. I am not authority on these subjects and only pass on that which the calendar historians tell us, but I am authority on the fact that we had a snowy Easter, the snow beginning to fall in these parts about 9:00 A. M., and kept it up thick and fast throughout the whole day. This naturally caused a large drop off in church attendance that day since people, even on Easter, will not attend church on an inclement day as they will on a clear and inviting day.

This may in a measure account for the fact that our regular annual Easter offering for missions is slow in coming in. We have no doubt many pastors are waiting for a more favorable Sunday and a larger congregation that the offering may be as liberal as possible. The main point is that the offering for missions be taken in all our churches and that the pastors insist that the offering be just as liberal as possible. Just as Thanksgiving is set aside in our churches for an offering for the Orphanage so is Easter set aside for an offering for missions and we sincerely trust that no church will overlook, nor neglect, this offering. When this writer makes a plea for missions he feels that he is making a plea for all institutions of the church.

Our Mission Board is to a very large extent supporting our struggling church in Richmond, Va., but it is noted with pardonable pride and pleasure that this fact does not hinder our Richmond church from making its contributions to the Orphanage. The same can be said of every church that we aid with the mission funds.

An item in Dr. L. E. Smith's letter to THE CHRISTIAN SUN last week telling of the largest donation he had received in his present campaign to free the college of debt brought back very pleasant memories. The writer had preached in our Suffolk Church at the Sunday evening service. At the close of the service a youth on crutches came down the aisle and remarked that he judged from the sermon that I would be around among the members in Suffolk for the next day or two soliciting money for missions; he would save me the trouble of looking him up by giving his pledge then, which as I now recall was for $100.00, his check for which amount came in promptly as he had pledged. I am not surprised, therefore, that this young man of the lovable spirit, Walter C. Rawls, now of St. Louis, Mo., gives $1,500 to Elon College. It all just works that way. Induce a church to become missionary in spirit and you invariably have a church as ready to give to the other enterprises of the church. Organize a Woman's Missionary Society and the women in the society will pay their dues and be faithful in their missionary effort, and then when Brother Johnston of the Orphanage appeals to them for dresses for the children of the orphanage they give an attentive ear and a ready hand to the work as Brother Johnston testified in THE CHRISTIAN SUN last week.

All this is said in the hope and in the faith that all our churches have taken, or will take, the Easter offering for missions and that the same will be liberal and will be forwarded as early as possible. "Ye shall be witness of me unto the uttermost parts." That was not a petition, but a command of our Lord and when we obey His most emphatic command we may depend upon the results to be happy, wholesome and gratifying.

Grateful for the above offerings, we earnestly urge churches that have taken the Easter offering for missions to send the same in as early as possible as it is needed and will be appreciated. Owing to the very inclement weather Easter Sunday, we have no doubt that many pastors either did not take the offering, or did not finish it, waiting for better weather and a larger attendance at the church service. In either case we hope the pastors will see that the offering is made as liberal as possible and concluded as early as possible now.

Gratefully and sincerely,

YOUNG DOCTOR DIES IN CHINA.

Word has just been received by cable that "Leonard Wilbur died Easter typhus." This was sent to the American Board from Peking, China, dated March 27. Dr. Wynn C. Fairfield, home office secretary for our work in China, says:

"This is entirely a bolt from the blue, as we have had no word of any illness. He had made a trip to Fenchow just before the last letter from Alice Frame was written. It is possible that the bite came on that trip, but we know that there is never any need for special explanation as to the source of typhus.

"This is a heavy blow not only because Leonard was so much beloved and respected, but because it leaves Dr. Hugh Robinson our only man missionary doctor in the North China Mission—and he is in America. The situation is very similar to that at the time of Dr. Wilbur's own appointment, when we were planning to send another doctor to North China anyway, and then Dr. Hemingway's death in Taiku made the need still more urgent."

Dr. Wilbur was a young man, who received his B. A. at Stanford University in 1928 and his M. D. in 1931. He was married in 1933 to Jean Spaulding, also a Stanford graduate, and they went as missionaries to China for the American Board in that year. Readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will be saddened to hear of the death of this fine young man who represented us as he healed broken bodies on the other side of the earth.

PLEASANT RIDGE (RANDOLPH).
Due to the fact that our Christmas pageant was given on the evening of December 23, the regular time for our first quarterly conference, this meeting was postponed until a later date. It was held on Saturday evening, March 23, with the pastor, Rev. J. Frank Apple, presiding.
In our last report we stated that our pastor, who had served our church six years, preaching twice a month, had been unanimously re-elected to serve in the same way for the coming year, but after making that report Rev. Mr. Apple was given an urgent call to accept the charge of the Christian Church at Henderson, N. C., which he did. While we appreciated the honor extended him, we were saddened in the thought of having him leave us, but through the co-operative spirit on the part of the members of the Henderson Church they were willing to accept a supply on the fourth Sunday of each month in order that he might serve Pleasant Ridge throughout this Conference year, and for this we're deeply grateful. The Henderson Church is to be congratulated upon securing a pastor who will serve them faithfully and efficiently, as we as Pleasant Ridge know.
Since Mr. Apple could preach for us but once a month, we considered ourselves very fortunate to have in our own church a young man who is studying for the ministry. From the inspiring sermons he has brought to us, we feel sure that he will reach his ambition. It was decided that Mr. G. C. Craven should continue for the rest of this Conference year to preach each second Sunday morning.

It was also decided that the committee that had been appointed to investigate prices of bulletin boards should purchase same. We hope to have this on the grounds before our annual Memorial Service the fourth Sunday in May.
Our Missionary Society is to have the pleasure of having the societies of Chatham - Lee - Moore and Randolph Districts meet with us for the Spring Rally on April 5. We are looking forward with pleasure to having Miss Lucy Eldredge with us. We feel sure she can give us much interesting information about our mission stations in foreign lands.

THE CONVENTION PROBLEM.
its program of Christian Stewardship? If it has one I don't know it. It seems to me that the failure of local churches which have no Stewardship program should be convincing enough to prove that the Southern Convention can fare no better until it provides the proper spiritual motivation to carry on the program before us. When our people have the conviction that the problems of the Kingdom of God are the responsibility of the individual Christian they have the money to secure the success of all we have begun and much more.
Let the Convention at Greensboro initiate a program which will touch the lives and hearts of our constituency with the Spirit of Christ and put our pastors behind that program in every church. Let us go back to Christian Stewardship as God's plan for financing His program; let us rid ourselves of our timidity in the pulpits of our churches and present Christ as our hope, Christian Stewardship as our duty and giving as a responsibility and our present thoughts of retrenchments will come before us as the sin of which we are guilty and we can move forward. If this job is done, as I pray it will be, our problem in the future will still be money, but it will be one of what to do with the tithe of the thirty thousand Christians who constitute the membership of our churches in the Southern Convention.

WILL YOU HELP YOUR CHURCH PAPER?

It sometimes happens that young people in a local church are anxious to do something to help that church and to assist the older members in carrying out the larger work of the Conference and Convention. However, they do not always know how to go about this.

During this month THE CHRISTIAN SUN is carrying on a campaign for new and renewal subscriptions. Each church has been given a quota by the Conference. In some of our churches the young people are striving to secure the necessary subscriptions—in this way they are helping the people in their local church, the local church itself, and making possible the continuance of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Why not try it in your church?

Your minister probably has the list covering the present subscribers for your church. See him and offer to try to collect the past due subscriptions and secure new ones. Or write to THE CHRISTIAN SUN office, Elon College, N. C., and this material will be furnished to you. The time is short for this canvass. Decide next Sunday to do something about it, and work on it during the coming week.

Another way you can help your church paper is by sending in items of interest from your church. We are always anxious to hear what you are doing in your local group. Share your plans and programs with others.

BETHEL HAS SUNRISE SERVICE.

The young people of Bethel Christian Church (Valley of Virginia) sponsored a Sunrise Service on Easter Sunday morning at six-thirty o'clock, with Rev. F. C. Lester as guest speaker. Despite the unfavorable weather, people from the neighborhood gathered to hear the inspirational Easter message. The invocation and scripture were given by young people and a vested young people's choir rendered several Easter anthems. This choir was under the direction of Thurston DeMasters.

After the service a Fellowship Breakfast was served to those present by the young people's class under the direction of the teacher, K. B. Dofflemeyer. This was held in the basement of the church, which was decorated in keeping with the occasion. A fine attitude of fellowship prevailed. Those who wished to express their gratitude for the risen Christ were given the opportunity to place a gift for Missions in an Easter basket. The class wishes to express its thanks to everyone helping to make this a success.

REPORTER.

MISS LUCY M. ELDRIDGE.
Mission Speaker.

This week Miss Lucy M. Eldredge, Dayton, Ohio, is the guest speaker at the missionary rallies of the Woman's Conference of North Carolina. Last Saturday she met with the young people of Eastern Virginia in their rally at Richmond, and Saturday of this week she will share with the North Carolina young people in their annual meeting in Reidsville. Miss Eldredge is a graduate of Elon College, and was the first field worker for the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention. She is now Associate Secretary of Young People for the Congregational and Christian Churches.

MISS ELDRIDGE TO SPEAK TO YOUNG PEOPLE.

The young people in our churches in North Carolina are urged to go to Reidsville next Saturday (April 6) in order to hear Miss Lucy Eldredge. The meeting will open at 2:15 with registration (10c). The Sanford young people will have charge of the worship service. Miss Lucy Eldredge will speak at 3:00 on practical phases of Pilgrim Fellowship in our local churches and will answer any questions you may have about problems in your local group. Following busi-

TEACHING ALL PEOPLE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR APRIL 14, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 4:23;
II Timothy 2:2.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Knowledge of the Holy One—Jer. 31:33, 34.

Tuesday—The Great Commission—Matt. 28:19, 20.

Wednesday—Christ, the Great Teacher—Matt. 5:1, 2; 7:28, 29.

Thursday—Teaching at Antioch—Acts 11:19-26.

Friday—Gospel Teaching of Right Living—Titus 2:11-15.

Saturday—The Apostolic Message—I Tim. 2:3-7.

In this topic, we are concerned with educational missions. In all missionary fields a great deal of emphasis is placed upon educational missions. Classes are formed and schools organized where converts are made. Local study groups, Sunday schools, boarding schools for both boys and girls, academies and secondary schools, colleges and seminaries, are some of the more important educational enterprises carried on in missionary fields. In missionary centers, Christian natives of desirable spirit and ability are given special training to serve as teachers and pastors in local parishes, usually under the supervision of experienced missionaries.

Have some experienced person (a missionary if possible) explain "educational missions." A discussion may follow.

Give a number of individuals an opportunity to make statements on the subject: "One lesson I have learned from the life and teaching of Jesus."

For Short Talks—

1. What is Christian education?
2. The influence of mission schools.
3. How educational needs differ in mission fields.

Questions for Discussion—

1. What can our Christian Endeavor do to help a mission school maintained by our denomination?
2. If all public education suddenly ceased in the United States, what would be the education responsibility of the church?
3. Can the education program of the church be improved? How?

Suggested Hymns—

- "We Would See Jesus."
"Open My Eyes That I May See."
"Lord, Speak to Me That I May Speak."

Sunday School Lesson

AMOS PLEADS FOR JUSTICE.

LESSON I—APRIL 7, 1940.

GOLDEN TEXT: Hate the evil, and love the good, and establish justice in the gate.—Amos 5:15.

LESSON: Amos 5, 7.

Amos was a "country preacher." He himself said that he was neither a prophet or the son of a prophet, but when one reads portions of his sermons as recorded in the book that bears his name, one gets the impression that he was a first-class preacher. He was a herdsman and a dresser of sycamore trees. He had spent much time out in the country, with time for thought and reflection. He had observed closely. And he had an ear and a heart that were very sensitive to the divine voice and impulse. On occasions he had gone to the city, especially to Bethel which was the center of worship for a part of Israel, to sell his produce. There he had been greatly impressed by what he had seen. There was injustice, bribery, oppression, dishonesty in high places, luxury, and immorality. At the same time there was an elaborate ritual and many religious ceremonies. This keen-eyed, brave-hearted son of the soil saw through the sham and the shame of it all, the incongruity of such meaningless forms in the presence of such flagrant injustice, and as he mused over it all the fire burned within him. He became convinced that the "word of the Lord" had come to him, and he set forth for Bethel, arriving there on one of the feast days when religious ceremonies were at their height.

His method of approach was a masterpiece. He started out by calling attention to the sins of the nations or people who were enemies of Israel, and brought home in a devastating way the impending doom that awaited them as a result of their corporate and national sins. In all this he had the "Amens" of the people of Israel. Then suddenly he turned to Israel itself and showed the sins and the sham of that nation. Nowhere else in the Bible is there a more subtle approach and a more sure hit than here. Modern ministers and teachers might well study Amos' method.

If one reads the verses that compose today's lesson as printed or better still reads the entire two chapters, he will find that Amos was very specific, as well as fearless in denouncing the sins of Israel, both leaders and people. They "hate him that reproveth in the gate;" they would brook no interference with those who would rebuke them for their sins or turn them from their evil ways. "They abhor him that speaketh uprightly"—they were so bent on evil that just to know that there were those whose word could be trusted, or would speak uprightly, brought loathing to their souls. "Forasmuch therefore as ye trample upon the poor, and take exactions of him of wheat"—they oppressed the poor and squeezed the last pence from them, grinding them down and keeping them in poverty. They had done this so that they could live in houses of hewn stone, places of luxury, and so that they could have large and profitable vineyards—but all in vain for Amos saw that a nation that did such things could not endure—it was to be broken up.

"How mighty are your sins"—Ye that afflict the just—Wronging those who tried to do what was right and fair; "that take a bribe"—ill fares the nation in which men and women in offices of public trust can be bribed or bought; "and that turn aside the needy in the gate from their right"—the gate was the place where justice was dispensed, where wrongs were righted, where grievances were adjusted, where men had a right to be heard. These words indicate that the social and the national life was rotten to the core.

The message was direct. Seek good, not evil, that ye may live. Even the prophet living nearly nine hundred years before Christ saw that true religion was positive, not negative, its genius is not so much in what men do not do as in what they do. "Hate the evil, and love the good." As a matter of fact many of us rather love the evil, and dislike, even if we do not hate the good. And that is one reason why there is so little joy in our lives.

We cannot love the world and the things of the world and have the joy and peace of the Holy Spirit in our lives. "Establish justice in the gate"—no amount of splendid ceremony would be a substitute for dealing justly with one's fellowmen.

And then in a climactic utterance Amos shows that any religion is vain that does not issue in ethical conduct. In dramatic form he impersonates Jehovah, acting as His mouthpiece, and declaring that feasts and solemn assemblies, burnt offerings and sacrifices, peace offerings and meal offerings, songs and instrumental music—these and all other forms and ceremonies and rites and services were meaningless, yea even worse, unless the heart was right, unless one treated one's fellowman justly. Here was a new emphasis upon the spirit of religion. Here was the beginning of a new emphasis upon the ethical content of religion. Here was another milestone in the long journey along which the Hebrew people passed on their way to the discovery of the perfect moral character of Jehovah, and the basic spiritual nature of the religion of Jehovah. Here was another of the many statements in the Bible that a man's relationship with God depends upon his relationship with his fellowmen.

ness sessions, there will be a Fellowship Supper at 6:00, the price of which will be 35c. The evening service will consist of installation of officers and a talk by Miss Eldredge who will take the group on "A Trip Around the World." The Reidsville Christian Church is on Montgomery Street. The meeting will adjourn at eight o'clock so those coming long distances will be able to get home in good season. We will be looking for you in Reidsville!

HOLLAND YOUNG PEOPLE.

The first quarterly report of the Pilgrim Fellowship of the Holland Christian Church sent in by Miss Edith Jones reveals a splendid type of work being done. Two regular meetings were held each month and the programs were based on the situation in China. Three social meetings were also held and the average attendance at all these meetings was twelve. The active membership of this group is also twelve, so the attendance is perfect. Ten dollars was contributed to the China Friendship Project and the apportionment was sent in full, with a nice increase.

During the second quarter some very interesting meetings were held, also. The book of John was taught and studied, and each one made a special effort to learn more about the Bible. Memory work was stressed and the books of the Bible were learned. A good number of the members attended the meeting at the Suffolk Christian Church and heard Dr. Henry D. Gray discuss the problems of the Pilgrim Fellowship.

FAITH IS REASONABLE.

"Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."—Heb. 11:1.

It has been said that "this is an age of reason. We walk by sight, not faith—faith is a remnant of ignorance and superstition, and only narrow-minded, superstitious, religious cranks still believe in such outmoded doctrines.

The fact is that faith is shown in everything else in the universe except God. For example, the locomotive engineer climbs into his cab—he shows faith in his engine, in the track ahead, the foreman who built the track, faith in the signals, faith in the electric system, faith in the agent who hands him his orders, and behind him the passengers show faith in the engineer and the entire railroad system.

The same obtains with the captain of a ship at sea, with the driver of an automobile, with the farmer who plants his seed—he has faith in the seed, the earth, the sunshine, and the rain. The city man has faith in the farmer to supply his vegetables. The patient who goes to surgery has faith in the surgeon, the student in the teacher, the business man in his merchandise and his customers; and so on in every phase of life, faith is absolutely indispensable to life or to activity of any kind. In fact the infidel has faith in everything but God and he depends upon God for the sunrise, the nightfall and something to eat and wear.

Have faith in God. It is the source of trust, the foundation of hope, the antidote of sorrow, the cure of worry, the light that guides a Christian past lawlessness, over misfortune, through fear; and he who tries to destroy it is doomed for a wreck ahead.

Prayer—Our Father, plant genuine faith in our hearts, implicit and complete. Amen.

TUESDAY.

ON THE BEAM.

"Without faith it is impossible to please God."—Heb. 11:6.

"When you trust you do not worry. When you worry you do not trust." Those who show faith in everything else except God are like the aviator who is flying blind. Those who trust in divinity are riding softly on the beam. Their goal is in sight.

Prayer—O Lord, our Father, the source of all wisdom and guidance, endow us with wisdom and give us Thy guidance in all our thinking and in all that we do. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

STILL KILLING JESUS.

"But ye denied the Holy One. . . And killed the Prince of Life."—Acts 3:14, 15.

Goodspeed interprets this text thus: to disown Jesus "kills the very source of life." "Repent," says he, "and turn to God, to have your sins wiped out, and happier times will come from the presence of the Lord."

However, the death of Jesus was the world's greatest discovery. Jesus could not be killed. Through that death man has learned of love, heaven, and the eternal realities.

Prayer—Our Father, we love Thee. We would love Thee always. Forbid that any act or thought of ours should ever crucify our Lord and Savior. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GREAT STRENGTH.

"In quietness shall be your strength."—Isaiah 30:15.

When in a storm at sea the passengers are anxious and excited. The crew is quiet and orderly. The captain on the bridge is quietly giving orders distinctly. The crew, trained for its job, is quiet, every man at his post of duty, obeying every command. The passengers are assembled at their stations and caused to keep quiet and ready for any emergency.

In life, can we do less than this for our Lord, the Captain of life and our souls?

Prayer—Pray as you feel.

FRIDAY.

YOUR GETHSEMANE.

"As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous, therefore, and repent."—Rev. 3:19.

A friend tells us of the following story:

"Four years ago Bill—a young friend of mine—was one of those fortunate 'well-to-do' people. He was happily married, and blessed with two splendid children; life's fullness seemed to shine upon him. Material possessions came his way—money, home, cars, luxuries of all sorts. A few days ago I met him again—in the tuberculosis ward of a charity hospital! His home, his money, his luxuries, had long before been liquidated. Since he had been hospitalized, his brooding wife had died a tragic death, and now his children were many miles away; and he was suffering intense physical pain from spinal and bone complications incident to his disease."

Tragedy upon tragedy was the lot of this man. But he came to know that there is purpose in everything, and in his bitter trials he learned the meaning of life, and he learned to know God.

Prayer—O God, teach us how to pass through our sickness, our trials and our sorrows, strengthened and purified. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE LESSON OF SUBMISSION.

"This is life eternal, that they might know Thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent."—John 17:3.

After all, life eternal is to know God and Jesus Christ. If the getting

MAKING THE MOST OF OUR RELIGION.

"And He called unto Him the twelve, and began to send them forth by two and two; and He gave them power over unclean spirits. . . . And they went out and preached that men should repent. And they cast out many devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them."—Mark 6:7, 12, 13.

"And He said unto them, This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting."—Mark 9:29.

The disciples had followed the Master for several years, and they had learned of him many things. They had watched him teach, heard him preach, and had felt the power of his spirit over sin and disease. But it was to them a very new business, indeed, to be permitted themselves to go out under his instruction to do the things they had seen him do. How happy they must have been when they saw things really happening in their needy, sin-cursed world. We are told that when they came back to him they came with great rejoicing.

A little while later one day Jesus and three of those same disciples went up onto the mount of transfiguration. Nine of them were left in the valley below. While they were waiting there a distressed father came to the disciples with his sick, and seemingly incurable, boy. He had evidently come to Jesus, but finding the disciples, he presented his problem to them. The disciples were dismayed to learn that they had no power over the malady with which the boy was possessed.

Jesus and the inner circle of three soon returned, and the distressed father presented his sick son to Jesus, who promptly healed him. Shortly after the disciples asked him why they could not heal the boy, and Jesus replied, "This kind can come forth by nothing but by prayer, and fasting." And thereupon I have come to the words of my text: "By nothing else but . . ."

These disciples had been making much of their religion. They had been following Jesus and had done well. They are to be commended for their good works. What could the world do without the average type of followers of the Christ! They help to keep whatever of Christianity there is alive in the world. Our church here finds the average church member an inspiration and a great help. There is something mighty fine about those who make up the Christian masses. Most of us belong to their number. I wish to pay them my greatest respect.

But ever and anon there is the fellow who is willing to step out just a bit ahead of the crowd. He is the supreme benefactor of his race, and generation. He hears the call of the hero in his heart, and answers. Forgetting all else, he answers. Thinking of the call only and the opportunity to serve greatly, he answers. He is the fellow that comes to the place where only some supreme surrender of his life will suffice, and surrenders it. He is the fellow who says:

I'm tired of sailing my little boat,
Inside the harbor's bar,
I want to go out where the big ships float—
Out on the deep where the big ones are;
If my frail craft should prove too light
For the storms that sweep the billows o'er,
I'd rather go down in the stirring fight
Than to browse to death by the sheltered shore!

"And when he was come into the house his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we . . .? And he said unto them, This kind cometh forth by nothing else but by prayer and fasting." It is that something extra that the Christ has always challenged men to give.

In college we were all very fond of Carl Miller. I can see him now with his fun-loving, serious-mindedness as he went in and out among the fellows at college. He was not an athlete but somehow he belonged to all that was done in athletics. He was not impressive in his scholarship, but every professor liked him, and his work showed respect for his opportunities. He was not a beau brummel, but he always had plenty of friends among the co-eds. He was not especially religious, sometimes rather irreligious, but you could always be sure of two things—his sincerity, and his reverence. We all liked him. He expected to follow his father in business in Lexington, N. C., when his college days were over. Things bid fair for a fine career, a good business, and a well-lived life. But one day in 1917 his Uncle Sam asked the unusually great thing of him, namely, that he would forget it all, and lay his life upon the altar of democracy. He answered. Several months later in one of his letters to me he said: "We started out a few weeks ago with fourteen planes, only four are now left; and I am aloft until it is over, or until . . ." He sleeps somewhere in Europe today, "aloft until!" He is an unknown soldier to you, but to us he was well-known and loved; and to his father and mother more precious than life itself. Heretofore he had been walking in the paths of the usual, but he deigned to step out of those paths at the call of a high ideal to lay his life upon the altar of the unusual.

There is the picture of Jesus in that. There is the cross there. In the supreme way that is what Jesus did upon the cross. Now the world is calling to men and women, and young of that knowledge takes one through bitterness, is it not worth it?

A greater lesson than that of knowing God is that of submission to His will. This lesson also is learned in suffering. In His agony He prayed alone. And His prayer has been the guiding light for all who have followed Him. Said He, "Not as I will, but as Thou wilt." Thus prayed the Son of God. To Him the Father's will was supreme. And herein lies our only way to endure suffering.

Prayer—Our Father, give us unquestionable acceptance of Thy will, complete trust in Thy love and guidance, and peace that passes understanding. Amen.

SUNDAY.

A FORTIFIED SOUL.

"I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God."—Rom. 8:38.

None who accepts his lot in life as from a loving Father has been unthankful. Through that consecrated experience life becomes richer, fuller and more purposeful. It is thus he discovers not only God, and submission to His will, but also the love of God. Thus fortified, no calamity can successfully assail one's heart.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee for the blessed experience that cannot be shaken. Keep us steadfast in that faith forever. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

And still they come. Last Sunday a beautiful little girl came from near Liberty Springs Church in the Eastern Virginia Conference to live in the Christian Orphanage. She had lost her mother and her grandmother and it was necessary for her to come to us. She fitted right in and was taken in charge by two little girls of her size and age. She seems to be happy in her new home and we hope that she will get along all right. We have another urgent application to take several children from one family. We will make a thorough investigation of the case this week. From time immemorial fathers and mothers have died and left little dependent and homeless children. They are still dying and will continue to die. Little children will still be left homeless and dependent. What a fine thing it is for the church to come to their rescue and give them a home, training, and a chance in life.

What is more precious than a little child? Silver and gold are not to be compared to the value of a little child. Rubies and all the precious stones cannot compare with it. These jewels are lifeless and will perish. But the soul of the child will live forever.

When the late J. B. Duke set aside his great endowment for the benefit of humanity, he had this to say: "I have included orphans in an effort to help those who are most unable to help themselves, a worthy cause, productive of truly beneficial results in which all good citizens should have an abiding interest. While in my opinion nothing can take the place of a home and its influence, every effort should be made to safeguard and develop these wards of society."

Don't forget the child, the motherless child, the dependent child, when the offering is taken in your Sunday school for the Christian Orphanage.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

HAPPY HOME.

The four Holy Week services at Happy Home were perhaps a revelation to some, and a reminder to others of the greatest event in history.

A huge lighted cross placed over the front entrance looked inviting to passers-by. Plans for the impressive communion service, "In the Shadow of the Cross," were conceived by our pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, as was the Good Friday service. On Saturday night the young people and members of the primary department presented a pageant, "The Way of the Cross," instilling in the minds of those who attended a clearer conception of the meaning of Easter.

In the near future the Woman's Mission Society will present a playlet, "Aunt Tillie Learns to Tithe."

a mother trains the child to walk. They should be trained to be Christian in every phase of life. They should be trained to talk so that their language should be the language of Christ and of love. They should be trained to read. It is a pitiful story of the reading matter in our homes of today. People read little. Very little religious literature is read or even found in our homes. They should be trained to serve, to minister to the sick, to win others to Christ, to give and to lead. Evangelize the world of which we are a part and your church will be different and new."

The following delegates were elected to the Southern Convention which meets in Greensboro, N. C., on April 30-May 2: Ministers: R. A. Whitten, R. D. Coulter, R. L. Williamson, R. E. Newton, M. L. Weekley, W. J. Andes. Laymen and Laywomen: Mrs. K. H. Sale, E. Floyd Showalter, R. Roy Hosaflook, J. C. Bradford, Eugenia Snow and R. O. Rothgeb.

Rev. R. E. Newton of Florida was received into the Conference pending his receipt of his letter from that Conference. At present he is serving acceptably the church in Page County and in the Fort Valley. All of his churches spoke words of appreciation for his services thus far and of encouragement for a great future. He spoke on "Stewardship and the Church" emphasizing the tithing method of giving and the importance of regular giving.

The writer spoke on "The Church on Record." The church has a written record in history. Some of the record is fine and other parts of it are not so good. But through the ages the church has recorded itself on the hearts of mankind. This has not been easy to destroy. The church records its hope and life in its leader, Jesus Christ and from Him comes the power of victory and of life. When we let Him pilot us through all of life, we shall see His face and then everything shall be all right for we have seen the Pilot's face.

The Conference went on record as opposing the President's action when he sent a representative to the Pope and desired President Roosevelt to rescind his action.

The church delegates spoke very encouragingly of their work. Misfortunes were seen to have happened here and there but they all felt that they would do their best to make their work more effective.

people, who will dare to do something noble and worthwhile for the ideals of the church, to go a step further than the mere mediocre and usual. The challenge was never greater than now. It has perhaps been more dramatic, but today the call for giving the best is before every man.

"By nothing else but," let us see how it works in practical life. To the rich young ruler it was "sell all thy goods;" to these nine disciples on that particular occasion it was "prayer and fasting;" to Zaccheus it was restore, restore; to Simon Peter it was "feed my sheep;" to the woman at court it was "go and sin no more;" to the disciples it was "go ye into all the world, and preach my gospel to every creature."

God has some call of service to every man that will bring out the best there is in him. Albert Schweitzer had a song in his soul, and the touch of music in his hands. To play before the great of Europe was but part of the routine with him. But how would he find life's fullest joy? By the plaudits of men, or by obedience to some divine, inner urge and call to duty? The answer is a medical missionary in Africa working away daily at helping to heal the open sore of the world.

Today it may be to one a deeper consecration to church attendance; to another, teaching a Sunday school class; to another, the decision to preach the unsearchable riches of his truth; to another, the thrill of a life in mission fields; to another, the giving of the title of all he possesses to the Lord, to still another, witnessing among his friends to the power of the Christ in his own life—but there is something that to you is the step out of the mediocre into the fullest measure of usefulness in God's Kingdom. The Christ is calling for you, and when he calls the answer is fullest allegiance to him, and supreme service to others. Who of us today will step out upon his promises, and give the fullest measure of devotion to him?

great need which she had seen. That night Rebecca could hardly go to sleep for thinking about those boys and girls. She decided that the next day she would tell her friends about those boys and girls and get them to help her keep Lent this way. They went to Brambleton, too, and wanted to help. They did help many boys and girls to get well.

"Mother, when I grow up I want to be just like Helen Sousa and help all of the poor and needy people just like she is doing!" This is what Rebecca told her mother after keeping Lent this year.

"There is no more sure tie between friends than when they are united in their objects and wishes."

"A Scotch minister said that the playing of bagpipes would drive rats from the house. It will also drive people away."

"Democracy will itself accomplish the salutary universal change from delusive to real, and make a new blessed world of us by and by."

SOME SUBSCRIBERS SAY:

"I enjoy my paper very much and look forward to it coming each week." Burlington.

"I can't remember when 'The Christian Sun' was not in our home and feel I can't do without it." Virgilina.

"I think 'The Christian Sun' is one of the best papers published and is a great help to all who read it."—Alabama.

"My sincere hope is that 'The Christian Sun' will never fail to reach my home. We thoroughly enjoy every page and when we have finished it is passed on to others in the community." Isle of Wight.

"Just a word to let you know how much we are enjoying 'The Christian Sun.' It brings warm rays of Southern atmosphere to our home each week. It is superior to most of my denominational papers." Illinois.

"I don't want to miss a single copy as it means so much to me. I get a lot of good out of the sermons and editorials, Sunday school lessons, and in fact everything in 'The Christian Sun' is beneficial. May it shine in more homes as the days go by." New Hill.

"I have enjoyed 'The Christian Sun' more than anything I've ever spent $2.00 for. My subscription has expired and at this time I'm not able to renew it, but I'm seeing one of my good neighbors to see if we can take it together as I want to keep on being a reader of it."—Greensboro.

"I became a reader of 'The Christian Sun' while a member of the Newport Christian Church (Valley of Virginia Conference). Ten years ago I came to Aliquippa. Since then I have had my letter transferred to the First Methodist Episcopal Church at this place. I shall always have a keen interest in the church 'back home' and only through the medium of your paper can I keep up to date with what's going on."—Pennsylvania.

"I have been a constant reader of 'The Christian Sun' since a small boy, and have been a subscriber for about fifty-five years. Dr. W. B. Wellons was the editor when I first became acquainted with it. Reference to its files of fifty years, and more, ago will reveal the great part it played in the founding of Elon College and our missionary enterprises in the South. I sincerely hope that the Convention may be able to develop some plan by which to continue its great service."—Pennsylvania.

"Enclosed find $2.00 for 'The Christian Sun.' It has been a regular visitor to me for thirty, or more, years. I intend taking it as long as I can see to read it. I have prayed if it is the Lord's will to see to read it as long as I live. He answers prayer. I wish every member of our churches would take it. I have found sermons and other articles in 'The Christian Sun' that one piece alone would pay for the year's subscription."—Cedar Grove.

"Please find check for my renewal. We enjoy reading our church paper very much. Wishing you much success."—Biscoe.

"I enjoy 'The Christian Sun,' especially your articles, the Sunday School Lesson by Hardy, and the Sermons by John Truitt."—Henderson.

"I enjoy reading 'The Christian Sun.' It has been coming in our home over fifty years. It was one of mother's wedding gifts."—Burlington.

"I am enclosing $2.00 in advance to pay for 'The Christian Sun.' Surely do enjoy reading same. Wish every member of our church would take it."—Alabama.

"Enclosed please find $2.00 for my renewal to 'The Christian Sun.' My subscription expired today and I can't afford to be without my paper even for a week, as I miss it as I do a member of my family."—Franklinton.

"I am glad to be able at last to send money for my 'Christian Sun.' Don't know that I can be able to sit on the wayside to wait for the mail as I am very old and sensitive to the cold. Best wishes for a Merry Christmas to you and all 'Christian Sun' readers."—Nathalie.

"Enclosed you will find check for $4.00 for my subscription to 'The Christian Sun' which expired a year ago. I am very sorry I have let it run so long as I have enjoyed my church paper so much. I have been paralyzed for three years and it has been quite a struggle to keep up my payments, but just don't see how to give it up."—Windsor.

"I have been sick for five months and have not been able to do any work at all. But I do find joy and sunshine in the weekly visit of 'The Christian Sun.' I will do all I can that 'The Christian Sun' may shine in our homes, hearts, and lives."—Den-dron.

"My subscription to 'The Christian Sun' is past due. I thank you for continuing to send the issues. I shall penalize myself by sending you a check for three subscriptions—my renewal and two new ones. Really it is not as a penalty but an interest I have in seeing 'The Christian Sun' continue to exist."—Petersburg.

"I am enclosing $2.00 for my renewal to 'The Christian Sun.' It seems to me that I need my church papers to keep in touch with our work among missionaries, our institutions, and all general interests. Long ago when I united with the church, I took our church paper 'The Herald of Gospel Liberty.' Then after the merger I took the 'Congregationalist-Christian' and the 'Advance' and our other denominational papers, and I don't know much either. If more Christians would read their own church papers there would be a better understanding, a heartier cooperation, and a more generous support of our projects and institutions all around, I believe."—Maine.

THE KEY MAN

An Editorial

The late Dr. C. H. Rowland is often quoted as saying that the pastor is the "key man." Dr. Rowland was right. The minister who is the pastor of a church is the key to that church. He opens or closes the door to success. He brings peace or discord. He inspires or becomes a dead weight. He leads forward or retards progress. He is the key man.

A pastor is more than a preacher. He is the leader of a church. He is a business man to direct the affairs of an organization composed of many people. Education, finance, and religion are his specialties. Boards, committees and officers look to him for guidance. The sick seek his service, and the young want his counsel and friendship. Both men and women will follow his leadership if he is wise enough to win them. Unless he can lead he is compelled to lose.

The pastor of a church is a servant of God and an agent of the denomination. His conscience must always be clear before God to whom he owes unflinching allegiance. But he is a member of Conference, Convention, Council. These human relations are also binding. The Church is the Body of Christ, and we are all members of that Body. "If one member suffers, all suffer." No minister has a right to take a church that is part of the larger group, a church founded, built and brought to maturity without his aid, and make it over simply to please his own whims if in so doing the denomination must suffer because of that change.

Without the loyal cooperation of the ministers the Southern Convention cannot support its aged ministers, care for orphan children, train youth, direct leadership education, build churches, send missionaries, or publish papers. The Convention has been fortunate through the years in having pastors who would never rest until their churches met the standards set.

Right now our ministers are being called on by the Southern Convention to demonstrate this same fine loyalty. They are asked to double the subscription list to "The Christian Sun" by the end of this month, or at least to do enough to indicate that this goal can be reached. Easter was not a good time for a large missionary offering, but the missionary needs are urgent and the success of the offering depends largely upon the ministers. Our college is struggling desperately to pay out of debt by the coming commencement, but if it does the enthusiasm of the ministers will be needed for the campaign.

Brethren of the Ministry, these spring months are testing your loyalty and your ability to lead perhaps more than you know. Members of your own church and of other churches across the country are watching. They are anxious for your churches to succeed, and they are saying that you are the key man.

Will you open the door of success? The old lock may be rusty, but it will turn. When the Convention checks on subscriptions, missions, and college, what will be your record? Success?

NEWS AND VIEWS

A new subscription secured by each subscriber will assure the present subscribers of a fine CHRISTIAN SUN for the future.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN extends sincere sympathy to Mrs. J. E. McCauley, whose mother, Mrs. Preston Hollingsworth, died recently at her home in Clinton, N. C.

Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Brittle announce the birth of a daughter, Martha Sue, on March 16, 1940, at Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va. Both mother and daughter are doing nicely. Congratulations, and best wishes!

President L. E. Smith is very busy looking up the friends of Elon College and talking to them about clearing the college of debt. Surely he will find many friends of the college in our churches. It is our college, and the debts are ours. The best we can do is none too hard.

Rev. B. J. Earp, our mission pastor in Carroll County, Va., announces a new schedule for the summer. Services are held on the first and third Sundays as follows: Elk Spur, 10:00 A. M.; Ivy Hill, 11:30 A. M.; Rocky Ford, 2:00 P. M. Visitors are always welcome.

Should the officers of the church, Sunday school, and missionary society read the church paper? Do you think it would pay the church to see that they receive it? Many of them do not now receive it, and surely they would be better workers if they were regular readers of their church paper.

A mimeographed book containing the reports of all boards and committees is being prepared and will be mailed to delegates of the Convention in time for study before leaving home. In this way the delegates will know what is to be considered and can really give thought to the various matters of business.

Rev. R. A. Whitten has furnished THE CHRISTIAN SUN with some of his poems entitled "Along Life's Way" to be sold for subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Anyone buying a book for one dollar will thereby give THE CHRISTIAN SUN to a shut-in for six months. We have only a limited number of the books, so if you want to share in this good work and get a copy of the book, please send your order to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Elon College, N. C., at once.

This week, in Washington, D. C., the editor is attending his first meeting of the Religious Press. As a member of the Prudential Committee he is also attending a meeting of representatives of the denominations that do missionary work in the Philippine Islands. Several leaders have come from the Philippines for the Washington meeting where cooperative work will be thoroughly discussed and where plans will be made for an aggressive movement in the Church of the Philippines.

JOIN WITH US IN READING THE BIBLE

From our Richmond Church comes a card outlining the services for the month of April. The minister, Rev. R. L. House, speaks at each of the morning services and on two Sunday evenings. The program is varied however by a motion picture, "The Life of Christ," which was shown the first Sunday and on the third Sunday the large Sunday school orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Ernest Carr, will give one of its semi-sacred concerts.

ATTENTION, CONVENTION DELEGATES!

The First Congregational-Christian Church, Greensboro, will furnish lodging and breakfast for delegates to the Southern Convention. Those desiring to be entertained will please notify W. E. Wisseman, 315 N. Edgeworth Street, Greensboro, N. C.

FINANCE COMMITTEE MEETING.

The Committee on Finance of the Southern Convention is called to meet Tuesday, 10:00 A. M., April 30, at the First Congregational-Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C. The members of the committee are: Messrs. A. H. McIver, H. V. Simpson, K. B. Johnson, Prof. L. L. Vaughan, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, Rev. Robert Lee House, and Rev. J. H. Lightbourne. If there are those in the Convention who have matters to present to this committee, it is requested you now write the chairman, or else plan to appear before the committee at the above stated meeting. If members of the committee cannot attend, the chairman would appreciate a notification to that effect.

JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE,
Chairman.

NOMINATE YOUR CANDIDATE.

Perhaps it never has been done, but it could be done. It might even be a good thing to do. There is no law of the Medes and the Persians against it so far as this writer has read. It would seem to be good democratic practice. If you are willing to try it, go ahead.

The Southern Convention voted at its last session that hereafter the president and vice-president should not serve for more than two consecutive terms. Since the president has served that long, it will be necessary to elect a president for the convention.

The office of promotional secretary was set up at the last convention and a person elected to that office. While details were not worked out, it stands to reason that the person elected is not expected to serve for life. It is an important office, and careful thought should be given to the selection of the officer.

"The Christian Sun" was founded in 1844. From that date to this the Convention has had the responsibility of electing an editor for the paper. The present editor was elected four years ago. There is no reason why he should continue beyond this term of office.

Nominations for all officers of the Convention are usually made by a nominating committee. "The Christian Sun" is suggesting that those interested nominate their candidates through this paper. That will give the nominating committee something to begin thinking about. Why not try it? It might work well. What is the paper for if it isn't to express your ideas? Nominate your candidates, especially for the abovenamed offices.

GAIN OR LOSS?

A recent issue of "United States News" magazine shows in graphic fashion the tremendous increase in taxes collected from alcoholic beverages during recent years. During 1934, the first full year after prohibition, the taxes amounted to $594,000,000.00. Last year the amount was $1,030,000,000.00.

For those who are interested only in the collection of taxes this may be a very pleasing bit of information. But for those who know what those figures really mean, there is sadness and grief written into every dollar.

The increase in taxes means increase in consumption of intoxicating liquors. That means that more mothers and children go hungry while the man who should support them spends his earnings for liquors. It means that more boys and girls are learning to drink. It means that parents who save and sacrifice to send their children to college sometimes find that those sons and daughters have thrown dignity to the winds, have spent their money for liquors, and have brought disgrace upon the family by being drunk.

And it means that drunken drivers cause the slaughter of innocents on the highways. "If you drink, don't drive" is good advice but those who drink do not heed good advice or they would take to heart the much finer saying: "For your soul and body's sake, do not drink."

Liquor dealers are said to be getting alarmed about the activities of Methodists in teaching young people just what alcohol does to the body. They are afraid that repeal is being threatened. Let's hope that it is. And let's wish that it had been before the newspapers gave a recent tragic story of an Epworth Leaguer who went to her death in a drunken debauch.

Teach the young people that the Bible is right about wine and its relatives, that the way to health and happiness is not the way of the drinker. Teach it while you can, before drink gets its hold on the growing person.

CHURCH FINANCE.

Most ministers say to their churches that the Bible (our rule of faith and practice) teaches that Christians should give to the church a tenth of their income so they will be good stewards of God. But the finances of no church in our fellowship are set up on the basis of tithing so far as this writer knows. The preaching and practice do not seem to be the same.

In fact there seems to be no real plan of finance in most of our churches. Just as little as possible is said about money lest the people fail to come to the services. This policy does not seem to strengthen the churches, and may well be called into account for the downward trend in contributions to all our churches. It would seem that our churches are just as able to contribute now as they were years ago when they gave much more than they do today.

Would it not be well for the Convention to give some attention to this matter of church finance?

OUR NEW MINISTERS.

Today there are ten ministers working within the bounds of the Southern Convention who were not members of the Convention two years ago. We need two others, and must find them soon. Since there are only about seventy-five active ministers, this means quite a large addition.

Some of these men come from Christian Church background, and some from the Congregational side of our family. But several come to us from other denominations. Most of them are not familiar with the history and program of the Southern Convention. Through the years there seems to have been little effort made to initiate these new-comers into the fellowship. The Promotional Secretary has tried to do something along this line. If that office is discontinued, will some other method be tried to train these new men to serve well in our group?

Should the Convention plan for such supervision and training?

A growing church is a giving church, and a giving church is likely to be a growing church. "The liberal soul shall grow fat." So will a church.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN has presented a number of articles recently on "Convention Problems." These articles represent the opinions of people in the various sections of Virginia and North Carolina. A study of these statements leads one to observe that the major emphasis is placed upon giving or raising money. There are many who advance the idea that if people would tithe, or give in accordance with the Biblical doctrine of Stewardship, the major problems of our churches would disappear. "A sufficient amount of money," they say, "would put Elon College, the Orphanage, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the Department of Missions, Religious Education, and the other enterprises in good shape and relieve a perplexing situation."

Money has a large place in the work of the kingdom and the plans of individual progress. But its importance has been exaggerated. Giving is imperative and essential, but it is not the primary function or duty of church members. The biggest problem in the church today, is not giving, but living. When personal living reaches the high standard set by Jesus Christ, personal giving will not be a great problem. Every pastor will observe that a great revival always increases church attendance and helps in balancing the budget of the church.

Personal living is the greatest problem in the church today. And that problem is not confined to any class. It begins in the pulpit. When psychology takes the place of theology and humanism substitutes its fallacies for Christianity moral standards are lowered, and spiritual values fall below par. It is not a matter of choosing between John Calvin or Barth as an authority on ethical and moral standards of life. Neither of these great men has offered the final word in their respective fields of investigation. The terrible thing about the present situation is the fact that certain educational tendencies have weakened the authority of the Bible in the minds of many leaders in church and state. What has happened in Germany has come to pass, in a lesser degree, in the United States, namely, a tendency to set up human standards as a substitute for the teachings of Jesus Christ. We have not witnessed the full implication of these tendencies, but the harvest is certain and inevitable. A secular Sabbath, a money-mad church and a wild scramble for first consideration in the distribution of donations and apportionments will pauperize any denomination.

Making a living is not one's most difficult task. That is made more difficult by a desire to buy or spend more than one can pay for, or earn. Living a consistent, holy life is one's most challenging objective. At the same time it is one's greatest need. That is the treasure which is eternal. Usually a great church convention does not have time to give much thought to this great essential. A devotional service may have a place on the program. But it is not considered, as primary in importance, either by those who plan the program, or those who use the time assigned. But the devotional life may miss its objective if it fails to include a purpose to carry this spirit of Christian fellowship into the whole area of personal living. One must learn to practice the preaching by incorporating the Word of God in secular living. Our local churches should be inspired to "set thine house in order." Moral standards must be raised. Electric lights, hard-surfaced roads, high powered automobiles and other inventions have transformed our homes and our industries. But too many people are living, spiritually, in the "horse and buggy age"—and worse than that. Applied Christianity should keep pace with applied electricity. Ten days of prayer during this month would regenerate and rejuvenate the next session of the Convention to be held in Greensboro. We need that more than we need money.

I. W. JOHNSON.

AFTER HIGH SCHOOL, WHAT?

In a few brief weeks hundreds and thousands of American youth will be completing their courses in high schools. They have come through the grades and have been successful in meeting requirements of high school curriculums for graduation. High school courses are much broader and far more complete than in years past. A diploma from a fully accredited high school today gives a student advantages almost equal to a college diploma when Elon College was founded.

While the curriculum of study for high schools has been expanding and advancing, requirements of the individual in the trades, professions, and society as a whole have become more exacting. Better trained and more alert minds are required if the individual is to succeed. The college, of course, presents education in its higher brackets and proposes to train the individual students even though in groups for a more satisfactory and successful part in the privileges and responsibilities of life.

The question today confronting every conscientious high school graduate is "Shall I or shall I not continue my education?" Two decades ago young people were told that a college education from a financial standpoint was the best investment that we could possibly make. Figures were tabulated, statistics were presented proving conclusively that over a brief period of years the increased earnings of a college graduate would surpass those of the non-college graduate sufficient to more than pay the cost of his education. There are some today who put the advantages of education on the money level. Increased earning capacity is not the greatest value to a well-trained individual. The personal satisfaction in the consciousness of self-development and of the enrichment of his own life is a far greater reward. No young person would wish to spend his life without putting forth his best efforts to bring that life to the highest possible level of service that he might be of beneficent assistance to the society of his day and of days to come. In this day of multiplied opportunities, great responsibilities, and keen competition, there should be no question in the mind of a high school graduate as to the advisability of a college education.

I feel that our pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and the homes of our church should be reminded that Elon College is our institution and that it is a good one. This is the time that your influence is needed that the young men and the young women of our own church and homes may become interested in Elon College and may come to the college for the completion of their education.

L. E. SMITH.

A QUARTERLY REPORT FROM THE WINSTON-SALEM CHURCH.

January.

Because of extremely bad weather during January emphasis was placed upon attendance at the morning service, the Sunday school and the Junior Christian Endeavor. No night services were held. The morning service averaged forty and the Sunday school fifty-one. On the last Sunday of the month which was the beginning of Youth Week, our young people sponsored the morning worship, having full charge with their own chosen speaker, Professor C. R. Joyner, principal of Reynolds High School.

February.

All services resumed with the Sunday school about back to normal, averaging sixty-two for the month. Race Relations Sunday, February 11, was observed, using the program provided by the Home Boards, the pastor bringing the message. A very effective World Day of Prayer service, sponsored by the Woman's Association, was held, using the special program provided for the occasion. Forty-one attended the service. The pastor was chosen by the Brotherhood Committee of the city to represent the Protestant group in a series of two Brotherhood meetings at the high schools of the city. Father Edward Biss represented the Catholic Church and Rabbi Edward Ellenbogen represented the Jewish Synagogue. These meetings were attended by about 2,000 students and faculty members and seemed to be much appreciated.

The Woman's Association is an alive and active organization, holding monthly meetings with good programs and good interest. You frequently hear the remark, "I just cannot afford to miss any of these meetings." Perhaps one of the liveliest organizations is the community Junior Christian Endeavor Society with a membership of forty-five and an average attendance of twenty-five. This group is doing excellent work, holding regular meetings each Sunday at 6:30 with a monthly business and social meeting.

Another achievement of the month was the painting of the basement walls and the partitions separating the Sunday school rooms. To add further to the beauty of the children's department the ladies of the church bought and made curtains for the twenty windows.

March.

The Easter service was the outstanding event of March. It was held on Palm Sunday night. The Junior Sunday School presented a mixed program assisted by the adult choir which provided the Easter music. The Moravian Sunrise Service is the Easter attraction here. The city is all astir the whole night on Saturday night. The Moravian Bands, numbering twenty-five or more, and with over two hundred players start playing their band music all over the city at 2:00 A. M. After an hour or so they reassemble at the home church for refreshments and make ready for the Sunrise Service which begins at 5 o'clock. About half the service is

Thoughts on the Experience of God Through Christ

(Gospel According to St. John, Chapter 15.)

By REV. CLATON S. RICE, D. D.

[Note: This is a continuation of the devotional talk made to the Superintendents, by one of them, at the Mid-Winter meeting.—Editor.]

My definition of the Church is one with which you may not agree. I find myself perfectly in accord with Rev. J. S. Griffiths, Principal of the Congregational College of Victoria, Australia, who in a recent article in the Congregational Quarterly, emphasized the fact that there are just two qualifications which we should demand of men for membership in our fellowship. First, men should have had an experience of God. Second, that experience should have come, in part at least, from Jesus, our Lord. I agree so completely with this statement that I am inclined to define the Christian Church as a unique fellowship composed of those who have experienced God, each in his own way, through Jesus.

That there are other ways of experiencing Him than through Jesus, no one would question, but to be a Christian, it would seem to me, that one must have had through Christ some experience of God, else why the name "Christian?"

Now it is easily possible for us these days to lay emphases other than upon experience through Jesus. Bringing our children up, as we attempt to do, in "the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and at the tender mercy of the Church School, expecting them to confirm baptismal vows taken for them by their parents, to be received into the church in their early teens, it is easy for us to lose sight of the necessity for personal experience through Christ. An inadequate training, both at home and in the Church School, generally, living in a public school environment, which too often is unfavorable to the things of the church, it is no wonder that children, drawn into the church through confirmation or baptismal vows, may have little or no experience of God through Christ, or in any other vital way.

Also, so stern has become the financial pressure upon our churches, so intense has grown the competition, that the doors of our churches are often swung wide open to people who have little or no appreciation of the uniqueness of Jesus or the necessity for personal experience of God through Him. We are too cowardly to demand this, lest we lose members.

There are also those who would substitute intellectual assent to theological or philosophical propositions for the personal experience in Jesus. That theology has a large place in the life of the church, that it should have a much larger one than it has had in our fellowship during the past generation, is very evident. One grave weakness of our liberal schools is that they minimize the importance of Christian theology, when men must be able to give a reason for the faith which is in them, and also to state that faith in reasonable terms. But that this should become a substitute for a heart-warming experience of God is fatal to the church.

There are those who find it easy to lay great emphasis upon ritual. An enriched church service, with color and music, banners and incense, how attractive it is, though it may become a substitute for that which lies at the heart of Christianity—personal experience. Not that we would depreciate ritual, then, but rather that we should recognize the fact that in laying too great an emphasis upon it, and making it a substitute for something which is more vital, the church may suffer very greatly indeed. It is my solemn judgment that it is at the very hour when the personal experience of God through Christ burns low, that the insistence upon ritual in our free churches flames high. (You see I speak as a barbarian, out of the land west of the Hudson.) How often we free churchmen have made ourselves ridiculous by attempting that for which we are fitted neither temperamentally nor through historic background! We want, and need, a well ordered service—but to introduce too much ritual or symbolism which we neither understand nor can handle skillfully, is a mark of desperation or a failure to think things through.

Enough of this. Whether we emphasize ritual or not, surely we superintendents need the experience of God through Christ above most men. We can only be sure of ourselves by constantly keeping in touch with God through Christ, our Elder Brother, and our Exemplar.

Elon College Golden Anniversary

We have a better report for our Golden Anniversary Club this week. The good people of Newport News and of Suffolk, together with a number in different sections of the country have responded. The list speaks more eloquently than I possibly could. I should be permitted, however, to express my great appreciation of this generous response. We are still a long way from the goal, but if we keep moving forward, we will arrive by and by. Won't you speak to your friends about joining the Club and have them to send in their subscriptions on or before May 1.

3,000 Volunteers

CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL OFFERINGS.

The weather is opening up, and the contributions for the college have been coming in more satisfactorily. This is the best weekly report that we have made in some time.

It may not be your custom to pay your college apportionments during the college period or shortly thereafter, but the ones who do render a most beneficial and welcome service. If your church or Sunday School has not sent a contribution to the college this year, won't you please do so within the next few weeks. We are sorely in need of funds.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

April is with us now but soon May will come and then it will be June in a short time. June the 9th is Children's Day, but perhaps you have decided to have Children's Day at an earlier time in your church. Anyway, it is not too soon to begin thinking about this day which will be "Your Day." If you begin planning early enough you will be able to make this one of the most beautiful and worshipful services of the whole year for your church. I am very anxious that each one of you have some part in helping to make the day in your church one which will be long remembered. You may not be able to have a speaking part but you can have a singing part or praying part; or help to make some of the costumes for the play; or act as ushers and take up the offering; or help to clean your church building from door to door; or help to make it beautiful with flowers. Remember, too, that the inside of the church doesn't look so nice if the church lawn is bare, untidy or the grass uncut. There are so many things to be done that unless we do start right now we will not be ready.

This year "The Lord's Prayer," a Children's Day service arranged by Miss Louise Triplett, can be secured for your service. This is sufficiently simple to be presented in any church with a minimum of rehearsing and yet is capable of producing a deeply moving spiritual effect. There is another more dramatic and more realistic service by Max Webster called "What Happened to You?" This tells the story of three young people who were commissioned for Student Summer Service in Montana, New England and the Southern Mountains. It requires more preparation than the other service but has been used with good results.

If you do not want to write to New York for the materials I believe Mr. Lester or his good wife will help you secure them if you will write and ask them to do so. They have a lot of helpful materials which they are glad to let you have for the different big days of our church year.

I want you to get busy and not stop working until you have done a good job of planning and carrying out a beautiful Children's Day service.

DOROTHY TODD.

JACK.

Jack looked out of his window to find that water was standing all over the lawn. It must have rained all night. Then he began to worry about Church Vacation School and how the children and their teachers would get to the church. Miss Dorothy was staying at his home and that meant she would have to walk four miles through mud and water to get to the church. Jack's father did not have a car, and since he rented as a share-cropper he did not even have a cart or wagon that could be used to carry the childre and their teacher to the church.

Jack hurried into his clothes and went to the kitchen to ask his mother what she thought about his problems. But mother was very busy with the breakfast and Jack was asked to help sister set the table. Jack and Mary worried out loud as they fixed the table. "Miss Dorothy" had to wade water which was knee deep to get home from visiting yesterday!" said Jack.

"Yes, and if Rev. Jones had not come for her last night, she would have had to wade to the play practice at the church," said Mary.

"Perhaps Rev. Jones will come for her this morning," said mother.

"He has to go back to the Baxley Church for the revival today and can't come," Jack replied.

But breakfast being ready put an end to the conversation for the moment. While everyone was trying to see who could eat the most hot biscuits, a knock was heard at the door. Who could it be? Hurrah! It was Rev. Jones but he was walking and bare-footed with his trousers rolled to his knees! His car had been left a few yards from the house stuck fast in a mud hole. Jack, his older brother and his dad went out to help Mr. Jones push the car out.

In a short time the car had been pushed out of the mud, Rev. Jones had washed up and put his shoes back on and the whole gang were headed for the church in that blessed car.

When the church was reached Jack began worrying again for he saw that the last fellow out last night had left the door open. That could mean just one thing! Yes, the goats of the neighborhood had spent the night in his church. He jumped from the car and ran towards the door. Rev. Jones told "Miss Dorothy" to grab her camera and get a picture of the goats coming out of the church. Jack heard what the preacher said. Tears came into his eyes for he did not want "Miss Dorothy" to get a picture of his church with goats coming out of it. So, he hurried with all of his might and got the goats all run out before "Miss Dorothy" could get there with her camera.

"There,," said Jack, "the goats are out." "You and Mary can sit in the car while Rev. Jones and I clean out the church." As he went into the church he looked up into his pastor's face and said, "I certainly hope the rest of the days of our Church School are not as full of troubles as this one has been."

THE MISSIONARY RALLIES.

While the Mission Secretary was not physically able to attend in person the Missionary Rallies, or the One Day School of Missions, held in the various districts of our North Carolina Women's Conference, the past week, he is gratified indeed to have such favorable reports from the good attendance at these Rallies, and at the deep interest and enthusiasm of the good women for the work they did in making the programs possible and in carrying out the programs as prepared. All who attended the Rallies were indeed fortunate in the privilege of hearing Miss Lucy Eldredge, Dayton, Ohio, head of our young people's work, who has recently returned from a trip to our mission fields and missionaries in China and Japan, in India and the Philippines. It is indeed a most interesting story that Miss Eldredge tells of the work that our missionaries are doing in the foreign field. She visited numbers of missionaries and the story of her visit as she found things is most interesting and most remarkable indeed. To see how our missionaries are staying on the field in war-torn Japan and China, and note the consecration on small salaries that they carry into their work, and to learn what they are achieving in the name of our Lord, is indeed a source of inspiration. We cannot understand for the life of us how any pastor, or people, who know the facts, or care to get the facts, can be indifferent to such a work, or fail to have a part in supporting it.

The Missionary Rallies of the women at least carried the truth about our missionary work abroad to the minds, and we trust to the hearts of delegates and visitors who attended the Rallies. It would seem that every minister, especially those who attended the Rallies, would never stop until he had formed a Woman's Missionary Society in his church, or churches, since the Woman's Missionary Society works at the very heart of the spiritual task of the church, which task of course interests, or should interest, every intelligent pastor.

The women are under deep gratitude also for the presence at each of their Rallies of Mrs. W. E. Wiseman of our Greensboro Church, who is President of the Conference, and took it upon herself to attend all the Rallies and do all she could to add to the interest and benefit of the meetings. Four Rallies were held in the North Carolina Conference the past week, the total attendance at the four being approximately four hundred. The good women are indeed to be congratulated on having such an arrangement whereby the missionary message and messages, and the real facts about missions could be carried to this number of people during a four-day period. Our heartiest congratulations to the good women who hold such successful and inspirational meetings.

The above report indicates that some of the churches have taken the Easter offering and have sent in same. We trust that all the churches in the Convention have taken the offering, or will do so, since the funds are needed so much to carry on the work. It will be deeply appreciated if church treasurers having the funds will forward the same at their earliest convenience. I am grateful to all who had a part in the donations for this most worthy and unselfish cause.

REIDSVILLE REALLY RALLIED.

Last year the members of the missionary society at Reidsville, N. C., attended the missionary rally, heard that we need new recruits for our foreign work and money with which to send them, went back home and increased their gifts fifty dollars, and returned to the rally this year and told about it. That was more than just another meeting. It was a real rally. Congratulations to Reidsville!

Last week I voted for the appointment of three new missionaries. Today I voted for two more. They were unusually fine young people, well trained, sincere, eager to serve. They go to China, Africa, and Turkey. The young people will go if the churches will send them. Reidsville has started the process of helping. And so has the Pilgrim Fellowship in Holland, Va., as per report last week. Thank you, folks! We are moving forward.

NORFOLK DISTRICT MISSIONARY MEETING.

The twentieth annual session of the Norfolk District meeting of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference was held in the First Church, Portsmouth, on Tuesday, March 26, 1940, with the superintendent, Mrs. J. A. French, presiding.

The theme for the Conference this year is "Toward a Christian World Fellowship."

Mrs. J. F. Morgan conducted the worship service of the morning based on the topic "The Way to Peace." Mrs. French brought a very helpful message using as her key thought portions of the poem "What Is In Thy Hand," thus inspiring us to search for the gift in our hands, that we may use them in our Lord's work.

Miss May Ginn, a young Chinese student, was the guest speaker of the morning. Miss Ginn, who was born in Norfolk, has spent part of her life in China, and she presented a word picture of Chinese Christians and their work.

We were delighted to have Mrs. B. D. Jones, president, and Mrs. Herbert Harrell, secretary, of the Woman's Conference, as our visitors. Also, it was a pleasure to welcome Rev. F. C. Lester as our guest.

In our afternoon session Rev. John Knight read a message from Dr. J. O. Atkinson, our Mission Secretary. Though Dr. Atkinson is not physically able to be present with us, he never forgets us.

Mrs. Manson, Christian Temple, conducted a very interesting and educational forum based on the work of women's societies and their problems.

This day was well spent in fellowship with each other and in studying the work of the Kingdom, gaining inspiration and vision from the mountain top to lead us when we have returned to our separate tasks.

HAZEL H. PULLEY,
Secretary.

ALAMANCE AND GUILFORD MISSION DISTRICTS HOLD A JOINT SESSION WITH GREENSBORO CHURCH.

The annual Guilford District Missionary Rally of the North Carolina Woman's Conference met in joint session with the Alamance District at the First Congregational - Christian Church in Greensboro, Tuesday morning, April 2.

The rally convened at 10:00 with Mrs. J. D. Strader, superintendent of Alamance District, presiding. Invocation was by Rev. W. E. Wisseman, pastor of the host church.

Roll call of societies showed more than twenty churches represented, and one new society organized at Happy Home Church.

Ministers present were: Drs. W. M. Jay and J. H. Lightbourne, Revs. J. L. Neese, G. H. Veazey, W. E. Wisseman, F. C. Lester, D. M. Spence, G. C. Crutchfield, and M. A. Pollard.

An address "We Press Forward" was given by Miss Frankye Marshall of Walnut Cove, superintendent of the Guilford District. Another highlight of the morning session was an address "We Are Partners in a World Task" by Miss Lucy Eldredge. Miss Eldredge has recently returned from visiting mission points in the foreign field and was able to give the Rally information in a realistic manner.

Following the appointment of special committees, Rev. W. M. Stevens of Union Church conducted the devotional period.

Luncheon was served by the Greensboro Church.

The afternoon session convened with Miss Frankye Marshall presiding. Invocation was given by Rev. J. L. Neese of Reidsville.

An address "Consider the Lilies," prepared by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, Elon College, was read by his secretary, Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker. It was both informational and inspirational.

Soloist for the afternoon was Prof. Thomas Edwards of the Elon Music Department.

Mrs. J. D. Strader, of Burlington, spoke on "We Press Forward," giving aims and suggestions instructive to those interested in leadership in missionary groups.

New officers elected for the Alamance District were: Superintendent, Mrs. J. D. Strader, Burlington; Assistant Superintendent, Mrs. F. C. Lester, Elon College; Secretary, Mrs. Lacy Hooper, Burlington.

New officers elected for the Guilford District were: Superintendent, Miss Frankye Marshall, Walnut Cove; Assistant Superintendent, Miss Vera Gerringer, Brown Summit; Secretary, Mrs. E. H. Abell, Reidsville; Assistant Secretary, Mrs. Fred Rudd, Greensboro.

The Rally accepted an invitation to meet with the Burlington Church for the next annual meeting. The Rally this year was one of the most successful yet held; the grouping of the two districts was approved and will be continued in the future.

VERA GERRINGER, Sec'y,
Guilford District.

A LETTER FROM MISS SEABURY.

14 Beacon St.,
Boston, Mass.,
March 27, 1940.

Mrs. J. Monroe Harris,
201 Poplar Avenue,
Norfolk, Va.,
Dear Mrs. Harris:

Good news for you! I think we have got you a "swell" faculty for your Institute.

In the first, Mary McClure can come to you for your China sessions and she is the biggest find we have on our China missionary list. She has been at Northfield repeatedly and everybody always loved her. She is a big woman in every sense of the word and a wonderful spirit. She is returning to China very soon—sailing so soon that she was reluctant to accept this engagement. But when she found how important I considered it and how important Mrs. Medlicott considered it, she is willing to say yes.

On the home side, Helen Frances Smith of New York, Information Secretary in the Home Boards, finds she could go. She has a very crowded schedule with Berkeley coming and all but is willing to work it in. She would, of course, cover the material of the home book which she has already read and give the slant which would show our own denominational connection.

I will write to my little Chinese friend very soon to see if you could get her from nearby and that would given you a wonderfully full and rich program with a good deal of flavor to it.

I do hope you like this arrangement. Best wishes for your Institute.

Cordially yours,
RUTH ISABEL SEABURY.

rendered at the home church and then the march begins up along the shady lane to God's Acre taking about forty-five minutes for the bands and the people to reassemble for the last part of the service which ends about 7:00 A. M. The crowd this year, while smaller than usual, was estimated at about 30,000. Over 200 ushers are strung along the line of march to keep the people in line and from trampling on the graves.

Now back to our own work: It was a novelty to have it snow most of the day on Easter Sunday; about five inches of snow fell. Our Maundy Thursday night service was a very impressive one. We used the printed programs provided by the Home Boards closing with an impressive communion service. The pastor presented the fifth meditation of the three-hour union service at the Presbyterian Church, March 22. An extended effort to increase our church membership to one hundred by the end of 1940 is now in progress. Eight subscriptions to the Missionary Herald have been secured and we are now at work to secure our quota of ten subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

A Catholic priest was asked to participate in a religious census with the expectation of finding some of his unknown members. He politely refused stating that if they were good Catholics he would not need to look them up, they would look up their church and attend it. What a lesson we Protestants could learn from this procedure and what a blessing it would be to the church and the member if so practiced.

NORTH CAROLINA YOUNG PEOPLE HAVE FINE MEETING.

There were one hundred and eight registered delegates present from nineteen North Carolina churches and three young people who represented our churches in Northport, Michigan, New York City, and Everett, Pennsylvania, present in Reidsville last Saturday to hear Miss Lucy Eldredge and to enjoy fellowship together. Since this was the regular time and place for the meeting of the North Carolina and Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship, it was natural that most of the delegates would be from that area, but Sanford, Pope's Chapel, and Mt. Carmel in the Eastern North Carolina Conference were represented, as were Hank's Chapel and Pleasant Ridge in the Western Conference.

Following a carefully planned worship service led in a fine way by Rev. A. C. Todd, Miss Lucy Eldredge discussed with the group their relationship to the denomination and practical suggestions for use in local churches. Many of the young people learned for the first time the stages in organization from the local church to the General Council.

Two important matters were discussed in the business session of the North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship, over which Walter Cooper, president, presided. The group present was heartily in favor of sending delegates from North Carolina to the biennial session of the National Pilgrim Fellowship meeting next August in Mills College, Oakland, Calif., and pledged their support to this project. Definite plans for choosing delegates and helping finance the trip were left to the executive committee. The group also voted to recommend to the Southern Convention that there be set up a Pilgrim Fellowship Council in the Southern Convention, composed of young people from each Conference and adult representatives of the Boards concerned particularly with young people's work, for the purpose of correlating this work.

Following a delicious supper served by the women of the Reidsville Church, Miss Lucy Eldredge took the group on a trip around the world, telling of her experiences in various countries last year as she circled the globe on a trip which was a gift to her from the young people, largely of Ohio and Indiana.

NORTH CAROLINA GROUPS INSTALL OFFICERS.

At the meeting in Reidsville last Saturday, the following officers were installed at a service conducted by Dr. W. M. Jay of Winston-Salem.

DO YOU MEET THIS STANDARD?

Miss Lucy Eldredge suggested the following seven points as things which every young people's group—Sunday school class, Christian Endeavor society, Missionary society—ought to be doing. They are the suggestions of the Ohio Pilgrim Fellowship to its local groups. Why not use a meeting soon to check up and see wherein you are succeeding and wherein your group is failing according to this standard?

1. You should be an active and growing young people's group.
2. The young people in your group should be growing religiously.
3. Your group should be helping someone else—missions.
4. Your group should be helping to right some wrong—social action.
5. Your young people's group should co-operate with the rest of your local church.
6. Your group should be cooperating with other young people in Congregational Christian Churches.
7. Your group should have some form of interdenominational fellowship.

North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship—Chairman, Dorothy Hendrix, Greensboro; Secretary-Treasurer, Earl Farrell, Pittsboro; Cabinet, President of each Conference Pilgrim Fellowship and Representative from State at large, Evelyn Dickey, Burlington; Counselors, Miss Tora Rudd of Burlington, Rev. W. J. Andes of Durham, Rev. Allyn P. Robinson of Raleigh.

North Carolina and Virginia Conference Pilgrim Fellowship—President, Ruby Wright, Reidsville; Vice-President, Samuel Barber, Elon College; Secretary, Roberta Terrell, Burlington; Treasurer, Eugene Scarce, Ruffin; Counselors, Miss Tora Rudd of Burlington, Rev. W. E. Wiseman of Greensboro, Rev. O. A. Elmore, Albemarle.

EASTERN VIRGINIA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP CAPTURES RICHMOND.

The Pilgrim Fellowship meeting held in Richmond on March 30, was reported a decided success. Thirty or more of the group reached the city in the morning and were conducted on a most interesting historical tour. The total registration numbered seventy.

Miss Virginia Gaines of Richmond addressed the group on, "Echoes from Amsterdam." Miss Lucy Eldredge, Associate Secretary of Young People of the National Boards, also proved a most interesting speaker.

The meeting closed with a banquet over which Mr. Bernard Williams presided as toastmaster. The music for the banquet was furnished by the Richmond Sunday school orchestra under the direction of Mr. Ernest Carr.

In this topic we are concerned with agricultural missions as distinctive from medical and educational missions.

The Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. is Dr. Sam Higginbottom, president of Allahabad Christian College in India. His early experience as a missionary in India convinced him that the solution to India's famine and poverty lay in modern farming methods. He returned to the United States in 1911 to take special work in agriculture. Returning to India, he bought several hundred acres of the worst land he could find to prove that by proper methods of agriculture it could be made productive. His work in agricultural missions has made him one of the foremost missionaries in the world.

Find out more about Robert Moffat, David Livingstone, William Carey, and their work among rural people. Why did they succeed?

Get some person to speak on the place of the farmer in American life. Can America exist without the farming class? Should methods of agriculture be improved? (Continued on page 14.)

HOSEA TELLS OF GOD'S FORGIVING LOVE.

LESSON 11—APRIL 14, 1940.

LESSON: Hosea 6: 1-7; 14: 4-9.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isa. 1: 16-20.

GOLDEN TEXT: If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.—I John 1: 9.

Hosea's message came out of his experience. That made his message even more vital. From his prophecy we learn that he took unto himself a wife who was unfaithful to him. She left his home and sought other lovers. In spite of this fact, Hosea still loved her, and when finally she was abandoned by those with whom she had consorted he went to the slave market, where she was to be sold, and bought her, and took her to his home. As he thought over this experience he realized that just as he loved his wife even though she was wayward, just so did Jehovah love his people. In spite of their backsliding, superficial repentance, and willful sin, God loved Ephraim and Judah. This was the central message of Hosea's preaching and the dominant motive in his ministry.

Superficial Repentance.

The lesson for today gives two passages of scripture from Hosea's book. In the first passage he shows how superficial has been the repentance of his people. They realize that they have done wrong, and in a half-hearted way they have repented. But their repentance was very superficial; it was based not so much upon a genuine change of heart and a determined purpose to do good, but it was more in the sense of being sorry that they had been caught, and wishing to escape the consequences of their wrong doing. "After two days will he revive us: on the third he will raise us up, and we shall live before him." Thus did he say that their punishment would endure only for a season and that Jehovah would restore them to his favor. Genuine repentance always brings forgiveness and restitution, but half-hearted repentance and insincerity bring no blessing from Jehovah.

Superficial Goodness.

"For your godness is as a morning cloud, and as the dew that goeth early away." The people were good after a fashion, but their goodness was not deep-seated or far-reaching. They were superficial and changeable; there was no depth to their repentance, no endurance to their efforts after reform—it all disappeared as quickly as the morning cloud or the morning dew. Jesus said that some of the hearers of the word were like a seed which was sown in shallow ground, and sprang up and grew, but when the sun came out it was scorched for it had no root in itself. Just so were the people of Ephraim and Judah. Their religion was made up too much of wishing and not enough of doing. If they were good at all it was probably because they were afraid not to be good. There was no genuine or deep-seated love of righteousness in their hearts.

Goodness, and Not Sacrifice.

"For I desire goodness, and not sacrifice; and the knowledge of God more than burnt-offerings." We learned last week in studying about Amos that the people were very careful to present their sacrifices and their burnt offerings. It was just this that aroused the spirit of Amos, for at the same time that they were offering these sacrifices and performing the ceremonies there was injustice, and oppression, and wickedness going on openly and flagrantly. Herein is Hosea asserting one of the great basic principles of the Bible, that God desires goodness, and not sacrifice, and the knowledge of God rather than burnt offerings. Worship must be sincere. There is no substitute for inner goodness. Outward acts count for little unless one has the right spirit within. Acceptable worship must find expression in character and in conduct.

The Divine Love.

"I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely; for mine anger is turned away from him." These words come from the closing chapter of Hosea's prophecy. In spite of what Israel had done, in spite of the fact that they had dealt treacherously with Jehovah, in spite of the fact that they had sinned grievously toward Him, His heart went out in love toward them. Here is the promise of the eternal mercy and love of God. No matter what men have done God will freely forgive them, if in true humility and in genuine repentance they will confess their sins and turn from their sins. As was intimated in the opening paragraph of these notes, this insight into Jehovah's character came out of Hosea's own experience. With inspired insight he saw more than Amos saw in the divine character, that is, justice; Hosea saw love. The religion of the Old Testament reached a new milestone in his prophecies.

The Beauty of Holiness.

In suggestive and symbolic language Hosea shows the fruits of righteousness and the beauty of holiness. "I will be as the dew unto Israel . . ." During the long seasons between the rainy seasons in Palestine, vegetation depended upon the moisture which came from the dew. Thus silently does God renew the hearts of those whose hearts are open and responsive to His spirit. "He shall blossom as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon." Here is an expression of beauty and strength. The lily was a beautiful thing to behold, while the cedars of Lebanon with their deep roots symbolized strength. Religion is a combination of beauty and strength. "His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon." Here is a picture of the fruitfulness and the fragrance of the good life. People of the East, like the people of today, loved sweet smelling odors, and the smell of cedar was especially appealing. "They shall revive as the grain, and blossom as the vine: the scent thereof shall be as the vine of Lebanon." Here is reemphasis upon the things which have already been said—that if Israel would turn again and seek the Lord, He would develop in time a beauty of character, and make them fruitful in the works of righteousness.

The Ways of Jehovah.

"For the ways of Jehovah are right, and the just shall walk in them; but transgressors shall fall therein." Thus does the prophet vindicate the ways of Jehovah. He would not punish Israel in any vindictive spirit; he would simply allow to come upon them the results of their wrong doing. God's ways are right and just altogether. They are pleasant and peaceful to those who walk in them. But the way of the transgressor is hard, for he works both against his own true nature and the character of God himself.

"Amusements to virtue are like breezes of air to the flame—gentle ones will fan it, but strong ones will put it out."

MONDAY.

A SATISFYING PORTION.

"God is . . . my portion forever."
—Psalm 73:26.

Belief in God, trust in God, following Christ, and serving Him, is the most satisfying life. It does not matter how one finds God, whether at "the mourner's bench," as of old, or whether in great agony of soul, or whether in the quiet of thought and prayer, God satisfies the longings of His needy children. The soothsaying woman finds Christ through agony of soul. Lydia found Him in the quiet of a prayer-meeting during the dawning of the day. There are those who do not know when Christ came into their lives. But He is there, a most satisfying source of life's joy.

Prayer—O Lord, help us to rely upon Thee and enter upon the abundance and sufficiency of Thy grace and truth that we may find strength in every weakness. Amen.

TUESDAY.

A NEW DAY.

"In the beginning God . . ."
Genesis 1:1.

The darkness of the night has gone away. Light seems to be coming from everywhere. The eastern horizon is aglow with the glory of the rising sun. There's the sun creeping atop Mt. Helix. It is a new day.

This realization of a new day with thoughts of all its opportunities and blessings, gives a radiant sense of the presence of God. And that sense of the presence of God gives one a fortified heart. A fortified heart gives a sense of triumph over self and sin. How poor one must be who has not this sense!

Prayer—Most gracious God, as the sun of this day floods the earth with its light and glory, we draw near unto Thee, and we believe that Thou art very close to us. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

BEYOND THE SOD.

"I have fought a good fight. I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness.—II Tim. 4:7.

Of the many hundreds who read this page there are doubtless a great number the greater part of whose lives on earth are behind them. They like this life and they would like to live on here, loving, serving and doing good. But age is creeping on. Disintegration of the mortal body has set in and they view the inevitable with a sense of partial fatalism. "Hope thou in God, and that which is beyond the grave shines with a greater reality than the things of this world.

The soul of art is beauty,
The heart of love is youth;
The soul of courage, duty;
The heart of science, truth;
And so man struggles upward,
To find beyond the sod
The heart and soul of the universe,
The Infinite, his God.

THURSDAY.

THE SURRENDERED LIFE.

"Wait on the Lord: be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart."—Psalm 27:14.

To draw near God and to have a sense of His presence one must live the surrendered life. We may think ourselves surrendered to God's will, but if we do not try to find out that will—are we?

It is believed that it takes more conscious effort to live the surrendered life in this age than in any other age; for this reason, if none other, the times are rushing times. We are prone to rush with it. We feel that we must get up, get out and do something—often the wrong thing.

This rushing spirit is in great part an attitude of mind, an attitude which can be changed to that of "wait," as well, if we will only give it that volition. Wait for the Lord and ask for His guidance. "Though He tarry, wait."

Prayer—O Lord, give us patience to see the error of rushing, and to see the wisdom of waiting to know Thy will and Thy way. Amen.

FRIDAY.

IN HIS CIRCLE.

"And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man save Jesus only."—Matthew 17:8.

After that glorious transfiguration of our Lord in which glimpses of heaven were revealed to them, the apostles found themselves alone with Jesus. They realized then, perhaps as never before, that they were members of Christ's inner circle.

To realize that we, too, are in His heart-life, we must follow Him not only in the mountain-top experiences of prayer and aloneness with Him, but also, like the disciples, in the plains with Him and with His people. Cultivate, and forsake not, much aloneness with Christ, and then in the busy thoroughfares of life take thy vision of Him in thy heart to those whom thou shalt meet along the way.

Prayer—

Jesus, Thou joy of loving hearts!
Thou Fount of life! Thou light of men!
From the best bliss that earth imparts,
We turn unfilled to Thee again.
Amen.

SATURDAY.

"PLUGGING IN."

"Believe on the light that ye may become the sons of light."—John 12:36.

"Pray without ceasing."

"Plugging in" is an electrical expression used to denote the act of shoving an electrical plug in a socket in order to turn on the light or the power, as the case may be.

OUR MILITARIZED CHRIST.

[The following sermon is an editorial which appeared in the "Greensboro Daily News" for Sunday, April 1, 1940.—Editor.]

"And they stripped him, and put on him a scarlet robe."—Matthew 27:28.

And these, His enemies, must have done that in imitation of what we, His reputed friends, have been doing nearly ever since!

Not altogether, to be sure, because history somewhere records a military lag among even the Christians. It was not entirely unakin to our present attitude toward wars generally, and the European war in particular. For the first one hundred and fifty years of the Christian era, that is to say immediately following the crucifixion of Jesus, our Christianity is reported to have been Christlike. To be a Christian and a soldier was an impossibility, so utterly irrational and immoral that few Christians were rash enough to attempt it. The historians differ as to the reason, but incline to an agreement that Jesus was such a complete antithesis to war that nobody in the second century would think of profaning Him as a militarist. Quite apart from that deduction is another. They had been so brutally mistreated by the Roman empire that they had no heart for its defense, and without that will, they had none to make Jesus a military man.

But they got over it as we always have been able to get over it. There are few corporate vices which we cannot make Jesus sponsor if we love them enough. Certainly no body of men ever gave war such a blessing as the church habitually has conferred upon it. When the United States went to war with Spain nearly every Christian clergyman in America went down on his knees and asked God to whip Spain for us. A noble humility that was; the great republic would not trust in its own might. One of the distinguished ministers in Chapel Hill came out and proclaimed that often war was the noblest way "for God and man." If we ever have had a war in this country without God nobody recalls it, and in our own conflict of the sixties we had Him on both sides.

But we were talking about these Roman soldiers. They were giving hideous mockery to the military Jesus. Let it be said for them that they were having fun. They had dressed Jesus in the uniform of a Roman soldier. Nothing could beat that for caricature. The regimentals did not belong and they gave these habiliments to Him for that reason. It is different with us. They knew that He was ridiculously arrayed, but we don't. We put our bloody garments upon Him, we militarize Him, we make Him sponsor our wars and all the causes that lead up those wars. We make Him apologist for our tribal nationalism, for tariffs and trade treaties, for our throat-cutting economics, for every unrighteousness which smartness and stupidity can concoct. The enemies of Jesus in the first century never have been able to do to Him the things that we, His friends, have done.

But when the preacher talks this way, and that's seldom, the pew has no chance to retort. And that is one of the great weaknesses of the gospel. It is good news, but disseminated ex parte. There is nobody to talk back to the parson. He says what he pleases and nobody calls him. Still, when he says that the friends of Jesus have wronged Him far more than any of His enemies ever have been able to injure Him, there issues from the pew something like this: Granted all that you say about war and its demoralizing effect, are you willing to say that never was war, and never will war be justified? And that isn't a very hard one. Kirby Page probably would say without reservation that no war can be defended. But that isn't the point here. The proposal is to take off those regimentals, remove those robes, stop militarizing Christ Jesus. When Bernard Shaw broke loose early in the war of 1914 and blackguarded Britain for her wrongs to the Irish, patriotic Britain did not know what to do with him. But Chesterton came to his rescue with a sapient observation. Shaw, he said, is not opposed to war; he simply was "against war songs." And that was sufficient. Hardly a more pugnacious personality anywhere was to be found. The Irishman said Kaiser Bill's nose simply had to be punched. But Shaw stopped at war music. He wished no part in drumming up war, none in making it fascinating, and certainly no hand in moving "good men to love the things they loathe." It may be that the wars have to be fought, but they do not have to be glorified.

So many times has the Christian paradox been repeated that it comes under Shakespeare's "damnable iteration." But the point is pertinent still. All of us who go to war wish Jesus to go with us; all of us who oppress the disadvantaged wish Him to help us; all of us who believe in the sacredness of the established order, wish Him to sponsor it, all of us who fear any change wish to call upon Him "who changeth not." So, almost always the great captains of industry bless Him, seldom has there been one who was called agnostic or infidel.

THE QUIET HOUR.

Prayer has been likened unto "plugging in," for the light of, or "hooking up" to the power of God. This contact with the supreme light and power makes Jesus the central and driving force of our lives, and it makes us the medium of that light in the world. This is manifested in love, purity, beauty of character, warmth of soul, the inner and the radiant life of man.

Prayer—O Christ, make us each a unit of power for righteousness. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"THE CONTENT OF HAPPINESS."

"The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart."—Psalm 19:8.

"If ye loved me, ye would rejoice."—John 14:28.

"Rejoice in the Lord always."—Phil. 4:4.

The question as to the content of happiness is one of life's most important questions. Everybody is in quest of happiness. Thouands in that quest, though finding a superficial temporary thrill misinterpreted as happiness, are following a way that brings sorrow. The world is in quest of happiness, but in its zeal for that happiness and enamored with selfishness, the world is pursuing a way of death and destruction.

We know that there is but one way to enduring happiness. That way is: when one succeeds in Christian living, that one has succeeded in becoming happy. It was for this reason and this reason only, so far as we know, that Jesus spoke the beatitudes. "Happy" is His Word for every sentence of this masterpiece.

Prayer—Our Heavenly Father, we pray for an understanding of life. Our souls crave happiness. May we know how to find it—Thy happiness and Thy peace. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The Christian Orphanage ought to have more farm land. While we have two hundred and thirty acres that does not mean we have that much to farm on. Quite a lot of it is woodland and we want to save the wood to use from year to year for the cook stoves. Then, too, we have quite an acreage in pasture for the cattle. By not having enough land to cultivate on our own farm we have been forced to rent quite a lot of land each year on which to grow hay for our cattle. When the orphanage was established it had a small acreage, something like one hundred and thirty acres. During the last twenty-three years when some small tract of land adjoining our farm was for sale some good friend has purchased it and donated it to the orphanage, until one hundred and six acres have been added to the original tract. There is, now, another small tract of land adjacent to one of our best fields, on which we produce much of our wheat to make bread for the children, for sale. We have been wanting to buy this tract of land for several years, but it has just recently come on the market and we will have to buy now or not at all. There are eight acres in the tract and it can be bought for $75.00 per acre, or $600.00. We have a number of members in the Congregational-Christian Church who could donate this to the orphanage and be happy that you had done something permanent for the orphanage. Six individuals giving $100.00 each could buy it. Twelve individuals giving $50.00 each could buy it. If you could see the location of the land and what an asset it would be to the orphanage farm, I feel sure you would want to do it.

Who will mail me a check for $600.00? Or who will be the first one to mail me a check for $100.00, or who will be the first one to mail me a check for $50.00 to help buy it? You will just be adding material to build your mansion in the world to come. I hope our many good friends will see to it that we don't lose this opportunity to buy.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

OUR MILITARIZED CHRIST.

And when unbelievers have appeared, not infrequently they were more like Him than we have been. For when we hate racially we ask Jesus to hate with us, when we employ frightfulness in our human society we ask Him to be frightful, too. Did you ever read the stories of slave ships as they came from Africa with their slaves aboard? No people ever were more "nurtured in the fear and admonition of the Lord." More reverent men never beat into docility the backs of their slaves. One of these holy men stood up before the world and gave slavery God's blessing, for it was "especially commanded by God through Moses, and approved by Christ through His Apostles," that saint said.

Some months ago one of the textile magnates died. He had been prominent in organized activities and he was deeply distraught over the damage being done to religion by communists and socialists. One of his neighbors wrote of him after his death that he was a very devout man. He held prayer services daily in his plant, but always on the "time" of his employees and never on his own. What did Jesus have to do with social questions? Absolutely nothing. Did the magnate have any obligation to pay his workers a respectable wage? Not at all. It was his duty as a Christian, if sickness or distress came, to give alms to the stricken. But there was no call to him to make living conditions better, or wages higher. And you never caught that man without a little Bible in his pocket. He read it every day and knew it almost by rote. He was rich, believed devoutly in the status quo, wished it made secure, so he worshipped Jesus, the one altogether lovely, and called on Him to bless the things that were. The spiritual Jesus was a teacher concerned only with men's souls, their moods, their attitudes, their virtues, their immaterial resources of spiritual power, their close walk with God, their immortal hopes. That was the Christ whom he adored and worshipped; the Christ who disturbs nothing, who is, not the Prince of Peace, but the Prince of Standpatters. The fact that Jesus who cared so tremendously for the soul must have cared and did care tremendously also for the body upon which the soul impinges did not register. These were two totally different realms. He was not in economics and when preaching takes Him into that field it profanes Him.

And yet, we take Him, more often at the behest of Big Business than at anybody else's, into our wars, into our economics, into our partisan politics, into our sectarian penfolds. We take Him into our wars, into our race hatreds, strip Him of His royal robes and clothe Him in the rags of our unrighteousness.

The enemies of Jesus never touched us in their wrongs to Him.

The Harbor of Repairs

By CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

A stately ship sails into the harbor for repairs. Every boat has to go into the harbor sometimes for repairs. Even in the times of war neutrals permit a ship of a belligerent to enter their harbor and to remain twenty-four hours for repairs.

Joel uses this illustration to bring out the truth that every person must come to the Lord, as a ship enters a harbor, for the repair of his moral and spiritual, indeed his mental and physical energies. Otherwise he gradually loses his vitality and effectiveness, and becomes depressed and useless.

Daily Life.

The daily life, with its tasks, its duties, and its pleasures, draws upon the strength of body, the emotional energies, and the moral and spiritual reserves. These energies must be renewed. The wisdom of God is seen in the setting aside of one day in a week for worship and change of program. Many make the mistake of resting only the body. They sleep late, read an eighty-page paper, play golf, and think they are resting. They do little or nothing for the moral and spiritual nature. Hence they come to Monday morning dulled in spirit and this affects the body. Nothing so rests the physical as spiritual stimulation. Dr. Link discovered that among the thousands he treated for nervous disorders very few were members of a church. Sunday worship—the hymns, the special music, the sermon, the associations, and the prayers—renews the entire personality.

Storms.

But life has its storms. Sorrow sweeps away loved ones, and business difficulties draw heavily upon our energies until we grow disheartened. Confidence, courage, trust need to be renewed. We have failed to live at our best. We may have been cross with our loved ones, harsh and critical with those who work with us, disloyal to high ideals and forgetful of our Companion, the Master.

What will renew the finer qualities of personality? Paul's faith gave him self-control in a shipwreck. Peter's belief in a risen Lord enabled him to be crucified, head down, without a whimper. What gave a business man, whose wife and son were stricken in death, the peace of mind to go on and live cheerfully and effectively? His faith in Christ is the answer. There is no storm in life that a Christian faith cannot repair the damages.

Faith builds a bridge across the gulf of death,
To break the shock blind nature cannot shun.

Social Tests.

Is it any wonder that many, as they see the evils in society and governments, become pessimistic for the future of civilization? Germany crushes Poland. Russia stealing Finland. No nation is free from selfishness, greed, graft, and mistreatment of some of its citizens.

How can a person keep his confidence in the final triumph of the right? How can he keep a spirit in himself that is willing to be right and to sacrifice for the right? A Christian faith alone can give him a continued confidence, and an unselfish use of his powers and opportunities for others.

Place of repair: to wait for fresh enduement
I silently with Him would stay
Until He speaks again, and says, "Go forward
To help some other sheep to find the way."

Family devotions, gatherings for prayer, and the services of a church are essential to good health, to a poised mind, and to a sane spiritual life.

A Message from The Philippines

By HON. CAMILO OSIAS.

[Remarks at the banquet of the Philippines Conference held in Washington, D. C., April 9-14, 1940, under the auspices of the Philippine Committee of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America. Mr. Osias is counselor to the Resident Commissioner of the Philippines at Washington.—Editor.]

I am in a happy and congratulatory mood on this occasion. I congratulate those who planned the Philippines Conference at such times as these that try men's souls. I congratulate those who are in charge of it for their beautiful courage and fine spirit. I congratulate the hard working committees and individuals who prepared informative papers and illuminating studies and reports. I even feel like congratulating myself for being here and having a modest part. The Filipinos have abundant reason and genuine cause to be happy that here in the capital of the American Republic people should gather and think not of what they can get but what they can give.

The central topic is a challenging one—"Facing the Future With the Philippines." It bespeaks of courage, faith, determination. It is in war times that it takes courage to pursue high and noble human ends through pacific agencies and peaceful processes. It is when days are dark and gloomy that we need a revival of faith in free institutions, in democratic collaboration—an abiding and seeing faith in God and in religion. It is in the face of doubt and discouragement and chaos that we need strong determination to meet the present and face the future with confidence and march on with measured tread.

To the Americans sympathetic to the Philippines and desirous of her bright future, I express deep gratitude. To the Filipinos a conference such as this should be not only inspiring but inspiriting. If others have faith in us, why should we not have faith in ourselves? If Americans are ready and willing and generous to help us plan for a united advance, why should we Filipinos doubt and hesitate? The days ahead beckon us to move—more steadily forward and upward. We must not falter. We must progress. Of a race and ancestry of pioneers, we of the present must do our own bold pioneering to prove ourselves worthy of their sacrifice and heroism.

In a world disorganized, disoriented, and suddenly gone giddy and awry, humanity needs some sort of catalysis to prevent itself from being plunged into the abyss of total ruin. It must derive the saving substance, the catalytic agent, from sane philosophy and sound religion. Things are changing with such confusing appalling rapidity before our very eyes. God alone, standing watch over us, remains unchanged, persistent, and eternal. Individuals, nations, and humanity itself had better find anchorage in Him. With wisdom, with patience, with courage, let us all in cooperation be in quest of the human and divine way of life and, finding it, live to implement it, developing the necessary techniques and mechanisms so that people and peoples may reap in full measure the blessings of efficiency, freedom and happiness. Then there will be a new heaven and a new earth, or perhaps better yet this earthly planet shall cease to be an inferno and become at long last a paradise.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Laymen who have been elected delegates to the Southern Convention should make every effort possible to be present.

Rev. and Mrs. E. Carl Brady announce the birth of a son, Samuel Lawrence, at the Lee County Hospital, Sanford, N. C., April 7.

Rev. Aubrey C. Todd of Sanford, N. C., conducted communion service at Hope Mills, N. C., on the first Sunday night of this month. Rev. Kenneth Register is the pastor of this new church.

Rural Life Sunday is April 28. This is a good time for the churches to consider their relationship to the total program of the community. Materials to aid can be secured from the office of Promotional Secretary, Elon College, N. C.

Rev. Harold Loman is graduating from the high school department of People's Bible School at Greensboro, N. C., on the evening of April 30. The Rev. Mr. Loman is the pastor of several churches in North Carolina and speaks over the radio from High Point each Saturday morning.

Rev. J. E. McCauley, pastor, held a revival meeting at Pleasant Grove Christian Church, near South Boston, Va., last week, which resulted in four additions to the church as well as several re-consecrations. Mr. McCauley was the speaker at the Elon College Community Church on last Sunday.

The first Sunday in May will be the annual Missionary Cradle Roll Day at the Burlington Christian Church. The pastor, Dr. James H. Lightbourne, will christen or consecrate babies for those parents who wish thus "publicly to witness to their acceptance of parenthood as a sacred responsibility before God."

Dr. Forrest L. Knapp is to be the guest speaker at the Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention on July 23, next. Dr. Knapp was a classmate of F. C. Lester at Yale University, was director of leadership education with the International Council of Religious Education from graduation until this year, and is now a secretary for the World Sunday School Association.

Rev. E. M. Powell, new pastor of Morrisville (N. C.) Christian Church, received two members into the church the first Sunday in April. Rev. J. S. Carden administered the sacraments and ordained Mr. J. F. Hilliard to the office of Deacon. A new young people's society is being organized under the leadership of Miss Celestine Cotten. Mr. Powell sent in a new subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and promises that others will follow.

REV. HERBERT G. COUNCILL, JR.

On April 1, 1940, Rev. H. G. Councill, Jr., became pastor of the First Congregational-Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., following Rev. R. L. House who had moved to Richmond. The Rev. Mr. Councill is a native of Franklin, Va., a graduate of the College of William and Mary, and last June received a Bachelor of Divinity Degree from the Divinity School of Yale University. Since graduation he had served the Congregational Church at Canterbury, Conn.

Miss Lucy Eldredge of Dayton, Ohio, has been a delightful guest in the Southern Convention recently. While here she spoke to the young people of Eastern Virginia and North Carolina, and to the four missionary rallies in North Carolina. Although she is a native of Pennsylvania, she seems to be one of us for she is a graduate of Elon College and was the first field worker for the Board of Christian Education.

At the beginning of this year THE CHRISTIAN SUN received a very attractive calendar from Miss Alice True of 23 Marston Avenue, Portsmouth, N. H. This calendar has pictures of the churches in the community. Included is Court Street Christian Church and the North Congregational Parish House. There is a quotation for each month, one of which is an apt quotation from the late Dr. W. W. Staley. Copies of the calendar may be secured at 25c each by writing to Miss True at the above address.

NOTICE TO WORKERS ON "SUN" SUBSCRIPTIONS.

This notice is addressed particularly to those churches that have raised, or nearly raised, their quota of CHRISTIAN SUN subscribers. If we are to have followers we must have leaders. You who have completed the raising of your quotas can greatly stimulate interest in this campaign if you will make your returns to the SUN's subscription office at Elon College, N. C., immediately. Everyone likes to be identified with successes, and if enough returns are made immediately, this campaign will be a success. Don't delay another day! Ministers of the various churches are urged to encourage and assist their local campaign committees in seeing that this request is heeded.

Churches that have not completed their quotas should not longer delay their work, as it is imperative that as large a number of new subscriptions as possible be reported before the convening of the Southern Convention. The future program for the operation of our church paper is to a great extent governed by the response made by the churches to this subscription campaign.

DR. KING RETIRES.

Dr. Elisha A. King, minister of the Miami Beach Community Church since 1921, gave his resignation to his church on March 31, to become effective May 31, 1940. Dr. King has seen this group grow from a membership of twenty-seven to a large and influential church. This church has made numerous contributions to the city and its residents, under the leadership of Dr. King—the first municipal Christmas tree, the public union

FACING THE FUTURE WITH THE PHILIPPINES.

Twenty-nine years after Columbus discovered North America, he accidentally landed in the Philippine Islands. Since his mission was partly religious, it is not strange that soon after the land was discovered Christian missionaries established a church there. Today nearly all the people are Roman Catholics.

In 1898, almost four hundred years after the visit of Columbus, an explosion sent Admiral Dewey into the harbor at Manila. As his ship steamed in, a lighthouse watchman said: "This is the end of Spain." It was, so far as the Philippines are concerned.

For forty years the government of the United States has been responsible for the people in the Philippine Islands. At the beginning of that time there were no roads, schools, hospitals, doctors, sanitation, Bibles, or Protestants. Today all of them are there. About seventy-five per cent of the people can read and write in English, Spanish, or one of the dialects. There are seventeen Protestant hospitals and dispensaries, eighty government hospitals, and a thousand government dispensaries for medicines. Government schools have been established in all the larger centers. United Protestantism has three schools that do college and university work, with about a dozen other schools for the training of lay-leaders and nurses. The Protestant Church numbers 300,000 people, many of whom are leaders in the nation.

Congregational and Christian Churches are interested because we are responsible for religion in the southern and second largest of the islands, Mindanao. We have two hospitals, share in Silliman University, and take our share in cooperative work through the Federation of Evangelical Churches.

Dr. and Mrs. F. C. Laubach, Dr. Herbert C. Broken-shire, Rev. and Mrs. James F. McKinley, Miss E. Frances Thompson, Rev. and Mrs. Walter C. Tong, and Rev. and Mrs. F. J. Woodward are our American workers who share with a fine group of Filipinos in the establishment of health, culture, and the Protestant religion in the Philippines.

The work is not done. A million people, one in sixteen, have tuberculosis. One-fourth of the people cannot read or write in any language. Nine out of ten are farmers, and the average income for a farm family (usually a large family) is about eleven dollars per month. Only one person in fifty is a Protestant Christian. Many native pastors with university training receive less than twenty dollars per month, and some receive less than five dollars monthly for salary.

On July 4, 1946, the Philippines will become an independent nation. We can rejoice with them in their freedom. Freedom—what a word for today! They get it by vote, not by war. We have helped them, and they have helped us. Freedom can mean fellowship. The years that lie ahead should be the best for Filipinos and Americans because we have learned to share, and we will be free peoples together.

HUNGRY EYES.

As the stomach craves food, so the eyes crave beauty.

Rev. Proculo Rodriguez, one of our leading Philippine young pastors who is now studying at Yale Divinity School, said recently that the barren hills of Palestine leave the eyes hungry. On these hills once fed the flocks and herds of Abraham. There David sang the sweet songs of Israel, and the Master walked with those who loved him.

But wind and rain and scorching sun have done their worst. No man came to the help of God to keep the fields fertile and the forests flourishing. Palestine has been the battlefield of the world. There they stand, those barren hills, as a silent witness against the stupidity of man.

The Dead Sea receives but does not give. Barren hills feed not the eyes of man with the beauty of growing things.

"A sower went forth to sow," and when he did he helped God make this world beautiful; he helped to feed the eye as well as the stomach. The farmer who plants and cultivates the land which God has made and makes it beautiful with growing things is helping God to develop the valuable part of man by feeding hungry eyes. Gullies and ugly hedgerows speak of negligence. But fertile fields and growing forests give peace and hope.

LET EASTER BE REGULAR.

The early date for Easter this year has caused much agitation for the locating of Easter on a regular date. Church Management says that the date this year did not give time between Christmas and Easter for the proper development of the church program. Dr. Lloyd F. Worley, superintendent of the New Haven District of Methodists, has suggested that his seventy-two churches celebrate another Easter on April 14, reminding them that there were two Thanksgivings in 1939.

The real reason for establishing a stated date for Easter seems to grow out of the nature of the event itself rather than out of the convenience of people. Easter is supposed now to be the time kept in sacred remembrance of the death and resurrection of Jesus. That date could not possibly move around from one year to another. Biblical students say that it occurred about the ninth of April. Then why not set the first or second Sunday in April as the regular date for Easter?

The present date is set by the moon, and is an adaptation from the spring festival of northern European worshippers of heathen gods. There is no reason why the present world should follow such customs. Let there be a regular date for Easter, and make it the time when the world remembers the tragedy and triumph of God's best visit to earth.

The desire on the part of young people for automobiles and jazz, instead of for homes and babies, has raised havoc with many industries.—Babson.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A friend once said to Dr. W. W. Staley: "Doctor, do you ever fear that some brilliant, outstanding preacher will be called to one of the churches of Suffolk and turn the tide away from your church to his?" "No," he said, "I have no fear that some other preacher will be a greater preacher than I can hope to be. The man I fear, is the one who is a better man than I am." And continuing he observed, "Brilliance can never be more powerful than godness, in a pulpit."

On this basis character is more important than service. In the trend towards a humanistic interpretation of Christianity, the emphasis has been shifted from being to doing. Today, the world is taught to say: "We are not asking, 'What is in your heart?' but, 'What are you doing with your hands?'" This change has affected the whole system of education, religious as well as secular. Church controlled colleges, seminaries and universities are being importuned to eliminate all classical courses and build their curricula on manual training, domestic science and other practical subjects calculated to increase the bread-winning and salary-making power of students. Observation takes the place of hard systematic study. The laboratory has become more popular than the classics in the library.

The reaction of this tendency is being keenly felt in the present condition of our churches. It is not surprising that so many ministers have become victims of this superficial interpretation of life. When religious education in colleges is under the supervision of men who advise ministerial students to attend the dance to be convinced there is neither harm nor danger in the ballroom, one need not be surprised if young ministers go out from college with "liberal" ideas about social life.

Surely our church, like others, has recorded some heart-breaking evidences of moral weakness in the pulpit and in the pew. Much of this moral failure is traceable to lax thinking and a lack of mental discipline. Dr. Staley was regarded as a broad-minded, liberal man, of good judgment, in the pulpit and in his personal life. He did not spend much time talking about his personal views and attitudes. It is a fact that he did not go to the Post Office to get his mail on Sunday, or read the Sunday newspaper on Sunday morning. He exercised severe discipline over himself in the matter of Sabbath observance, as well as in many other things affecting his personal habits. The reward of this discipline was evident in his personal life. And his personal life gave dynamic power to what he said in the pulpit, and all that he did in his pastoral work.

Jesus lived for the salvation of the world. He did not forsake that objective when He faced the cross. The Son of God was the first altruistic world figure in human history. He made humanity world-conscious. "Go ye into all the world." In these days of greed, lust and war, the church must not forsake the high moral and spiritual standards of Jesus Christ. Dictators exact obedience to stern law and rigid discipline, when the state is involved. The church must preach and practice the doctrine of obedience and loyalty to the law of love and integrity of character. The hope of the church is in purity of heart and not in the power of the sword. Minister and laymen in the church must be better than the men of the world. Christian character is its own reward. Market places need that more than they need money and greater profits.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE BY-PRODUCTS OF UNSELFISH GIVING.

We read in the Scriptures of a man who dug his living out of the soil, whose efforts were blessed and prospered beyond measure. His prosperity became so pronounced that he had not sufficient room to store the fruits of his fields. After consultation with himself, deliberate and mature considerations, he resolved what to do. He would tear down his old barns and build new ones. The new ones were to be sufficiently large to take care of his surplus. His crops harvested, his barns filled, he congratulated himself, "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years. Take thine ease. Eat, drink, and be merry." But to his horror and dismay, there came to him in unmistakable terms the voice of the Almighty, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee. Then whose shall these things be that thou hast provided?"

We are indebted to someone greater, wiser, and more generous than we for life, its opportunities, its privileges, its riches, its blessings. No man within himself is able to add to or to take from that which he may have. "Paul may plant, and Apollos may water, but God giveth the increase." Too many of us are prone to congratulate ourselves on our own ability to plan, to labor, to earn, to accumulate, to feel that our ability surpasses that of our neighbors and acquaintances. Perhaps so, but are we the creators of our own good fortunes or are we indebted to someone else for the riches, whatever they may be, that have come our way? We are a part of a great world. We help to constitute a great social order. Our fortunes lie in the lap of Providence. We are but servants of Him who doeth all things well. What we have and are belong to Him whose we are and whom we should serve.

The majority of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN are members of the Congregational-Christian Church. The church is the organization in which we seek religious guidance and spiritual nurture. The church, to continue its guidance and ministry, requires contributions of every worthy nature including material gifts. To serve as it should, the church must have a complete and comprehensive program. For this program to become operative, great personalities must become its directors. The successful prosecution of a forward program requires money. No one other than the members of our church is expected to provide for the proper prosecution of our own church's program. If we do not contribute the necessary funds, they will not be contributed. We are not looking to our church for financial support but for an avenue to express in a substantial way our gratitude to almighty God for His marvelous beneficence to us as unworthy individuals.

At the present moment the future of our church in the Southern Convention is not optimistically promising. We seem not to question our spiritual resources, but we constantly decry the lack of our financial resources. In our appraisal of our church during the days that lie ahead, we seem to feel that there is no connection whatsoever between our spiritual and financial resources. In our present dilemma it would be well, I think, to remind ourselves of the anxiety of Almighty God regarding the use of material values by those who constitute his kingdom. Under the law it was necessary to levy a specific amount from those who would be heirs of the kingdom. Under grace these exactions have not been changed or eliminated but allowances made for more generous expressions of faith in larger contributions. The word of God still is sharper than a two-edged sword. However, unless our deeds in life can be in accord with the requirements thereof, we should not deceive ourselves by hoping for more generous consideration when life for us is done. We are warned, I think, not to lay up for ourselves treasures on earth where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal, but we are exhorted to lay up for ourselves treasures in heaven where the decay and destroying actions of time are powerless to destroy. On the other hand we are exhorted to give with the assurance that it shall be given back to us in super abundance. It would be well for us as a church and as individuals constituting our church to hear effectively the exhortation of the prophet, "Bring your tithes unto the storehouse that there may be meat in mine house, saith the Lord, and try me therewith and see if I will not pour you out a blessing such as there will not be room enough to receive."

As we approach the biennial session of our Convention, as stewards and servants of the Almighty, may we begin to search our hearts, open our treasures, and see if there are not new sources of revenue for the proper program of our church, that in us and through us the kingdom of God in its richness and fullness may come to earth. It is far more profitable to seek for means and ways of enlargement than to strive to find ways of curtailment that will cause the least inconvenience and the least hindrance possible. Today calls for daring faith in God who has never failed His own. I pray for the success of our Convention that we may be blessed with wisdom to plan wisely for our church in these trying days.

Thoughts on the Experience of God Through Christ

(Gospel According to St. John, Chapter 15.)

By REV. CLATON S. RICE, D. D.

[The third article, on this subject, given as a devotional at Superintendents' Meeting in Evanston, Ill.—Editor.]

In this, our meditation, then, we would think of God. We would think of Him as revealed to us through Jesus. With Richard Larue Swain, who was once very helpful to some of us, we would feel that if God once got clear to the surface through a man as He did in Jesus, we can see God in that man. And if once He did get clear to the surface, there is hope that we, in our efforts to attain to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ, are not wandering about in a stupid, futile quest for the impossible, as we look at man's destiny in the light of eternity.

In our quest, then, for a fuller life, we must discipline ourselves. We must have our stated moments of communion. We must listen often for the still, small voice. All the while, if we are worthy of our heritage, whether we be in the office, or in the pulpit, or out on the street, we will try to be in that frame of mind which Dr. Ozora Davis described so happily some years ago. He told how his friend, Dr. Hume, of India, and he were walking along the loop district in Chicago, Hume about ready to take the train on his journey back to India. Suddenly Hume took hold of his arm, pulled him into a little alcove in a building in the loop. Then Hume prayed there, thanking God for the fellowship which he and his friend, Ozora Davis, had had, and asking, now that they were to separate, that God would be with Ozora and his work in the seminary, and with him, as he went back to India. Then, arm in arm, out onto the street they went again.

To get away from that state of mind which constantly recognizes the nearness of God, is fatal to us. Even in our hours of greatest pressure, those hours which tend to make us less than Christians, we must keep Him near, as Jesus did. To look up out of our deep study or tribulation and to say, "Father, I have felt you near! Thank you," may be the consummation of long years of discipline—but it is worth everything if we can attain it.

Now there is a gross familiarity which many unthinking people have developed in Protestant circles these days. The liberty of the free churches is ours. But the depth of devotion, the feeling of the greatness of God, so often is lacking. Some men have fought their way free of this "God complex," as they would say. Others never had it, but have enjoyed the freedom which is ours, without knowing the glorious relationship which God our Father has revealed through Christ Jesus our Lord. We would avoid the pitfalls of familiarity and ignorance, as Jesus did. We would always feel Him near, nearer than hands and feet, or the handclasp of a worthy friend.

I know also that because we regard the personality of others as sacred, we have been slow to press the claims of Jesus upon others. We recognize the fact that ardent protagonists, Roman Catholics, Mormons, Christian Scientists, and those believers in pagan economic ideologies, which are being made substitutes for religious faiths, are claiming our brethren on every hand. But we must, then, become ardent in our desire to share with our brethren the glories of this experience which we have had through Jesus and the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free. We must discipline ourselves. Then we will develop again the tender conscience, which grows only as men are in communion with Him through Christ, and are attempting to share their experiences with others.

If the liberty wherewith we are made free has persuaded us to become less ardent to pass on that which we have than others whose viewpoints are far less wholesome than ours are ardent, surely this must be the crowning sin of the free church! God forgive us if the experience of God through Christ has degenerated into an easy, careless acceptance of our liberties, without an appreciation of our responsibilities and privileges in this our fellowship of suffering in an agonizing world! As free sons of God, standing unabashed before Him, how shall we be made ready to carry to our brethren in the ministry, to those who need us and look up to us, something of the glories and responsibilities, something of the sharing of the suffering, which should be ours, save through a frequent renewal of the experience of God through Christ, His Son. And is not this, here at the beginning of this conference, the time and the place to listen for His voice, and then to talk to him.

The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America has prepared materials for Mother's Day, May 12, 1940, which emphasize the Christian home. A printed two-page service of worship can be secured for $1.00 per hundred. The same material in a four-page folder, with two pages left blank for local printing, costs $1.50 per hundred. A four-page folder giving suggestions to the pastor is furnished free with the order of other materials. This fine material can be secured from the Committee on Marriage and the Home, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

April 30 THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION May 2

By JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE, Secretary.

The Convention will be called to order at 2:00 P. M. Tuesday, the 30th of April. The program is planned for the Convention to adjourn with the night session of Thursday, the 2nd of May.

It is expected ministerial and lay delegates will come to the Convention with the expectation of remaining through to the last benediction. The last night's program is planned with this at heart. Attendance on this Convention by members of and duly elected delegates to the Convention should be looked upon by them and held as a sacred obligation. It is something these owe to the Convention and the Lord the Convention endeavors to serve.

ADDRESSES.

The program as planned is not one of numerous address. Committees are asked to report and to eliminate the usual address unless it is designated otherwise. This is done to keep the Convention within the time set for adjournment and to provide sufficient time for the discussion of matters of grave importance.

Dr. Douglas Horton will address the Convention on Tuesday night, basing his presentation on observation on his recent tour of our mission fields.

Mrs. Alice B. Keedy will speak following the reports on missions, and her subject "Question Marks Over Africa" intrigues.

Dr. L. E. Smith is responsible for the program celebrating the "Fiftieth Anniversary" of Elon College.

Our representative on the faculty at Duke University, Dr. H. Shelton Smith will discuss "The Faith We Teach" on Wednesday, following the report on Christian Education.

Dr. H. S. Hardcastle and Rev. J. F. Morgan will, with Dr. Horton, speak to the subject "Building the Church in the Southern Convention" on Thursday morning.

On Tuesday afternoon our president, Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, will be heard in his presidential address on "Youth and the Program of the Church," a pertinent subject.

On the closing night the sermon will be delivered by Dr. J. G. Truitt, pastor of the Suffolk Church.

For the last night's session we desire a consecration service under the direction of our president, a service of consecration for a biennium of growth and progress under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, followed by the Lord's Supper.

REPORTS.

Committee on Social Relations—Dr. D. J. Bowden.

Committee on Temperance—Rev. W. E. Wisseman.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Committee on Finance—Dr. J. H. Lightbourne.

BUSINESS.

On Tuesday afternoon a discussion led by Rev. R. L. House on the subject "The Program of the Southern Convention." This follows a report of the Committee on Finance.

On Wednesday morning two hours will be given to the reports and discussion of the reports on Publications and Promotion. These two have been put together by the last sessions of the Convention and must needs be presented and discussed together.

On Wednesday afternoon the report of the Board of Christian Education, at which time the work with and among our young people will be brought before the Convention.

On Thursday morning the report on the missionary work in the Convention, reporting all agencies at work within the bounds of the Convention.

It is suggested for Wednesday morning the Committee on Evangelism have for the Convention a report which will bring our Conferences and churches face to face with this vital concern for the Kingdom.

On Wednesday afternoon there will be time for miscellaneous business, as there will be on Thursday afternoon when the whole session will be devoted to business.

The morning sessions will begin at nine o'clock, the afternoon sessions at two o'clock, and the evening sessions at seven-thirty o'clock.

Committee on Revision of Principles and Government—Dr. J. O. Atkinson.

Ministerial Loan Fund—Dr. L. E. Smith.

THURSDAY NIGHT.

Committee on Memoirs—Dr. W. M. Jay.

HIGHLIGHTS.

The visit to our Convention of Dr. Douglas Horton, secretary and minister at large of the General Council. Dr. Horton will conduct the daily devotional period, speak on the subject of the Church and deliver an address on Tuesday evening.

The visit with us of Mrs. Alice Keedy and her address on "Question Marks Over Africa."

The "50th Anniversary Celebration" of Elon College on the second night of the Convention.

An address on orphanage work by an authority long sought after by our Orphanage to speak to us on this subject.

Music furnished by the Elon Singers on Wednesday night and by the choir of the host church on Thursday night. For Tuesday night we are hoping to secure a group of singers who will please mightily Dr. Horton and us.

The closing night's session of sermon, consecration and communion.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

This past Sunday at 2:30 P. M. my husband and I drove up to Center Grove Church in North Carolina, near Pittsboro. There we found a friend whom many of you who read this page will know, Rev. W. J. (Billy) Andes. Most of the children in the Valley of Virginia and many of those in North Carolina know him. Mr. Andes is preaching at Hank's Chapel and Happy Home Churches in North Carolina and attending the School of Religion at Duke University. Now he is trying to help the people at Center Grove Church to get a Sunday school and church services going there. Sunday he had with him a group of children from the Hank's Chapel Church. They stood up in front of the congregation and sang several songs for us. It made me think of our Church Vacation School days for they sang the same songs which we learned together in church school—"Wide, Wide As the Ocean," "Into My Heart," both as a song and a prayer, and that is just the way that we used to do in our church school worship services.

Mr. Andes asked me to say a few words to the children and I told them about a little girl who used to come to Jack's church down in Georgia. On the way back home I thought about those little boys and girls who helped Mr. Andes and I said to myself they are little missionaries helping to carry Christ's message in song to other folks. I told them to keep on singing and making other people happy. That would be a good thing for all of us to do. Don't you think so? Let's try to see how cheerful and happy we can be this spring and summer and see how much we can do to help our homes and our Sunday schools and churches to be happier places in which to be. Perhaps some day we will have an opportunity to go and sing our songs for others and help spread happiness and cheerfulness, too.

THE SHEPHERD LAD.

It was springtime in Palestine and in Judah, near Bethlehem; the blue sky and the bright flowers brought joy to the heart of young David who was caring for his father's sheep. It did not seem that the sky had ever been so blue, or the red, yellow, pink and blue of the flowers so brilliant as they were this day when David sat started to play a tune about the way he felt. Jehovah, God, was a very good God to give to men and boys, his children, such beauty and warmth. These are the words which David thought as he played music unto God: Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands. Serve the Lord with gladness: come before his presence with singing. Know ye that the Lord he is God: it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves; We are his people, and the sheep of his pasture.

Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, And into his courts with praise: Be thankful unto him, and bless his name. For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting; and His truth endureth to all generations.

My brothers are away fighting for King Saul, he thought, I wish that I might do something for my King, too. But then I must care for my father's sheep. I am their shepherd just as Jehovah, God, is the Shepherd of my soul and cares for me. Some day I shall grow up to be a man and then I can go and fight for my King in his army. David hoped that the King's forces would be able to win the victory over the Philistines.

In the midst of his musings David was interrupted by a keeper. The keeper told David that his father, Jesse, wanted him to come to the house. David knew that it must be something important so he hastened home. There he found messengers from the King who were waiting to take David back with them. The King was worried and ill and he had sent for young David so that the music of the youth's harp might soothe his troubled spirits. At last David was to do something for his King!

Many of our psalms from the Old Testament have been used as Anthems for our church services of today. The word psalm means song you know. These songs were sung long ago by boys and girls and men and women of the olden days. David who is said to have written many of the psalms was called "The Sweet Singer of Israel." Our psalms can be used as prayers, too. Have you ever seen the twenty-third psalm written in the prayer form? I am sure that all of you know the words of this "Shepherd's Psalm," for you learned them in Church Vacation School or Sunday school. Would you like to use it in your Sunday school class as a prayer and all of you pray it together? Here is the way we pray it:

Thou Lord art my Shepherd; I shall not want.
Thou maketh me to lie down in green pastures:
Thou leadeth me beside the still waters.
Thou restoreth my soul: Thou leadeth me In the paths of righteousness for Thy name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death,
I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me;
Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me
In the presence of mine enemies: Thou anointest my head with oil;
My cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me
All the days of my life:
And I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever,
Amen..

GIVING AND LIVING.

This writer was very much interested in Dr. Johnson's "Suffolk Letter" to THE CHRISTIAN SUN of last week, which letter could have borne the title, "Giving and Living." Possibly my interest was deepened by the fact that The Christian Advocate of the past week had made some editorial comment on the same topic, quoting the colored preacher who said to his congregation, "Bredren, de Scripture rule for givin' is one tenth, but if you can't give a tenth then give a seventh, or a fifth, or a fourth, according to your meanness." The editor of The Christian Advocate commented to the effect that we white ministers often make mistakes in preaching to our congregations about giving, but unfortunately for us we never make a mistake in the direction that this colored minister did. If many of us gave according to our "meanness" we would most likely be giving far more than we do.

Now the serious side of the situation is that there is little, or no, danger that any of us will give too liberally and that too many of us will give too sparingly to really get the joy out of giving. In His immortal sermon on the Mount Lord Christ said, "Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, shaken together, running over. For with what measure ye mete it shall be measured to you again." Then in II Corinthians 9:7 Paul tells us, "God loveth a cheerful giver."

The fact is that giving and living go along together and those who give most liberally as a rule get more out of life as well as put more into life. We by nature love money and that which money can do and hence our reluctance to separate ourselves from it unless we see material returns coming back our way.

This writer recalls asking a man of means some years ago for a contribution for missions. The reply was that he would not give a penny, since God would convert the heathen in His own good time and way. I asked the man if he was willing to pray, or if he did pray, that God would convert the heathen in His own good time and way. The reply was that of course he was willing and did pray to that effect. My reply was that you are willing to give God your prayers, which don't cost you much, but are not willing to give Him your means which represent your earnings and your savings, your energy and effort. This writer recalls hearing the late lamented Dr. W. W. Staley say that praying, if sincerely and in earnest, was a costly business, since one would back up his prayers with his effort, his consecration and his giving. We indeed get real satisfaction out of giving in obedience to our Lord's command, "Ye shall be witnesses of me unto the uttermost parts." He knew full well that many of us could only bear witness through our giving.

This writer had a friend, who passed away some over a year ago, and who seemed to get as much out of life as anyone he had ever met. This friend on being questioned about the matter, for he was a modest man, said that he promised the Lord when his income arrived at certain figures he would increase the Scriptural teaching of giving a tenth and would give a twentieth. He lived to see that day and he made good his promise, and then promised the Lord in all sincerity that when his income arrived, should it do so, at a certain amount he would give one half of his income to the church for the sake of supporting the gospel and winning souls to Christ. That day also came and this friend made good his promise. And then he promised that when his income should be so much he would give ninety per cent and only retain one tenth for his living. This day arrived in the life of our friend and he told me that he was getting more out of life and joy out of giving the ninety per cent and retaining the one tenth for his own modest living than he had ever had before. He was an exceptional sort of man, but impressed one as having sounded life to its depths and found real living in very liberal giving. He was at the time of our conversation supporting over a hundred missionaries out of his own gifts and was living a modest and unassuming life that he might have the joy of giving to the Lord and of being a cheerful giver. The good Book tells us that the "joy of the Lord is your strength" and this friend of ours seemed to us to have found this strength. One can but pity the man who keeps and invests for his own living and own pleasure all that he makes. Such a man is simply not getting out of life all that is coming to him.

Someone was telling the writer of seeing a movie recently entitled, "You Can't Take It With You." There is more truth than fiction in that fact. Giving, as I know full well Brother Johnson will agree, is indeed an essential part of living.

Our gratitude is expressed for all of the above. Particular attention is called to very liberal donations from Christian Temple and Newport News Churches, which churches we are sure enjoyed a good and great Easter service.

Our income for the week is considerably enlarged by check from the

The Board joins with the membership of the church in trusting that this fund, largely increased by individual subscriptions on the part of the membership and their friends, will soon be needed for rebuilding. We are sure that our Elm Avenue people will appreciate any gifts that may be sent by others outside their own membership for their rebuilding fund.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION JOTTINGS FROM JAPAN.

By LUCY M. ELDREDGE.

Darley Downs took us to our Reinanzaka Sunday School. It is the largest Sunday School in Japan, well graded and conducted. After we had taken off our shoes and bowed, we were ready to go to the kindergarten. About twenty children were in a circle, with their heads bowed and their hands clasped in an attitude of prayer. Fond mothers, with black-eyed babies peeking over their shoulders, were watching closely. The prayer ended. "Who would like to sing a song?" asked the teacher. Three volunteers went into a huddle, and then whispered to the pianist, and we heard the song. A bashful child mustered up courage to sing alone. Then there was just time to see the nice sunny square room, which was used for kindergarten during the week, the attractive pictures on the wall, the chairs with their cunning cushions, and the very capable teachers in action, before we moved on to the Middle School department.

They met in one large group for worship. Hymns were on charts placed on the platform. During the class period we learned from the minister, Rev. Michio Kozaki, that the church was sixty years old and that it had been self-supporting under the leadership of his father from the very beginning. The church had 1,200 members, the Sunday School an enrollment of 200. They have a dream of starting a playground and a mothers' school room. Then Dr. Suzuki, the superintendent, who is also a dentist, came and I made my first speech in Japan. The boys and girls laughed heartily in the midst of the interpretation. I was curious. I could not imagine what I had said that was so funny. So I asked Dr. Suzuki. "Well," he answered, "I thought they should learn something. I told them that the American young people gave money so you could come to Japan, but that they would never send anybody very far unless they brought more sent to Sunday School."

We went to church that morning at Azabu, and the sermon was on the Christian home. The minister was the respected and venerable Mr. Matsuno. He called on one of the laymen to tell a story at the end. The man told two stories. The first was about how he found great joy in Christian living by doing more than he was required to do. The second told how a wild nephew became a changed lad after living for a time in a Christian home.

It was the birthday of the Empress when we went to Oji to visit Mr. Taisumi, so we did not even see the kindergarten in action. We did have an interesting conversation, however. We heard about his older young people's group, the "Olive Society," which included both boys and girls, very unusual in Japan. They have meetings, worship, business sessions, and a summer camp at the lake. At camp they have Bible study, play, evening service, camp fire, songs, stories, and stunt night! He told about how the Olive Group were studying the book of Romans. The pastor owned eleven commentaries. These were distributed among the members. In the meeting, the passage was read and then each reported what he found in his commentary.

A younger group is called "Prince," for Oji means Prince. Mr. Taisumi also told about the retreat he had at his summer home each year when the older church members come together for two or three days. Mrs. Taisumi is a trained kindergarten teacher, so the work for children at Oji is well cared for.

RURAL WORKER NEEDED.

As president of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, I am urging all ministers and delegates of this Conference to be present at the Southern Convention which meets at Greensboro. This Convention and its proceedings will be history for our church within a few days. Let us help make it a worthwhile session by our loyal support as representatives of our churches.

It may be easily discovered through THE CHRISTIAN SUN that there are a number of problems facing us at the Convention. If we could solve these problems as easily as we discuss them, it would not be quite so difficult. The most horrible thing about the whole situation is that we are not agreed as to what should be done. Through our thinking together I feel that we may find a solution that will strengthen the cause of the church. However, this cannot be done by cutting out part of our program. We need to enlarge the program.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is in grave danger. It may be discontinued because the subscription list is not sufficient to support it. We, as church members, need a church paper. It brings to the interested church member news from the field. A diligent reading of THE CHRISTIAN SUN is both educational and inspirational. The casual reader may profit very little, however, because of the lack of an interest in the entire work of the church.

If not discontinued altogether, THE CHRISTIAN SUN faces the danger of some radical change. I am not anxious for it to be converted into a monthly magazine. We need its weekly contacts in our homes. On the other hand, I would not be in favor of uniting it with our college paper to be published by college students. They may do a good job of printing, but the paper should have special editing.

Now in regard to the office of the Promotional Secretary. No doubt, too many have been too critical with the type of work which this office has undertaken. If our chief concern is to promote institutions as such, and primarily for financial reasons, then the office should be discontinued. It is true that our institutions should be promoted, but the greatest need for promotion is that of the local church.

Most of our churches are rural. They lack the vision, leadership, and support which our city churches, the minority group, possess. Something must be done for our rural churches more than a preaching service once a month, and possibly a Sunday school. These alone do not build a church. One may say, But it is the pastor's task to build his church. I agree: but we need some worker whose business it will be to study the needs of rural churches, and work with pastors and church leaders to help make a stronger, self-supporting rural church. Because the church program has not been adapted to the needs of the smaller churches, they have been neglected—and that too long. Young ministers once came from rural churches. Some do yet, but the tide is low. It may be the lack of living or the lack of spiritual dynamic on the part of the churches, but it is

"Youth at Work in the Church"

Emily Carleton Lester, Editor

EASTERN VIRGINIA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP HOLDS SPRING RALLY.

Having accepted the cordial invitation of Rev. Mr. House to hold the Rally in Richmond, we forgot the distance on Saturday, March 30, and three carloads of young people left Holland bright and early—eighteen in all, three from the Holland Christian Church and fifteen from Holy Neck.

The morning session consisted of a devotional service and a trip to the Capitol and Valentine's Museum. A picnic lunch in the social hall of the church created an atmosphere that was evident throughout the day. On entering the auditorium for the afternoon session the flags of eighteen nations reminded us of our world-wide interests. The beautiful hymn: "We Would Be Building" (Finlandia), that is now accepted by the young people of many denominations as their hymn, provided the theme for the worship service conducted by Miss Godfrey, who asked Miss Eldredge to give the history of the hymn.

Miss Virginia Gaines, Richmond, a delegate of the Episcopal Church to the World Conference held in Amsterdam, Holland, last year, presented the highlights and personalities of the Conference in such a manner that the audience regretted the ticking clock which reminded us of the passing time. It was the hour for the Commissions, covering the following topics: Christian Youth and Race Relations, Christian Marriage and the Family, Christian Youth and Education, and Christian Youth in the Nation and State. These were taught by Dorothy Truitt, Dr. Harcastle, Rev. J. A. French, and the writer, respectively.

Returning to the auditorium, a gazing at them with such fond eyes. He drew forth his reed pipe and group representing six churches led us in a very impressive worship service. One can't refrain from the comment that the quality of leadership found in our young people's societies bespeaks of future church leadership, if and when they are given the support and encouragement they richly deserve.

The Fellowship Supper served by the ladies of the Richmond Church found seventy-five seated around the tables. The good food, and the excellent music provided by the church orchestra, both found an appreciative reception. According to custom, our genial toastmaster, Bernard Williams, introduced the visitors and Mr. Ing, of the Chinese Baptist Church, Norfolk, responded with a message on the "Power of Jesus to Make All Nations One," in which he showed the barriers erected by men can be overcome by Christ. This coming from a Chinese in these turbulent days for the Orient had a profound effect.

To prove that our president, Charles Heath, had given the Rally his full attention, he produced Miss Lucy Eldredge, known and loved in this area. As we listened to Miss Lucy, we found ourselves visiting the far-flung corners of the world. Her lucid and descriptive pictures of people and places where missionary work is being done, places and people she visited on her recent trip around the world, made us feel the urgency and necessity of supporting those who had volunteered in the glorious enterprise. She stated that Pilgrim Fellowship is world-wide; although it will never have a world president, it will reach to every corner of the world, wherever we have churches.

One left Richmond infinitely more inspired than is sometimes the case when present at some conference gatherings. The young people went, stayed, and left, but the meaning and spirit of such words as cooperation, consecration, and vision found a lodging place in their hearts. Yes, more young people could have been present, more of the pastors, too, at this Spring Rally. Still it would not have solved all the trifling technicalities that are thrust in the way of progress, but it would have shown that Pilgrim Fellowship does mean "Young People in Action for the Master."

Saturday—Steps to True Happiness—
Col. 3: 12-17.

This topic and the next will deal with the important subject, "Making Life Count." The topic for this discussion deals with the goal of life. Each of us should seriously ask ourselves the question, What will I go after? Wealth? Happiness? Or something entirely different?

Let three individuals speak upon the following topics, following each with discussion:

1. The right attitude toward money. In the materialistic world, money is often the goal in life. Many think the successful man is one who makes a lot of money. Many times money overshadows every other characteristic a man may have. What are Jesus' teachings in regard to our possessions?

2. Contrast true happiness with superficial happiness. There are many people who seem to live from one movie to the next, or from one party to the next. They are bored with themselves and the world in between. How may we possess real happiness?

3. Great goals for a life. There are greater goals than either money or pleasure. As followers of Jesus, we must be more concerned with making a life than with merely making money or having a good time. We make life count when we tie it up with worthy goals.

What did the disciples have that caused them to be satisfied without money, without a position with official rulers, or even without a permanent home?

Suggested Hymns—

"O Worship the King."

"Take My Life and Let It Be."

"More Love to Thee, O Christ."

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

MICAH'S VISION OF PEACE.

LESSON III—APRIL 21, 1940.

LESSON: Micah.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isa. 11: 6-10.

GOLDEN TEXT: And they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.—Micah 4: 3.

Today's Sunday school lesson does not fit in very well with the practical facts of our modern world. As these notes are written, at least two great wars are being fought in another part of the world. For nearly three years now Japan has been ravaging her neighboring country China, and these two great nations are still in a death grapple in an undeclared war, which is war in its worst sense. If we turn from Asia to Europe we find that Czechoslovakia and Poland have been crushed and overrun by the vast war machines of Germany and Russia, that Finland has been ravaged by Russia, and that now Denmark and Norway have been invaded and subdued by the ruthless German war machine. Engaged with Germany in this far-flung war are England and France, facing what is probably the most critical hour in their history. In the Balkans there are smoldering fires threatening to break out at any time and become a part of the conflagration that bids fair to extend into the whole world. On the sidelines stands Italy, perhaps already committed to one side or the other, but at present taking no active part in general hostility. On the land and on sea, beneath the land and beneath the sea, and in the air, great war machines are daily exacting their toll on property and on persons. Instead of being a world at peace, it is a world at war. There are wars and rumors of wars, and the end is not yet.

Against this background some people read Micah's prophecies with cynicism, or take them with a grain of salt. They seem futile in the light of present-day events, especially when one considers that it has been at least 2,600 years since Micah predicted that nations should not lift up sword against nation, neither should they learn war any more. It has been over 1900 years since the angels announced the birth of the Prince of Peace and sang their chorus of Peace on earth, goodwill among men. Whatever truth there was in the prophecy, it has not found fulfillment as yet. And there are those who very frankly say that it will never find fulfillment. They take the realistic view that there always have been wars and therefore there always will be wars. They say that there is nothing that we can do about it. And, of course, as one looks only at the immediate present there is something in what they say.

Yet, if one takes the long look back and the long look ahead, one can have confidence to believe that there was something in what the prophet said after all. In spite of the fact that much of our modern scientific skill is devoted to engines of destruction, it is still true that there is an increasing tendency to change the instruments of death and destruction into instruments of life and peace. Nations have not yet learned to beat their swords into plowshares, or their spears into pruning-hooks. They have not stopped lifting up swords against nation; they have not ceased to learn war any more. But more and more individuals and nations are seeing not only the futility, but the stark paganism and barbarism of war. Agencies and institutions of peace have come into being, and although they are as a voice crying in the wilderness their voice is beginning to be heard. There is no relish for the present war, and even while the nations are fighting it they stand condemned by the futility and the folly of it all. Sooner or later mankind is going to learn from bitter experience and from the enlightenment which comes from the gospel of Christ that the sensible thing to do is to devote resources of men and of money to constructive rather than to destructive forces.

Micah not only foresaw the time when peace would come, but he also saw the one through whom it would come. "And this man shall be our peace." Whether or not he was specifically thinking of Christ, his words found fulfillment in Christ. Whatever peace, that is, lasting peace, may come, will come only as His Spirit is operative in human life, both in personal living and in all social relationships. Peace will not come through armies and navies, through treaties or trade, but only as the Spirit of Christ dominates every phase of life. The Church of Christ has a great stake in this matter of peace. She alone has the formula for peace. Our modern world presents a distinct and pressing challenge to the Church of Christ to mobilize for peace.

partly due to the fact that the present program of our Convention does not place enough emphasis on the work of the rural church from a rural standpoint.

By all means let us put some person in the field as a representative to study rural church needs, and assist wherever possible to meet such needs. In addition have a general secretary or superintendent as office worker and editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Money for salaries will be a question, but the returns for such a program will be far reaching. Our entire church program will move forward when rural life is inspired with the right contact.

NOMINATIONS.

In accordance with the suggestion of the editor last week, I am making bold to suggest the following nominations for officers in the Southern Convention: President, Dr. John G. Truitt; Vice-President, Rev. W. E. Wisseman; Secretary, Dr. J. H. Lightbourne; Treasurer, Prof. L. L. Vaughan; the office of Promotional Secretary to be set up as at present. There are other good people to fill these offices, but these are my suggestions.

MONDAY.

REVOLT AGAINST GOD.

"The fellowship of His suffering."
—Phil. 3:10. (Read Phil. 3:5-16.)

Paul says "Through faith I want to share his sufferings, even his death." When one shares sufferings with others, both have common sympathies. That is fellowship.

In view of this fellowship, when we contemplate the extravagant standards of security offered in the name of needy humanity, we believe that God is not taken into account. The unfortunate, the sick, and those suffering privations, instead of seeking fellowship with God, the one who supplies all our needs, they revolt and start movements to force relief.

Relief movements look only to material things to supply relief. They are missing the mark. Christ said, "When you seek your needs, the Father knows what you need, but seek ye first the kingdom of God and all these things shall be added unto you." Make his kingdom first, uprightness first, serve and trust Him first, and "He will supply all thy needs."—(Phil. 4:19.)

Prayer—Our Father, search us, cleanse us, give us trust and make us Thy servants. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE TRUE SECURITY.

"Thou shalt not covet."—Ex. 20:7.
"Beware of covetousness."—Luke 12:15.
"Be ye therefore followers of God."—Eph. 4:1-5.

"A Christian will not covet or desire other men's goods, but will earn his own living and do his duty in that state of life unto which it will please God to call him."—Epis. Catechism.

Prayer—Our Father, the Giver of all life and grace, grant unto us endeavor to enrich the world and not impoverish it; to contribute to the welfare of our fellowman and not be a parasite. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE EVIL OF GAMBLING.

"The love of money is the root of all evil."—(Read Tim. 6:9, 10.)

There is a gambling spirit in man. That spirit is expressing itself more and more. It is becoming more prevalent each year. When and where will it stop? Just when and where the evil of it is realized and it becomes undesirable.

The magazine The New Age gives a fine statement of this evil. Speaking of the sweepstakes it says: "Gambling leaves in its wake increasing want, dishonesty and idleness. In Ireland, its true, many benefit by the revenues of the sweepstakes, such as hospitals, but its losses are enormous in all those elements of human behavior that characterize a strong virile people.

Let us who believe in God and follow Him pray for our country that we may not fall victims of this evil. Amen.

THURSDAY.

OBEDIENCE TO THE VOICE.

"Thou shalt therefore obey the voice of the Lord, thy God, and do His commandments."—Deut. 27:10.

While it is true that wickedness often approves what it ought not; and also that a man's sense of right and wrong is blunted by habits of vice or wrong-doing; it is also true that nearly every one carries in a little room of his soul a sense of the excellence of good, and when he may have occasion to think of it, he recognizes that sense as coming from his original purity.

This sense springs from God. To spurn that which depresses and harms, and to cultivate that which lifts, ennobles and enriches personality is to cultivate God. Give God a chance.

Prayer—Our Father, as we are so called so enables us to obey, to live upon the high level of goodness which refrains from advancing self, but serves the brotherhood of man, in Christ. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THIS STUPID WORLD."

"Father, forgive them for they know not what they do."—Luke 23:44.

It is said that "Jesus fell into the hands of sinners and they killed him." Is that true? Is it not rather true that he fell into the hands of stupid men and they killed him? Analyze the traits of man in his dealings with worries and he is often found to be profoundly stupid.

There is a story told of Isaac Newton and his dog. Newton had worked out a problem of science and laid the papers on his desk. In an unguarded moment the dog got on the desk, knocked over the burning candles, which set fire to the papers and his problem was lost. A stupid man would have vented his ire on the dog. But not Newton. He took the dog in his arms, stroked him to sleep and said to him, "You little know what mischief you have done. I will do my work again." That was being like Jesus.

Prayer—Say the Lord's prayer and pray as your thoughts dictate.

SATURDAY.

"ALONE."

"My presence shall go with thee."—Exodus 33:14.

"Though I walk through the shadow of death, I will fear no evil for thou art with me."—Psalm 23:4.

A Service of Worship

By DR. BENJAMIN E. MAYS,

Dean of Howard University, Washington, D. C.

[This fine worship service, used by Dr. Mays at the recent Philippines Conference in Washington, D. C., may be of value to others who lead services of worship.—Editor.]

PRELUDE (Aduience Silent).

HYMN—"Dear Lord and Father of Mankind."

THE BEATITUDES WITH RESPONSES—

LEADER: Blessed are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

PEOPLE: Lord, have mercy upon us, and gather us with all who seek the humble and contrite heart.

LEADER: Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.

PEOPLE: Bring those of us who mourn, O Lord, into the healing shadow of Thy love.

LEADER: Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.

PEOPLE: Lord, have mercy upon us, and deliver us from all contention and false pride.

LEADER: Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.

PEOPLE: Feed our hungry souls, O Lord, upon the bread of life.

LEADER: Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

PEOPLE: Lord, have mercy upon us, and incline our hearts toward all tenderness and love.

LEADER: Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.

PEOPLE: Dwell Thou within our hearts, and let us see Thee everywhere.

LEADER: Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called sons of God.

PEOPLE: Give unto us an understanding heart and patient spirit that we may follow after peace and pursue it.

LEADER: Blessed are they that have been persecuted for righteousness sake: for theirs is the kingdom of God.

PEOPLE: Have mercy upon us, O Lord, and make us more worthy of the martyrs who have gone before us.

LEADER: Blessed are ye when men shall reproach you and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceedingly glad: for great is your reward in heaven.

PEOPLE: Lord, keep us faithful even unto death and bring us at last to thine eternal city.

PRAYER—By the Leader.

HYMN—"Break Thou the Bread of Life."

READING—By the Leader. (See Back Page.)

PRAYER FOR DELIVERANCE—

LEADER: The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart; and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit. Many are the afflictions of the righteous; but the Lord delivereth him out of them all.

LEADER AND

PEOPLE: O God, who art our Refuge in pain, our Strength in weakness, our Help in tribulation, and our Solace in tears, heal, we pray Thee, the diseases of those who are sick; turn all grief to prayer, and for all prayer give peace.

May those who are harassed by fears, afflicted by poverty, fretted by care, worn by illness, or given over to punishment, be set free by Thy redemption; raise them to amendment of life, and cherish them by Thy strong compassion.

And to the dying, open the gates of heavenly life, that the grave itself may praise Thee, and death declare Thy glory. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

LEADER: Almighty God, not in reliance on any merits of our own do we venture to lay our petitions before Thee, but sustained by Thy gracious promises, and trusting to Thine unfathomable mercies. May we never lose the sense of Thy loving presence. In every trial and temptation of our life may we look to Thee and not be ashamed. When heavy burdens oppress us, or when we are disheartened in our tasks, and our spirit faints within us, and the gloom of failure settles upon us:

PEOPLE: Holy Father, help us.

LEADER: When shadow of sickness, sorrow and suffering falls upon us and our dear ones, and hides Thee frem our vision:

PEOPLE: Holy Father, help us.

LEADER: When doubts assail us concerning Thy providence, Thy justice, and Thy goodness; when we question the value (Continued on page 15.)

THE QUIET HOUR.

We listened the other day to an address by a man who knew Henry Morton Stanley, who in 1869 was asked by the proprietor of the New York Herald to go and find Livingstone. Stanley told the speaker that he asked Livingstone once, "Have you ever been alone? I do not mean by yourself. I mean alone." Livingstone replied, "Yes, once. One morning encamped in the wilds of this country (Africa) I felt alone. I left the camp and my native helpers and went out into jungle. I came upon a hill that seemed to fit my feelings. There I prayed. There I found God in a way that I had never known him before. I was never alone again."

Prayer—O Lord, our God. In Thy presence is light, and light and love, and a lifetime fellow-traveler. May we be always conscious of Thy presence. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"UP TO US."

"As many as touched him were made whole."

It is a truism that a person can be helped only when he wants to be. Jesus loved not because man deserved it but because he needed it. His longing and weeping for Jerusalem is an example. It was lost because it would not.

Christ's love can save only those who open their hearts to him. For example: The sinner who prayed, "Have mercy upon me," and the thief on the cross. Likewise one may be sick and the medicine that would cure him may be within his reach, but unless he reaches out and takes the cure, he will not be healed.

Jesus was criticized by men of his day because only certain ones were healed while hundreds of others in need received no help. They did not understand "that the latch-string," so to speak, "is on the inside of the door" and that the presence of Jesus can be enjoyed only when He is admitted. There is only one power that can exclude Jesus, that is the power of a stubborn heart.

Prayer—O Divine Presence, Thy love affords us comfort and security and enables us to face life and death unafraid. Amen.

"When we cease to make mistakes—the typesetters especially—unsanctified mistakes, we shall join the company of Enoch and Elijah on the other shore!"

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

I read in the daily paper some days ago that a good woman had died; when she made her will making distribution of her wealth she remembered her orphanage with a gift of thirty thousand ($30,000.00) dollars. She was a North Carolina lady and her orphanage was located in North Carolina. The writer has learned that for many years, she has been deeply interested in the orphanage of her denomination. She had been a liberal supporter and had been liberal in her gifts from year to year. And by her liberal gift in her last will and testament she will continue to live and continue to be a blessing to the children she loved so well.

The writer often wonders how many members of the Congregational-Christian Church have made their wills and have remembered the Christian Orphanage in their wills, whether it be for a large or small amount. If you don't want to remember your Orphanage with a large amount, leave it a smaller amount, but remember it with some amount.

The Orphanage always needs money to meet the many demands made upon it. The Christian Orphanage was established because of the cry of the orphaned and dependent child. All the years since it opened its doors the cry has come and will still come. Four hundred and sixty-four have been heard and their call answered. The cry will come through the years because children will continue to lose their parents and be left out in the cold. They will appeal to your Orphanag for a home and a chance in life. What do you want your Superintendent to do about it? He can only support a certain number on the income. He could answer the call of a number of others if funds were sufficient.

Some time ago the Orphanage had an urgent appeal to take a child. The appeal was presented to the Men's Bible Class in the church from which the child came. Then the class voted unanimously that the orphanage should take the child.

Remember the Orphanage with your gifts while living and remember it in your will. That will be your last gift and we will miss you after you are gone.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

A SERVICE OF WORSHIP.

of this earthly life and the reality of the heavenly, and our soul wanders in darkness, groping vainly for the place of her rest:

PEOPLE: Holy Father, help us.

LEADER: When, through self-indulgence, or from a blind following of the multitude, or by suppression of the voice of conscience, our sense of duty grows dim, and we call good evil and evil good, and the darkness light and the light darkness:

PEOPLE: Holy Father, help us.

LEADER: And, immersed in sordid cares, or in the eager pursuit of worldly aims and pleasures, the very thought of Thee fades out of our consciousness:

PEOPLE: Holy Father, help us.

LEADER: And when there is a stirring within us of a better spirit, and a healthy discontent seizes upon us and bids us strive to raise our souls out of the dark abyss to our Father who is in heaven, then come Thou to meet us, to cheer and hearten us:

PEOPLE: Holy Father, help us.

LEADER: O God, in the abundance of Thy loving-kindness, answer us with Thy true salvation:

PEOPLE: We beseech Thee, hear us.

HYMN: "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

LEADER: More than 1900 years ago, a Palestinian Jew hanged, dying between two thieves—because he dreamed a dream that all men are sons of God, and that when we hurt man we hurt God. Some blessed day a stupid world will rise to the Divinity of God and crown Jesus Lord. Then the nations of the earth will know that armies and navies, battleships and machine guns, airplanes and submarines will never bring peace to a suffering world. And that the acquisitions of political, material, and commercial power are not permanent possessions, but are as "the vapors of night. They fade and die in the morning of reality."

To achieve a warless world, to build justice in the economic order, to destroy forever, racial discrimination of every kind—so that every son of man will have an unrestricted opportunity to be born, to flower forth and to unfold—to cooperate in building a world like this is our task.

PRAYER: Leader and the people.

O God, who hast made of one blood all nations of men to dwell on the face of the whole earth, and who of old didst send forth Thy messengers to prepare the way of the Lord; grant that all men everywhere may seek after Thee and find Thee. Bring the nations into Thy fold, and hasten Thy Kingdom. Prepare our hearts to receive Thy truth in the love of it. May the truth make us free from the bondage of error and evil with the glorious liberty of the children of God. May the fruit be unto holiness, and the end the life that is life indeed. Amen.—St. Anselm.

HYMN—"Faith of Our Fathers."

CLOSING PRAYER BY THE LEADER.

DR. KING RETIRES.

Thanksgiving services, establishment of a circulating library, and weekly symphonic hours and other special musical programs. Dr. King has been a faithful minister to his people, a valuable leader in greater Miami where he has served as president of the Mimai Beach Welfare Board, president of the Central Council of Social Agencies, vice-president of the Community Chest, a moving spirit in interdenominational church movements, and has occupied a place of usefulness among the Congregational Churches of Florida, serving for many years as chairman of the Board of Directors of the State Conference.

HENDERSON, NORTH CAROLINA.

On Friday evening, March 29, 1940, we were invited over to the church and ushered into the Sunday school auditorium. The lights were turned on and there sat about fifty members and friends of the church awaiting our arrival. Quite a surprise to us it was. After a number of stunts and fun, several slips of paper were given to different ones. Each had to read and follow the directions that were given on his or her slip. Ours contained the following:

If you'll follow these directions
I'm sure you'll make connections.
Grab your wife by the hand
Then go west, young man,
In a room there you'll find
Treasures of all kind.

We followed these directions and there we found such treasures as these: flour, lard, sugar, coffee, cereals, milk, butter, eggs, canned goods, soap, towels, linen, and many other good things. We are very grateful to these good people for all these things. In return we hope to show them our appreciation by the very best service we can render to them.

The work is going along very nicely here. The attendance in both the Sunday school and worship service is increasing. Last Sunday we had a large congregation and the highest attendance at Sunday school. Two new members were received into the church. This is a congenial group to work with. There is a fine spirit of fellowship and cooperation. The group as a whole seems to be very optimistic. We covet the prayers of all those who read these lines for the success of the work in Henderson.

LOVE

By W. C. ALLEN.

"But Love Is Still the Pilot As of Old."

I have met many people of many races in many parts of the world. I have learned that if you scowl at men they generally return the scowl. If you smile on them they will respond in kind. If you are impatient with them they will resent it. If you fear them they will fear you. If you meet them with genuine frankness they will reply with open hearts. I have seen that as we do unto others do they unto us. I have witnessed the wonderful rewards accruing to Christians when they obey the law of love that Jesus taught.

Love is the fulchrum supporting the hope of the world. Love is the one great untried factor in human relationships. Love is the song of the birds and the thunder of the sea. Love is at the center of the heart of God. Love proclaims kinship with Jesus Christ.

There are millions of homes in civilization today where lightness of heart and the joy of life would reign, if husbands in the midst of their anxieties would use the old-time gentleness with their wives, if the wives would speak forgivingly to their husbands, if the parents sympathized with their children and the children with their parents. If any of my readers doubt this let them, with infinite patience, try to the very full, the beautiful and satisfying power of domestic love.

When love shall become more generously the motive of our lives, conservatives and radicals alike will find that the mutual forbearance and justice which it creates will constitute the only solvent of the hard problems which we are compelled to face. Love does away with exploitation and oppression—love is the cure of envy and strife. Love is not softness—it is strength—it often takes supreme courage to love.

Will Lead Business and Devotions at The Southern Convention

DR. DOUGLAS C. HORTON.

DR. STANLEY C. HARRELL.

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. D., is president of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches and will preside at the sessions in Greensboro next week. Dr. Harrell is pastor of the Christian Church in Durham, N. C.

Dr. Douglas C. Horton is secretary and minister for the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, with offices in New York City. Dr. Horton has recently returned from a trip around the world in which he visited our missions. He is an interesting speaker, a deeply spiritual man, and a clear thinker. Dr. Horton will lead the devotional services daily at the Greensboro Convention and will give an address on Tuesday evening at seven-thirty.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The biggest event in our church next week is the Southern Convention. Be sure to attend.

The office of THE CHRISTIAN SUN at Elon College, N. C., will be glad to receive two dollars for your renewal, or two dollars for a new subscription to your church paper.

Rev. B. J. Earp reports that he has just closed a successful revival at Ingram, with sixteen converts and seven additions to the church. Rev. J. L. Neese was the evangelist.

If you expect entertainment overnight in Greensboro during the Southern Convention, write to the pastor, Rev. W. E. Wisseman, 315 North Edgeworth Street, Greensboro, N. C.

Col. and Mrs. J. E. West of Suffolk, Va., have been ill with influenza recently. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is wishing for them a speedy recovery. Col. West is the chairman of the Southern Convention Mission Board.

Rev. O. A. Elmore reports that our church in Albemarle, N. C., has recently had a coat of paint inside. This was a much needed improvement and the people are delighted to have succeeded in getting it done.

Several of our ministers attended the meeting of the Seminar on the Pastor's Class in New York this week. They are helping to re-write materials to aid pastors in training young people for church membership.

Mother's Day will be observed as usual on the second Sunday in May, which is May 14. Do not forget to plan a suitable program for this day in our church. Materials may be secured from the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C.

First Church, Greensboro, is looking for a large attendance at the Southern Convention next week. If you are to be among those present, you can help them by telling them to expect you. This applies only to those who are staying over night.

Our new church in Asheboro, N. C., was assigned a quota of five subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It now has nine paid in advance subscribers. Rev. A. L. Granger, Jr., is the pastor of this church. Who will be the next to report their quota completed?

The Chattanooga Business Women's Club secured an ambulance which enabled Rev. M. J. Sweet to go to his church for the Easter Sunday morning worship. Mr. Sweet has been confined to the hospital for several months because of an injured knee.

Chaplain Rountree writes that he is convalescing at his San Diego home. For the past month he has enjoyed excellent health. Recently he has had some set-backs, but he expects to recover. He is glad to be able yet to write for the "Quiet Hour" page of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

FORWARD TOGETHER.

[AN EDITORIAL.]

Come to the Convention with your face towards the future and with faith in your fellows. If the present organization is not right, then make it what it should be and get behind the program with all your might. If the leaders are not headed in the right direction, have the courage to tell them so or to elect those who will do the things needed.

Our church has had thirty thousand members in the Southern Convention much too long for happiness. Let's get more. There are thousands of people near us that need the message of Christ. Let's get them for our churches.

We talk of freedom and democracy. Let's make them work. We talk much of cooperation. Let's cooperate. We boast of our denomination. Let's be a real part of it. We say that we are missionary. Let's send some missionaries. We talk about tithing. Let's try it. We claim to be evangelistic. Let's evangelize. We preach about love. Let's love one another fervently. We say we believe in God. Let's demonstrate some faith. We claim to believe in the church. Let's build some churches. We have a college to train leaders. Let's train our leaders. We think we are broad-minded. Let's include all of God's children in our thoughts and love.

It is all right to record our history, but it is much more important to make some history worth recording.

MRS. KEEDY TO BE GUEST.

The Rev. Mrs. Alice B. Keedy, a member of the Los Angeles, Calif., Association, is to be a guest speaker at the Southern Convention on Thursday morning, May 2, following the reports on missionary activities. Her subject will be "Question Marks Over Africa."

Mrs. Keedy, before her marriage to a home missionary pastor in North Dakota, was a home missionary pastor in the same state. She has just returned from a year in Africa, where she has visited our mission fields and those of other denominations.

Those who have heard Mrs. Keedy recommend her very highly as an interesting and inspiring speaker, saying that she makes you see people and things in Africa and sense the values that are at stake there.

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA DELEGATES.

The Western North Carolina delegates to the Southern Convention of Congregational - Christian Churches are as follows:

Ministers—G. O. Lankford, M. A. Pollard, T. J. Green, G. M. Tally, B. H. Lowdermilk, A. Lanson Granger, Jr., J. Q. Pugh, H. V. Cox, J. U. Fogleman, W. C. Martin, D. R. Moffitt.

Lay Delegates—Cyrus Shoffner, Walter Rightsell, Paul Coble, W. H. Freeman, H. C. Farrell, F. M. Wright, J. H. Harden, O. D. Lawrence, A. P. Gaster, Geo. T. Gunter, Mrs. D. A. Cornelison.

GEO. T. GUNTER,
Secretary.

CHURCHES, NEW AND OLD.

The Southern Convention has given the writer the chance to get acquainted with our churches. The pulpit of the largest and the smallest churches have been opened to him. Sometimes silver plates passed among well-dressed worshipers who put in from their abundance, and sometimes a basket was passed to those whose clothes were not so nice but who contributed to the church out of their poverty. At some places the services were formal, the music classic, and the sermon philosophic, but in other places the service was not planned, the music that of untrained voices making melody with a dilapidated organ or piano, and the sermon a simple little talk about being good because God cares.

There are four new churches in our midst. They have been organized in recent months. One of them has more than 150 people present for Sunday school. All are on the way up. They are hopeful. They are at work.

There are other churches that have lived for more than a century. They are proud of their age. They have served well for a long time. Some of them still have the spirit of youth, of hope, of service. But some have ceased to grow. They are looking to the past, not to the future. They are anxious about sticking to things as they were, and are little concerned about making the church what it should be. Differences of opinion have settled down into antagonisms, hatreds, unwillingness to agree. About some of the churches could be said what Martha said to Jesus about Lazarus, her brother, who had been dead four days. They have no place in the living Body of Christ.

But there are other old churches that are taking on new life. Like the redwoods of California, their bodies have been prostrate, but from that form have come new sprouts that rise to the heights. Perhaps the minister has seen new light, or some member has become alive to new responsibilities, or the young people have attended some meeting and got hold of inspiring truth that set them to work in the old church. Whatever it was that caused the change is unimportant, but the new current of spiritual grace that moves through some of our old churches gives us hope for the years that lie ahead.

DEVELOPMENT OF CHURCHES.

The greatest need of the Southern Convention is the development of local churches.

Give us more and better local churches and the institutions and boards will be supplied with needed funds. Without the churches the funds cannot increase.

To get better churches we will need better pastors, deacons, teachers, secretaries, treasurers, mission leaders, Sunday school superintendents, and young people. These can be secured by proper selection and training.

If this reasoning is logical, the best thing the Convention can do for itself is to develop the churches. This will mean more and better workers as representatives of the Convention, and a concerted effort to train the present local church leaders and to secure new leaders. This may be an expensive process for the first few years, but it seems to be the only road to ultimate success.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN."

This paper is now ninety-six years old. It has had difficulties through the years. It still has them.

The difficulty most talked about is the fact that there is not enough money with which to pay for the paper. This is a real problem. But it is not the greatest.

What goes into the paper is more important. If the paper is to aid in the development of people and churches, it must be edited with that in view. The paper feeds the minds of the people. The food should be selected with care and prepared with skill. This cannot be done under the present conditions. The present editor is untrained for journalism, is scattered over two states as promotional secretary, and has an office 180 miles from where the paper is printed. This is not conducive to the making of a good paper. Much of the material is in print when he sees it first even though he is responsible for what is printed. Because we do have a responsible printer, the paper is usually worth reading by all members of the churches.

But most important is getting the paper read by our people. Unless there are readers the paper has no value even though it may be the best that skilled workers can make, and even if it costs nothing. At present we are not succeeding in getting the people to read the paper. This is the major problem relative to it.

The Convention is under obligation to prepare a good paper, and the churches would seem to be the ones to get the readers. This is a cooperative undertaking on the part of the Convention and the churches. If one fails, both fail. One cannot succeed without the other.

LAST CALL TO DELEGATES.

Before this paper is in print, the reports to be made at the Convention in Greensboro next week should be in the hands of the delegates. The reports are sent to you so you can know what has been done, and what plans are proposed for the next two years. It is hoped that you will study the reports with care and go to the Convention ready to discuss and vote on them.

This is the last request for you to attend the Convention. You were elected by your Conference because your fellow-Christians thought that you would attend, speak your mind about the work, and vote intelligently. You cannot fail those who have trusted you.

The Convention opens at two o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, April 30, at First Christian Church, corner of Walker Avenue and Eugene Street, Greensboro, N. C., and continues through the night session on Thursday following.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

In a recent conversation, a dear friend, a prominent physician and devoted member of the Christian Church said: "I would be willing to be one of ten or more men to provide a salary for a competent minister to visit our churches and try to enlist our people in tithing." He said: "Dr. Johnson, what do you think of my suggestion?"

That is a great suggestion. It goes to the very heart of our financial problems. Giving is inevitably linked with Christian living. And systematic giving is the reasonable way to give. Tithing, as a minimum basis, is the Biblical standard for such members to adopt. It puts giving on a sound basis, with every member on the same level—"as the Lord hath prospered you." In this respect the church standard of giving differs from the requirements of lodges and other benevolent institutions and societies. Many of these require every member to give the same amount annually. The poor are required to give as much as the rich, although they are not able to do so. But a definite percentage of one's income is fair for both poor and rich.

When the tithing standard has been adopted it simplifies and dignifies the opportunity and responsibility of giving to the cause of Christ. After many years of experience, as tithers, our family would not think of going back to the haphazard, hit and miss method of having to decide exactly how one shall give to the church. Giving becomes a joy and a privilege. Tithers do not complain about how much they give. That matter was settled when the tithing plan was adopted. The amount of one's income determines how much is to be available for giving. The only question left is to decide to what causes one shall give. Mistakes may be made in the choice of these causes, but under the guidance of one's better judgment these mistakes will take care of themselves.

The Southern Convention should have a place and a person to promote tithing in every church within our fellowship. Why could not this be the major duty of the Promotional Secretary? It certainly is a needy and a fertile field. Members of Congregational and Christian Churches, in Virginia and North Carolina are on an equal with the members of the churches of other denominations, in these states, in earning capacity. Too many times during the past year, it has been said: "We have no rich people in our Convention." When did they all die? And when they died what became of their property? Our people are not all poor. They earn on the same basis as other people. They drive as many automobiles, burn as much gas, visit as many movies, dress as well, live in as comfortable homes as other people. If they will put their living, earning, giving and going on a sound business basis, keep account of income, earnings, expenses, and set aside a tithe—one-tenth of their income—for the Kingdom of God, a new era will dawn for our church in the next decade.

Someone must assume the responsibility for enlisting tithers in the local church. That is one of the needs of our local churches. They need to know the satisfaction of tithing their income for the development of their local church and the general enterprises of their denomination. It is a reflection upon our way of living when some one must go out to solicit money for our various institutions and enterprises. This would not be necessary if one half of our members were tithers. If every member of every church would tithe, and pay a reasonable part of this tithe into the treasury of the local church, for such distribution as the church might, in its wisdom, designate, the Southern Convention would have enough money to pay off the indebtedness of every institution and every local church within the next five years. This is the key to a solution of our financial problems.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE CONVENTION.

The interest of our church in the South centers immediately on the biennial session of our Southern Convention to be held in Greensboro, April 30-May 2. All who are vitally interested in our church and its program for the future are concerned for the possible actions of the Convention affecting the life and work of the church. I had hoped that more practical suggestions from a larger number of our ministers and laymen concerning our responsibilities and opportunities might have appeared in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The entire membership of the church should be informed through our church paper concerning the opportunities that confront us and the plans that we propose, that we might take advantage of such opportunities. With the dissemination of information concerning these matters, interest in our approaching Convention might be intensified.

It is your writer's sincere conviction that if the church is to grow as it should, there must be a program of education presenting its purposes and resources reaching as nearly as possible the entire constituency, and further that a larger representation must be brought to our conferences and Conventions than heretofore if this education is to be nearly complete and effective. It is to be hoped sincerely that every delegate elected to the Convention shall be present for the sessions of the Convention. If this could happen, then our representation would be far too small if our people are to be informed to the extent that there shall be unified action in a forward program for our church. I know that there are those among us, and sincere they are, who feel that the representation in the Convention should not be changed. If these interested members will take time to study our Woman's Missionary Organization within our church, its growth, and the contributing factors to that growth and development, they will have a practical demonstration as to what would happen throughout the entire church if we could adopt some plan that would bring our membership into groups for information, study, and planning. I know that we must have leaders, but we must also have an informed constituency if that constituency is to follow intelligent leadership. I favor a much larger representation in our biennial meetings than we have at present. This would not solve all our problems, but it would at least acquaint a larger number of our people with our problems and our plans for the solution of the same.

At this Convention we will in all probability be directing the future of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, our church paper. A few of us can make a decision, but we are dependent on the constituency for the effectiveness of that decision. They should have a voice in plans affecting our church paper. This is not only true in this respect but with the other problems of equal importance that we will be called upon to face and offer solutions.

There seems to be an increasing indifference on the part of our ministers, I mean our pastors, as regards the meeting of our Convention. It should be mandatory, not from the standpoint of law but certainly from the standpoint of conscience and interest of every active minister in our Convention, to attend the sessions of the Convention. If it is not convenient, he should make it convenient. Nothing should bar him from attendance other than illness. A number of our active pastors failed to appear at any time during the session of the Portsmouth Convention. If the church does not have authority to issue warnings in this regard, it should assume it. Every pastor in our church ought to be interested in the work of the church, not simply of his local congregation but of the entire church, and his interest should be of such a nature that it would take him to the larger councils of his church regardless of cost.

I would suggest that the President and Secretary of our Convention issue an earnest invitation directly to every pastor in the Convention to attend this particular session. His presence, counsel, and prayers are needed. This is to express the earnest hope that as a church we may assemble in Convention in prayer and expectancy that the spirit of wisdom and power may be given us that we may be more effective instruments in the hands of God for the coming of His Kingdom in the earth.

L. E. SMITH.

PRAYING AND PAYING FOR ELON COLLEGE.

In the preamble of the Christian faith stands the prerogative of prayer. Prayer with a premise and a purpose may precipitate and prescribe a premium. In other words, praying may and should become a prelude to paying. Prayer may be a pageant of pety and perverted petitions, or it may have philanthropic value. Pecuniary pabulum is one of the pragmatic and prophetic proofs of power in prayer.

We have a great college. This institution, freed of financial and psychological handicap, could and would accomplish the unprecedented. Our church would experience a renaissance of education and growth in things material, intellectual, and spiritual. We must cease multiplying our failures, overcome the spirit of defeatism in our church, and sound the note (pay the note please) of victory.

Our college has a great president. Let us say to our beloved Dr. Smith, "I believe so thoroughly and completely in the work you are doing that I am praying earnestly for you, lest something on my part be left undone.

I believe that if we, as a church, seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, all these things shall be added unto us, and that out of our united prayers will arise the answer to our petitions. I pray that you may have the cooperation necessary to do the things all of us dearly want to see done. May the God of all Grace continue to open doors of opportunity to you and may the light of Elon shine more and more unto the perfect day. I am grateful for your devotion and loyalty to our church, for your consecration, your character, your faith and vigorous leadership. May God richly bless you."

And so, my dear reader, do not dismiss your responsibility for Elon College with the simple nonchalant statement, "I cannot pay," but face the more vital and fundamental question, "How much have I prayed?" Poverty of the purse may be forgiven, but poverty of the prayer life carries its penalty into the very precincts of progress. Praying points the way to paying, and paying paves the way to progress.

CONVENTION YOUNG PEOPLE.

Many have written concerning the problems of the Southern Convention. Very little has been offered in the solution of those problems. It is with the idea of helping to solve one of the Convention's problems that the following is offered.

Many young people are concerned with their relationship, especially in an organizational way, with the Southern Convention. As a result several of us have talked the situation over and the following plan is suggested.

That the Convention establish a Pilgrim Fellowship Council of the Convention. This proposed council would consist of the president of each Conference Pilgrim Fellowship and also one representative elected by each Conference Pilgrim Fellowship. This would make ten young people in that Council. In addition to these ten young people, the Board of Christian Education is to elect two of its adult members to that Council and the Woman's Board of the Convention to elect two of its adult members to that Council. Thus there would be fourteen members of the Convention Pilgrim Fellowship Council. The Southern Convention would authorize the election of this Council.

This Pilgrim Fellowship Council of the Convention would attempt to help correlate the young people's work of the Convention with the work and program of the Convention and of the church as a whole. It would help work out young people's programs for Conference and local Pilgrim Fellowship groups and promote young people's work wherever possible. This Council would help all young people regardless whether the local group is a Christian Endeavor, a Missionary Society, a Sunday school class. Some have chosen the name of Pilgrim Fellowship for the local group. All of these would be regarded as young people's work. It would not necessitate any change in the name of the local group of the individual church. The work of the Council should be one of an educational and a planning nature. Its work could better be decided when such a Council would meet.

The above plan is just offered for consideration from these interested young people, who have met with and talked with the writer. Any suggestion will be appreciated and any other plan for the young people of the Convention will certainly be entertained and considered by the Convention when it meets in Greensboro.

There is a growing consciousness that the Convention should not retrench but should daringly move forward. After much discussion with young people and their leaders, there comes the desire for a Director of Religious Education and Young People's Work. It is recognized that the Promotional Secretary cannot do all of the work of the Convention, although he it said that he has done a magnificent piece of work during the last two years. The work of our Convention in the individual churches must be strengthened. We cannot build great institutions and great Convention Boards until we have better local churches, better local leadership and a spirit of kindred minds pervading our ecclesiastical atmosphere. Let us unite our spiritual lives, and our programs and plans and organization with all of their machinery will operate much better.

W. J. ANDES.

From the Down South News we learn that our Alabama churches have had some noted visitors in recent weeks: Dr. Oscar E. Maurer, Moderator of the General Council; Miss Helen Disney, missionary nurse of the American Board in China, now home on furlough; Dr. William F. Frazier of the Home Boards; Dr. Dwight Bradley, chairman of the department of Social Action for our denomination; and Dr. John R. Scotford, of the editorial staff of Missionary Herald.

Elon College Golden Anniversary

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY CLUB.

The thermometer continues to climb but rather slowly. A letter from a friend this morning states that the economic conditions at home and abroad are of such a nature that no one can tell exactly what he can do about donations. I am sure that all conversant with national and international affairs will agree. Disturbed conditions in general by no means help to settle conditions in particular. Since economic conditions are not so favorable for the success of Elon College's financial program which calls for the clearing of the debts against the institution, it becomes a more definite obligation upon the ones of us who are interested in the college and our church to make sure that we do our duty to the full extent of our ability, in order that the college may be relieved of its present embarrassment and set free for a more effective program for our church.

We are grateful for the response on the part of friends. There aren't many more weeks before commencement. We are exceedingly anxious that a sufficient amount to cover the obligations of the college may be secured on or before commencement. If you have been waiting, please don't delay any longer. A friend said Thursday night, "I have been planning all the while to send in my subscription. I am ashamed that I had to wait for you to come." We all should be prompt in our responses to this call of our institution. Time and expense forbid a personal approach, so, my dear reader, won't you please forward your subscription now, or if you have subscribed and payment is due, won't you please send check.

OFFERINGS FOR THE COLLEGE.

Interest in the college on the part of the churches is encouraging. There are a number of our churches and Sunday schools who are anxious to see the college succeed who have not yet found it possible to make a payment to the college on their conference apportionments.

The official college period was so unfavorable from the standpoint of the weather that an extremely limited number of our churches made their usual contributions. Of late, a number have responded. We are grateful. From now until commencement is a very needy period. It is to be hoped that many others may yet send their contributions. All payments are credited on conference apportionments.

We are grateful for the ones who have responded since our last report:

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

The second Sunday in May will soon be here and I am going to say something about that day. Why? Because I am afraid that some of you may forget what day that is going to be and because I think that it is nice to plan for things well in advance. Yes! that is Mother's Day. Perhaps some of you will want to prepare for that day by being especially nice to mother each day until then. You will find that mother will appreciate little kindnesses every day as much as she would appreciate a huge gift on Mother's Day. Too, if we get in the habit of being our mother's cheerful helpers before Mother's Day then possibly we will continue to be after Mother's Day. Then perhaps our mothers will not feel that they just dreamed Mother's Day, but that the feeling of love and appreciation which they felt on that special day really does exist a permanent fact.

Certainly I feel that it is a good thing to do something just a little bit extra on that day for her. Yet, if you do not have any money of your own with which to get a gift for her don't let that bother you. Some of the loveliest gifts which were ever received by mothers did not cost money but were created by loving thoughtfulness. I know that each one of you can make or do some one thing which would be a beautiful gift for mother on that day. If you can't think of anything right off, ask your father to help you think of something. Or you might ask an older brother or sister to help or one of your friends. Your pastor might give you a helpful hint if you can't get one elsewhere. Yet, I think if it is just your own idea that you will enjoy doing it more. The two stories which I am going to write for you on this page might give you a good suggestion.

GIFTS FOR MOTHER.

John Oxenham in his book The Hidden Years gives the following picture of the boy Jesus in his father's carpenter shop in Nazareth.

Jesus and Azor were alone in the shop for Joseph had gone to take a yoke to a customer and Mary was busy baking the sweet loaves of bread for the family. Azor, who was just a little younger than Jesus, was Jesus' dearest friend and he called him "Little Azor."

"Look, Little Azor," said Jesus, taking something from its hiding place, "what do you think of this?"

The something was a beautiful little chest which had been hewn out of the fragrant cedar which had been brought from Lebanon. Azor held it carefully in his two shapely hands and gazed at it with his sparkling black eyes.

"It is the loveliest little box I have ever seen, Jesus. How I wish that I could make things out of wood as you do!"

"You are learning fast, Little Azor, some day you will be able to do better work with wood than I. Then you will be able to earn a good living for your widowed mother and a family of your own!"

"Oh! it is kind of you to encourage me, Jesus, but sometimes when I compare my work with yours I feel as if I'd never learn to make such beautifully smooth yokes as yours. But why have you made this little chest? What will you do with it?"

"It is for her," said Jesus, nodding his head toward the room where his mother's voice could be heard singing one of the songs from the Psalms. Jesus took the chest from Azor and ran his long, sensitive fingers over its smooth surface. "Soon it will be her birthday and I shall give this to her then. I could never make anything which I thought quite good enough for her," said Jesus. His fingers touched an imaginary rough place and Jesus reached for a tool to remedy it. As he did so the tool slipped and stuck into the palm of his hand. A drop of bright red fell onto the shining chest.

"Oh, you have hurt yourself; shall I get a basin of water?" asked Azor.

"Sh-h-h! It is nothing. Stay, mother might come in and see the chest before I am ready for her to have it." Jesus carefully wiped the drop from the chest. "There, now, perhaps it will be a worthy gift for my mother since I have even spilled my blood in the creating of the gift," said Jesus, with a thoughtful smile brightening the blue of his eyes and turning up the corners of his mouth.

In a corner of the garden Betsy Crowder was sobbing her nine-year-old heart out. Tomorrow would be Mother's Day and Betsy had been in school all week with no chance to go to Griffin to get the gift which she wanted for her mother. Now mother had to go take sister Nell to Atlanta to see about a job and she would have to stay at home. Mother had said so and there was nothing she could do about it.

What was the use of saving the nickles which her older brothers had given her for doing errands for them? thought Betsy through her lessening sobs. Suddenly Betsy raised her head and wiped her red eyes! Maybe mother would let her do that and she ran to the house as swiftly as her legs could carry her.

Mother Crowder looked up from mending her stocking to find Betsy's red eyes with their pleading look in them. Could Betsy go to Griffin with SONG AND PREACHING.

There is no sort of public address which attracts and holds the attention of people as that of preaching. Of course during a political campaign with its excitement great crowds will go to hear a favorite candidate; but this is temporary, only lasting and attracting for a brief period. On the other hand men and women will gather at the churches for preaching, song, and worship week after week, month after month and year after year. This might be counted something of a mystery but for the fact that as Paul wrote in his letter to the Corinthians, "It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." (Someone has very pertinently observed that there is a great deal of difference between the foolishness of preaching and foolish preaching. No doubt we have much foolish preaching that does not get us very far.) The fact is that God chose the very simple and commonplace means and methods of achieving His ends and aims for the children of men. This for the reason as the inspired writer says that "The foolishness of God is wiser than the wisdom of man."

Now along with preaching in our service of worship is song. Song of the right type mellows the heart and makes it receptive to the message of the servant of God in the sanctuary. There is a very significant Scripture, II Chronicles 29:27, "And when the burnt-offering began, the song of Jehovah began also, and the trumpets, together with the instruments of David, king of Israel. And all the assembly worshipped." The burnt-offerings conducted by the priests of old preceded and were supplanted by the preaching of repentance when John the Baptist came preaching in the wilderness, saying, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make His paths straight."

So preaching and song go together to make up the service of worship. There has been nothing to take the place of song in the service of worship, since music has ever been the universal language.

It is noted with pleasure that we are to have worship periods and preaching at the coming session of our Convention. It can be said beforehand that nothing in the Convention will be as helpful and as wholesome as the preaching with its period of song and worship. This will not only mark the high spot of the Convention, but will fit the minds and hearts of those who attend the Convention to enjoy and to appreciate what is done and said in the business sessions of the Convention.

Missionary from North China Will Teach at School of Missions

Few women have crowded into less than twenty years the experiences of Miss Mary L. McClure, just back from Fenchow, interior city of North China, bombed and taken by Japanese troops last year, where she carried on her work through the tense days of war. Miss McClure will teach the Foreign Mission Study Book for next year, which is about China, at the School of Missions at Elon College, N. C., June 17-20.

With a compound filled with refugees, numbering at one time 1,700, Miss McClure worked through the war period. She has lived in the tenseness of expected bombings and through the actual experience. Miss

MISS MARY L. McCLURE.

McClure brings a stirring tale to the churches of the indomitable spirit of the Chinese Christian leaders fearlessly traveling through the war area to bring comfort and encouragement to the village churches destroyed by the war. "The fearless and devoted services of these men cannot be too highly commended," she says.

Head of the Women's Department of the Harwood Bible School in Fenchow, Miss McClure has there developed a remarkable piece of work. The women who come to this school represent many walks of life; wives of hard working farmers from isolated mountain villages where precious water has to be carried in buckets from the ravine below, and wives of bankers and business men. They all learn how to become teachers and leaders among their own people.

The Child Culture course developed at Miss McClure's School, is a family affair for there is a nursery where the babies are left while the mothers are in class. Each mother has a period in the nursery when she learns from a Chinese nurse which is best for little Chang to eat and wear and also that it is not harmful to let him cry a bit at times.

Abject poverty in the villages made the missionaries seek for some means of relieving this economic distress. Miss McClure introduced wool weaving and knitting into her school, based on the Berea College plan. Soon "wool from the back of sheep to the back of man" began a slogan that meant a means of livelihood to many and a method of earning their way through school to the students.

Miss McClure knows the country folk of China, not from hearsay or from contacts with them as they come into Fenchow, but through actual living with them as she has toured many miles by ox cart over difficult trails. She has lived in their homes, eaten their millet soup, slept on their hard kang. Through lonely mountain passes she has traveled carrying her harmonica and her accordion. "You can feel their friendliness. Across the barrier of language it reaches out to you," she once said of these country folk. To her, however, there is no barrier of language as she speaks Chinese fluently.

The more recent tragedy of the war has not dimmed the memory of an experience among the bandits in earlier days. Arriving at a village to start work Miss McClure and associates at once found the people in the grip of mortal terror. A bandit group had attacked a neighboring town with loss of life and property. This village was the next victim.

Miss McClure and another woman worker determined to intercede whatever the risk. They rode donkeys to a hill nearby and, with bandit guides, went straight to the den of the chief. Here they bargained until the bandits promised to spare the town. Then they returned and went on with their work.

Born in Massachusetts, Miss McClure is a graduate of Oberlin College. When she first went to China she was known as the Young People's Missionary and all through the years she has been followed in her work by the youth of New England Congregational and Christian Churches.

"Youth at Work in the Church"

Emily Carleton Lester, Editor

WHY NOT GO TO THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

The business organization of our church in North Carolina and Virginia—the Southern Convention—meets next Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday in Greensboro, N. C. As young people we are a definite part of the church, and should be present, if possible, to know what happens at this meeting.

The president of the Convention, Dr. S. C. Harrell of Durham, N. C., is to speak on Tuesday afternoon at 3:15 on "Youth and the Program of the Church." Since our president feels that this topic is important enough to be the subject of his address, some young people should certainly be interested enough to be among those present to hear it. On Wednesday afternoon young people's work in our area will be discussed in connection with the report of the Board of Christian Education. The other reports should be of interest to us as a part of the church. Dr. Douglas Horton, speaking on Tuesday night concerning his trip around the world, the Elon College program on Wednesday night, and the closing communion service on Thursday night come at a time when young people living nearby can attend. We hope they will.

Several young people have been elected as delegates to the Southern Convention by their Conferences. These include Edna Fulgher and Charles E. Heath, Jr., of Eastern Virginia; Mrs. Brookston Eaves of Eastern North Carolina; and Eugenia Snow of the Valley of Virginia. It is interesting to note that these three Conferences chose the president of the Pilgrim Fellowship as a delegate from their area. While many young people cannot attend the Convention, because of school or work which conflicts, those who can are urged to do so.

BETHEL YOUNG PEOPLE ACTIVE.

The young people of Bethel (Valley of Virginia) Christian Church recently held an orange social in the basement of their church. Young people and children joined in the merry-making of the occasion. Mrs. C. M. McCoy led the group in a quiz contest, and other games, the winning side receiving an April Fool cake. The social was planned by our president, Walstein Snyder.

The monthly meeting of our young people's class was held in the home of Helen and Ellen Monger on April 10. Devotional period was in charge of Helen Monger. The business period was in charge of the president, Goldie Dofflemeyer. The class decided to help sponsor the singing which is held once a week. Plans for improvement of the church property were discussed. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostesses to the fifteen members present.

REPORTER.

YOUTH.

Youth is not a time of life; it is a state of mind. It is not a matter of ripe cheeks, red lips, and supple knees; it is a temper of the will, a quality of the imagination, a vigor of the emotions. It is the freshness of the deep spring of life.

Youth means a temperamental predominance of courage over timidity, of the appetite for adventure over the love of ease. This often exists in a man of fifty more than in a boy of twenty.

Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years. People grow old only by merely deserting their ideals.

Years wrinkle the skin; but to give up enthusiasm wrinkles the soul.

Worry, doubt, self-distrust, fear and despair—these are the long, long years that bow the heart and turn the greening spirit back to dust.

Whether sixty or sixteen, there is in every human being's heart the lure of wonder, the sweet amazement of the stars and at starlight things and thoughts, the undaunted challenge of events, the unflinching, child-like appetite for what next, and the joy of the game of living. You are as young as your faith, as old as your doubt; as young as your self-confidence, as old as your fear; as young as your hope, as old as your despair.

In the central place of your heart is an evergreen tree; its name is Love. So long as it flourishes you are young. When it dies you are old.

In the central place of your heart there is a wireless station. So long as it receives messages of beauty, hope, cheer, grandeur, courage and power from the earth, from men, and the infinite, so long are you young. When the wires are down, and all the central place of your heart is covered with the snows of cynicism and the ice of pessimism, then you are grown old, even at twenty, and may God have mercy upon your soul!

DR. FRANK CRANE.

Let every dawn of morning be to you as the beginning of life, and every setting sun be to you as its close; then let everyone of these short lives leave its sure record of some kindly thing done for others, some goodly strength or knowledge gained for yourselves.—Ruskin.

GIFTS FOR MOTHER.

Miss Gearin, the teacher, who was boarding at their house? Mother tried to think why it was so important to Betsy to go to Griffin today. Betsy did not usually make any fuss about her disappointments. Then she realized the Betsy might want to get the Mother's Day gift which she always managed to give her on Mother's Day. So Mother Crowder told Betsy to go get her face clean while she asked Miss Gearin.

Miss Gearin was just getting ready to go when Mrs. Crowder knocked at her door. When Miss Gearin heard the story she said with twinkling eyes that she would be glad to have Betsy's company on her Saturday's trip to Griffin. Miss Gearin thought that this might be a good opportunity to repay Betsy for all of the thoughtful little acts which she had done for the teacher.

So Betsy and Miss Gearin had a delightful time in the city of Griffin. Betsy got her mother a pair of hose which she need not have to darn for a few days and a lovely card to go with them. Then Miss Gearin took Betsy to the restaurant where they ate lunch in one of the cozy little booths. But the big surprise came when instead of going to the bus station to return home, as Betsy thought they would, Miss Gearin took her to see Shirley Temple in "The Little Rebel." Betsy thought, I'll just have to wash the dishes for mother tonight because she asked Miss Gearin to let me come with her.

ISAIAH COMFORTS AN AFFLICTED PEOPLE.

LESSON IV—APRIL 28, 1940.

LESSON: Isaiah 40.

DEVOTIONAL READING: II Cor. 1:3-7.

GOLDEN TEXT: God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.—Psalm 46:1.

A Message of Comfort.

"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem . . ." Thus does what is known as the second Isaiah begin his message to the chosen people of God. It is generally understood that this message comes from the Exile, probably written while the people were still in Babylon and as they were moving forward to return to their homeland. Whoever spoke these words, the message is the same. There is comfort in the religion of Jesus Christ. But it is to be noted that the word comfort does not mean what it so often is understood to mean. It is not something weak, and soft, and sentimental; it comes from a root word from which fort and fortress are derived and it has the root idea of strength in it. The comfort which comes from God makes men strong and courageous. It puts iron in their blood. It enables them to stand up and take blows which an unkind fate may have dealt them and be conquerors, not by having these things removed, but by giving them strength either to endure or to overcome. To give real comfort is a fine art. And there is need of true comforters in our modern world.

A Voice in the Wilderness.

"The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God." The messenger was subordinate to the message. The personality of the speaker was caught up in the message which he delivered. John the Baptist referred to himself as "the voice of one crying in the wilderness." As was the one who was preparing the way for the coming of the true Messiah, we can not all be eloquent, but we can be a voice, the mouthpiece of the living God, to make known His love and His grace to those with whom we come in contact. And we, too, can help to prepare the way of the Lord. By the way in which we live and by the work which we do, we can make it possible for the Kingdom of God to come nearer fulfillment. We can help to make straight the paths wherein people may walk; we can help to fill in the valleys of depression; we can help to cut down mountains of difficulty; we can help to make straight the paths that are crooked. We can not all be John the Baptist, but to some extent we can do some of the same kind of work which John did.

The Frailty of Man, the Might of God.

If one reads the fortieth chapter of Isaiah he will find running through it the contrast between the frailty and instability of man and the strength and enduring qualities of God. "All flesh is grass, and all the goodness thereof is as the flower of the field. . . . The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand forever." Thus does Isaiah contrast the frailty of men with the abiding quality of the word and life of God. In another place he calls attention to the fact that it is the eternal God who has created, who orders, and who sustains the vast universe, who measures the waters in the hollow of his hand, who measures out the heavens as one would with a measuring stick, who, as it were, puts the mountains on a pair of scales and weighs them. It is this strong and eternal God who is the refuge and strength of his people, who is able to comfort them, who is able to make them strong. He is not only the God of the Hebrew people, he is the God of all the nations. And there is no graven image or any likeness of anything that can be made to represent him.

The Tender Shepherd.

"He will feed his flock like a shepherd, he will gather the lambs in his arms, and carry them in his bosom, and will gently lead those that have their young." Thus does Isaiah present in a graphic and gripping way the strange paradox of the divine character. In God there are combined infinite tenderness and compassion. This mighty God who holds all of the forces of nature in his hands and who overrules the destiny of nations has the heart of a tender and compassionate shepherd. He shall feed his flock like a shepherd. He shall be especially considerate of those who are weak, he shall guide those who are not experienced, he shall carry those who are tender and young. One can hardly realize what this message must have meant to that little band of exiles about to return to their native land, facing unknown dangers and unspeakable hardships, despised and rejected by the people of other nations, and thus made to know that there was One who cared and One who was able to supply all of their needs. Jesus himself, who said that he was a revelation of the invisible God, took as his favorite figure of speech that of the "Good Shepherd." "I am the good shepherd." Thus did Jesus likewise say that the infinite power of God was tempered and controlled and directed by love.

Bearers of Good Tidings.

"O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid. . ." A mountain top is a place of vantage. From it one's voice can be heard for great distances. The prophet suggests that those who have this good message for their fellow countrymen should go to the high mountain and proclaim the good tidings. It is good advice for our day and for our world. The Church of Christ has the solution to the world's problems, and the answer to the world's questions. But we Christians are not vocal enough; we are not witnessing in any convincing and convicting way. We have made the Gospel too much a matter of law and not of love. We have put the emphasis upon what men ought not to do rather than of showing them how to find life. There never was a time when the message of the church or the missionary program of the church was more desperately needed than in our day and in our world.

Waiting Upon the Lord.

"But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint." Thus does this great chapter—and one ought to read it again and again—come to a climax. There is a strength in the physical. There are resources which can not be seen. There is a possibility of the renewal of life from within. Those who wait upon the Lord, those who take Him for their guide find that He rewards those who diligently seek Him. He gives strength which enables one to be victorious, not only in the great emergencies and crises of life, but what is just

MONDAY.

"MAINTAINING THE GLOW."

"Fervent in spirit."—Rom. 12: 11.

"Maintain the spiritual glow."—Goodspeed.

Goodspeed's interpretation of this text seems a better one, as the meaning is clearer. This meaning may be still further clarified by experience of the physical. For instance, one is up convalescent from a long illness. His recovery was incredible—miraculous almost. In discharging him the doctor said, "You have established harmony now. Your organs are functioning perfectly." Then he gave the patient instructions in diet, care and caution in exercise. "Endeavor," he said, "to main physical harmony." Just another way of saying "maintaining physical glow."

How about the Spiritual Glow? Without doubt, this world needs more burning hearts. Burning hearts for Christ and His Kingdom is the greatest asset of life.

Prayer—Our Father, midst the innumerable ills, misfortunes, and lures of sin, we lose our spiritual balance and become soul-sick. We would not, O Lord, we would not. Keep us close to Thee. May we keep the fire burning and live forever in the glow of Thy loving and perfecting Presence. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"A PARTING MESSAGE."

"And what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with thy God."—Micah 6: 8.

A few days' stay in the hot and dry imperial desert of California lifted him out of his illness into health like a new "blown" flower. When he parted from his host a little artistic book-mark was placed in his hand. This card bore the following message: "Work hard, do your duty, say your prayers, and leave the rest to God." That is one of the finest philosophies we have ever heard.

Prayer—

O that in me the sacred fire
Might now begin to glow;
Burn up the dross of base desire
And make the mountains flow!

Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"COME."

"Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you."—Matt. 25: 34.

This blessedness was pronounced upon and promised to all those who are faithful to their trust committed to them by God.

We were at church listening to the song by the title given in our text. As the singer reached the climax and close of that song in the words, "Come, come, come," many worshippers were drying the tears from their eyes. So worshipful and deep was the appreciation of the spirit of that song it held in rapture the thoughts and feelings of the worshippers.

There is a sense in which we all should should come to Christ each day to have our sins washed away and to receive His blessings, lest sin hide His face from us, and we sin more.

Prayer—Our Father, we believe that only by coming to Thee we may have Thy blessings, and be filled with hungering and thirsting for righteousness—such hungering so lacking in us. We come, Lord, bless us. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"BEING GOOD."

"If you love them which love you, what reward have you?"—Matt. 5: 46.

"Love your enemies. Pray for them that despitefully use you. Do good to them that hate you."—Matt. 5: 44.

"Young people today do not want to be good," the preacher said. Is he right? We find this, that they who do not want to be good find goodness repellent to them because they do not understand what it is to be good. They think that it the "goody goody" sort—always saying prayers, going to church, working hard and refraining from the things that give some fun.

Our understanding of goodness is "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, meekness, brotherliness, kindness, and doing things that are good, especially helpful to others." Who does not want to be good in that way? We are not certain that we would want to be good like that always. We want to to be good to those who are good to us, but as for others we are not certain that we do not have ill feelings sometimes.

Prayer—O God, giver of all goodness and grace, we pray for impulse, desire and the urge to be like Christ; for in Him is our hope. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"INOCULATED AGAINST CHRIST."

"I am from above."—John 8: 23.

"Seek those things which are above."—Col. 3: 1.

The most of us never attain the heights of spiritual experience and goodness possible to attain because we are inoculated against it with a form of mortality with which we may be satisfied. The increase of knowledge, the advance of science, the superficial sense of security, the increase of self-reliance upon our own wisdom, all seem to remove us from God; all of which is misplaced trust. These are the things which God has given us that through them we might be lifted up from what we are to what we ought to be in Him. There is no fraternity, or club, or knowledge, or material gift, that will take the place of God.

OUR MINISTER FOR THIS WEEK IS ROY C. HELFENSTEIN,
MASON CITY, IOWA.

CHRISTIAN FAITH IN ACTION.

Christian faith in action is concerned about, and renders service, to men's bodies as well as their souls, and to their minds as well as to their bodies. Christian faith in action has erected hospitals in every city in answer to the cry of human needs, the response to the Master's challenge: "Inasmuch as ye do it unto one of the least, you do it unto me."

Christian faith in action carries the emblem of a red cross into the flood-stricken, disease-infested, peril-endangered, and also the war-cursed areas, rendering not only first aid but second and third, and continued aid to the victims of cruel circumstances regardless of race, creed, or color.

Christian faith in action seeks to help all who need help whoever they may be, wherever they are, and whenever they call. Christian faith in action does more than meet the immediate needs of those weak in body, bewildered in mind, crushed in spirit, and bruised in soul. It seeks to help people to help themselves by making them conscious of the nearness of God, the love and goodness of God, and the availability of God to all who in faith call upon Him. Christian faith in action seeks to help men and women by correcting wrong thought habits, wrong emotion habits, as well as wrong attitudes and wrong conduct. Christian faith in action does more than "carry a message to Garcia," it carries a message to men and women created in the likeness of God who by sin or indifference and neglect have marred that likeness—the message of the restoring power of God, the message of God's willingness to help anyone who believes in and wants His help—the message of peace to baffled people, the message of hope to the discouraged, the message of comfort to aching hearts, the message of divine companionship to those who are lonely—the message of fullness to hungry souls, and the message of service to useless lives.

Christian faith in action is the good life lived with enthusiasm, confidence, and trust. It is the yielding of one's love, one's talents, one's self to God. It is the looking beyond the present disorder of things to the future order of things as corrected. It is the seeing of the beautiful in life in spite of the ugly that everywhere abounds. It is the hearing of the harmonies of life in spite of the clamorous sounding of life's discords.

Christian faith in action moves mountains of impossibilities and levels the landscape into a spreading plane of realization. It carries a cross instead of a sword in its fight for righteousness, justice, and truth. It points beyond the yawning chasm of death to the realm of greater life. Christian faith in action refuses to recognize any loss except the loss of faith and courage, character, and principles as consequential. It sings its songs and offers its prayers amidst the crashing noise of empires falling and even when the world itself seems to be tumbling in. Christian faith in action lays claim to forgiveness for the unnumbered sins of one's past because of the genuine sincerity of purpose in one's present and for the future. It is the exhibiting of composure of soul in the presence of defeat. It is the cherishing of hope when all seems hopeless. It is the seeing of the stars when the sky of life is as black as midnight. Christian faith in action is "the soul enraptured by the song of the bird, the beauty of the flowers, the charms of the landscape, the innocence of a sleeping babe."

Christian faith in action carries a banner of peace, and seeks to create peace among all men. It seeks to destroy war before war destroys society. It points mankind to the stretching highway of brotherhood which leads to the City of God. Christian faith in action is seeking to build a new world wherein shall abide righteousness, justice, and brotherly love. Christian faith in action is love expressed by intelligent service to the Church of the living God. It is consistent living, and daily witnessing by word and by deed for the Christ whose name denotes our faith. It is the yearning to have others enter into fellowship with that Christ and the

THE QUIET HOUR.

These all pass away and when we fall back there is nothing to fall back on unless we have God first and always in our lives.

Prayer—The Lord's Prayer. Think of what it means.

SATURDAY.

"GOD'S DISAPPOINTMENTS."

"What, could ye not watch with me one hour?"—Matt. 26: 40.

"Then all the disciples forsake him and fled."—Matt. 26: 56.

Jesus sought solace in the garden of Gethsemane. Having prayed awhile he returned to find his trusted disciples asleep. It was only a day or two before while on the mountain-top overlooking Jerusalem he had wept over her lethargy. Later he saw the disciples scuttling from his trial, now the one who had not run away was heard to deny him. On his way to Golgotha there was not a friend to offer Him help. A stranger was impressed.

Will it be the same today? God is looking to us to do his work on earth. He is expecting us to lift the standard of righteousness and truth. He is expecting us to witness for him and to carry his fires in our heart. He is expecting us to bear his cross by helping the needy to carry their load.

Christ expects much us. What does he find of us? Are we asleep? Are we seeking more of our own comforts and neglecting his? Have we indulged the pleasures of this world and lost some of our love for him? Are we fleeing, in any sense, from him? Or, are we just another disappointment to him?

Prayer—Our Father, we would walk with Thee. Forbid that we fail Thee. If it means carry Thy load, out of our love for Thee, may we never fail. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"I WILL COME AGAIN—"

The world of God is eloquent on two things, Christ's birth and his second coming.

The Christ of Calvary will return as King of Glory. This is a story written in characters of defeat. Yet civilized time is dated from his birth. Every morning all the newspapers readjust their dates to that birth. Of all the conquerors of the world's history, Christ's is the only name surviving across the wide spaces of perishing time.

Nineteen hundred years ago our Lord came to bear the burden of sin, and to die for fallen man. He will come the second time "without sin" to bring eternal life to all his people. Let us resolve that the divine warnings of God's world shall not fall on deaf ears, calloused hearts, or blinded eyes. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The activities on the orphanage farm have been much delayed this spring on account of the continued rain and cold weather. The last freeze killed the peaches and early garden vegetables that had come up. Our early blooming strawberries were badly hurt, too.

This is one spring season that the little children in the orphanage have not insisted on going barefoot. Our rule for a number of years has been to let the little fellows go without their shoes when the dogwood got in full bloom. The dogwood is now in full bloom but the weather has been so cold that the little fellows preferred to keep their shoes on. But when the cold wave passes and the sun shines warm there will be a cry to go barefooted. When they take off their shoes it does relieve lots of noise in the buildings.

Since the weather has cleared up and not so cold, ball and bat is the order of the day for the little fellows who are too small to do work. They get as big a kick out of their games and can holler as loudly as a college game. They get excited just as much over a game as grown children do, and when the score is close it is really amusing to watch them. They seldom question the decision of the umpire. They take it for granted that he is right and go ahead.

Handling a group of children like we have in our orphanage and the ages we have is an interesting job. It is one responsible job, too. They are in their formative age and the impressions made on them in their young and tender years will follow them through life. You can see that a heavy responsibility rests on the shoulders of the ones in charge who have the responsibility of training them. When a little tot comes in the orphanage we begin to wonder what it will turn out to be when it reaches the age of eighteen years and goes out. Will it make good, and be a credit to the institution that reared it and make us happy that we had the opportunity to give it a home when it had none, or will it give us disappointment and heartache? We are happy to say most of our children make good. We have a few failures, of course.

We need your prayers. We need your cooperation in this work. It gives us encouragement to know you remember us in your daily devotions.

It gives us new inspiration to know we have your cooperation.		Ala. Conference:

as necessary and perhaps more desirable, He enables them to walk through the commonplace and humdrum experiences of life, and not grow faint and weary. Many of us are tired and worn and are threatened with breakdown, not because we are doing too much, but because there is such a poverty of spiritual resources within our lives. Waiting upon the Lord is the key to a much more successful way of life.

RELIGIOUS PRESS EDITORS CONFER.

Not in its history has the Associated Church Press held a more profitable or significant meeting than the three-day session held in Washington, D. C., April 9-11. Dr. Guy Emery Shieler, editor of The Churchman, New York, the new president of the organization, lined up such speakers as Russell Davenport of Fortune magazine; Dr. Joy Morgan, editor of the Journal, National Educational Association; Eugene Exman of Harpers, publishers; Representative Caroline O'Day, U. S. Congress; Wm. A. Lydgate, editor-director of the Gallup Poll, American Institute of Public Opinion; Dr. L. M. Birkhead, Secretary of "Friends of Democracy," etc.

During the meeting the group of editors of numerous Protestant papers from all parts of the country, who represented a readership of some million persons, had conferences with President Roosevelt at the White House and with Secretary of War Woodring, Secretary of Labor Perkins, Senator Norris of Nebraska and Jerry Voorhis of California, in their private offices in Washington.

Perhaps the highlight of the conference was the address of Mr. Davenport, who reviewed the nation's reaction to the January editorial in Fortune, which created a mild sensation throughout the churches of America. In the editorial Mr. Davenport charged that the church had grown materialistic and was without leadership. He did not yield on this point in his address to the religious editors.

The meeting closed with a luncheon at the Cosmos Club, which, incidentally, is transferring its "H" Street property to the Government for a cool million dollars.—Southern Churchman.

CHRISTIAN FAITH IN ACTION.

personal recommendation of the need, reality and the value of Christian discipleship. Christian faith in action is the traveling of the second mile and aye the third, when some brother's need requires it. Christian faith in action is the offering of a prayer for God's forgiveness for one's own sins and failures, and the offering of a prayer of consecration of life and talent to God. It is the offering of a prayer for divine guidance and for strength, the offering of a prayer for those who ignore God's claim upon their lives and who live as if there were no God. It is the offering of a prayer for those who are indifferent to the requirements for right conduct, the offering of a prayer for those who are fighting a losing battle against temptation, for those who have given up the fight for character, and for those who have wandered into "The Far Country of Sinful Indulgence." It is the offering of a prayer for both the under-privileged and the over-privileged members of society.

Christian faith in action is appreciation of the merits of others, respect for the contrary viewpoints that others hold, and a seeking to understand even those who do not desire to be understood. Christian faith in action is expressed by sincere concern about every social question, because of the belief that Christ is concerned about every life and all of life. Christian faith in action is the sharing of one's time and talent with and for those to whom time is but the passing of hours and to whom talent is an unknown quantity. It is the using of one's material advantages in the service of the disadvantaged. Christian faith in action is the launching of reform movements that witness the mind and spirit of the Man of Galilee and which have the mark of the Cross upon them—the promotion of reform in spite of struggling against all odds. It is the joining in tribute of praise to God by the old and the young, the strong and the weak, the rich and the poor to whom Christ is a living reality.

Christian faith in action is the adventure into Home and Foreign Mission Fields in conquest for God and in service to his neglected peoples. It is the preaching and the practicing both by laity and clergy of the forgiving, the redeeming, and the empowering love of God—the keeping in mind and the constantly calling to the minds of others the dignity and worth of human personality and the divine possibilities confronting every individual who seeks to live in a filial relation with God and a brotherly relation with man. It is genuine expression of happiness even by those who seemingly have little cause for happiness, and to whom life has withheld the fulfillment of its promises giving but disappointments instead. It is the facing of life with a courage the refuses to recognize defeat.

Christian faith in action is the creating of opportunity for childhood and youth, the directing of the rising generation along better and safer paths than the present or previous generations have trod—the seeking to direct childhood and youth to God. Christian faith in action is the quest for God and the conquest of love.

Christian faith in action is the practicing of the presence of God and the seeking to make others aware of that presence. It is the passion of those who care as they seek to inspire men and women and boys and girls with a sense of the grandeur and worth of human life when lived in conscious fellowship with God, the author of life.

Nothing but Christian faith in action offers hope and promise to humanity. Nothing but Christian faith in action can bring into realization God's plan for the human family. Nothing but Christian faith in action can save the world from wreck and ruin. Nothing but Christian faith in action can produce redeemed lives to redeem the social order and thereby make the Kingdoms of this world to become the Kingdom of our Lord and His Christ.

DARE WE LIVE?

An Editorial.

News coming from Europe is very disconcerting. That from Asia is not much better. There are many disturbing things happening in our own country. It is not a pretty world in which we live. At least the human relations are not lovely. Nature is putting on a robe of beautiful green trimmed in white, pink, and red. But men are killing each other with guns and bombs; like wild beasts they destroy each other.

The Church is not having an easy time in our day. The Church in Russia has practically been crushed; in Germany it is being supplanted by a ruthless nationalism; in Japan it is being submerged by war-lords; and in our own land it is weighted down by a long list of members who care nothing for the honor of the Church.

In the Southern Convention we find ourselves divided in opinions, not sure of the direction in which to go, afraid to launch out on a progressive program that calls for sacrifice of opinions, personalities, and ancient customs, and apparently unwilling to make real sacrifices in time and money for the sake of the Church and the Christ.

Dare we live in a world like this and a Church like ours? Are we afraid? If so, what is the cause of our fear? Are we afraid that our religion is not real? that God has forsaken us and his world? that to work in the Church and for the Christ will cost us money? Are we too timid to face facts and to lay ourselves at the feet of Jesus to be used of Him?

Dare we live in this needy world without doing our best to make it the kind of world that it should be? Dare we drift with the tide in such a time as this? Dare we seek personal pleasures while the world goes to destruction? Dare we really wake up and live?

Life is what we need, and what we crave. Without it all else is worthless. Without it pleasure becomes as ashes in our mouths. Without the strong currents of life, life like that which Jesus knew in the days of His flesh, flowing through us the days are dangerous and joy cannot be ours. Dare we do less than live?

To really live calls for daring. It is adventure. It is struggle, it is stretching out for the things that are before, it is seeking with all diligence the best that God has to give.

If those of us who are the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches dare to live, if we dare to reach up to God for strength and out to our fellowmen in service, then the meeting in Greensboro will be the dawning of a new day for us. If we dare not live courageously, the world doubtless will be redeemed, but God will have to seek another channel through which to draw men unto himself. The present world distress is not a test of God, nor is it a threat for the ultimate destruction of civilization, but it is testing the mettle of which we are made. If we are found worthless, then we must be cast aside. If we are courageous and willing enough, God can use us in a world like this. Living at our best means living with God. Dare we live?

NEWS AND VIEWS

Fine lists of subscriptions have come from First Church, Norfolk; Portsmouth, and Burlington. Thanks, friends. We appreciate your help.

Dr. M. J. W. White of Luray, our former missionary to the Philippine Islands, was the guest speaker for the Woman's Missionary Society at the evening church service in Winchester last Sunday.

Thanks to all those who have sent subscriptions for themselves and others. Some fine work is being done in many of our churches in the interest of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Such effort makes the paper more hopeful and anxious to serve.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield of Windsor, Va., reports that Antioch has reached its quota, and Isle of Wight has gone over the top with subscriptions to this paper. That must be a fine feeling. It certainly does bring joy to THE CHRISTIAN SUN office.

There will be an all-day memorial service at New Elam Christian Church on Saturday, May 18. Dinner will be served on the grounds. Everyone is invited to attend, especially all former pastors of this church. Rev. R. T. Grissom is the pastor.

Rev. T. Fred Wright is reported to have said to his people at Spring Hill, that fine old church from which came the illustrious West family, on last Sunday that he could not go to the Convention until he secured the quota of CHRISTIAN SUN subscriptions. It is further reported that he secured the desired number.

Two Virginia laymen have busied themselves with getting subscriptions. One is R. L. Ettel of Mt. Jackson, a member of Whistler's Chapel in the apple orchards of the Valley, and the other is S. M. Joyner of Franklin, a member of Union (Southampton) in the peanut country of the eastern part of the state. When laymen and ministers join in a certain campaign for any enterprise of the church, success is sure to come.

"When a man leaves a church or ceases to attend upon its services, he has no moral right to meddle with its affairs."

THE BEAUTY OF OLD AGE.

Sunday's service, April 21, was one of special interest which will be long remembered by all present at Liberty (Vance) Christian Church. A special service was held in honor of all members of the church and community who had passed the age of sixty years. Reserved seats enclosed by ribbon were given honor guests. The beautiful floral display made the occasion one of rare beauty.

A large lovely basket filled with white spirea, colorful gladiolas and snapdragons occupied the seat recently vacated by the eldest member of the church, Mrs. R. G. Ayseue (better known as "Aunt Stella"), who left us January 27, 1940.

A beautiful basket of tulips was presented Mrs. J. Sid Ayseue, the oldest living member present, and a lovely bouquet was placed on the coat of Mr. W. G. Winn, the second oldest member present.

There were about thirty-five honor guests who had labored for their churches and who had helped to make them what they are for others to enjoy. Among those present were the four Winn brothers, W. G., the oldest deacon of our church; W. P., of our church; and R. G. and J. E. Winn, members of the Methodist Church.

God's beauty in nature was stressed by the pastor, Rev. J. E. McCauley, using as a lesson theme "Thou hast beset me behind and before and laid Thine hand upon me" (Psalm 139:5). God's beauty in nature was stressed with his children beset among it. A quotation from a Jewish Rabbi was found fitting when he said, "Grow old with me; the best is yet to be." Mr. McCauley tried to make it plain that the future holds greater things for us. Just as Enoch walked with God, God will walk with us if we will put our trust in Him.

Old familiar songs were used. A special selection, "Never Grow Old," was dedicated to the honor guests by Fletcher Fuller, Elaine Ayseue, Jasper Collins, and L. L. Stainback.

All present declared it a most inspiring and beautiful service.

A LETTER FROM DANVILLE, VA.

Dear Friends:

We have just closed one of the best revivals ever held in our church here in Danville, with Rev. J. Harold Smith of Greenville, S. C., conducting the services. Six hundred and fifty-seven took a definite stand for Christ, about one-half this number being unsaved church members of our church and other churches. We have received one hundred and thirty members from this campaign, bringing our total to one hundred and forty-three since December 30, 1939. During the revival we reached our highest number attending Sunday school on April 7 with 964, and on April 14 with 1,060. The average for several Sundays has been near nine hundred.

We begin our next revival May 5 with Rev. Jimmie Johnson conducting these services, and again September 15 with Rev. W. B. Young and party. We are asking THE CHRISTIAN SUN readers to put us on your prayer list that this church and its people will become a great soul-saving station, pointing men and women to the lamb of God.

M. T. SORRELL, Pastor.

PLEASANT HILL.

With the coming of spring our Sunday school has increased to over two hundred again.

Since Rev. G. C. Crutchfield was chosen pastor our preaching services are each second Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock. Memorial services and children's day exercises, which have heretofore been falling on the first Sunday, will be held this year on the second Sunday in June.

Christian Endeavor has an active and growing number of young people, who are under the supervision of Glenn Fogleman at the present. Their programs are given each Sunday night and are very inspirational.

LEARNING TO LIVE.

Your editor has dared to take the front cover this week to raise the question, "Dare We Live?" If we dare to live, and most of us will, then it would seem to be wise to learn to live.

Yes, it is a fact that many good church people have not learned how to live. They eat, sleep, and work, but never in the whole daily schedule do they find the time and means for living.

Some are so disturbed by the conditions of sharecroppers, mine-workers, or those who have no work that they stay in a stew and disturb all with whom they associate. Others think that world conditions are so tragic that there can be no hope of civilization, so they worry themselves and their friends almost to distraction.

On the other hand there are those who are so complacently asleep in our delightfully disturbed and tragically critical world that they never heave a sigh for the depressed or say a real prayer for those who grind the life out of multitudes. Sustained by their own strong shelter, they seem not to care for others who are exposed to sun and rain and cold and the deadly bombs dropped from a friendly sky by dastardly men. Since they have plenty, they refuse to seek any change lest they have less even though their bounty might bless multitudes. Justice may "go hang" so long as they are on the safe side of the law.

Neither attitude seems to this writer to be either Christian or conducive to real happiness. There is something desperately wrong with the civilization of our world, but simple fear and worry will not right the wrong. Beyond all the crumbling man-made walls stand the eternal hills of God. Beyond the littleness and meanness of man stands the gracious love of God. St. Paul was doubtless thinking along this line when he said to his friends: "Having done all, stand."

This is no time for religion to put us to sleep. Human needs are our responsibility. We need to correct the course of the human family. We need to rescue those who have fallen into whirlpools, and we need to so chart the waters of life that whirlpools will be eliminated. But when we have done all that we can, we need to preserve our souls in peace, because "underneath are the everlasting arms of God." To do less than this is to deny the faith practiced by Jesus and imparted to his followers.

We need to learn to live calmly, serenely, courageously in a desperately disturbed and violently wicked world.

How? By sane thinking. By calming excessive emotions. By reading classic literature, especially the story of Jesus as found in the Gospels. By enjoying the beautiful in nature and in human conduct. By giving one's best in the most needy places. By working to the limit of one's ability, but without worry and in the calm assurance that one is working with God. By taking time in all the busy rush of things to be sure that the windows of the soul are open towards the light that comes from God. By remembering always that greatness lies not in grand success but in child-likeness. By spending every day and night like Him who said: "Father, into Thy hands I commend (commit) my spirit."

THE GREENSBORO CONVENTION.

In Greensboro this week meet those men and women who have been selected to represent the five Conferences in North Carolina and Virginia, and others who are interested in the progress of Congregational and Christian Churches, to consider the things we are doing together as a Convention, and to plan for the future of our work. It may be a monumental milestone in our history.

It is meeting in a time when the world will listen, if we have something to say.

The Convention has problems enough to keep the delegates busy for a week, but only two and one-half days are allotted for the work. After that these good people will return again home. Will the problems be solved? Will the delegates be different? Will they know, in a new sense, that they are the children of the eternal God, and that they are going into the Father's vineyard to work with and for him? Will they say in their hearts, "Surely God was in this place?"

Of course we need a church paper, but we could do without it. They had none at Pentecost, but they succeeded pretty well. Of course we need offices, boards, and institutions through which to work, but they could be very different from anything we ever had, and all we now have might be abolished without killing the church. They seemed to have had few, if any, in ancient Antioch where the disciples were first called "Christians," but they sent out some excellent missionaries.

The Convention in Greensboro will succeed or fail in proportion to the growth of those who are there. If ministers and laymen, boards and institutions, leaders and led, can all sense anew the reality of the Christian experience, can see a vision of the serving church, can submerge themselves and seek sincerely the way of God as lost children should, if all this can happen, then our beloved church will arise and shine, for she will have found her soul in a great Convention, and our little group will be a living part of the Body of Christ, the church universal.

WE CAN, AND WE WILL.

This church of ours can grow in the Old Dominion and the Old North State. There are those who still want the fervency of spirit, the primacy of Christ, the democracy of religion which we preach. The Gospel of our church would be loved if it were preached and practiced by those of us who profess it and love it for ourselves. There is no reason why we shouldn't build new churches every year—no reason except our lethargy, our unwillingness to work and sacrifice for this good end. We can grow, and this writer believes that we will.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Southern Convention will be in session when this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN is mailed. Several of those whose hearts have been in this organization in other years will not answer to the roll call. They have answered to another roll call—and their places, in our Convention, will be vacant. Among those who have passed since the last session are Drs. C. H. Rowland and W. C. Wicker. Dr. Rowland was, for a number of years, the beloved pastor of the First Christian Church of Greensboro, where the Convention will be in session. Dr. Wicker served faithfully as Treasurer of the Convention for many years. Their faces and counsel will be greatly missed.

In reviewing the presentation of the Convention Problems in recent issues of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, one thinks of the great work of the late Dr. W. W. Staley who was recognized for so many years as a leader in our biennial meetings. How we have missed his wisdom and clear understanding since he was called home! How we need another of his kind to inspire our brotherhood! He saw the larger aspects of our cause. Far-sighted and discerning, he sought to integrate and correlate all the interests and institutions of our church. Many other men think in terms of the particular work with which they are identified. He saw the relation of his field to others and sought to make that a better part of the Kingdom of God.

This statement, found in one of the reports to be submitted to the Convention, indicates a prevailing trend of thought: "The time has come for us to make some radical decisions." What is a radical decision? To some minds "radical" is synonymous with "revolutionary" or "reform." Usually, the word is used to suggest "revolution." Evidently there are some people who want a "revolution" in our church and Convention. It may be needed. But when one faces a "revolution" one would like to have some assurance that it will do more than change a present order. Whither will "radical decisions" lead us? Whence have the advocates of revolution come?

The real test of any church leadership is the ability to develop the local church. Successful pastors can speak with some authority in giving advice to other pastors. They command attention, for they speak with the authority of successful experience. The problems of pastors, Sunday school superintendents, teachers, missionary leaders, superintendents of young people, and educators are all related to human life. They are not based upon theories and organized propaganda. They cannot be settled by resolutions and books. Common sense, the ability to gain confidence and respect of others, good judgment, consecration and intelligent approach to friends and enemies, with charity towards all and malice towards none—these things count in any church group. And here is the key to our present situation. In every church—small or large—in every institution—poor or rich—in every department, from the Cradle Roll to the Superannuate—there is a place for the exercise of one's best gifts and sincerest consecration.

Criticism, fault-finding and "radical decisions" are not the best approach to growth and development. Flowers grow more beautiful when cultivated, not when they are torn up. They may need pruning, but cultivation must always be the primary objective of the gardener. The most fruitful life, the most progressive church and the most forward looking Convention must reach the summit by cultivation and growth. There has been enough criticism and it is time for us to make some common sense decisions to unite our hearts and energy in the challenging tasks of our church.

I. W. JOHNSON.

A RADIO TALK.

April 30, 1940, 2:00 P. M.
Good Afternoon, Radio Friends:

We are greatly indebted to Major Edney Ridge and WBIG in making your acquaintance and cultivating your friendship from week to week.

I would like to tell you something about Elon College, its beginnings and purposes. It is interesting to note that the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches is at this very moment opening its biennial session in the First Congregational-Christian Church of Greensboro. It was the Southern Christian Convention that authorized the founding and the building of Elon College. The Convention met in extraordinary session in Old Providence Church, Graham, N. C., September 14, 1888, and at the close of a two-day session voted definitely to build for the Christians in the South an institution of higher learning and appointed a Provisional Board of five members. Col. Junius H. Harden of Graham, N. C., is the only surviving member of the Board. This Board was charged with the responsibility of locating the institution and laying plans for its founding. The Board selected a site at what was then Mill Point, now Elon College. The foundation of the college from a literary standpoint was laid in the classics with ample provisions for expansion so as to include practical courses in training and education as occasion might demand.

The college was built for the purpose of training young people, particularly those of the homes of the Christian Church. In those early days the church demanded an institution of higher learning for her young people where they might receive instructions under moral and religious influences. Those early pioneers in the field of Christian Education were determined that while the young people of the church were being trained mentally, they should also be trained spiritually. Those high purposes of the founders of the college are still evident on our campus. Upheavals in the social order, reverses in our economic life, and tragic happenings in the political orders of the world tend to emphasize the need of a definite program of moral and religious instruction in the training of the youth of the world. Education is still the most effective instrument for complete understanding in human relations, and intelligent people trained in the high purposes of Christian living find no serious difficulty in living together and in granting to each other individual rights and privileges. Education that reaches the whole of life is the rock bed of democracy. Ignorance of moral and religious values tends toward ignorance in other fields and becomes the processes of dictatorships. It is difficult to enslave an intelligent people. It is easy to regiment ignorant races.

The public school system of this country is beginning to realize not only the advisability of but the necessity for religious instruction in our week-day schools. An increased number of cities, towns, and communities are at their own expense providing for special instructors that the children of our public schools who do not take advantage of the church and the church school may not grow up ignorant of the ways of religion and of spiritual values. Equally are state institutions of higher learning where religious instruction is not attempted increasingly realizing the paramount importance of the training and the development of the religious life of the individual and are inviting the different denominations to provide for denominational secretaries or Christian leaders to be and abide on their campuses for the purpose of propagating a program of religious instruction of their particular denomination and to assist in a campus-wide curriculum of religious instruction for the young men and young women enrolled in these state institutions.

I favor a State Board of Christian Education, elected by the state but nominated by the various denominations serving the state, whose purpose it shall be to provide for religious instruction in all state institutions. There is no question but that public sentiment is today turning toward the small church-related college. Either consciously or unconsciously society has sensed that something is wrong in the texture of its super structure and that that something is an inadequate understanding of God and of man in his relation to God. The church-related college is the one institution that has been working away at this essential task all through the years. We have no desire to live in the past or to be constantly looking to the past, but in these tragic days, we are inevitably reminded of the fact that the founders of our nation were God-fearing men and women and that they looked to God for wisdom in laying the foundation of the nation and for guidance in its building and on-going. Long years ago they realized fully the truth of the declaration, "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord," and in the twilight of a changing world, they are beginning to realize that God is our refuge and strength, and that from Him cometh deliverance.

The Congregational-Christian Church in the South is happy to recognize Elon College at the half century mark. In this particular session of the Convention we shall be congratulating our forefathers on their vision and courage that resulted in the founding of Elon College. We shall also be recounting the successes and failures of the institution. Elon College has had a checkered but a very satisfactory and satisfying career. Her difficulties have been occasioned by the lack of funds for current and operating expenses. Her successes have been due to the conviction, the vision, the ability, and the fortitude of her curators. Her curriculum in the hands of God-fearing men and women has always placed telling emphasis on matters religious. Religious instruction has always played an effective part in student instruction in the classroom at Elon College. Religious training is offered not only to ministerial students and those planning for definite religious work but is required of all who graduate from Elon College.

Beginning in a very small way, the physical equipment of Elon College has made notable advancement. On January 18, 1923, the college suffered an irreparable loss in the destruction by fire of her Administration Building. This building housed the various departments of the institution, the president's office, the business offices, the library, and all other official functions. When the builders of Elon College looked upon its main building then in ashes, the moments were dark. There were no funds with which to rebuild, and yet rebuild they must. Generous friends responded to the heart appeal of Dr. William Allen Harper, then president of the college, and soon five adequate buildings of colonial architecture replaced the one building destroyed by fire. These new buildings provided Elon College with a physical plant equal to, if not surpassing, that of the average college of its size. This building program and the depression that followed jeopardized the very life of the institution. During the years 1930, '31, '32, and '33, it seemed impossible for the college to survive. Again providence smiled with loving favor, and by faith and determination, never slackening her efforts, again she began to advance so that today she is enjoying the largest enrollment in her history and has been enabled to reduce her debt to the lowest figure in years.

The college is this year celebrating its fiftieth anniversary. Eighteen months ago, three goals were set for the anniversary year. First, a student enrollment of six hundred. This goal has been surpassed by twenty-five. Second, one hundred in our 1940 graduating class. This goal will not be reached. The present class will number approximately eighty, the largest in the history of the institution. Third, the payment of the last dollar of indebtedness against the institution. To reach the third goal, the raising of $150,000.00 is required. The administration is happy to report that approximately $50,000.00 of this amount has been raised in cash and subscriptions. An appeal is made to the church, the alumni, the friends of the college, as well as to the friends of higher education under moral and religious influences to respond to the call of the institution with gifts small or large that this third goal set by those in charge of the affairs of the institution may be reached before the year 1940 closes.

The Alumni Association in conjunction with the Board of Trustees and the Executive Committee of the Convention authorized the formation of the Elon College Golden Anniversary Club with membership dues of $50.00, an amount equal to $1.00 for each year of the college's existence, and authorized a campaign to enroll three thousand members of the club with dues of $50.00 each paid. The appeal is not for large gifts by individuals, but for a large number of individuals giving a modest amount.

A very complete and effective program for the fiftieth anniversary commencement of the college has been arranged. We are now issuing a most earnest and cordial invitation to the members of the church, the alumni of the college, and the friends of higher education to spend May 26, 27, and 28 with us at Elon College. This is the heart appeal of Alma Mater. She is not only earnestly inviting her sons and daughters but anxiously awaiting their return. She would also remind her children that this is her golden anniversary, and surely no devoted son or daughter will return to the college without bringing a fitting gift to Alma Mater for this historic occasion, and if devoted sons and daughters find that they cannot be present in person, they will see to it that they are represented by a personal gift adequate to express their unfailing devotion to Alma Mater and that will help to insure her continuance in instruction in the field of higher education. With the renewed expressions of interest and devotion, the pooling of our gifts on the altar of Christian Higher Education, and the cooperation of our efforts for the encouragement and strengthening of the college, we shall start her on her second half century of service undismayed and with high hopes of effective and fruitful service.

SAID BY JOHN RANDOLPH.

No man ever did get practice in any profession who did not seek it, who did not show a strong desire for it. . . . Confidence cannot be forced—to be itself, it must flow freely, voluntarily; if it does not, it is not confidence, but a base counterfeit; it is sheer hypocrisy. . . . Rely upon it, there will never be wanting persons to ask your signature provided it can be had for the asking. It is a dangerous thing to put one's name to paper,

Elon College Golden Anniversary

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY CLUB.

The majority of the pledges made to the Golden Anniversary Fund fall due May 1. Statements to those who have not paid are mailed this week. We are anxious that these payments be kept up to date. If your pledge or a part of your pledge is due on or before May 1, you will certainly render the college an additional service by sending payment promptly. We must reduce our debt as fast as possible.

Mr. T. W. Trogon, of the class of 1898, encourages us this week by a pledge of $500.00 reported elsewhere in this issue. We are grateful for every contribution, however large or small.

The new members of our club this week are greatly appreciated and are listed as follows:

ELON COLLEGE RECEIVES GIFT OF $500.00.

Mt. T. W. Trogon, of the class of 1898, High Point, N. C., is one of the most loyal and most interested sons of the college. He has never failed to respond to the call of the college in her needs. He has given his time, counsel, and efforts in her behalf. He has been most generous in his gifts. The following letter is received in today's mail:

April 25, 1940.

Dr. L. E. Smith, President,
Elon College, N. C.
Dear Dr. Smith:

I have your letter of the 23rd relative to Commencement. I feel like it is quite an honor to stand in line with you and the honored guests, hence I will make my plans to be present.

It has been my intention of writing you for the last week or so, and inform you that I would make a donation of $500.00 for the Golden Anniversary. I think this is a liberal gift for one of my financial standing, especially when I take into consideration the amount I have given in the past. I haven't any doubt but what we will reach our goal.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) T. W. TROGDON,

IF MY CHURCH WERE SELECTING A NEW HYMNAL.

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

God only knows how many hymnals have been published. No doubt He wishes that some of them had never been published, for certainly many of the hymnals are an abomination in the sight of the Lord, published as they were more to increase the number of different hymnals than to inspire the people who were to use them.

Many hymnals are so large and heavy that the people become weary in trying to hold them at a reading distance. Many hymnals, though having artistic covers, are archaic in content. Many hymnals are filled with unfamiliar and unsingable hymns. Most hymnals could have omitted half their numbers, and not a single usable number would be lost.

If I were helping select a new hymnal for my church, I would urge the committee to give most careful consideration to the new hymnal edited by my former professor at Yale Divinity School — Henry Hallam Tweedy — and published by A. S. Barnes and Company, New York City. The title of this hymnal is "Christian Worship and Praise."

It is not only an attractive hymnal of unusually convenient size, but the arrangement of its contents is the best I have ever seen. No other hymnal I have seen has such a splendid collection of prayers for various occasions, or such a helpful selection of responsive readings, litanies, etc. No other hymnal that I have seen has such a large selection of familiar hymns which every congregation enjoys singing. And the index to subjects of the hymns is arranged in an unusually helpful manner. The type is clearer than in most hymnals, and the binding is stronger. In every way, the serviceability of this hymnal is unique.

Any church contemplating the securing of a new hymnal should secure a sample copy of this wonderful hymnal before making final selection. It is simply great.

SELECTIONS.

Promises are blossoms; deeds are fruit.

Vice stings even in our pleasures, but virtue controls even in our pains.

To be angry with a weak man is proof that you are not very strong yourself.

We cannot conquer fate and necessity, yet we can yield to them in such a manner as to be greater than if we could.—Cicero.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

I know that most of you, if not all of you, who read this page go to Sunday school. Perhaps during the winter it has not been possible for you to attend every Sunday. Now that spring is here the long-looked-for warm weather must come. Let us see just how many of us can attend our Sunday school without missing a Sunday this summer. Your teacher will try to be present every time. You can help her to be happy and hopeful if you will have your smiling face there for her to look upon each Sunday. There is something else which you might help to do to bring happiness to your teacher. If she has, or he, never attended the Leadership Training School at Elon College, N. C., you and your fellow classmates may help to make it possible for her to go. You may do something as a class to help raise the money necessary to pay her expenses. Or you might ask the Sunday school as a whole to help send her. If she is a good teacher and is trying hard to help you to be better boys and girls she deserves your help. I think that it would be just loads of fun to help her to go, don't you! If you can't think of ways to help, tell your parents about it and they might think of some good plan. This summer the school is to be held from June 24 to June 29. You have enough time to work on this fine task and get it done.

Your Sunday school leaflets have poems and prayers which are very helpful. I wonder how many of you have started scrap books of good poems and prayers for boys and girls? Too, these leaflets have lovely pictures of Bible stories and happenings in them; how many of you have saved the pictures? It would be nice to have them for your Church Vacation School work this summer. On this page this week I am going to put some poems and prayers which I have that came from the Sunday school leaflets. I wonder if you will remember having seen them.

Here is a lovely scene from Jesus' home life which was in your "Thoughts of God" for the Lenten season this year.

FINDING GOD THROUGH SILENCE.

In the tiny Nazareth home where Jesus lived, the happy family went each evening up the outside staircase to the roof-top to sit in silence. There, in the cool of the twilight as the friendly dark was gathering, they seemed to come close to God. As the stars appeared one by one and the moon shone over the horizon, Jesus, the oldest of the brothers and sisters, repeated, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth."

IN THE BEGINNING GOD.

Once there was no world at all
Till God made all things, great and small.

First of all, God made the light.
He called it Day, and darkness, Night.

The sky, the sea, and then dry land
Were made by the Father's loving hand.

The bushes, the trees, the springing flower,
All came to show his wondrous power.

Then came the stars, the moon, the sun,
The fishes and birds and beasts—every one.

And then God made man to live and love
And worship his heavenly Father above.

All things were good God made that way;
He rested on the seventh day,

The day that we think of all the days the best,
Sunday, the Sabbath day of rest.

THE LEAFY LANE.

Today I went a-singing,
Down the little leafy lane,
The morning was so fresh and fair
And sweet from last night's rain;
The grass was sprigged with blue and pink,
And splashed with berry stain.
(My prettiest dress is like the grass:
Flower-sprigged and berry-stained.)

The morning was a-laughing
Like children at their play.
The wind shook all the little trees,
And wet me with their spray;
Then turned and kicked their heels and said:

"I must be on my way."
(I wonder just how far the wind
Can travel in a day.)

The lane was all a-flutter
Like a bird upon a tree;
The lane was like a silver bell
That calls me in to tea.
(Surely God loves me much to give Such lovely things to me.)

Another period of silence followed, broken only by the wind blowing through the olive trees or by a chirping bird finding its home among the branches. Mary broke the silence: "I will sing unto the Lord as long as I live; I will sing praises to my God while I have my being. My meditations of Him shall be sweet; I will be glad in the Lord."

"Praise ye the Lord. . . . Praise Him in the firmament of His power. Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord," responded the brothers and sisters.

It was quiet again as each head was bowed in meditation. Slowly Jesus arose and walked toward the staircase. Others followed, finding their way through the dim light to the room below. Mary took down the oil lamp of clay and lit the wick to provide a soft, golden light. Resting mats were unrolled. Tired bodies relaxed, surrounded by God's love in the devoted members of the family.

THE CONVENTION.

When this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN reaches its subscribers our Greensboro Convention will be a matter of history. The writer feels sure that all delegates to the Convention deeply desire, as he himself does, that it shall be a harmonious and a forward-looking session of the Convention. As is well known to CHRISTIAN SUN readers the Convention sponsors, or owns, four institutions or enterprises, and seeks through proper elected authorities to carry on each of the four enterprises, or institutions, namely, Elon College, the Christian Orphanage, THE CHRISTIAN SUN and Missions. It is natural and logical that the authorized representative of each should think his enterprise, or institution, the most needful and the most worthy of support. The heads of these institutions think daily and constantly of the needs of the institution, or enterprise, that he represents and naturally comes to feel that his institution, or enterprise, is the most important to the life of the church and the most needy and is making the greatest contribution to the life of the church. However, all CHRISTIAN SUN readers should bear in mind the words of St. Paul in his letter to the Corinthians, "The body is not one member but many, and whether one member suffereth all the members suffer with it: Or one member is honored all the members rejoice with it. Now ye are the body of Christ and several members thereof."

It takes all of these institutions and enterprises not only to make up the Convention, but to give every local church as well a program well rounded and with an appeal to all if all will consider the program as a whole and not make a preference of one to the neglect of the other. Our college makes a direct contribution to the local church by giving to the church an intelligent and well informed ministry. It cannot, however, say to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, "We have no need of thee," since THE CHRISTIAN SUN advises the people through weekly contributions of the needs of the college and what the college is trying to do. Missions cannot say to the college,

"We have no need of thee," for it is a notable fact that the well informed ministers of our churches going out from the college teach and preach missions from their pulpits. The Christian Orphanage cannot say to missions, "We have no need of thee," for it is a notable fact that immediately a church is planted through missionary aid, it begins to make its offerings to the orphanage. Neither can the other institutions say to the orphanage, "We have no need of thee," because we are told that "it is more blessed to give than to receive," and we give to the orphanage, expecting no financial returns, but with the satisfaction of knowing that we have made a contribution to a benevolence, or charity, through an institution which constitutes a vital part of our Convention.

All this in a measure will account for the fact that the well advised and non-prejudiced pastor and church will in its proper season and in due course make a contribution to each in keeping with the vote and the will of the Convention. We are indeed members one of another and through the process of growth and development it has been discovered and proven that the institutions and enterprises referred to above seem necessary to the growth and development of the local church—the local church itself with its pastor being the foundation and the keystone to the whole situation and for which all the enterprises and institutions that the Convention sponsors exists and should be supported.

MISSION RALLY HELD.

The Rockingham District Rally was held Sunday afternoon, April 21, at Mayland Christian Church. This District includes the following churches: Antioch, Bethlehem, Concord, Beulah, Linville, Mt. Olivet (R), Mayland, and New Hope, all of which are located in Rockingham County, Va. Six of these churches were well represented.

There were splendid missionary addresses given by Mrs. Ralph E. Moore and Rev. Paul Sanger. Also several short talks by women from the different churches. Mrs. Moore told of the work she and her husband did in the Presbyterian Mission in northern India. She said they hope some day to take their family and return to the mission field. The harvest there truly is ripe and laborers are few.

Rev. Sanger's subject was "The Outreach of the Christian Church." He said the missionary program is a very essential part of our Christian religion. Christianity is a world concern that we are to go out and share with others. We must share medical missions and agricultural missions as well as evangelism.

Mrs. A. W. Andes was acting chairman for the Superintendent, Mrs. A. B. Lam, who has been ill, but her friends were glad she was able to attend the Rally.

Officers elected for the ensuing year were Mrs. Samuel Earman, Superintendent, and Miss Audrey Armentrout, Secretary.

The Bethlehem ladies had charge of the devotions.

The preservation of both is no weariness unto Him.

He is the high, the mighty.

MEDITATION SOLO.

LEADER: From the Near East came Isaiah, the Hebrew prophet; Plato, the Greek philosopher; Mohammed, the Arab founder of Islam; and Jesus, the Universal Christ who came nineteen hundred years ago to the world. Let us recall in our Scripture Lesson for today some of His own words:

"I am the good shepherd."

"All that came before me were thieves and robbers."

"I am the light of the world."

"I am the way and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me."

"No man knoweth the Son, save the Father, neither doth any know the Father, save the Son and he whomsoever the Son will reveal Him."

"I am the door: by me, if any man enter in he shall be saved."

"And in none other is there salvation; for neither is there any name under heaven, that is given among men, wherein we must be saved."

VOLUNTEER WORKERS TRAINED IN INDIA.

By LUCY M. ELDRIDGE.

I reached Tungechow just in time to share in the joy of the candlelight service and commencement of the School for Volunteer Workers. Forty-two students, thirty men, and twelve women attended the 1939 session for five weeks. Eight were the first graduates. This school is a part of a general program of leadership education in China. There is a regular course outlined for three grades. Each grade has eighteen units and it takes twelve hours of work to complete one unit. The curriculum is varied. There are courses in Bible, Religious Education, Church History, and Psychology. Methods of almost every conceivable sort are included from Sunday School Work to Home Health, Worship and Play; from Drama to Raising Chickens. Students and leaders come from country areas of the province of Hopei and from Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational-Christian Churches. The purpose is interdenominational lay training.

Everyone was excited and happy on March 24, 1939, as the candlelight consecration service was about to begin. We had just time enough after arriving to see the candles placed ready to light as symbols of the light of Christ in all the world and the large map of China with the stations from which the students had come marked plainly. There was a mimeographed program of nineteen items, written vertically, from right to left on the sheet. Harry Martin helped us to understand what was happening. The organist began to play, a clear voice of an unseen reader read passages of Scripture, John 1:1-12; Psalm 138:112; Mark 16:15, and other New Testament verses. A quartette from Jefferson Academy sang "Light of Life Enlighten Me." Mr. Liu, one of the Chinese delegates to Madras, lighted the candle of the Church of China and sang:

These things shall be — a loftier race
Than e'er the world hath known shall rise
With flame of freedom in their souls,
And light of knowledge in their eyes.

The head of rural church work lighted the candle for the class singing "O, Save My Country, Lord." Then one by one the forty-two members of the class came forward. Each lighted a candle before his own station on the map. Each read his personal covenant, written on a sheet of paper, decorated with a cross, a vine and a lighted candle. Each received the blessing of the pastor. All was in the Chinese language, of course. But the spirit was one which revealed the vitality of the church in China to one who could not understand a single word.

The next day eight joyful students received diplomas. One of their number from Paoting-fu gave the commencement address. He told them to have faith of the kind that would move mountains. He reminded them to love God and their neighbors and to take time for devotional life. He warned them to separate right from wrong. He exhorted them to work, to meet their responsibilities, to let their light shine with the unique counsel to make sure not to have malarial churches, hot one day and cold the next. Then the class sang together with much enthusiasm "Church of China, Arise and Stand." Rowland Cross translated one verse for me for I wanted to know the thoughts which could stir such loyalty and enthusiasm. They were singing:

May Christ come, guiding his chosen people
The saints in all things united
Of one heart and with mutual aid
Speeding forward, quick as flight
Church of East Asia,
Established luxuriantly,
Hallelujah resounds
Self-established
Self-supported
Self-governed
Self-proclaimed
All mortals belonging to Holy Jesus. Amen.

Then came the benediction and an exchange of farewells to match the last day of an American Summer Conference. They started back almost at once to their churches. I learned how much one can carry on one bicycle! I learned other things. Volunteer Chinese Christian workers return to difficult places with matchless joy and courageous zeal. They go strengthened by fellowship with their own leaders and missionary friends. This is a growing, invincible partnership for Christ.

YOU CAN HELP.

Your young people's groups can have a share in providing training similar to the above for young people in the area around Tientsin, China, by giving to the Southeast China Friendship Project. In many sections of our land there is a lack of understanding between parents and children. Where there exists such an attitude as "My Mother does not understand" or "Older people are out date . . . old fogies," a means for correcting such attitudes should be sought. Probably some parents do not understand their children. The fault is not always with such parents. It may be the fault of the children.

Young people should seek a closer understanding and appreciation of their parents. It is true that individual differences are more marked and habits are more deeply established on the side of parents. Experience in meeting life situations is at their disposal. They have lived longer and deeper than their children. Even though parents sometimes make it hard for their children, young people should go more than half way to overcome any barrier of misunderstanding that may exist.

Select some young person with an understanding mind to talk on "Ways to Better Understand Our Parents." Invite some thoughtful parent to speak on "A Parent's Responsibility and Concern for His or Her Children."

Discuss and plan a schedule of interesting and worthwhile activities for the entire family.

Sunday School Lesson

ISAIAH GIVES GOD'S INVITATION.

LESSON V—MAY 5, 1940.

LESSON: Isaiah 55.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Matt. 11:25-30.

GOLDEN TEXT: Seek ye the Lord while he may be found; call ye upon him while he is near.—Isaiah 55:6.

A Gracious Invitation.

"Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price." Thus does God extend to all men everywhere his gracious and generous invitation to come to him and to receive from him his gifts. The invitation is to all men—"Ho, everyone that thirsteth." Regardless of color, or class, or creed, and no matter how poor a man may be, he is eligible to receive these blessings from God. Two things only are necessary: he must have a sense of need, hunger and thirst after righteousness; and he must have simple faith and trust so that he will claim these blessings for himself. They can not be bought, they can only be received. If any man asks in sincerity he shall receive.

Money and Labor for That Which Satisfieth Not.

"Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not?" These words applied to the Hebrew people in captivity, but it applies just as well to many of us modern men and women who are also in captivity. How much of our time, of our energy, and of our money goes in the pursuit of things which do not satisfy the hungry heart! How much we spend on those things which are not bread for our spirits! What a distorted sense of values many of us have in regard to the satisfying things of life! God invites us to hearken diligently unto him to heed that which is good, and promises that our souls shall delight in fatness, that is, that we shall find abiding satisfaction for life's deepest hungers and needs.

Hear, Come, and Take.

"Incline your ear, and come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live." Isaiah, like Jesus, emphasized the importance of hearing, of listening, of being sensitive to the divine voice. God can not do much with or for any man unless he first of all gets his ear. The next step after listening is to come. And the next step is to take. The last two steps involve trust and faith. If one draws near unto God in sincere and honest spirit, he may take it for granted that God will keep his word and give to him the spiritual blessing which he seeks.

A Leader and Commander of the People.

"Behold, I have given him for a witness to the peoples, a leader and commander to the peoples." These words may look backward to David in whose life they had already found fulfilment, or they may refer to Jesus in whom they found larger fulfilment. The significant fact is that Jesus was to be a leader and a commander. He was to go before them, to lead them, and he was also to exercise sovereignty over them. Christ is Lord as well as leader. He demands obedience as well as adoration.

Seeking and Finding the Lord.

"Seek ye the Lord while he may be found; call ye upon him while he is near." A man must seek God, but he needs to keep in mind that he is not with a Someone who is trying to elude him, but rather Someone who has already taken the initiative in seeking him. Jesus emphasized the fact that the love of God was a great love, a seeking love, a love that was never discouraged until it had found the object of its love. The accepted time is while God is near. One can neglect God so long that it becomes increasingly difficult for him to find God.

Forsaking Wicked Ways and Wrong Thinking.

"Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto Jehovah, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." A man must not only give up his wrong ways, he must also give up his wrong thoughts. What a man thinks does make a difference. As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he. One reason why so many people do wrong is because they think wrong. This text is one of the strongest texts in scripture, and shows the relation between outward conduct and inward thoughts.

God's Thoughts, and Our Thoughts.

"For my thoughts are not your thoughts." We think about getting; God thinks about giving. We think about self-assertion; God thinks about self-surrender. We think about holding; God thinks about using. We think about justice; God thinks about mercy. We think about self; God thinks about others. We think in terms of the narrow and provincial; God thinks in term of the broad and universal.

A Word of Encouragement.

"So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void." Here is a word of encouragement for Sunday school teachers, for Christian workers, for ministers, for missionaries. Just as the rain and snow come down from heaven and seem to disappear in the earth, just so does the word of God often seem to disappear or to fall futilely upon stony or barren lives. But we are not to become weary in well doing; we are to sow the seed in season and out of season, and in due season we shall reap if we faint not, for God himself says that it shall not return unto him void but it shall accomplish that which he pleased.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

These are suggestive:

1. Parents and children can learn to play together. Suggest games of interest inside the home and enumerate activities for outside occasions.

2. Parents and children may build happy homes together through mutual trust, cooperation, and a Christian spirit—reflecting love in their lives for each other.

3. Parents and children need to worship together. Regular family devotions would be a means of helping to understand and determine the ties that should be felt in home life.

The Golden Rule is: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." The Diamond Rule is: "Do more for others than we expect them to do for us." Do most parents follow the Diamond Rule toward their children?

Suggested Hymns—

"He Leadeth Me."

"Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me."

Suffering is a wonderful fertilizer to the roots of character. The great object of this life is character. This is the only thing we can carry with us into eternity. . . . To gain the most of it and the best of it is the object of probation.—Austin Phelps.

Mother's Week

MONDAY.

MOTHER AND THE CROSS.

"There were standing by the cross, his mother . . . and he saith unto his mother behold thy son: then saith he to the disciples behold thy mother."—John 19: 25-27.

It is a part of Christianity to perpetuate devotion, and that devotion is perpetuated through mother. The cross is not only a symbol of Christ's love and of Christianity, but also of that heavenly relation of mother and child. Let us hope that this week and Mother's Day will strengthen the grip of mankind on the world's mothers, and on Christianity, of which she is the symbol of perpetual devotion.

Prayer—Our Father, guide our thoughts and devotions this week in love—love for mother, love for children, love for Christ—that love which we see and know in Christ. Amen.

TUESDAY.

BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE.

"The night cometh when no man can work."—John 9: 4.

If you have a gray-haired mother
In the old home far away,
Sit down and write a letter
You put off every day.

Don't wait until her tired steps
Reach heaven's pearly gates
But show her that you think of her
Before it is too late.

If you have a tender message
Or a loving word to say,
Don't wait until you forget it,
But whisper it today.

Who knows what bitter memories
May haunt you if you wait,
So make your loved ones happy
Before it is too late.

We live but in the present,
The future is unknown;
Tomorrow is a mystery,
Today is all our own.

The chance that fortune leads to
May vanish while you wait,
So spend life's rich pleasures
Before it is too late.

The tender words unspoken,
The letters never sent,
The long forgotten message,
The wealth of love unspent.

For these some hearts are breaking,
For these some loved one waits;
So show them that you love them
Before it is too late.

WEDNESDAY.

MOTHER SACRED.

"Forsake not the law of thy mother."—Prov. 1: 8.

"(She) is like a vine in thy blood."—Ezk. 19: 10-14.

Paul Richter said, "To the man who has had a mother all women are sacred for her sake." There are some exceptions to this rule, much as we cannot understand why there should be; for it is said that "all great men attribute all that they are or hope to be to their mothers." As the writer left his home to join the navy his mother said, "If my children will just be good men and women I shall be amply repaid for all my trouble. Be a good man."

Prayer—Our Father, she lives in vain, who after pouring out her life for her child, he forgets and grovels in unworthy living. Help us never to forget but to be alert always to our duty and privilege in honoring our mothers. Amen.

THURSDAY.

SO HAS IT BEEN.

"Thou didst make me hope when I was upon my mother's breast."—Psalm 22: 9.

Edward T. Sullivan said, "When God wants an important thing done in this world, or a wrong righted, he puts the idea or purpose in a woman's heart. She puts it in the baby's mind and then—God waits."

So it has been in the history of man. God waits today for men and women to blossom into His world for His kingdom to come. That one may be your child. Pray and work for it.

Prayer—Our Father, Thou alone can make us what we ought to be. Reveal to us our duty. And may we not fail or falter in that duty. Make us willing to the sacrifice that such a life requires. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THE MOTHERS OF MEN."

"The mother of Jesus was there."—John 2: 1.

The mother of Jesus was at the marriage feast, smiling, entertaining, well-wishing and mixing with others.

Always, where Jesus was, Mary was there. Physically she was often far separated from him, but in the intimacy of his soul and in his spirit she was there even till the last.

The dominating impulse, the supreme motive, the consuming passion of womanhood is motherhood. Whether she bears children or not she must mother some one or something. We regret that conditions of modern society and business tend away from this sphere. But still, the four posts of the home are the four corners of the earth. In every circumstance, difficulty and occasion, "the mothers of men are the power. God made them so."

Prayer—Our Father, Father of us all, and the maker of the world, make us worthy of better things to come through Thy angels of this world—mothers. Amen.

SATURDAY.

LOVE'S FULFILMENT.

"There is none other commandment greater than these."—Mark 12: 31.

I love to feel that in the Heavens above
The angels whispering to one another,
Can find among their burning words of love
No name so beautiful as that of Mother.

—Edgar Allen Poe.

In the words "behold thy mother," Jesus gave to the mother, head of the world, such a power and such an in-

Thoughts About the Democratic Church

(Galatians 5:13-26.)

By CLAYTON S. RICE, D. D., Superintendent of Washington.

Our church, made up of men who claim the personal experience of God through Jesus, is firm in its belief in the dignity of man. For Jesus taught us that He was the Son of God and that we are His brethren, and, therefore, we are the sons of God. What a heritage! These bodies of ours, the instruments we use to make ourselves known in this physical universe, are merely tools, temporary things! The real you, the real I—why, we are eternal souls, sons of God, our Heavenly Father, thinking, feeling, willing, self-knowing beings, limited in power and understanding, but nonetheless His sons, with the capacity for development beyond our fondest dreams, with a goal, “unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ.”

Our church is a religious democracy. In the final analysis, it is based upon this lofty conception of man, man as the Son of God. As equals, all sons of God, banded together in the church of His Son, no man has the right to claim that through him the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ can be mediated in any peculiar, unique, authoritative official way. We have no priesthood, in the sense of a sacerdotal church. We have no ecclesiastical hierarchy. We believe in the priesthood of all believers, unless a desire to take our place with others in the Ecumenical Church causes us to lose our historic perspective and to bow before Apostolic Succession!

Now some branches of the Christian Church seem to possess less confidence in the priesthood of all believers than we do. It may be because they have a lower conception of man than we claim to have. It is easy to disparage man and his powers today, in a world nearly wrecked by the folly of individual and collective suicidal action. It is therefore not difficult to build up a church which disparages man's birthright, and which removes him far from God. The prophet who foretells large growth in the Roman Catholic Church in the next decade is playing safe, I imagine. The church which has a confident, intolerant priesthood, which claims the exclusive right to mediate between overwrought, terrified, baffled man, and his far-away, seemingly uninterested God, a church which has a Mother of God—the Virgin, who may be approached, even if the Son Himself seems to be busy with other things, is bound to grow by leaps and bounds. One is not surprised to hear a man like the worldly-wise Heywood Broun, who recently died, quoted as saying that the folly of independence, in economics, in politics, and in church, becomes increasingly apparent to him—a man who in search of authority at last became a Catholic. It is no wonder that the movies play up to this Church today and that the newspapers give it much space and praise!

To find God, through the blackness of uncertainty and threatened or realized calamity, to find God, to placate Him, to make Him favorable—yes, sacerdotal, and authoritarian churches will make great gains in times of the terror which walketh by night and by day as well. A man who does not believe in himself will never dream that he is the son of God. We do not marvel that many men have lost faith in themselves and in their divine origin these puzzling days. Weaklings always crack under strain, and the free churches have bred plenty of weaklings.

But we have not lost faith! These are hard days for democracy, both in state and church. But we still believe in man's divine heritage, in the value of human personality, and in man's privilege without benefit of Pope or bishop or priest to approach God as his son. To lose this means the death of true democracy in church and state! But we shall not lose it, though the foundations of the earth tremble and the eternal hills themselves quake.

May I share an experience with you, one which is so vivid that even after years have elapsed, it is still a most vital one? Once I stood on the top of the Mount McCalab in the Rockies. The forest supervisor, my friend, has said that so far as he knew no one had ever climbed that particular mountain. He was wrong. Twenty years before I reached the top, another man had made it. He had built a monument there, and had left a note of greeting for the next man who scaled it. I was glad to accept this greeting, twenty years after it had been written. I had climbed alone all day to reach the summit. Alone, I stood gazing off into the distance. What a panorama! Sections of four states stretched out before me. Forests, rivers, canyons, then other alluring snow-clad peaks miles and miles away! Thrillingly beautiful and quiet—oh, so quiet! Just man and the Eternal.

Alone, on that topmost pinnacle, I looked up into the clear blue sky. How glorious it was. It seemed as though I could gaze into the very face of God Himself. No man has ever seen God at any time, yet there are times when He is so near that one feels that he can see Him or feel His presence at least. He the strong, and man the weak, but it seemed as though He smiled at me that day. He, my God, I, His son—but I could feel His presence. Alone, in the quiet of that glory, I communed with Him. In that great hour I was sure that I had gazed into the eyes of the Eternal!

Two golden eagles that day disputed my right to the topmost pinnacle. They had no thought of looking into the eyes of God. They were concerned only with the safety of their young in the nest there on the top of the world. I moved down after a while, my heart throbbing with joy, leaving them with their young.

Yes, the right and the privilege and the duty of man, as the Son of God, to stand upon his own feet, and with shoulders back to look unafraid into the eyes of his loving Father, is something which our fellowship encourages. It is the privilege of our glorious heritage as sons of God through Christ.

THE QUIET HOUR.

elusiveness of the Father's idea of the completeness of love that it become the all absorbing precept of His law in that one principle of “love never faileth.” Can we fall in line, dear friends?

Prayer—Dear Father, Thou art our Father, and all we are brothers. In Thy perfect love ministered to men in motherhood, may we be true enough to find our perfect bliss in Thy great family above. Amen.

SUNDAY.

A PRAYER.

“Blessed are the mothers of yesterday for their memories shall be called beautiful and beneficent. Blessed are the mothers of today for they have the destiny of homes and nations and the keeping of future days in their hands and hearts. Blessed are the mothers of tomorrow for they have been summoned to a great and heroic hour. Guide, sustain, and keep them all, O God, as they continue to work the ever increasing miracles of human life.” Amen.—Chaplain E. W. Davis, U. S. N.

In Memoriam

AYSCUE.

In the passing of Mrs. Stella Eaves Ayscue, wife of the late R. G. Ayscue, of Franklin County, N. C., Epson Community has lost its oldest and best loved citizen. Quiet and unassuming, she and her husband walked life's pathway for many years. They were reared in that period when the South had been stripped of nearly all but honor, they started their home with little of material things, but a wealth of love and energy and a determination to build a Christian home—in this they succeeded. Their home was the preacher's home and a warm welcome always awaited him.

Twin babies came to bless this home, a boy and girl, but they only lived to be about a year old. Then their affection was centered on a niece, Cassie Eaves (now Mrs. W. S. Ayscue), who came to live with them. She never left them and still lives with her husband in the home, carrying on the ideals imparted to them by "Uncle Dick" and "Aunt Stella." Mr. Ayscue passed on to his reward about sixteen years ago.

"Aunt Stella," as she was known in the community, was always in her place in church and Sunday school. Only last summer she remarked, "I want to live to attend one more revival at Liberty Church, for I haven't missed one in sixty-eight years." She was interested in all phases of church work. She had long been a life member of the Missionary Society; she read her Bible a great deal; and she was especially interested in Elon College, often saying, "It hasn't been much, but there has never been a year since it was founded that we haven't given something to the college." "Aunt Stella" will be greatly missed in her home, her church, and her community.

She was not afraid to cross "The Great Divide."

For the Savior she loved was close at her side

As He whispered, "I'm with thee, be not afraid,

You've trusted in me and my teachings obeyed.

Now your Lord and your loved ones await you there,

Enter in gladly and His Glories ever share."

A NEIGHBOR.

HARRELL.

We, the members of Eure's Congregational-Christian Church, Gates County, N. C., wish to pay tribute to the memory of Sister Theodosia Harrell, beloved wife of Elijah Harrell, who passed away on March 17, 1940.

She was a faithful member; an active missionary leader; and loved all activities of her church.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we pause to refresh our memories that death will come to all of us, and we submit to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

2. That we hold in remembrance her faithfulness as a friend to all.

3. That we extend our sympathy to the family.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to "The Christian Sun," a copy to the Gates County Index, and a copy be placed on our record.

Mrs. J. GERNEY EURE,
Mrs. JOHN I. ASKEW,
Miss LOUISE EURE,
Committee.

GUYNN.

Whereas, it has become our sad duty to record the departure from this life on January 30, 1940, of Mrs. A. L. Gynn, who was one of the most faithful members of our Woman's Society of the Rosemont Christian Church; and

Whereas, we feel deeply our loss, both to the society and personally, and shall always miss her quiet and unassuming manner which always impressed one with the strength and dependability of her character, and her ready help and generous financial support; therefore

Be it resolved:

That we submit cheerfully to God's will, knowing that He doeth all things well; and

That the memory of her sweet life, devoted to the service of her family and her Lord, shall ever be an inspiration to us all to live better and more spiritual lives, trying ever to serve more faithfully, our Lord and Savior; and

That we extend to her bereaved family our deepest sympathy, praying that they may have a comforting sense of God's mercy and loving kindness; and

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy written in the minutes of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Rosemont Christian Church.

Mrs. H. C. HEDLY,
Mrs. J. F. MORGAN,
Mrs. O. F. SMITH,
Committee.

BRANNOCK.

On December 15, 1939, God, our Father, called our beloved member, Mrs. Lula York Brannock, home, to share in the more abundant life of His Heavenly Kingdom. We feel keenly the loss of a faithful member whose life was consecrated to the service of her Master.

Whereas, in her death, we have lost a friend and neighbor so kind and gentle, a member steadfast and loyal, therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we be deeply grateful to God for the beauty of her life, which will ever be an inspiration to us.

2. That we bow humbly before the infinite wisdom of our Heavenly Father, realizing that our loss is her eternal gain.

3. That we extend to her family our deepest sympathy.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, one placed on the records of the Elon College Woman's Missionary Society and one to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

PEGRAM.

Annie Blanche Gossett was born July 29, 1887, in Guilford County, N. C., near Deep River Church, and died near there on March 27, 1940. She married D. R. Pegram on January 29, 1913. To this union were born six children, one of whom preceded her in death. She was a birthright member of Deep River Friends Church. In 1928 she transferred her membership to Pleasant Ridge Christian Church to be with her husband and children, where she was a faithful and loyal worker.

She leaves to mourn their loss a faithful husband, five children, one grandchild, one brother, one sister and other relatives and a great host of friends.

Funeral services were held at Pleasant Ridge Christian Church by her pastor, the writer; Rev. D. M. Spence, a former pastor; and Rev. Lance of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. The great floral offering spoke words of appreciation of a useful life. Burial was in Deep River Cemetery, in her childhood community.

G. H. VEAZEY.

BRAY.

Samuel David Bray, son of Obadiah and Sallie Bray, was born April 12, 1855, and departed this life March 16 1940. He was twice married. About the year 1885 he married Miss Martha Rice who lived only a few years. One son, James I. Bray of Buena Vista, Va., survives from this marriage. In 1889 he married Miss Lelia Covington who survives, together with the following children: Mrs. Frank Clements, Nathalie, Va.; Mrs. J. C. Turpin, Lynchburg, Va.; Mrs. Janie Schmidt, Buffalo, N. Y.; Mrs. Bryan Wilborn, Phenix, Va.; Mrs. Frank Arendall, Brookneal, Va.; Miss Minnie Bray, Halifax, Va.; F. A. Bray, Nathalie, Va.; T. H. Bray, Halifax, Va.; and Charles Bray, Buffalo, N. Y. There are two brothers, Walter and Nathan Bray; twenty-six grandchildren; and several great-grandchildren. Bro. Bray had been a faithful member of Liberty Christian Church a number of years. Funeral and burial were at Millstone Church.

C. E. NEWMAN.

PRICE.

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Leaksville (Va.) Christian Church, wish to pay tribute to the memory of our beloved member, Mrs. Lizzie Price, who died January 14, 1940. Her passing brought us deep sorrow.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. We know our Heavenly Father knoweth best; though we do not understand, we bow in submission to His will.

2. We hold in loving remembrance her service and quiet personality.

3. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to her family and commend them to the One who doeth all things well

4. A copy of these resolutions be placed on the records of the society, a copy be sent to the family, and a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. N. F. PAINTER.

WOODWARD.

Mrs. Thomas Woodward was fatally stricken with a heart attack Easter Sunday morning at 8:45 o'clock, and her funeral was conducted in the Suffolk Christian Church by Rev. A. L. Franklin, D. D., and Rev. H. J. Goodwin, in the absence of her pastor, who was ill, on Easter Monday afternoon at 4:30. She is survived by her husband, Thos. L. Woodward, one of the best known attorneys of Suffolk, and her father, Mr. Sol Lee Bryant of Newsoms, Va.

Mrs. Woodward was a faithful member of the Suffolk Christian Church, and was widely known for her deep interest in charitable and philanthropic endeavor in the city. Her funeral was attended by a very large congregation of friends, and the floral designs were beautiful and of an exceptionally large number. Mrs. Woodward will be greatly missed in her community, and amongst scores of friends. May God's blessings be richly bestowed on her loved ones left behind.

The Awakening Church

By REV. DON WEST.

"I have come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Thus spake the same Jesus who said, "Even as ye have done it unto one of the least of these . . ." and "Whoever wants to save his life shall lose it, and whoever loses his life, for my sake, shall find it."

Herein lies a philosophy of life, one of abundance as over against skimpy scarcity, cautious selfishness. It was further personified in the life of Jesus, who ranks as the world's foremost exponent of the abundant life. Christians must throw themselves into whatever is at hand to do with utter abandon. He requires bold, adventurous, courageous living—a divine discontent with whatever hinders the abundant life, even "for the least of these." He is intolerant of complacency and timidity that stand fearful of adventuring on new trails, or seek to save themselves.

This abundant life philosophy is the most challenging mankind has ever had. Most of us shrink from it. We have fallen back upon the "safer" way of striving to "save our own souls." And mostly instead of our churches issuing Christ's challenge to men to lose their lives, as Jesus did, we have spent our time urging them to "save themselves." We have tried to sell them religion with the same high powered advertiser's trick of showing "where it pays." We invite them to "flee from the wrath to come," to "make sure of their own soul's salvation!" We urge them to be good, because "it pays to be good." We use every selfish argument that is used by our greedy economic system. I heard a minister in a conference on evangelism in Dayton the other day say we needed to show men where it "paid" to come into the church. I know of a church secretary and editor who is ingenious at money raising. During the worst of the depression he contrived to get a huge donation of many thousands of dollars earmarked and set aside to assure his own personal salary. He wanted to plan ahead, make sure of the morrow.

This is only typical of our attitude. It isn't a criticism of an individual or persons. It is a part of our anti-Jesus, skimp, fearful philosophy. We are afraid. We don't dare adventure. We must save ourselves! We have not only adopted the semi-pagan philosophy that we "must flee from the wrath to come," but we must also make sure of our personal security right now.

But Jesus is still challenging men to "lose themselves." He offers the hardest, the richest, the most abundant life. He flings it to men of courage, to adventurous spirits. The pious stumbling blocks—self-righteous church members—shy away from this real Jesus. They still want to deal in terms of "personal religion" which is just another term for "selfishly motivated religion," of "saving our souls" and securing our personal safety now. Jesus dares us not to be afraid to lose our souls! He dares us to dig deep into His religion, and find there the true "personal religion" with the righteous motivation that will drive us on toward the goal of building a Kingdom of Heaven on Earth!

There Still Are Mothers

Whatever else be lost along the way
There still are Christian mothers in all lands.
And now we pause to honor them today;
These queens who have no scepters in their hands,
And yet who reign upon a firmer throne
Than any that the earth has ever known.

Rulers of life itself, with love as pure
And true and selfless as the old earth knows,
Their trust in God, unshakable and sure,
Their faith implanted in their children, grows
Into a living, lifting, shining thing,
That through great stress can know no conquering.

There still are mothers who will ever hold
The old sweet ways of truth and righteousness
Before their children's eyes; who long have told Christ's teachings to their young to heal and bless.
Thank God for any mother, anywhere,
Who lives and serves, and finds her strength in prayer.

—Grace Noll Crowell.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The Golden Anniversary Commencement of Elon College will soon be here. It is hoped that many old students and graduates as well as many church people and friends will be on the campus for that celebration.

Rev. F. C. Lester entered Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va., Tuesday of this week for a minor operation. He expects to be home again in about two weeks. In the meantime the office work goes on as usual.

Sickness prevented Col. J. E. West, Chairman of the Mission Board, from attending the Convention sessions in Greensboro. Historian W. E. MacClenny was also absent. Reports from both were presented to the Convention.

The new editor, Rev. Robert Lee House, is expected to assume his responsibilities on the first of July. Until then materials for publication should continue to be sent to the present editor at Elon College. Subscriptions will continue to go to the present office at Elon College, N. C.

Twenty-eight delegates were elected by the Southern Convention last week to represent it at the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches meeting at Berkeley, Calif., August 13-20, 1940. It is hoped that these delegates will be present to share in the denominational council.

The Convention voted to request President Roosevelt to call home his personal representative, Myron C. Taylor, to the Pope of Rome because there is no such representative to any other church and because such representation runs contrary to the American ideal of separation of Church and State.

The campaign for CHRISTIAN SUN subscriptions is working successfully in many churches both large and small. If you have not yet started in your church, please see that a careful canvass is made for the payment of renewals and the securing of new readers for the paper. It will help your church as well as the paper.

North Carolina and Virginia are each entitled to four young people at the National Pilgrim Fellowship which will meet at Mills College, eight miles from where the General Council meets, at the same time as the meeting of the General Council. The young people are at work to secure proper representatives and to get money with which to send them. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is wishing them good success in this important venture.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S AND PASTORS' CONFERENCE.

The Elon Summer School of Leadership Education, which is a summer conference for young people and pastors, will meet this year at Elon College, N. C., June 24-29. The conference will open Monday afternoon and close Saturday at noon.

The school is being set up in three divisions. There will be courses for high school people, for older young people and teachers, and for pastors.

church programs, social action, missions, vacation schools, materials and methods for teaching, and other phases of religious education will be among the subjects for young people. The ministers will be studying the things they are expected to do.

The cost will be $8.50 for board, room, and tuition. The only other cost will be the purchase of books for study. Ten ($10.00) dollars should include this item and pay all the expenses at the school.

The new emphasis on young people's work will, it is believed, make it necessary for all churches to be represented at this training school by pastors, young people, and leaders of young people. Now is the time for churches to be planning so that their leaders can attend the Elon Summer Conference. Many churches are planning to pay part of the expenses of their representatives. This shows the leaders that the members want them to be prepared for their jobs, and does much to stimulate leadership.

LET US GO TO WORK.

The Convention is over. Let us now get down to business, and go to work. I feel like enough plans were made to keep us busy for the next biennium, and I hope that we shall all cooperate in carrying out the plans made. I came away from the Convention feeling that a rededication of the personnel of our entire Convention from one border to the other, in every pulpit and in every pew, was an ideal toward which we should all strive.

Let us work for a revival of tithing in our churches. Let us see how many tithers we can enlist in the membership of our local churches. Let us work for a better CHRISTIAN SUN, and let us work for a larger number of readers of that paper. Let us work for increased interest in the local church by all members of the church, a better understanding of the challenge coming to the church in these days, and a renewed harnessing of the power of the church in every home, and in every community. Let us win many young people to the joy of church work in every phase of church life, and let us help them in the finest possible fellowship one with another in groups both large and small. Let us introduce to many the saving Gospel, and open the way for many new life dedications to the Kingdom of God.

This will mean the very practical business of attending church at home, giving a tithe or more to Christian tasks, and taking hold where we are and doing the work asked of each of us to do. This will mean that we should read our church paper, know what our Conference is trying to do, and what the united work of our Convention is. This will mean the acceptance of a place in the world-wide call to Christian service through whatever channels there may be at our hands. And let us not forget to pray, to pray daily and sincerely, for the Spirit of Christ within ourselves and with others.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

The personal character of the sacrifice is evident in the act of the worshiper who laid his hands upon the head of the victim, making personal acknowledgment of his sin. The laying on of hands meant the transference of guilt from the offerer to the victim. Christ was the perfect Sacrifice, intimately personal and forever complete.—John MacBeath.

My Mother

I know a dear old lady
Whose voice is soft and low;
Her face is like some picture,
A dream of long ago.

She is not great or famous,
Nor known in realms of art,
But she is rich in treasures
Which gild a kindly heart.

To see her is to bless her;
Her praise is on each tongue;
She's friends in all the aged,
And "lovers in the young."

Her life's a living sermon
Of hope and gentle facts—
A text for human nature,
That's found in loving acts!

She fills her world with kindness,
It brightens every spot.
She has her earthly sorrows,
But yet of earth is not.

She's patient, pure, and happy,
In these her twilight days;
Her lips are ever ready
To comfort or to praise.

Her soul's a gleam of sunshine,
A rainbow of Life's showers;
Her presence is a garden
Of ever-blowing flowers,

Which Time can never wither,
For recollections rare
Shall bloom around her Memory,
And twine Love's garlands there.

—William L. Chittenden.

A Mother's Prayer

So many cares to burden all the day,
So many wounds to bind, and hurts to heal,
So many steps to guide along the way,
So much for hands to do and hearts to feel.
Thou knowest, Lord, how weary mothers grow;
How at the close of day, we come with lagging feet
And oftentimes aching head, to ask Thy help
Just to keep sweet.

The cup of little things, things that worry so,
Comes often to a mother's lips to drink.
The griefs and joys that only mothers know
Make up her chain of days, forged link by link.
Dear Lord, a mother draws her strength from Thee,
Her wisdom, too, to guide the childish feet;
But always, Lord, our daily need will be Just to keep sweet.

—Helen P. Metzger.

My Mother

You painted no Madonnas
On chapel walls in Rome;
But with a touch diviner,
You lived one in your home.

You wrote no lofty poems
That critics counted art;
But with a nobler vision,
You lived them in your heart.

You carved no shapeless marble
To some high soul-design;
But with a finer sculpture,
You shaped this soul of mine.

You built no great cathedrals
That centuries applaud;
But with a grace exquisite,
Your life cathedraled God.

Had I the gift of Raphael
Or Michelangelo
Oh, what a rare Madonna
My mother's life should show!

—T. W. Fessenden.

THE CONVENTION IN GREENSBORO.

Readers of this paper certainly know that there was a meeting of the Southern Convention in Greensboro last week. It had been discussed for a long time, and many people had suggested problems to be solved. That Convention is now history.

Two years ago there were forty-six ministers and forty-two laymen present for the Convention session. This year there were sixty-one ministers and seventy-three laymen registered as delegates present, an increase of forty-six over the enrollment two years ago. Sessions began at nine in the morning and closed at the end of twelve hours, with a little time out for lunch and supper. Delegates watched with care every move and scrutinized every motion made. It was a business session rather than a "speechfest." People were interested in what our church is to undertake, and how it is to be undertaken.

Finances.

Perhaps too much time was given to the matter of finances. The budget as finally voted is given elsewhere in this paper, and is quite similar to that of previous years. There is an increase in the amount for the Board of Christian Education, and all money received by that Board will be credited to the church giving it even though the money comes through the Sunday School Conventions. The Board of Publications is to handle funds for printing "The Christian Sun," and will receive money from subscriptions, $600.00 from Elon College, the same amount from the Orphanage and the Mission Board, $250.00 from the Board of Christian Education, and $200.00 from the Convention Fund. The expenses of the office of Promotional Secretary will be supported by the Convention Fund and the Board of Christian Education.

Young People.

A council was set up to study, correlate, and develop work among young people. The council will be composed of two young people from each Conference Pilgrim Fellowship, preferably the president and one elected member except that in Eastern Virginia the second person is to be the president of the Missionary Conference of young people, two elected members of the Board of Christian education, and two elected members of the Woman's Mission Board.

Rural Churches.

A committee of ten was appointed to survey, study, and make recommendations for the development of our rural churches. This will give us a clearer picture of just what our task is and how we can be of most service to the churches.

Mission Board Membership.

It was voted that the Mission Board should divide itself so only half of the members will be elected at one time. This will make the term four years rather than two.

Stewardship.

A committee on stewardship was appointed and given the responsibility of educating the churches on that subject. This is intended to mean more than, but to include, church finance.

"The Christian Sun."

It seemed to be the opinion of the delegates that "The Christian Sun" should be continued in somewhat the same form and size as at present with the subscription remaining at two ($2.00) dollars per year. Those churches sending the paper to all active members will be allowed to secure the paper at one ($1.00) dollar per subscription. The Board of Publications will handle funds and pay for the printing, and will be more directly responsible for the publication than heretofore. Rev. Robert Lee House, pastor of our church in Richmond, Va., will be the new editor. Change in editorship is expected to begin July 1, 1940.

New Membership.

It was voted to change the membership of the Convention so that each ordained minister and at least one person from each church will be delegates. The local church with two hundred or fewer members will nominate one person, and those with more members will nominate two persons to be elected by the Conference to membership in the Convention. The Conference will elect enough other members to make its delegation equal to one lay delegate for every two hundred members. This new method will guarantee each church the chance to be represented in the Convention sessions.

Promotional Secretary.

It was voted to continue the office of Promotional Secretary, and to make the Executive Board of the Convention responsible for aiding and planning the work. The office will be financed by the Convention Fund, the Board of Christian Education, and special gifts from churches and individuals. In this way those contributing will know just what is being done with the money. Since this secretary will not be responsible for editing "The Christian Sun," it is believed that more effective work can be done in the development of the churches.

The General Council.

In other State Conferences similar to the Southern Convention the churches support the denominational office, the General Council, by giving seven cents per member to the Council. One cent of this is put into a fund with which to pay part of the expenses of delegates to the Council meetings. It was voted to refer this matter to the Conferences with the suggestion that they adopt this method of supporting the Council and paying expenses of delegates to the denominational gatherings biennially. The Convention elected twenty-eight delegates to the Council meeting in Berkeley, Calif., next August, but there are no available funds with which to pay their expenses.

Personal Development.

The long hours of careful work, the fine fellowship, excellent music, some splendid addresses, and the delightful daily devotionals led by Dr. Douglas Horton contributed largely to the personal development of those present for the Convention.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Some Conventions are "cut and dried." Others are cleaned, pressed, and provided with a good working "steam roller." The recent session of the Southern Convention, held in First Congregational-Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., cannot be included in either of these classifications. At times it was "dry," although somewhat "uncured" in spots, and the steam roller was not in evidence. At other times it was enlivened by spirited discussions, engaged in by active and interested delegates who were seeking to find the best solution to the various problems.

On the whole the Convention was pervaded by a deep interest and a sincere effort to clear the way for progress and clarification. The Promotional Plans adopted two years ago evidently resulted in much overlapping of the work and responsibilities of the various boards and official representatives of the Convention. This was evidenced by the several reports presented for consideration. This brought much confusion and required diligent and careful study to correct these difficulties. In a measure the several actions of the Convention adjusted these problems to the satisfaction of a majority of the delegates.

As usual, in such Conventions, the financial records were the basis of much discussion. In the Promotional Department a considerable deficit was shown for the past two years. It is hoped that the new plans will more than wipe out this deficit during the next biennium. The salary of the Promotional Secretary will be paid from the Convention Fund and the Board of Christian Education during the next two years. The Mission Board will be relieved of this part of its obligation for this period.

The Southern Convention needs greater coherence and more definite unity. Since the union with the Congregational Church many differences of opinion have developed as to future policies and plans. This condition is not due to any influence of the Congregational ministers or churches. It has been created by leaders who were reared in Christian Churches, but who have developed a deep passion for something new and different. The result is a growing tendency to encourage any departure from the policies and traditions of previous sessions of the Convention. In the next place personal opinions and policies are often substituted for the composite judgment of the various denominational workers in the Convention. The ultimate objective of delegates to such a Convention should be to agree and not to disagree, and when once agreed, to unite for co-operative service for the advancement of the Kingdom of God.

The program of the Convention was planned for business and not for inspirational or informational addresses. Very helpful worship periods were presented each day by Dr. Douglas Horton, Secretary of the General Council. A missionary address: "Question Marks Over Africa," by Mrs. Alice B. Keedy and another by Dr. Horton, "Around the World," added much to the spirit of the Convention. An address by Dr. I. G. Greer on the Orphanage was very impressive.

The Convention was interesting and well attended by ministers and laywomen. The number of laymen was pitifully small. It would have been more encouraging if every minister and a hundred more active business laymen had been present. And the memory of it would have been greatly enriched by having one or two very challenging addresses in the place of so much extemporaneous discussion of minute details which do not count for much after they are adopted. The future is too full of great opportunity to be wasted and dissipated by non-essentials. Cool heads need warm hearts in such an hour as this. Warm discussions sometimes chill the enthusiasm and distress the heart after the benediction. The closing sermon by Dr. John G. Truitt helped the situation as a fitting climax of the Convention.

I. W. JOHNSON.

WHAT OF THE BIENNIUM.

The thirty-fourth session of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches is a matter of history. The Convention was held in the First Church, Greensboro. The attendance was excellent, much better than any session that I have known. When the minutes are written, they will show an attendance in excess of the last session by forty or more. The officials and delegates were interested and anxious to find the way for progress.

We did not get very great encouragement from the accomplishments of the biennium reporting, nor were we able to ferret out an inclusive and challenging program for the future. We did, however, in council and conference discover many things that need to be done. We arrived intelligently at a figure representing the cost of the program adopted. I am afraid that we failed to point the way plainly for the achieving of the goals set. We know where we want to go, we know what we want to do, but we seem not to be sure as to how or from what source necessary funds are coming. There isn't any question but that we as a church are able. We have the members, and our members have the resources, and the job of carrying the church forward is ours. No program of any church is perfect. The responsibilities of every church are challenging. Ours is not an exception. The only course for us is forward, and forward together it must be. There must be a spirit of understanding pervading every interest of our church and a spirit of co-operation upon the part of all.

The Mission Board, the Board of Christian Education, the Board of Publications, the trustees of the college, and the trustees of the orphanage, the combined interests of our church, must pool their resources and cooperate in the great task of building a church that will overcome the forces of evil and carry the Kingdom of Righteousness near and far. In a forward program that will carry our cause forward with achievements, there is no place for selfishness or unholy rivalry. We must lose ourselves in the interest of the whole and for the accomplishments of the end of righteousness. We need to learn anew that whosoever would save his life shall lose it. The individual Christian who is interested in himself and in himself alone cannot remain Christian and in the end will lose his life. What is true of the individual is true of the individual institutions of a great church. The heaven that leavens the whole, however small, is much greater than the whole would be without the heaven.

It is to be hoped that the newly elected president, and he will make a good one, will shortly assemble his Executive Committee together with the heads of all the departments of the Convention and in an exchange of ideas and a careful appraisal of the task before us and the means to be used in an effort to accomplish the task, arrive at a program that will elicit cooperation upon the part of every interest of our church and call

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Just a day or two until Mother's Day now! I wish that I could come in to see each of you and have you tell me how much fun you have had planning something for your mother. I will tell you a secret. I am going to take my mother myself for a Mother's Day gift but it will be one day later. I shall go to Knoxville, Tenn., on May 13 to see my mother for the first time since last August. I am going to write her a letter telling her that I am coming which she will get before Sunday. There are only brothers at home now and my mother gets terribly lonely for her girls who have all left her to make homes of their own. When I get there I shall do many of the things which I used to do to make her happy. We live on a farm and one of the first things I can remember having helped her to do as a very little girl was to stand on a stool and churn. We had a big, tall cedar churn with brass bands around the outside. I used to shine those bands to such brightness that I could see my face in them. I did that usual task, too, of washing the dishes for her. But I did not call it washing dishes to myself. I thought of it as cleaning the kitchen and made pretend that it was my very own and that I, instead of mother, would have to get up and fix breakfast in it in the morning. I recall one night that mother came into the kitchen when I had finished my task and giving me a kiss she said: "It is fun to get up and get breakfast in the kitchen after you have washed the dishes because you never leave any pots or pans to soak or any dirt anywhere." Last summer when I went home for a few days I helped mother churn and washed the dishes for her again. You

SO LONG AS THERE ARE HOMES.

So long as there are homes to which men turn

At the close of day,

So long as there are homes where children are—

Where women stay,

If love and loyalty and faith be found

Across these sills,

A stricken nation can recover from
Its gravest ills.

So long as there are homes where fires burn
And there is bread,

So long as there are homes where lamps are lit

And prayers are said;

Although a people falters through the dark
And nations grope,

With God himself back of these little homes
We still can hope.

will never regret all those nice things which you do for your mother. When you leave home they will help to brighten your path as you look back on the old days!

WORD PICTURES OF MOTHERS.

We were just about ready for Sunday school one Sunday morning when one of the twins discovered that his belt to his suit was missing. Mother set the rest of us to look for it over the house. Hunt as we might that belt could not be found. Alan was only about six years old so he could see himself staying at home while his twin brother went to Sunday school without him. He tried hard to keep back the tears at that thought but they started spilling down his rosy, round cheeks! At the sight of those tears I hurried away to make a more frantic and thorough search. When I returned to the boys' room without having found the belt, my eyes took in a picture of my mother which I shall never forget. She was kneeling on the floor by Alan and was busily fastening a pair of cloth suspenders, which she had made while we were hunting, to Alan's trousers. She was laughing and Alan was, too. The suspenders fastened securely she got another shirt out which bloused instead of tucked into the trousers. Then he put his little jacket on and the seven children, and mother and dad started off happily on the three-mile walk to Sunday school!

Marian's mother had taught school before she had married Mr. Anderson, but now she was the busy and happy wife and mother whose little brick home in South Philadelphia was her real world. When Marian was about three her mother left her alone in the dining room where the wallpaper had a red rose border at the top. Marian says that she began to sing to herself and when she did the flower border at the top of the wallpaper opened like a lattice and smiling, friendly people looked out and sang with her. When Marian was only twelve her father died. Mrs. Anderson went out from her little world to do housework for other folk and to wash their clothes. For the next five years Marian's mother worked and the church members helped her by starting a fund for "Marian Anderson's Future." At the end of those five years Mrs. Anderson had the flu, badly, and Marian never let her mother go out to do work for other people again. Today Marian's mother can look upon her daughter with the happy realization that her daughter is one of the great singers of our time and that even if her skin is dark that it was she who was chosen to sing for England's King and Queen at the White House, when they visited the United States,

AFTER THE CONVENTION.

First of all the Convention was very largely attended and secondly, those who attended seemed most deeply interested. There were certainly differences of opinion about how the affairs that pertained to the Convention and the churches should be conducted. The fact is that any group of people meeting now to discuss the affairs of the church will find problems of a most serious nature. We are living in a time when the church, like the government, faces serious problems that challenge the wisdom of all who care. Take for instance the comparatively simple matter of conducting and supporting the church paper. Time was when a sufficient number of subscribers could be counted on to pay for publishing and editing the paper. That happy day, several years ago, has passed and one of the big problems that confronted the recent session of the Convention was how to secure the funds with which to have the paper printed and mailed out, to say nothing of any salary to the editor. From public utterances made by many on the floor of the Convention there were about as many opinions as to how the paper could be printed and paid for as there were delegates to the Convention. People in the church simply do not take as seriously as they once did the matter of subscribing for and reading their church paper.

Or take the matter of giving to missions. Time was, and not so many years ago, when the income to the Mission Board of the Convention, some from Sunday schools and churches, but mostly from individuals, amounted to $50,000.00 a year. It was comparatively easy then to approach an individual and get him to give $1,000.00 for missions and in rare instances even more. Such a condition no longer obtains as our reports from week to week of missionary giving indicate.

Again take the college, our own Elon. Time was when it was comparatively easy to get one to give $1,000.00, or even $5,000.00 to the college. Such was the case several years ago, but at present President Smith of the college finds it difficult to get donations of $50.00, or $100.00, from individuals for the support of the college, gifts exceeding these amounts being rather rare.

Such facts tell why the problems of the recent Convention had so many varied opinions. All members of the Convention, of course, were working and longing for the same great aim, namely, that of supporting the institutions and enterprises of the Convention, but how to do these things in our day is indeed quite a different question from what it was years ago.

It may be said that on the whole the sessions of the Convention were quite harmonious and when the vote was taken and a conclusion reached on any topic under discussion it was practically and almost always unanimous. In brief the Convention was trying its best to find its way out and see through its problems. Let us hope, and we have good ground for hoping, that because of the Convention and its decisions and conclusions on the various questions under consideration the churches for the coming biennium, and the Conferences, will go forward in the great task assigned them by the Person, who is, Himself, building the church.

This writer was indeed deeply gratified to be at the Convention and heard and learned much that will be helpful to him in the coming weeks and months. The delegates and attendance at the Convention seemed jealous of the missionary enterprise and giving, and must have returned to their homes feeling that if our dear church is to grow we must be a missionary church.

The Easter offering from Suffolk, $204.74, helps to increase considerably our total for the past week and is certainly appreciated. In fact all the offerings are deeply appreciated as they are so much needed. We trust that the churches that have not sent in the Easter offering will do so at the earliest possible date. Our sincere gratitude is expressed to everyone who had a part in the offerings acknowledged above. These offerings really indicate that there are those who care for the winning of souls and the building up of the church at home and abroad—a divine and unselfish task.

Sincerely yours,

WAVERLY.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Waverly Christian Church has been enjoying some very fine meetings this year. Much interest has been shown in the different projects and a general rise in enthusiasm has been observed. The study books for the year were taught by the pastor, Rev. T. Fred Wright, and much good was gleaned thereby. Two new members were added to the roll. In February they observed the World Day of Prayer and a box of clothing was sent to the Orphanage. In March Rev. H. H. Swann of Disputanta, Va., gave several lectures on the Book of John and this proved to be a very helpful and inspiring method to study the gospel. The society is looking

HABAKKUK FIGHTS THROUGH DOUBT TO FAITH.

LESSON: Habakkuk.

DEVOTIONAL READING:

Habakkuk 3:1-4, 17-19.

GOLDEN TEXT: The righteous shall live by his faith.—Habakkuk 2:4.

Some of the Sunday school lessons from the prophets may seem a little vague and indefinite, and on the surface far removed from our modern problems and our modern needs. But the lesson from Habakkuk today comes right down to the place where we live and the problems which we face. One thing should be noted in the beginning; that whereas heretofore the prophets whom we have been studying have been speaking for God, Habakkuk speaks to God. He has a very pressing problem, something which disturbs him very much, and he goes directly to God with this problem. Although he does not actually complain he does, in a sense, state his grievance, and he asks God for light on two very acute problems which were challenging his faith and which had aroused a great deal of doubt in his mind.

In the first place Habakkuk is troubled with the old, old problem, which is also a new, new problem as to why the righteous suffer. He could not understand, as many today can not understand, why suffering has a place in a world which is ruled not only by a good but a supposedly powerful God. Thus he presents this problem directly to God himself. To be sure, there is no easy answer to the problem of suffering which is rooted in the very heart of the universe. Some suffering, in fact a great deal of suffering, is the result directly and indirectly of sin. But Jesus by his words and by his life showed that suffering also has a redemptive and disciplinary place in life. Jesus himself was made perfect through suffering. The writer says he learned obedience through the things which he suffered. And Jesus himself said that some suffering makes possible a revelation of the works of God himself. Again and again as a pastor I am asked the question as to why good people suffer and as to why this thing or that thing happens to a particular person who was a good man or a good woman. And again and again I have tried to show that we must see suffering through the background of God's larger and fuller purpose, and in its divine and redemptive function.

In the second place, and perhaps a more pressing problem, Habakkuk wondered why in the world a righteous and all-powerful God not only should allow his people to be punished but should allow them to be punished by a nation that knew not God, by a vindictive, ruthless, barbaric nation, the unscrupulous and brutal Chaldeans. In picturesque language he asked God why he, who is the powerful God, could love those who were perverse, could look upon those who dealt treacherously, and how he could hold his peace "when the wicked swalloweth up the man that is more righteous than he." He goes on to say that the Chaldeans think of men simply as fish in the sea, as creeping things, as dumb animals which are caught up into a net, and take fiendish delight in overrunning people better than themselves. It does constitute a real challenge to his faith to the God of Israel. In answer to this question God reveals to him that he sometimes uses nations that know him not as instruments in his divine plan, and to fulfill his divine purpose. God is a God of all nations, and sometimes he makes the wrath and the ignorance and the perverseness of other nations to praise him. In this particular case the Chaldeans were his divinely chosen instruments to visit judgment upon Judah and Jerusalem because of their back-sliding and their sins against God. God also shows Habakkuk that although the Chaldeans would punish Judah, they would not utterly destroy them, but he would save and raise up a "remnant." Purified by the fires of oppression through which they passed, the nation would rise to higher levels, and because of the persecution through which they passed their souls would be purified and within them would be developed deeper, spiritual insights and nobler spiritual purposes.

In one of the most dramatic passages in the whole Bible, and certainly in one of the most thrilling declarations of faith, Habakkuk tells how he will get him up unto the watchtower and take the long view, there to see things in their proper perspective, there to hear what the voice of the Lord would say unto him. And from that point of vantage he comes to a profound and moving faith. Nowhere in all inspired literature will there be found more beautiful language and more sublime faith than in these words:

For though the fig-tree shall not flourish,
Neither shall fruit be in the vines;
The labor of the olive shall fail,
And the fields shall yield no food;
The flock shall be cut off from the fold,
And there shall be no herd in the stalls:
Yet, I will rejoice in Jehovah,
The flock shall be cut off from the fold,
I will joy in the God of my salvation.
Jehovah, the Lord, is my strength.

Another high point in Habakkuk's prophesy is the words, "The righteous shall live by his faith." The words may be variously interpreted, but one interpretation means that the righteous shall live by their faithfulness.

There is a point in all of this for some of us. For instance, a great many of us are troubled about the turn of events in Europe. Many are wondering whether the Allies are going to be able to halt and to defeat the vast war machines which Hitler has turned loose upon the nations of Europe. At the present time it would seem that his forces are in the ascendency. And a great many people are troubled and perplexed as to why this should be so. Or again they are concerned and troubled about why, if there is a wise and loving and all-powerful God, he should allow Japan to overrun peace-loving China, or why Russia was permitted to crush Finland, or why Italy was suffered to subdue Ethiopia. And some people are taking refuge in the shallow philosophy that Hitler can not win because he is on the wrong side. Only last week a member of my church said that that was the basis of his confidence—that there was no question as to the difference in the way of love for which England and France stood, and the ideas of Adolph Hitler. But it may well be that Hitler will win this present war. It may be that he will run roughshod over the nations of Europe. It may be that he is an instrument unwittingly and unwillingly in carrying out the Divine purpose and program. Perhaps he is an instrument in the plans and purposes of God to pronounce judgment on the sins of the nations. It is no more far fetched to suggest this than it would have been to suggest in Habakkuk's day that God was going to allow the heathen Chaldeans to defeat and to carry to captivity God's own chosen people, and even allow his sacred temple to be laid waste and destroyed.

But like Habakkuk we must take the long look. We must get up into watchtowers and there get proper perspectives, see things in their prop-

MONDAY.

RELIGION IS RIGHT LIVING.

"Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."—I Cor. 10: 31.

Religion deals with the life that now is and not death, or the hereafter. It has been said that religion "is not to get you into heaven, but to get heaven into you."

If Paul's words are true, and we believe they are, religion is a daily, hourly, instant affair. It is a spirit for every moment's action—a spirit of faith and love and service. It is the life of the whole being functioning for good and happiness. "Whatever you do." That means me, and right now always.

Prayer—O Lord, our Father, in all that we do and say, we pray for the Christ Spirit to be brave and courageous enough to be faithful. Keep Thy love aglow in our hearts always. We ask, for Christ's sake. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"WHEN RELIGION IS IRKSOME."

"They that await upon the Lord shall renew their strength. They shall mount up with wings. . . . They shall run and not be weary; and they shall walk and not faint."

There are two passages in the Scriptures which, if we can believe thoroughly and act upon them faithfully, we shall be happy in Him even when things about us make us unhappy. The first one is Rom. 8: 28—"All things work together for good to them that love God." The second is our text.

We certainly need a full faith in these texts. Life is crushing competitions and irritating friction. One said the other day, "Life is one continual irritating friction, when it isn't one thing it is three." In the wrongs, the frictions and the false of life, we are not able alone to bear the burdens which we are called upon to bear. In the presence of so much satan and sin we are not able alone to hold fast to our faith. We feel that we would give up in despair, or we would rush in and do something about it. If we do not use the fulness of divine power which is available for this life, we find that love is cold, prayer is only a duty and Christian service is irksome.

In depression Stevenson said: "I must get out my wings." We also have wings which we do not use. "They that wait upon the Lord" shall get out their wings. With the wings of the Lord there is a power that enables us to forgive when others hate, to be patient when others fret, to work when others faint, and to be steadfast when others yield to fear.

Prayer—Dear Father, teach us how to wait on Thee, to be quiet in Thy presence until our hearts are filled with Thy love and our spirits are brought under Thy power. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE MOST DIFFICULT THING.

"Blessed are the poor in spirit."—Matt. 5: 3.

Poor in spirit is the chief characteristic of the Christian's outlook. It was the chief characteristic of Jesus. No one was ever so rich in personal endowment and high privilege, yet no one was ever so poor and humble. By His self-sacrifice the world became rich. So it is with us, love and humility are most enriching to others.

Prayer—O Lord, help us to be united in spirit with our fellowman, and in our sympathies to take the Christ Spirit along with us. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"STYMIED."

"No man can do these miracles that Thou doest except God be with him."—John 3: 2.

Webster says that "Stymie" is a condition which exists on the putting green when the ball nearer the hole lies in the line of play of the other ball. The word has come to be used to apply to anything that stops action.

Quoting a potent statement, "you can do more than pray after you have prayed, but you cannot do more than pray until you have prayed." Jesus was never too busy to pray. To Him prayer was necessary in order to do His mission well. Paul did not enter upon his mission till he had prayed. He had to be sure of himself and of his message. From prayer he went into the conflict.

Prayer—Dear Christ, if we forget this day whose we are and whom we serve, lay Thy reminding hand upon us. May we always remember that our strength comes from Thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"FIRST ALWAYS."

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these" Matt. 6: 33.

The little things of life bother us things shall be added unto you."—most. We fret in trying to get the necessities of life, and with many little things of every day. In the fretting mood, can any one do any worthwhile thing well? Christian personality is first in all things, or else the power of love and true worth is lost. Therefore, the development of this personality is the only way to begin the day, to undertake a given task, and to begin Christian service.

Prayer—O Lord, God, give to our souls a reform that will never leave us: "We must be a Christian first." Amen.

SATURDAY.

CARE FOR PERSONAL RELATIONS.

"If thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift."—Matt. 5: 23, 24.

Thoughts About the Democratic Church

By CLAYTON S. RICE, D. D., Superintendent of Washington.

The right and the privilege and the duty of man, as the Son of God, to stand upon his own feet, and with shoulders back to look unafraid into the eyes of his loving Father, is something which our fellowship encourages. It is the privilege of our glorious heritage as sons of God through Christ.

But it carries with it great responsibilities. Unhappily there is no holy ground to many a man who was born a child in the Covenant. All is common, unclean—there is no flaming bush. I have seen men, out in the open, with quick cutting flashes of lightning slashing fear into the hearts of those less hardened, shake their fists at the angry sky and defy God, if he existed, to strike them dead. Then I have seen them swagger off in the manner of "Thou fool! Now where is thy God!" In their heart of hearts, perhaps they feared and trembled, as the devils do, we are told, but they were unworthy sons. All too often, the familiarity of our freedom brings contempt, until at last we forget our birthright and claim relationship with the windswept dust of the ground, instead of proclaiming our sonship with the Most High. Freedom to forget the experience of God and our relationship to Him is a hazard of our democratic way, which at times threatens to destroy us. Our way is the finest way possible for Christian adults with common sense and conscience—but it is a poor way for irresponsible and headstrong educated egotists, or ignorant, self-willed, lazy men.

Membership in our democratic fellowship, which it would seem has good reason to call itself somewhat similar in form, at least, to the primitive Christian fellowship, then requires, in addition to a growing personal experience of God through Christ, first the vountary assumption of many responsibilities. The Christian conscience must be kept tender. The sense of duty must not be allowed to die, duty with joy in doing, because it is our privilege as members of the Household of Faith. We are not regimented. We have no beads to tell, no penance to perform, no universally used ritual to hurry through, as though it were a necessary evil to be gotten out of the way as quickly and painlessly as possible, nothing we must do because of external compulsion. Therefore the compulsion must come from within. "The love of Christ constraineth us." Without it, we are lost. Our devotional life will fade. Our children will be inadequately trained. Our churches will not see us often. We will fail our brethren on every turn. We superintendents will become mechanical business men, the head of a church racket, in reality, as sometimes we are even now accused of being. And our ministers, and the laity, who fail to catch the spirit of the free democratic church, where man is responsible to God only, will degenerate as some of them have even now, into third-rate ritualists, and petty intellectuals, men who know not the constraining and impelling love of Christ, nor the glorious responsibilities and privileges which sonship with the Most High entails.

As a church, there is no excuse for our existence, if a growing experience of God through Christ does not quicken our consciences, and deepen the great categorical imperative to the point where we serve God and our generation more devotedly because of this internal compulsion, this eternal God-sent feeling of "oughtness," than we ever would being driven from without. In so doing, we can prove our right to be a part of a democratic church.

Second, we must stand as firm as our fathers stood against the growing tendency to unite church and state, thus through the state destroying the democratic church. For it is evident, from the past, that once combine church and state, or greatly favor one church over others, the state compels even free men to conform or it breaks them, where the church without the state could not do this. The latest and saddest example of this is to be found in Germany. What the future may hold for us here, no man can prophesy. That recent move of our President to send to the Vatican his personal representative, Myron Taylor, an Ambassador Extraordinary, raises gloomy forebodings. The effective manner in which Congress under his leadership nullified our Prohibition Amendment, before it was repealed, by having beer declared non-intoxicating, leads us to believe that his personal Ambassador may easily become the United States Ambassador to the Papal state. This is a recognition which can be shown to no other church, and which will be capitalized to the limit by the Roman Catholic hierarchy, a hierarchy which already finds our own national tides moving rapidly in its direction. The President of our great democracy turns toward a totalitarian church in an emergency, thereby still further weakening confidence in our democratic bodies, civil and religious. Yes, this is the hour when weak men, fearful, will endanger civil and religious liberty by turning to undemocratic authoritarian bodies for help!

THE QUIET HOUR.

There is temptation and danger in personal relations, lest we, desiring always to be thought well of, forget the Christ Spirit. There is temptation and danger in the presence of cares and sorrows lest we harden to them and fail in Christian sympathies and the Spirit of Christ which has been given us to take to them.

But most of all there is temptation and danger in inattention to personal relations—the strained attitudes, misunderstandings between members of the family, church associates, neighbors. If these differences are allowed to go on, they grow more loveless and hopeless until, perhaps, it is too late. This sort of thing is spiritual starvation to both sides. Let us remember that we cannot come to the altar acceptably until we have first become reconciled to our brother, or until we have done our part toward it.

Prayer—O God, endow us with the Christ's Spirit that we may see clearly our duty each day, and that we may have just and holy relations with all men. Amen.

SUNDAY.

PERSONAL CONSIDERATION.

"Brethren, if any man be overtaken in a fault, ye who are spiritual, restore such a one in a spirit of gentleness; looking to thyself, lest thou also be tempted. Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ."—Gal. 6:1, 2.

"In short, friends, let us realize that in truth we are knitted together in ties of brotherhood, and that while it is proper and necessary that we should insist upon our rights, we should yet be patient and considerate in bearing with one another, and in trying, so far as in us lies, each to look at the problems that face us from his brother's standpoint as well as from his own."—Theodore Roosevelt.

Prayer—

Lord, for tomorrow and its needs I do not pray;

Keep me, my God, from stain and sin just for today.

Help me to labor earnestly, and duly pray;
Let me be kind in word and deed, Father, today. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

At last the weather has cleared and the cold wave has passed. We are hoping we will now have some warm weather so we can make some headway in getting our crops planted. This spring has been one continuous cold spell. There seemed to be no let up. The orphanage has burned more coal during the winter and spring than it has burned for several winters. It has been necessary to keep the furnace running all the time.

We had to keep the buildings warm and comfortable. The health of the children has been remarkably good. We have had no serious sickness during the entire winter, for which we are very grateful. The Lord has been good to us.

We want to appeal to those Sunday schools that have sent us no offerings this year to please remember us. We need it.

six regular meetings with programs from the study book and THE CHRISTIAN SUN, assisted by the spiritual life superintendent. Three special days were observed, namely Spiritual Life Day, Mission Study Day, and World Day of Prayer. This church has a world service Sunday school and missions is stressed through it and the young people's society. The apportionment is $400.00 and $202.75 has already been sent in.

The Woman's Society of First Church, Norfolk, had an enrollment of fifteen at the beginning of the year and has added seventeen new members. This is a fine piece of work and shows much work on the part of the membership committee. Regular meetings have been held and varied materials with study books were used for programs. Seventy-five ($75.00) dollars is the set apportionment for this society and $29.00 has been raised and sent in.

The First Church, Portsmouth, has done some good work in its Woman's Missionary Society along the line of new members. The enrollment was twenty at the beginning of the year and thirteen new ones were received and one lost. Regular meetings were held, using THE CHRISTIAN SUN and additional materials. Special activities include a Spiritual Life Day and aiding in getting a young lady in a tubercular sanatorium. Subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and Missionary Herald are equal to one-fourth of membership. The apportionment for this society is $75.00, and $29.50 has been raised. The promotion of missions is through the Sunday school and youth organizations.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Newport News has an enrollment of forty-eight at present, two new ones having been added during the first and second quarters. Regular meetings have been held and the program materials have been taken from THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Missionary Herald, and pamphlets on missions. Subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and Missionary Herald equal one-fourth of the membership. Promotion of missions is through departments in Sunday school. Apportionment is $75.00, and $40.00 has been sent to the treasurer.

The Ocean View Society had twenty-two on roll at the beginning of the year and has added four new ones. The special activities include an all-day study of the foreign mission book, and the giving of food and clothing to needy families. Regular meetings were held, using the home study book, programs in THE CHRISTIAN SUN and letters and materials from the Missions Council. Subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and Missionary Herald are equal to one-fourth of the membership. Their apportionment is $25.00, and $13.00 has been raised and sent in.

The Society at Rosemont had a membership of fifty at the beginning of the year; two new members were added and one lost. Regular meetings were held and materials from the general board and the study books were used. The required amount of subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and Missionary Herald have been secured. This society has given two life memberships, which is a fine thing to do. Missions is promoted through the departments of the Sunday school. The apportionment for this society, set by the Conference board, is $175.00, and $99.60 has been sent in.

The South Norfolk Society has fifty-one members at present with three new members added during the first half of the year. Regular meetings have been held and the programs have been based on the study books. The apportionment is $75.00, and $35.00 has been sent in to the Conference treasurer.

DEMOCRATIC CHURCH.

We who believe in the separation of church and state, if we slumber on, hoping to remain tolerant, friendly good fellows, while the authoritarian churches reproduce rapidly, educate skillfully, and with intolerance, and ride the crest of the wave which now moves toward authority, in a world where many lost souls feel that there is no authority in democratic church or state, we can lose our hold completely as the years go by. Is liberty to stand before God as his sons a boon to be exchanged thoughtlessly for the uncertain security which alliance with the Roman Catholic Church brings? What reason have we to believe, as we see what has happened in Catholic-controlled countries, that this authoritarian church can help a struggling world? And as for peace, who ever accused this church of loving peace, save on its own terms? And what terms! The recent tragedy of Ethiopia should stab us awake, if we are naively ascribing pure idealism to the Roman Catholic hierarchy in political action.

Our Baptist brethren have had the courage to speak out. I wonder if we are less free church-minded than they, or if we are simply more trusting—or soft or afraid?

I think today of other voices which have rung out through the years in zealous affirmation of man's freedom. Voices which have come down to us from three hundred years and more ago, voices proclaiming man's freedom because he is the son of God! They come from our brethren in Christ. All through the generations we have believed in man's freedom as a son of God, if he will voluntarily and happily assume the responsibilities of sonship. If we will not, the harsh discipline of the law in the authoritarian church or the scourge of the totalitarian state may be necessary schoolmasters, taskmasters, to bring us through much travail again to Christ, and liberty.

Are we sons of God? Are we free? Are we under compulsion from within? Can we resist compulsion from without, in a day when weaklings cry for external authority? Our fathers believed, resisted, and conquered. Are we so soft that we may yield and be enslaved, not because we do not know better, but because we are too indolent to resist?

I have faith in this group. To live, to experience, to teach, to resist, and then to go forward as free men in a free land. What a privilege! And this is to be right!

We men learn naught,
From dawn 'til noon,
About our prison bars;
The babe who sought
The silver moon,
As man, demands the stars.

But much we learn
About these bars,
From noon down to our night.
For moon and stars
We dare not yearn,
But only to be right.

upon the entire constituency to pool their efforts and resources that we may accomplish more for our church in the days that lie ahead than we have in past years. There are not many things that can be done without efforts. There are but few things that are right that cannot be done by determination and cooperation under the guidance of Him who doeth all things well.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

er place, try to understand something of the larger plans and purposes of God. Men of Hitler's type and of Mussolini's type, and of Stalin's type, and of the Japanese military class may win a battle, may even win a campaign, but they can not ultimately win a war. The future does not belong to them. Our hope is in the fact that there is a living God who in infinite patience is working with his redemptive purposes in the life of the world. The poet put it in beautiful language when he said:

Truth forever on the scaffold,
Wrong forever on the throne,
Yet that scaffold sways the future,
And, behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow,
Keeping watch above his own.

This is a great faith. It takes a long look. It is absolutely impossible without religion, without God and eternal vistas in one's outlook on life, and we might well be glad that we do not have to live these difficult days without it. No victory of evil over good is ever a closed case.

WE HONOR MOTHERS

An Editorial.

The second Sunday in May reminds us in America that mothers deserve high honor. Since Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia invited a friend to spend the first anniversary of the passing of her mother with her, the idea of keeping a day in honor of mothers has spread. At first the day was kept as a memorial to the departed. Later it became a time for recognizing the worth of living mothers. Now the tendency is to make it a day for the honoring of parents and considering the values of home.

"The Christian Sun" gladly joins with the churches in giving honor to mothers, the handmaidens of the Lord who share in the creation of human beings and the development of eternal spirits. This high position of mother was given by the Creator of the human family. A mother in the human family not only gives life to a physical being but she brings into existence an immortal soul. It is her high honor not only to give life, but it is hers to train through childhood and youth so her child can grow into the likeness of God.

This long period of training makes the home important. Other animals do not so train their young, and hence need no such sustained and refined home life. The modern tendency to break homes by divorce undermines the divine right of children to have the needed training, and sends the human family back towards the stage of lower animals. The establishment of homes on the basis of love and mutual appreciation tends toward making this earth like the heavenly home. The average age of criminals in North Carolina is said to be going downward and is now in the teens. This is doubtless but a reflection of the homes in which children and young people live. Give the state better homes and it will have fewer crimes. Hence in our attempt to honor mothers, it becomes the business of the church to do its utmost to establish real homes.

The church can aid parents in their effort to make Christian homes and train children. Parent education is very important, and much is now being offered both by government and church. Leaders of churches should be sure that parents get the literature needed, that they have opportunity to attend adult conferences and child-training institutes, and that they know that the church joins with them in trying to train children to become all that the word Christian signifies.

The church can also do much in training young people for the establishment of homes. We teach how to make a living, how to succeed socially, and how to do everything else except to make Christian homes. The church can establish high ideals for home and parenthood. It may be difficult now that such ideals have fallen on hard days, but it can be done, and is part of the Christian gospel.

The way to really honor mothers is not merely to wear pretty flowers on the second Sunday in May when we make them the honored guests in our churches, but to live worthily of those who have given us birth, aid those who now are training children, sustain high ideals of the family, and train youth to assume the obligations of parenthood as a divine opportunity and responsibility. In this way Mother's Day lasts all the year, and mother's honor is continual.

New President of Southern Convention

REV. HOWARD S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

The new president of the Southern Convention, Dr. Hardcastle, is a native of Dover, Del., a graduate of Elon College and the Divinity School of Yale University, and a recipient of the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Elon College. He taught in Defiance College, was pastor of Suffolk (Va.) Christian Church for ten years, during which time a fine educational plant was built, and is at present pastor of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., and a vice-president of the Home Boards of Congregational and Christian Churches. Dr. Hardcastle succeeds Dr. Stanley C. Harrell of Durham, N. C., who served eight years as president of the Southern Convention.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Rev. Robert Lee House, pastor of our Richmond (Va.) Church, is assisting Rev. T. N. Lowe in a week of revival services at Hopewell, Va.

On the editorial page this week will be found a statement of accomplishments of the Promotional Secretary's office to date, as reported to the Southern Convention.

Little Creek Church, Rev. J. H. Warren, pastor, near Norfolk, Va., will celebrate its second anniversary on Sunday, May 19, at 7:30 P. M. The public is cordially invited to attend.

The First Congregational-Christian Church of Sanford, N. C., has recently been redecorated, the pulpit area re-arranged, Sunday school rooms built, and a new Hammond electric organ installed. Rev. Aubrey C. Todd is the pastor of this church.

A revival meeting is being held this week and next at Palm Street Church, Greensboro, N. C. Rev. M. A. Pollard, pastor, is doing the preaching. Rev. W. E. Wisseman, First Christian Church, Greensboro, will be the guest preacher for one of the evening services.

The second Sunday in June is observed as Children's Day by many denominations, including our own. Program materials are being sent by the Board of Christian Education to superintendents of all of our Sunday schools, with the request that an offering be taken for the Board on that day.

Last Sunday, May 12, was Mother's Day and Memorial Day at Holy Neck Christian Church, near Holland, Va. The pastor, Rev. Arnold Slater, preached at the morning service and the Hon. Willis E. Cahoon, representative in the state legislature from Nansemond County, gave the address at the afternoon Memorial service.

Readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will learn with deep regret of the death, on last Monday morning, of Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton. The funeral services were held on Wednesday of this week at Indianola, Iowa. Dr. Shelton will be missed by his many friends, and the denomination will be poorer by his going.

Col. E. E. Holland, for many years the teacher of the Baraca Class of the Suffolk Christian Church, has spent the winter in Miami Beach, Fla., recuperating from an illness. His friends will be glad to learn that he expects to return to Virginia the first of June much improved in health.

The Darden O'Berry Class of Holy Neck Christian Church has recently given money for a subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for a family in our mountain churches. A layman in the First Church, Greensboro, has given eight dollars to be used for subscriptions for people in his church who cannot afford it otherwise. We hope others will use these two ideas.

DAILY BIBLE READINGS

FOR THE CHRISTIAN SUN FAMILY

By Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, D. D.

Week of May 19, 1940.

Sun.—The Desert Preacher—Matt. 3: 1-6.

Mon.—The Voice in the Wilderness—John 1: 19-27.

Tues.—Real Humility—John 3: 25-30.

Wed.—The Greatest of the Great—Matt. 11: 2-11.

Thurs.—Ambition Gone Mad—John 18: 28-32.

Fri.—Real Fearlessness—John 18: 33-38.

Sat.—The Old Game of Dodge—Luke 23: 4-12.

JOIN WITH US IN READING THE BIBLE

If you do not believe that our missionaries are well-trained, experienced and world-minded individuals, read the prayer list given on the missions page, noting the brief remarks about each one. It takes education, consecration, and broad knowledge and experience to be a missionary of the American Board, and we should feel it an honor to support such a group.

Memorial Day services were held at Shallow Ford Christian Church, near Elon College, N. C., on last Sunday. Rev. T. J. Green of Ramseur, N. C., was the guest preacher at the morning service. In the afternoon a Memorial Association was formed with the following officers: president, Egbert Truitt; first vice-president, J. L. Loy; second vice president, Mrs. J. C. Huffines; secretary-treasurer, Samuel Barber; directors, W. E. Walker, O.

B. Pitts, Mrs. J. J. Iseley, B. W. Lowe, and L. M. Crouse. Rev. L. L. Wyrick is the pastor of this church.

Next Sunday, May 19, the morning service of the Suffolk (Va.) Christian Church will be broadcast over Station WBPM (World's Biggest Peanut Market), Suffolk. Shut-ins of the community, and those in rural areas nearby who do not have a service at eleven o'clock on the third Sunday morning, should take advantage of the opportunity of hearing the service of worship and the sermon by Dr. John G. Truitt.

In addition to those reported recently in THE CHRISTIAN SUN new and renewal subscriptions have been received from other churches, which would indicate that the ministers and laymen are continuing to work on reaching their quota for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. These churches are: Waverly, Holy Neck, Winchester, Richmond, Hines Chapel, Oak Level, Winston-Salem, Disputanta, Christian Temple, and both churches in Greensboro. Many churches have not sent in a new subscription in several months—please get to work and attempt to reach your quota.

If your church has a woman's missionary society, it should be planning to send at least one delegate to the School of Missions to be held at Elon College, N. C., June 17-20. If your church has no missionary society, it is still important for you to have representatives at this first School of Missions. There they will gain much in the way of missionary information and inspiration—and may return home to organize a society in your church. This is a great opportunity for firsthand knowledge of our mission work throughout the world, and no church should fail to take advantage of it.

Dr. Albert W. Palmer, president of the Chicago Theological Seminary, will deliver the Baccalaureate Sermon at the Handley High School, Winchester, Va., on Sunday evening, June 2. On the morning of that same day he will deliver the Baccalaureate Sermon at the Commencement of the University of Ohio, Athens, Ohio, and will fly from there to Washington, D. C., in order to speak in Winchester that night. Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Washington, who has been the guest speaker in our Winchester Church on several occasions, will take Dr. Palmer to Winchester from there.

REPORT OF PROMOTIONAL SECRETARY.

Some Observations.

You have given me a fine opportunity to observe what is going on in our church. It has been my policy to ask questions and to listen. Out of this wide inquiry I bring to you some things our people are thinking.

The Christian Church began in America about the time of the Methodist Church. Today there are eight million Methodists and a hundred thousand Christians—one to eighty. The difference is due in part, at least, to our lack of faith to launch out on a large program, our distrust of those who are different, and our satisfaction with things as they are.

A new generation is growing up that will not be content with things as they are. Our petty squabbles disgust rather than attract them. We must cooperate more, love more, and work harder on larger plans, or we will die. This applies to churches, conferences, and the convention.

The time has come for us to make radical decisions and launch out on a real program of advance. The world moves rapidly in our day, and the church that remains static is hopelessly lost. We can do two or three times as much work as we are doing, and must do so if we are to do our share of the world's work.

The Convention should set up a program that will build the church by building local churches. We need more and better churches. In too many places we are losing ground rather than gaining. The budget of the Convention should be so adjusted as to make it possible to strengthen the churches we have and to establish new churches. Leaders must be trained for their work.

Suggestions for Consideration.

1. ORGANIZATION:

A. Convention Office.—To promote all phases of church work. Adequate staff of workers. Properly financed so people know where the money goes, and no board feels that it is doing too much.

B. Laymen's Fellowship.—Our church men are not now organized. Need training for leadership. Other churches are developing their men. Our church recommends it. We should begin.

C. Women's Work.—The present Woman's Board does missionary work, but all phases of church work for women should be organized and promoted.

D. Young People.—A Pilgrim Fellowship Council for the Convention could coordinate the work of young people in the convention, conferences, and churches. This Council may well be composed of the presidents of conference Pilgrim Fellowships, one elected member from each conference Fellowship, two representatives from the Woman's Board, and two members from the Board of Christian Education.

2. PROGRAM:

A. Religious Education.—Train all leaders of local churches, conferences, and convention. Use our own literature. Get "The Christian Sun" into the homes of our people. Furnish other materials, conduct vacation schools, make surveys, run camps and conferences, use student workers.

B. Church Organization.—Encourage churches to organize for service. Eliminate conflicts, and put all members to work. Correct church rolls, and work for new members.

C. Stewardship.—Teach stewardship for the development of members and financing the church. Make convention office responsible for emphasis. Conduct every member canvass in local churches.

D. Evangelism.—Reach the half of members that are now lost. Plan for reaching others in families and communities. Use revivals, pastor's class, personal work, and friendly visitation. Enlist workers.

E. New Churches.—Our churches are in small areas. Consider connecting these groups with new churches. Build where there is need discovered by careful surveys. Make new churches out of old ones.

F. Missions.—Correlate all missionary activities. This will include Christian Missionary Associations, Conference Home Missions, and the Board of Missions of the Convention. Increase our giving for Foreign Missions, and take some share in homeland work outside of the Southern Convention.

G. Pastors and Pastorates.—We need at least four new ministers. They should be selected with care. All small churches should be grouped into pastorates. Salary scale must be increased if we are to get the right men. Convention office can render real service in this field.

H. Rural Churches.—Make a careful survey of our rural churches. Study economic conditions, local leadership, community development, human needs. Plan for advance. This needs a commission or committee.

3. FINANCES:

Let the Convention budget include all the money it expects to receive.

Let the Convention budget show that we expect to build a well-rounded church and take our place in the denominational and world-wide kingdom.

Set up the budget so the people know exactly what the money is to do.

Help the churches with their financial plans. Call for fewer special offerings, and get more people to make their regular gifts to the total budget of the church.

A Five Year Program.

1. Organize a new church and increase our membership 1,000 each year.

2. Train all local church leaders.

3. Get our literature into all homes, Sunday schools and churches.

4. Discover and train ten new ministers and missionaries.

5. Pay all church debts and double our contributions through the Convention.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Sometime ago, while fishing on Lake Prince, we noticed a large white oak tree had fallen into the Lake. This beautiful tree, at least one hundred years old, formerly stood on the side of a steep hill, near the edge of the water. Its roots, for the most part, were buried in the soil on one side of the tree, and the mystery is that the tree stood the storms for so many years. But last year, during a heavy rain and wind storm, the soil was softened and the weight of the tree was too much for the unbalanced foundation in which it was rooted. It was just as beautiful as other great oaks standing near, but it could not stand the stress and strain of the storm.

While fishing around the great branches of the tree which were partly under water, our mind was diverted somewhat from the sport of catching fish and we mused upon the parable of this beautiful tree. Nature took a long time to make such a tree. And to one who loves trees this particular one seems to be out of its place. What majesty and grace and strength can be personified in a tree! It will bend its branches gracefully to the wind as it is swayed by the storm. And after the storm has passed it seems to be grateful for the timely bath which refreshed its green leaves and moistened its growing roots. The old oak will sway no more upon the steep hillside. It must lie in the lake and decay. It has lost its beauty, its strength has departed and its life has ended.

The place where one lives is important. A wise forester would not plant an acorn on the side of a steep hill. And a wise parent would not expect his son or daughter to attain unto the best, living and growing up in the most unsafe moral and spiritual place in the state. No life can reach the highest attainment in character and achievement, if the foundation and environment constantly threaten premature decay and destruction. The foundation should be safe and secure. A child's mind is somewhat like the roots of a tree; it fastens itself in the soil of its place of living. It is more important for a child to be right than to be rich. A child will grow upright in character where the spirit of right thinking and right living undergirds the life of the family.

The storms of trial and adversity will try every life. And God is interested in the moral atmosphere, the home, the place where the human family may grow up. From the Bible we learn that human life had its first family expression in a garden. It is a waste of time to try to locate the garden or understand all its implication. It was a garden and that is sufficient. Evidently the garden was beautiful and favorable to man's highest development. But some questions diverted man's attention and distorted his vision. He sought knowledge and wisdom in a forbidden way. The tragedy of moral failure aroused his conscience before God arrived in the cool of the day to ask: "Where art thou?" Man was not created to decay in a grave. He was made to have dominion over the earth and sweet fellowship with God. And wherever and whenever youth grows up in the foul soil of sin and moral depravity, a distorted life is sure to follow.

The church should create a better world and make it possible for young boys and girls to grow up where human life will be safe. The church is the best institution yet discovered on the earth. It is not perfect, but it worships a perfect God and believes in a perfect Savior. We should love the church and support its program which seeks to preach the Gospel in the uttermost parts of the earth.

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT. GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY 1890-1940.

Throughout the college year now drawing to a close, the spirit of celebration has been evident. Shortly after the opening in September the attention of the faculty, students, alumni, church, and friends was called to the action of the church authorizing the building of the college. Founders Day was observed with fitting ceremonies, and many of the alumni and friends were present for the historic occasion.

Elon College is a church institution, owned and controlled by the Christian Church. It interests itself in the training of young people, providing for them moral and religious influences during their college days. In February a very interesting program was arranged commemorating and commending Elon College for the part it has played in Christian higher education through fifty years of faithful and unselfish service. For this second period of celebration, a number of outstanding educators from different sections were brought to the campus. Their contributions were inspirational and helpful. The faculty and present student body joined in the program with further study and discussions during this period of celebration.

We now look forward to the final period of celebration calling attention to the closing of the fifty years of service rendered by Elon College in the field of Christian higher education. This period will be our regular annual commencement, May 26-28. On the evening of Saturday, the 25th, President and Mrs. Smith will entertain the senior class. Following the entertainment the class will attend the movie program presented in the auditorium.

Sunday morning, May 26, the baccalaureate exercises will be held in the auditorium at 11:30. The hour for this exercise is set for 11:30 with a special invitation to our friends in Burlington, Gibsonville, Altamahaw, Ossippee, and other nearby communities to attend our services following their Sunday school exercises. The Rev. Dr. H. Shelton Smith of the class of 1917 and a member of the Duke University faculty of the School of Religion will preach the baccalaureate sermon. The senior class will attend the service in a body, and the faculty will be in academic dress. In the afternoon at 4:00 o'clock, a music recital will be given by advanced students in that department. At 8:00 o'clock the Music Department of the college will present "The Creation," an oratorio by Joseph Haydn.

Monday is Alumni Day. At 10:00 o'clock Class Day Exercises will be held, a feature always enjoyed by the parents and friends of the members of the class. At 11 o'clock the golden anniversary celebration address will be delivered by Dr. Jennings S. Lincoln, '11, of Montclair, N. J. Dr. Lincoln is the son of the late Mrs. and Professor J. J. Lincoln. Professor Lincoln was a member of the Elon College faculty for a number of years. Following Dr. Lincoln's address will be a brief recognition of Dr. and Mrs. J. U. Newman, honoring Dr. Newman on the completion of fifty years of teaching service for the college. At the noon hour a picnic lunch will be served on the campus. Provisions will be made for the reunion of all classes in connection with the luncheon. Signs will be posted, and classes will assemble after being served. The business session of the Association will be held from 2:30 to 3:30. The regular alumni address will be at 4:00 o'clock. The Hon. Thomas H. Franks, '08, of Hendersonville, N. C., will deliver the address. Music for all occasions will be furnished by the Music Department. The band will play at the noon hour. President and Mrs. Smith, together with the former presidents of the institution now living as invited honor guests and chosen representatives of the fifty classes of the college, will receive at 6:00 o'clock. The golden anniversary alumni banquet will be held at 7:30.

Separation of Church and State: Why It Matters

By SAMUEL MCCREA CAVERT.

[Issued by Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.]

Up to the present time the discussion of President Roosevelt's appointment of Myron C. Taylor has chiefly centered in the precise nature of Mr. Taylor's status. But there is a much deeper issue: what is at stake in case Mr. Taylor's status should clearly develop into that of an official ambassador and diplomatic relations with the Vatican should become an American policy?

In its first statement, made on January 26, the Federal Council's Executive Committee warned that if Mr. Taylor's appointment should prove to be a "stepping-stone" to such diplomatic relations it would be vigorously opposed. What is the ground for such opposition? What real difference would it make if the American government should definitely decide to maintain an embassy at the Vatican?

It would make a tremendous difference—and it is important that everyone should know why.

Although the particular phrase, "the separation of church and state," may be vague and inadequate, what lies at the heart of the idea is of high moment. The fact that Roman Catholic Archbishop of New York could recently refer to the separation of church and state as a mere "shibboleth" indicates the necessity for re-thinking our heritage. If our fathers struggled and sacrificed for a shibboleth, it is time we knew it!

When our fathers embedded in the Constitution the principle that Congress should make no law "respecting an establishment of religion," it was no casual matter. They had abundant reason, both in European history and in their own experience in the New World, for appreciating the dangers of an official connection between church and state. The oppressive treatment of minorities by a dominant religious group which had the coercive authority of the state behind it was no mere figment of the imagination. It had been a fact of vivid experience. Our fathers were determined that in the new nation there should be a different situation. Here all religious bodies were to be equal in the eyes of the federal government; no church was to be given a preferential position in relation to other churches. There was to be equal opportunity for all, special privilege for none.

This "separation of church and state" never meant that the state was unfriendly or even indifferent to religion, or was to be regarded as merely secular. On the contrary, the framers of the Constitution were providing for the church a setting in which it should be free to order its own life without interference from the state. Every religious group was to stand on its own feet, free and unhindered, depending for its influence on its own spiritual vitality, not on any external prestige or power conferred by the state.

What our fathers thus established is one of the creative achievements of America. It has been the bulwark of religious liberty and has provided a setting in which every religious group has had full opportunity to develop its own inherent possibilities. Protestant, Catholic and Jew have all shared in this benefit. The whole movement of goodwill and friendly cooperation between Protestants, Roman Catholics and Jews in America has developed within the atmosphere of the separation of church and state and the recognition of the legal equality of all religious bodies.

The "separation of church and state," thus understood, is no "shibboleth;" it is one of the priceless treasures of American history, of as much importance today as it ever was.

If we would safeguard our heritage we must be vigilant against every encroachment upon it. That is the valid ground for concern over the possible establishing of diplomatic relations with the Vatican. Such an official connection would give one church a special status in relation to our government. It might prove to be the entering wedge for undermining a basic principle of American life.

Some of those who would see no objection to the diplomatic recognition of the Vatican argue that it is the Vatican State, not the Roman Catholic Church, with which relations are proposed. But in principle this involves a conception of the church as a political entity, which is contrary to a recognition of the separation of church and state. And in practice it is impossible to distinguish between the Catholic Church as a religious body and the Catholic Church as a political body. To have an ambassador at the Vatican State would be tantamount to placing the Roman Catholic Church in a special position with reference to our government.

The Roman Catholic pressure for the establishment of diplomatic relations with the Vatican therefore forces us to ask frankly whether the Catholic Church would like to change our historic American view as to the relation of church and state. In general theory the Roman Catholic Church rejects that view, clinging to the idea of the union of the State with the Catholic Church. Pope Leo XIII in an encyclical of 1885 bluntly declared that "it is not lawful for the state to hold in equal favor different kinds of religions." Even so progressive and socially-minded an American Catholic as Msgr. John A. Ryan (in the book which he wrote jointly with Father Millar), after explaining that the Catholic theory does not have full application in a country like America, which provides in its Constitution for the separation of church and state, adds that "constitutions can be changed and non-Catholic sects may decline to such a point that the political proscription of them may become feasible and expedient." It appears, then, that the Catholic Church accepts the American principle merely for temporary reasons of expediency because the Catholics are now only a minority in America. Does the Catholic Church mean that if it should ever gain sufficient power it would be justified in discarding our cherished heritage? Do Catholics claim freedom and equality for themselves in America in the name of Protestant principles at the same time they would (if they could) deny similar freedom and equality to Protestants and Jews in the name of Catholic principles?

These questions may seem remote from our present scene, but in the interest of clear thinking they must be asked. We raise them only to suggest that there would be ultimate implications of great consequence in giving one church a special status in relation to our government.

[At the recent session of the Southern Convention, it was voted to request President Roosevelt to recall Myron C. Taylor from the Vatican.—Editor.]

Elon College Golden Anniversary

Commencement celebrating the golden anniversary of Elon College will soon be here. For the past eighteen months we have been working diligently for membership in the Golden Anniversary Club. The membership has grown gradually but not as rapidly as we had hoped. If you have joined the club, we congratulate you and extend our appreciation. If you have not joined the club, please don't let commencement pass without joining with us. We have nearly one thousand members. Three thousand are required if we are to settle our debts in full. Won't you reach a decision, send us your card or check, and ask your neighbor to join with you. Others have joined, and they are not more loyal or helpful than you. Please don't lay this matter aside but attend to it at once, and you will lend encouragement to those who have the responsibility and will add your contribution to the fund that the college may be cleared of its debts.

The report for this week is as follows:

	Pledged	Paid

ELON COMMENCEMENT.

Plans are being made to serve the banquet in the gymnasium so as to accommodate all who will want to be a part of it. This will be a historic occasion, and no alumnus or alumna should miss it if possible. Dr. W. H. Boone, '94, president of the Alumni Association, will serve as toastmaster. Mr. Thomas Edwards of the Music Department, and others, will sing.

The crowning event of the Elon College Golden Anniversary celebration will take place Tuesday at 10:30 when the anniversary graduating class will be awarded their diplomas, and the awarding of honorary degrees to friends of the college will take place. The literary address will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. Miles H. Krumbine, pastor of Plymouth Church, Shaker Heights, Cleveland, Ohio. Dr. Krumbine is pastor of one of the larger churches of the country and is a profound preacher and finished speaker. A most cordial invitation is extended to all alumni, church folks, and friends of the college. You are asked to join with us on this occasion of joyous celebration.

SUPERANNUATION.

Several churches have adopted the plan recommended by our Convention two years ago of taking an offering for Superannuation on each Communion Sunday. This is quite timely and very helpful indeed. Our last report through THE CHRISTIAN SUN was in the issue of February 8, and for the most part was the Christmas offering asked of the churches for this worthy purpose.

We acknowledge the following received since our last acknowledgment, which offerings we presume came for the most part from churches taking the same on Communion Sunday:

Dendron, Va.	$ 5.50
First, Portsmouth, Va.	10.00
First, Greensboro, N. C.	33.00
Shallow Ford, Elon College, N. C.	7.00
Monticello, Brown Summit, N. C.	1.00
Henderson, N. C.	12.00
Mt. Herman, Garner, N. C.	2.00
Holy Neck, Holland, Va.	15.00
Bethlehem, Suffolk, Va.	18.80
New Lebanon, Reidsville, N. C. .	11.20
Ingram, Va.	3.55
Durham, N. C.	92.00
Youngsville, N. C.	4.00
Damascus, Chapel Hill, N. C. ...	4.00

Nothing that is not God's will can come into the life of one who trusts and obeys God. This fact is enough to make our life one of ceaseless thanksgiving and joy. For "God's will is the one hopeful, glad, and glorious thing in the world;" and it is working in the omnipotence for us all the time, with nothing to prevent it if we are surrounded and believing.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

As I look at the date for this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN I realize that for most of you school days for this year will soon come to an end. Now that you are not going to school, what are you going to do with your time?

Many of you live on the farm and will be busy helping your parents to plant seeds, cut weeds and fight insects which come to destroy what you are trying to raise. Some of you live in the city. There are many interesting things to do in the city. You, too, may have a small garden or lawn or flower garden to help care for. Perhaps you have smaller brothers and sisters with whom you can become better acquainted and care for while mother does her work. There is the city library which you should visit, especially during the story hour for children, when you will be able to meet other boys and girls and to make new friends. You will enjoy looking over the new books and magazines for boys and girls. Remember that these, too, are your friends and should be handled with much care and respect! Some of you have lovely parks and playgrounds in your city. Some of you have museums to visit. I know that some of you live near enough to the ocean to go take a day by the sea and in the sea. You could tell me many more interesting things which you might do, I am sure.

But I want you to do this thing for me. Try to get the whole family to share in your work and play as much as possible. When I realize the fact that in so many countries just now, there is no possibility for children and parents to even be together in safety, I feel that we should make more of our homes than ever. Take your parents hiking, fishing and picnicking with you. Help them to become young again and get to know them better!

THE AUTOMATIC BAND.

The Lockwood children had great fun during their summer vacations. There were eight of them so they could have a good time without having to go borrow some of the neighbor children. They spent most of their time in the out of doors when it was not raining and when it was raining they played in the big barn on the farm. They worked hard on the farm but their parents believed in letting children play and spent many hours playing and reading with them.

This summer there seemed to be much whispering and planning going on among the four oldest Lockwoods. The four younger Lockwoods were simply bursting with curiosity to know what it was all about. Finally the day came when they were let in on the secret. It was Saturday, and picnicking day. Fish had been caught from Bent Creek which was murmuring along its merry way nearby. Now the fish were no longer leaping and playing in the brook but were broiling over the open fire of the picnickers. Ed, the oldest boy, called the other seven to attention and while he watched and turned the fish, he told them about the Automatic Band which they were to form that day.

Lunch had been devoured and now the seven Lockwoods were reclining upon the grassy bank of the creek and Ed was standing before them explaining to them the requirements for membership in the Band. One must be able to swim and float for at least ten minutes without stopping; be able to "skin a cat" and hang by the heels from the limb of a tree while ten was being counted; be able to catch a fish and clean and cook it in the out-of-doors. One must be able to go alone to the spring at night and bring back a full pail of water. One must know how to give first aid treatment to anyone who had sprained an ankle, been bitten by a snake, fainted, or almost drowned. One must learn how to milk at least a pint of milk from a cow. One must go to Sunday school each Sunday and scour his pennies with sand until they shone before giving them at church. One must be able to dress in five minutes in the morning. One must do all of the work which his parents assigned him without grumbling or finding fault. There were still other things which have been forgotten, which one must learn to do also. This was to be a Secret Band and anyone who told his parents about it was to be dismissed from the Band membership. Each member was to help buy the refreshments for the picnics with his spending money.

Well, the four oldest Lockwoods knew and did these required things so they were charter members. Each one of the older took it upon himself to coach one of the younger brothers or sisters in those things which he must do in order to become a member. The first yell of the Band was: "I belong to the Automatic, Automatic, Automatic Band! Don't you wish you belonged to the Automatic, Automatic, Automatic Band?"

All summer long they worked on those requirements until one by one they were mastered! It was fun to do the things and the days flew by. When it was time to start back to school all of the Lockwoods were full fledged members of the Band.

I do not think that the four younger Lockwoods have guessed yet, that the Automatic Band was just a scheme for getting them to learn to do a lot of things which it was nice to be able to do!

A LIVING MEMORIAL.

It is significant that the first modern missionary offering ever made was by a woman. The women have been doing just such things ever since, thus setting for us men a most noble example. The incident referred to is that of the woman with an alabaster box of exceedingly precious ointment, pouring it upon the head of her Lord as he sat at meat. Of course some of the disciples censured the woman, saying that the ointment could have been sold for much and the proceeds given to the poor. Lord Christ did not look at the incident in that way and rebuked His disciples, saying that "Ye have the poor with you always." And then look at the tribute he paid this woman: "Whosoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, this that this woman hath done shall be told as a memorial of her." This indeed was an important event in the life of Christ and two of the gospels record it in almost identical words. The woman, so far as the records show, had not said a word about any gospel, but simply made her offering out of love to her Lord. And that is the spirit that has prompted missionary giving from that day till this. We give to missions, not to help the poor and needy in the common acceptance of that term, and yet to the very greatest need in this world, namely, to establish the religion of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, in the hearts and lives of those who know Him not as Savior and Redeemer.

All this is brought very vividly to mind by a most beautiful, significant and timely letter and gift just received in celebration of Mother's Day. Of course, the letter was personal and never intended for print, but it is hoped that the one who wrote the letter, dear Mrs. Mills, will pardon us for printing her letter, even without her permission, which is as follows:

Dear Dr. Atkinson:

I'm sending a check for foreign missions as a Mother's Day gift in memory of my sainted mother. I know the custom is to give flowers "in memory" of mothers gone on before and I have nothing to say against that, but I know my mother would like this better—she was so interested in the great cause of missions. It gives me great pleasure to do this. Salvation, and all it brings of peace and joy, means so much to me I want to help in passing it on.

Best wishes for you.
Sincerely yours,
ALICE GIBSON MILLS.
(Mrs. O. S. Mills, Norfolk, Va.)

So the wholly divine and unselfish task of sharing with others less favored than ourselves goes on in the world, and will go on, until the kingdoms of this earth by and through the preaching of the gospel of the Son of God shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ. This has been promised us by the prophet who said that "The government shall be upon his shoulders and of his government there shall be no end forever." We are indeed living in a war-torn and sin-cursed world, and only the gospel of our Lord preached through our faithful missionaries can bring about that happy day when peace shall reign in all the earth.

It may be added that the $50.00 sent us by dear Mrs. Mills has already started on its journey, preferably to help pay on the salary of one of our own missionaries in China. The donor nor the writer of this may not live to see the outcome and the result of this timely donation, but our Lord is patient and long-suffering and we may trust Him to win out if we will do our duty and make our offerings to share the gospel with others less favored than ourselves.

All offerings for missions are significant, showing as they do, the unselfish interest that some have in the divine task of sharing the gospel with others, but there is one donation acknowledged above that is of peculiar significance, namely, the one from Mrs. O. S. Mills, Norfolk, Va. We are grateful indeed for this beautiful memorial and for all the other donations included in the above.
Gratefully yours,
J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

WHEN WE PRAY, SAY "OUR FATHER."

When ye pray, say: "Our Father," was the way that Jesus began the universal prayer which he taught his disciples and that is on the lips of every Christian in every generation and in all parts of the earth. But it is the word "our" which commands the attention just now. And we turn to Frances Crosby Hamlet to find such emphasis as it deserves in the following impressives lines:

But when ye pray, say our—not mine or thine;
Our debts, our debtors, and our daily bread!
Before the thronged cathedral's gracious shrine,
Or in thy closet's solitude instead,
Who'er thou art where'er thou liftest prayer,
However humble or how great thou be,
Say our, thy brother man including there,
And more and more it may be thou shalt see
Upon life's loom how thread to thread is bound;
None for himself, but man and fellow man,
Or near or far, meet on one common ground,
Sons of one Father since the world began.
So shall God's Kingdom come in might and power
When all can pray, not mine, or thine, but our.

PROGRAM OF WOMEN'S SOCIETIES FOR JUNE.

CRADLE ROLL PROGRAM.

Prepared by MRS. B. D. JONES, Sup't.

WELCOME SONG (Tune "America"):

God bless these babies dear,
All who are gathered here,
Our Cradle Roll.
Jesus, in thy dear arms
Keep safe from all that harms
And guard from all alarms,
Our Cradle Roll.

Give to each girl and boy
Life full of peace and joy,
Our Cradle Roll.
Growing in strength each day,
Guided in wisdom's way,
Never from thee to stray,
Our Cradle Roll.

May they as brought by time,
To childhood, youth and prime,
Our Cradle Roll,
Conquest o'er wrong achieve,
Thy grace and truth receive,
And never, never leave,
The Sunday School.

SCRIPTURE VERSES: Luke 18:15, 16.
Matt. 18:10, 14. Luke 18:17.
Mark 9:36, 37.

PRAYER:

God bless the babies on our Cradle Roll,
Bless them and keep them throughout each glad day.
Watch them in daylight and guard in darkness;
May they grow gentler and sweeter each day.
Amen.

WELCOME:

Good morning everybody;
And welcome to our meeting.
We've come here to give you
A happy Cradle Roll greeting.

RECITATIONS:

My First Verse.

This verse I speak to you
Is just the best that I can do;
I never spoke a verse before
And that is why it isn't more.

Each Year I'll Try.

I'm hardly big enough to speak
But then each year I'll try,
Until my voice gets big enough
To reach from earth to sky.

Jesus Will Like It.

You can't expect so very much
From little folks my size;
It's very hard to speak or sing,
It takes someone real wise.
But Jesus knows with all my heart,
I've tried my best to please,
And so, no matter what I say,
He'll like my Cradle Roll piece today.

SONG: "Welcome, Precious Baby."

ADDRESS: "Purpose of the Cradle Roll"—by the Superintendent.

RECITATION (lays handful of pennies on table as he speaks):

A Child's Gift.

Here are some pennies I have earned,
So many errands run;
If pennies do a bit of good,
Do take them, every one.

The Cradle Roll story is so dear
I want the world to know
That there are happy things in store
When life is done below.

We boys and girls will do our best;
And won't you help us, too.
If we give pennies, don't you think
The dimes should come from you?

The dimes and dollars that you give
Will make your heart so glad—
At least, that's how it makes me feel,
And I gave all I had.

SONG: "Rock - A - Bye Cradle Roll Baby." (Cradle on center of platform with blue and pink ribbon bows may be rocked by primary child during song.)

COLLECTION OF MITE BOXES AND DIS-TRIBUTION OF CERTIFICATES—by the Superintendent.

RECITATION (by Primary Child):

Babies.

Just look at the babies we have here,
Each one is his fond parents' pride.
I am sure it's the finest collection
You ever could find, if you tried.

There are babies and babies and babies,
They come from all parts of the country and town.
They have curly hair, straight hair, and no hair;
They have black eyes, and blue eyes, and brown.

They have lungs—as their neighbors could tell you—

But of words they have only a few;
And we hope that they'll never learn many Except they are good words and true.

They have bodies to tenderly care for;
They have minds to be lovingly taught;
They have souls to be won for our Savior—
God help us to teach as we ought.

Oh, bless them, dear Father in Heaven;
This prayer would we offer to thee.
And when they are babies no longer,
Then "Children in Christ" may they be.

SONG: "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story."

CLOSING PRAYER.

SOME SUGGESTIONS.

No Sunday school need be afraid of doing too much to feature the Cradle Roll Department. Use plenty of decorations, invitations, pennants, etc. It is the vital point of connection between the Church and the Home.

The employment bureaus of the Y. M. C. A. in New York City have found jobs for an average of 4,247 young men annually for the last 87 years. Since 1865, it has secured employment for 340,334 young men.—

Pilgrim Fellowship

"Youth at Work in the Church"

Emily Carleton Lester, Editor

ELON SUMMER CONFERENCE.

The Elon Summer School of Leadership Education will begin this year on Monday, June 24, and close with Saturday, June 29. The cost will be $8.50 for a week of education, inspiration, and fellowship.

Last year two hundred young people, church leaders, and ministers had the privilege of sharing in the Elon Summer Conference. What a fine thing it would be if every church in our area could be represented! Better prepared teachers for the Sunday school, better programs for the young people's meetings, and a new interest in and enthusiasm for church work would result.

Begin now to plan for some worthy young persons to go from your church this summer. There may be those in your church who can afford to pay their own way—or their parents can easily do it for them—and all you will have to do is to interest them in going. There will probably be others who are able to pay part of the expenses, but could not pay the whole amount. If they are teachers in your church school, perhaps the school could pay for part of the cost so that these young people could do a better job of teaching. There may be older people in your church who are interested in the development of the young people and will give some money personally in order that more young people can attend. Often organizations like women's or young people's societies help in this. It seems to be a fine plan for the church and the young people to work together and each pay a part. If a young person has sacrificed a bit in order to go, the conference will mean more to him. If the church has shared in the expense, he will feel that he must gain as much as possible from the conference to take back to his church.

DELEGATES TO THE NATIONAL COUNCIL.

Each state in the United States is allowed four delegates to the National Council of the Pilgrim Fellowship meeting at Mills College in California in August at the same time the General Council of our denomination meets a few miles away in Berkeley. Will North Carolina and Virginia be represented?

The young people from our section who went to the last National Council at Rockford have done much for the development of young people's work here. Those of you who know them personally know what it meant to them to have the opportunity of going. Although California is a "far piece"

A PRAYER FOR TODAY.

Lord, in an age of steel and stone,
When girders tell the dreamer's plan:
Give me the grace to stand alone,
Give me the strength to be a man.

As mighty trains on shining rails
Haste onward through the night and day:
Send me on work that never fails
Because of indolent delay.

As planes that plunge into the sky
To find themselves upborne on air:
Teach me the life of trust to try,
And find the soul upheld through prayer.

From distant places voices speak—
They fill the mind with mystery:
Then may I now Thy message seek,
O, let me keep in tune with Thee.

Amid the motion of machine,
The whirl of wheel, the rush of wings:
Help me to live the life serene,
Because victorious over things.

May something of the vast designs
That motivate and move our days,
Be but inevitable signs
Which call life into lordlier ways.

—Charles Nelson Pace.

from the Southern Convention, we can send representatives if we will try. No doubt there will be cars going from this area taking ministers and lay delegates to the General Council. Considering the education which comes from a trip across our nation, the cost of sharing in the expenses of a car is not excessive. Then, too, it may be that some will be able to get passes on the railroad for the trip, because they are fortunate enough to have parents working for the railroad company. The important thing is for us to be represented. How do you think we might help finance our delegates? Who do you think should go? If you live in North Carolina, send your ideas to Dorothy Hendrix, 417 South Edgeworth St., Greensboro; Eastern Virginia, to QUIET LEADERSHIP.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

FOR MAY 26, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: I Cor. 12: 27-31; 13: 1-8.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Achieving Quiet Leadership—
Psalm 37: 1-11.

Tuesday—A Quiet Woman Leader—
Ruth 1: 12-22.

Wednesday—A Quiet Leader Who Became Great—Neh. 2: 11-18.

Thursday—A Humble Leader—Luke 7: 1-10.

Friday—Peaceful Leadership Enjoined—II Tim. 2: 22-26.

Saturday—A Humble Leader Restored—Acts 9: 36-41.

There are two purposes for this meeting: (1) To define Christian leadership and (2) To show how Christian youth can become admirable leaders.

Many appeals are made through books, articles, and advertisements on such subjects as how to be popular, or how to be successful. This literature has appeared because of the desire of a number of people to become prominent and to occupy places of leadership in society.

Another emphasis should be made. There is such a thing as unconscious influence. We are all involved in such an influence in our homes, in our daily associations, in young people's groups, and among our friends. As Christians we should be concerned about a "quiet leadership" which is always good. After all, the quality of our daily living is measured by the kind of influence we quietly exercise over others.

Let two persons speak on the greatest man and woman in the past. These have been suggested: St. Paul and Clara Barton.

Let two persons speak on their estimations of the greatest man and woman of the present time. These have been suggested: Kagawa and Margaret Slattery. Give definite reasons why they are great people. (Information about them may be secured by writing the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C.)

Some person may speak on the characteristics of a Christian leader. These are suggested: He walks ahead of the crowd in zeal, enthusiasm, in energy and hard work; he stands above the crowd in vision and understanding; he is a helpful friend to all; he meditates but does not become a dreamer; he is an optimist who estimates values about him in terms of

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

JEREMIAH DENOUNCES FALSE PROPHETS.

LESSON VII—MAY 19, 1940.

LESSON: Jeremiah 23.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Ezek. 34:7-10.

GOLDEN TEXT: Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.—I Thessa. 5:21.

Jeremiah was one of the greatest of the prophets. He was also a great patriot. And this combination of being both prophet and patriot brought to him many heartaches and heartbreaks. He loved his country with an unusual love. At the same time he had profound spiritual insight as to the doom which awaited his country unless it changed its way. For a number of years he was obliged to prophesy against her and to pronounce judgment upon her. For all this he was soundly hated not only by other priests and prophets but by the people themselves. But as one looks back upon him in the perspective of history one begins to realize just how great Jeremiah was.

Today's lesson is concerned primarily with Jeremiah's denunciation of the prophets and priests of his day. It is rather sobering reading for any minister who takes his call seriously. But for that matter, it also applies to many leaders in Christian work and to Sunday school teachers, as well as to pastors. In the twenty-third chapter of Jeremiah, which forms the background for today's lesson, Jeremiah brings many charges against the priests and prophets of his day. Perhaps these notes can do nothing better than to give a brief interpretation of these charges.

A Break-Down in Personal Character.

The first charge which Jeremiah brings against the prophets of his day is against their personal integrity of character. They were not essentially good men. They led immoral lives; they prophesied untruths that catered to public opinion; they lived loosely. It was not any wonder therefore that their prophecies were not to be trusted. God could not and would not reveal his holy will to men who were unholy themselves. There are many qualifications for leadership in Christian work, whether it be in pulpit or in pew. But there is no substitute for personal character. The most difficult thing which any minister or any Sunday school teacher has to do is to live a genuine Christian life. No matter how gifted one may be, he can never be a success as a minister, or as a Sunday school teacher, or as a Christian worker unless he is a genuinely good man.

The Sheep Are Not Fed.

Another charge which Jeremiah brings against the prophets of his day is that they did not feed their sheep. A minister is to do more than simply entertain people for half an hour twice on Sunday. As pastor he is to feed his sheep. A true minister is a teacher as well as a preacher. The same charge can be laid against many ministers today that was laid upon the prophets of old. "The hungry sheep look up and are not fed." The minister should give more heed to the content and to the scope of his preaching, and through the years the minister should instruct his people in the basic truths of the Christian religion.

The Sheep Are Scattered.

"Ye have scattered my flock, and driven them away, and have not visited them . . ." Another charge which Jeremiah brought against the prophets was that they had scattered the sheep, and driven them away. Some ministers seem to be perennial sources of dissension. Wherever they go they create friction and stimulate divisions. This is stark tragedy. Alas for the minister who is constantly creating friction and stimulating divisions within the local church!

What People Want, Or What People Need?

The preachers of Jeremiah's day were rather popular fellows in spite of their loose manner of life. In fact, the people stood with them against Jeremiah when he criticized them. This was because these prophets were preaching what the people wanted instead of what they needed. Here was a nation given over in a startling and shameful way to unrighteousness and to practices that were not at all in accord with the will of a holy God. Any clear-headed and clean-hearted man could see the handwriting on the wall. But these people were blind optimists. They told the people that they need not be concerned about what was going to happen. Were they not the chosen people of Jehovah? Was not the temple in their midst? Was it not unthinkable that Jehovah would allow his chosen people or a sacred temple to be overrun by hated foreigners, or even heathen? They spoke smooth words.

But Jeremiah took them to task because they were preaching what people wanted rather than what the people need. Here is the heart of the matter for every modern minister and Sunday school teacher. Each faces the problem of whether he or she shall teach what people want and what will make him popular, or whether he shall preach the truths that are needed. Many a man has compromised and sold his soul because he preaches what people want instead of what they need. If one reads the story of the Master's life he will readily discover that it was his courage in speaking the truth, and often it was unpopular truth, which nailed him to the cross.

Our Thoughts, or God's Thoughts?

These preachers of Jeremiah's day were dreaming their own dreams and preaching them as God's truth. They did not know God, they were not on intimate terms with him, they could not therefore speak his will or his words. Jeremiah challenged them at this very point. If they had a dream he told them that it was all right to tell it, but they were to tell it as a dream; they were not to declare that it was the word of the living God. The tragedy was that the people had so much confidence in these prophets that not only in Jerusalem but throughout all Judea they had been led astray.

The Word of God As a Fire and As a Hammer.

"Is not my word like as a fire? saith the Lord; and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces?" Thus in picturesque speech does God show the nature or function of his word. It is as a fire, a consuming, cleansing force. Anyone who has heard the word of God in the deep places of his life knows that it is as a fire. It has the power to burn the dross out of our lives and purify our hearts. And the word of God is also as a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces. People sometimes minimize the importance of words as compared with deeds. But words can sometimes be the most powerful things in the world. The word of God honestly and persistently proclaimed can have the same effect upon the human heart as a hammer does which breaks even a hard rock to pieces. We do not have to defend the word of God; we have only to declare it.

"If Mr. Solomon had lived in our time he would have to take a back seat!"

MONDAY.

"A SUFFICIENT RULE FOR LIFE."

"Thy word have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against Thee." —Ps. 119:11.

The most remarkable thing of all the ages is that the Bible has always been and still is the most popular book. It has been the book of the greatest thinkers of the ages. We are told that from 8:00 to 8:30 President Lincoln made it a daily practice to sit in his favorite chair and read the Bible, seeking its lofty ideals of truth and justice, its illustrations and forceful English, which gave him character and his speeches vividness and power. Of it he said, "It is the greatest gift of God—but for it we could not know right and wrong. All things desirable for men's welfare here and hereafter are to be formed by it." A book which holds such a plan in the life of the world no one can afford to neglect.

Prayer—O Lord, my Lord, we sin sorely against ourselves and against Thee in not knowing Thy word. Forgive us and help us to do better. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"GAS MASKS."

"Abstain from all appearance of Evil."—I Thess. 5:22.

Japanese soldiers on the streets of Shanghai wear a nose piece over their nostrils as a protection against infectious germs in the air. Disinfecting vats are provided at the landing places and sailors returning from liberty are required to walk through these vats in order to protect their shipmates from germs that might be borne aboard ship by means of shoe-soles. We are told that the first gas masks were invented to protect against infectious disease such as cholera, yellow fever and similar diseases.

Would that everyone had the wisdom to take Christ with him and live in constant protection against sin. "Would you be free from your burden and sin. Let Jesus come into your heart."

Prayer—O Lord, give us the wisdom to protect ourselves against the evils of the soul, as much as we do against the evil of the body. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

CHRISTIAN HYGIENE.

"Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."—I Cor. 10:31.

Henry Ford is reported to have said: "The clergy teaches the people to be good. They cannot do this and disregard the habits of living. Health effects everything including moral and spiritual well being. Why does not the clergy teach the people how to eat? Most wrong acts . . . are the result of wrong mixtures in the stomach."

How nearly is Ford correct? The sins of Sodom were "Pride, fulness of bread and abundance of idleness." A religion that does not direct attention to causes, fails in the fulness of its mission. Jesus taught that it is not enough to say "Son, be of good cheer; Thy sins be forgiven Thee." We must add. "Sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto Thee."

Prayer—Our Father, we are great sinners in eating. Through the appetite we break down our health. O Lord, teach us right and give us the will to live it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"HEART TROUBLE."

"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me . . . and ye shall find rest unto your souls."—Matt. 11:28-30.

The most prevalent disease of today is heart trouble. The most prevalent trouble of the world is heart trouble. The whole purpose of the great physician is to cure this trouble. If our hearts could be cured and set right, prisons would become palaces and all men would live as brothers.

The greater part of humanity is seeking this cure in health, in honor, and in worldly ease, and the disease grows worse. All the achievements of man in society, literature and science, only burden us the more and add to the trouble. There is no hope for the heart of man, save in God through Jesus Christ.

Prayer—O Lord, our hope is in Thee—"of whom shall we seek succor but of Thee, who for our sins are justly displeased." Help us in our weak faltering ways to give ourselves to Thee and be strong. O Lord, tell us of Thy gift of ease and rest for all cares and burdens, hopes and longings, which Thou art yearning to bestow upon us. May we hear Thy voice, "Come unto me," and then we will sing with the Psalmist, "I will walk as liberty; for I seek my precepts." Amen.

FRIDAY.

SIN EMBRACED.

(Read James 1:13-26.)

In his Essay on Man Alexander Pope agrees with the Psalmist on the progressiveness of sin. Quote:

Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As to be hated, needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

He who avoids temptation is one who delights in the Lord, meditates in the Lord; delights in doing his will without limit. Such a person is the "Blessed Man" the Psalmist speaks of. Am I one of His "blessed?"

Prayer—O most High God, we would put our trust in thee and live in Thy way that no sin may be imputed to us or that we may be defiled

WHO ARE GOD'S CHOSEN PEOPLE?
OR, THE OBLIGATION OF PRIVILEGE.

"You only have I known of all the families of the earth: therefore I will punish you for all your iniquities."—Amos 3:2.

I.

Israel has been known as God's chosen people from time immemorial. That statement, however, is a bit too simple. The prophet Amos dealt with this matter and indicated that Israel was chosen for a purpose. That purpose was to reveal God to the world. Failure to do so, he declared, would bring punishment.

Some Jews had the idea that since they were God's chosen people, or favorites, they were therefore exempt from moral responsibility. Now the prophet realized that Israel, by virtue of her native temperament and historic background, was in a unique position to understand God and reveal Him to the world. He found it necessary to warn the nation that He was not chosen for exemption but for a purpose; that her present opportunity to make God known to the world was a privilege which involved corresponding responsibility.

Israel had no exclusive monopoly on God's favor. Amos 9:7 places Israel on the same plane as the children of Ethiopia in God's estimation. He not only brought Israel out of the land of Egypt, but also brought the Philistines from Caphton, and the Syrians from Kir. All nations are God's chosen people and each is chosen for a purpose. Someone has well said: "If God writes 'opportunity' on one side of a door, he writes 'responsibility' on the other." This was the message of Amos. Israel was to be the mouthpiece of God for the world. Failure in this high privilege and responsibility would involve severe punishment.

II.

Now let us transplant this truth on American soil. The contemporary application of Amos' message would certainly involve America as God's chosen nation. America stands in a strategic position at the present hour. This vast continent is a paradise among the nations of the world. No good thing has been withholden. The fruit and foliage of a thousand hills, unlimited natural resources, all the technical improvement of modern civilization, coupled with the cultural heritage of the ages conspire to lift our nation to the pedestal of supreme opportunity. In a world threatened by dictators and totalitarian states, America, an isolated and self-sufficient democracy, has an unparalleled opportunity in the annals of history for conspicuous world leadership. Such an opportunity involves tremendous responsibility.

III.

Finally, if we bring this obvious truth still nearer, it has its application here in our own church.

1. Consider the church itself. Its architecture, equipment, and location mark it at once with distinction. Its facilities lend itself to a varied program of ministry to human needs. The church has been the recipient of philanthropy from within and generosity from without. Certainly such favor and privilege is not without its corresponding obligation.

A visitor was being shown through a beautiful church with many departments and excellent equipment. The visitor exclaimed in amazement, "This beats the devil." "That is the intention," replied the minister. With such excellent facilities as we have, it is our solemn obligation to plan and execute a program that will beat the devil.

2. Consider the Denomination. It has been enriched by the heritage of two significant religious streams, both of which were great in their own rites. This Denomination has produced great preachers who have been spiritual and intellectual pathfinders in their generation. Its sons and daughters have gone with honor and distinction into the various walks of life. It has even sought the proper blending of religion and education. Such a Denomination with its liberal doctrine and progressive program is indispensable in such an age as this. The Denomination that is not bound by the shackles of orthodoxy has a witness that is needed. For such a church to die would be nothing less than tragedy. For us to fail in this hour would be sin unspeakable.

3. Consider the fact that this church is the sole representative of the Dein the way. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

"PLANTED."

"You shall be like a tree planted . . ."—Psalm 1:3.

To appreciate this picture fully one should inspect a nursery. There are the various species, classes and types of flowers, shrubbery and trees. These flowers, shrubbery and trees are planted according to their classification, age, and size. In due time and personal care these things are called upon to grace homes, gardens and estates. The point is they are planted and trained for their service.

The Psalmist says we are like a tree planted. That is a definite act of God upon us, planting us in the life of Jesus Christ, who is the source of the waters of eternal life.

Prayer—Our Father and dear God, the Planter of our lives, we would drink of Thy river of life this day, the streams whereof make glad our existence, bring peace to the earth, and enrich heaven with fruit and glory—so may it be to us today. Amen.

SUNDAY.

PRACTICAL SAVING RELIGION.

"Leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift."—Matt. 5:23.

Earnest Lott in Grace and Truth gives us a story of a minister who went into a music store to buy some records. The clerk who served him knew nothing about them. The minister resented such ignorance, and said unkind words to him and left in disgust.

That night the minister could not preach. He tried hard on a well prepared sermon, but words would not come to him. He could not get away from what he had said to the young man. So, the next day, he went to the store to apologize to the clerk. As he approached him the young man began to apologize to him. But the preacher interrupted him by saying, "Wait a minute, I came not to get an apology but to apologize, for I cannot preach again till I do." He did, and learned that the young man had been ill nine months and that that day was his first day's work since his illness.

Prayer—Our Father, Giver of all spiritual grace, help us to make it our one theme today to be kind to all people and all things. In Christ's name. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Let us talk finances for a little while in this letter. It takes money to run an orphanage. It takes money to run a home and if you are the head of a family and have children in your home you find that it takes money to pay the expenses of your home. Where we have a large family like we have in the Christian Orphanage, it takes money in accordance with the number we have in our care. If you have six children in your family and it costs you twelve hundred dollars per year to feed, educate, pay doctor's bills, and many other expenses, then count in insurance, replacements and repairs, farm expenses, etc., then multiply this by sixteen and two-thirds and you will see it takes money.

We were looking over our record book today and we find that we are $131.93 ahead of last year at this date. But the church is not due the credit for this amount. We received this year $354.61 more from the Duke Endowment than we did in 1939. You see, we would be $222.62 short from the churches this year than up to this time last year. There are two causes for this. First, the weather was cold, so much rain and snow that people could not get to church. Second, so many Sunday schools dropped from the list during that period and they have not gotten back on the list. We hope in the near future all will be making the usual monthly contribution. We always feel proud of Sunday schools that really want to carry their part of the load in our church work.

We are always proud of the boy or girl in the Christian Orphanage who is outstanding in doing their part. We have noticed, too, that when they go out from us to take their places in the battle of life they are outstanding there and make good. If our churches would raise the amount apportioned to them by the Conference for the college, missions, the orphanage, and all other departments, the heads of the institutions would be happy. It would be wonderfully encouraging to them. All the churches can do this and send their delegates to Conference this fall with their apportionments paid in full. What a happy group we would have in Conference. We could stand and sing from the depths of our hearts "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

For General Discussion—

How can a Christian leader prepare himself for his responsibilities?

What books should he read? What religious practices should he follow?

How much attention should he pay to art, music, poetry, and other cultural pursuits? How can he learn the skills of Christian leadership by engaging in Christian work? In what ways do the activities of Christian Endeavor help to develop Christian leadership?

In Memoriam

JOYNER

James I. Joyner was born February 25, 1872. On February 28, 1940, God saw fit in his great wisdom to call him to his reward. In his passing the community (Union, Southampton, Va.), has lost a faithful and loyal friend.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That while we mourn his loss we weep not as those without hope but bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

2. That we extend to the bereaved family our sympathy, and that we ever hold his friendship in warm remembrance.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

BRANDON.

Brother Herbert Brandon, son of the late Johnny Byrd Brandon, departed this life at his home near Ringold, Va., on November 27, 1939, at the age of fifty-two. The deceased married Miss Rubie Wells, sister of the late Rev. W. L. Wells, when a young man. She survives, together with five children, all of whom live in Ringold except the eldest, Herbert, who lives in New Jersey.

Brother Brandon was a high type Christian gentleman, a splendid citizen, a man of high integrity. He was a successful farmer and a man of good intellect. He united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, but years ago transferred his membership to Lebanon Christian Church. He leaves an excellent family and a host of friends grieved over his passing.

Funeral and burial were at Lebanon Church in the presence of a crowd of people. Floral tributes were many and beautiful.

WHISTLER'S CHAPEL.

The good people at Whistler's Chapel Church recently reorganized Sunday School and Christian Endeavor, and our attendance and interest has grown by leaps and bounds. We have organized classes and use the Christian Publishing House literature. We have four families taking THE CHRISTIAN SUN and hope to get more subscriptions in the near future.

The following officers and teachers were elected and are doing fine work: superintendent, J. W. Good; assistant superintendent, Nina Green; secretary, Mrs. J. W. Good; assistant secretary, Nina Green; treasurer, Ruby Arehart; Bible class teacher, Miss Selena Hines; assistant teacher, A. N. Green; intermediate class, Anna Ruth Green; assistant, Ruby Arehart; junior boys class, Oliver Griest; assistant, Ardella Williams; beginners class, Mrs. Minnie Williams; assistant, Louise Williams. The Bible class adopted the name of Friendship with the motto: "Working for Jesus." Mr. A. N. Green was elected president and R. L. Ettel secretary.

Our good pastor, Rev. Roy D. Coulter, preaches very inspiring sermons. We feel that Brother Coulter and his fine wife are doing a fine work here in the Valley Conference.

The officers of our Christian Endeavor Society are: president, Ruby Arehart; vice-president, Nina Green; secretary, Ardella Williams; assistant secretary, Esther May Ettel; musician, Esther May Ettel; treasurer, Mrs. J. W. Good; look out committee, Oliver Griest, Harry Heney, Nina Green, Anna Ruth Green, Mr. and Mrs. Green Weymer.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor workers are meeting once a month to study the needs of our church and our Sunday school problems. We feel that the Lord's work is going forward at Whistler's Chapel where we have had some strong battles with Satan. We remember our orphanage, our college, and missions in our prayers and in our offerings.

There are so many things that I admire the Christian Church for. Particularly because she sends the Gospel out on the hillsides, into the highways and byways, and into the foreign fields. Let's try to do more in the future. I feel THE CHRISTIAN SUN is a big help and should reach more homes. I am trying to get it into more homes in my church.

We appreciate the good work our very efficient Promotional Secretary is doing and feel that it is a big help to us. May the Lord bless him and inspire him so that he may inspire us church folks.

Folks, Whistler's Chapel is working, praying, and building character. We are in the heart of the Shenandoah Valley surrounded by thousands of acres of fine orchards and fertile farms. When in the Valley remember Whistler's Chapel Church. You are invited to our church, which is one mile west of Shenandoah Caverns. May the Lord bless all our pastors, missionaries, laymen and church workers.

nomination in this great city. Set amid the city of a thousand memories, studded with monuments to the nation's great, it lies within the magnetic field of greatness. Living under such a cloud of immortal witnesses, can we sit unworried in the presence of this historic greatness? Does greatness belong alone to the state and nation, to the general and the statesman? Or is there a torch for us to pass on, a flame to rekindle? Must the church be content with the mere crumbs of celebrity? When the church is true to her risen Lord, she enjoys a splendor all her own. Churchmanship, as well as statesmanship, has enriched the annals of the great. It may and should continue to be so in our generation and denomination.

And so, my dear friends, I congratulate you on being members of a great Denomination, in a great city, a city historically significant, contemporaneously aggressive and perennially interesting; but hasten to remind you that such abundant privilege involves corresponding responsibility.

IT CAN BE DONE!

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

Very well do I remember when the little schoolhouse in my community had only two rooms. A young school teacher in the community believed the little schoolhouse could become a high school with many rooms, and many teachers, and many more pupils. There were those who said it could not be done, but as a matter of fact it was done, and although fifteen miles from everywhere it is now one of the biggest rural high schools in the country. A vision of the heart, became a plan of the mind, and a work of the hand. Belief back of it all made it possible.

In that same community today a church, with real challenge to the hundreds of young people, their parents, and their neighbors, could arise if some young minister believed it could be done. You know Jesus once said to one of his best friends: "Said I not unto thee, that if thou believest, thou shouldst see the glory of God." "If thou believest"! They stood before a closed tomb, but God's glory could be manifested in a miracle that would raise the dead. Jesus believed it, and the dead came alive. God spoke to one of his great prophets and said: "If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established." Jesus laid great store on belief. According to Him belief ties us to the disciples far more than any apostolic succession wrought by the laying on of hands. He said: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." From word to word, witness to witness, as they heard and believed, the continuity of the church across the centuries is made. One dreamer sees the glory of God come to pass in his own life, and in his own hopes and prayers, he puts his hand to the task, trusts God, and sees more come to pass than he could hardly hope for, and then he becomes a witness. Believing, he has seen the glory of God.

Belief brings hope, and hope makes plans. To hope and plans add prayer and persistence to remove mountains, and one sees the glory of God. The Christian faith is an adventuring faith. Its founder, Jesus Christ, saw things miraculous come to pass, because of his adventuring faith. And the half has not yet been told. His dreams shall come ever more and more true. Sometimes it is hard for us to believe it, but we only cut short the glory of God in our midst by our unbelief: "Said I not unto thee, that if thou believest, thou shouldst see the glory of God."

Tithing Christians? Yes, if we who hope for it; believe it; pray for it; plan for it; work for it. There are "a few loaves and fishes" in every multitude, or congregation, who could be examples for others, and witnesses to the great blessing of tithing. Jesus took what he had at hand, and multiplied it. A few tithing Christians in a congregation who will believe that there could be added many others, can make a vast difference in the glory of that church's program. Ah! they might, indeed, see the glory of God in their church!

And so could we go right through the enterprises of our church. Our missions, our institutions, our publications, our every interest, might radiate the glory of God if we had a firmer belief. Belief and goodwill, belief and confidence, belief and courage, go hand in hand. We can do things for God if we believe we can: "Said I not unto thee, that if thou believest, thou shouldst see the glory of God."

REV. JOHN URQUART NEWMAN, A. B., Ph. D., Litt. D., D. D.

Dr. Newman has been one of the best-loved members of the Elon College faculty from the beginning of the school to the present time. He is retiring after fifty years of service at the same time as the Golden Anniversary of Elon is being celebrated. Dr. Newman received his Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of North Carolina, his Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Chicago, and the honorary degree of Doctor of Literature from LaGrande College and Doctor of Divinity from Union College.

This year's edition of the Elon College Annual, Phippsli, was dedicated to Dr. Newman in the following words: "With keenest appreciation of the spirit in which he has won the devotion and admiration of every Elon student, of his unusual style of teaching, and of his long and untiring interest in our activities, we lovingly dedicate this twenty-fifth volume of Phippsli to Dr. John Urquart Newman, who since the founding of our College fifty years ago, has engendered in us through his matchless character, charming personality and rare erudition, ideals which challenge our utmost efforts."

Remember the Golden Anniversary celebration of Elon College Commencement on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday of next week.

Rev. W. Millard Stevens, pastor of Union Christian Church near Burlington, N. C., was the preacher for the Baccalaureate service of the Elon High School on last Sunday night.

The eleventh annual Memorial and Homecoming Services of the Leaks-ville (Valley of Virginia) Christian Church will be held as usual on the first Sunday in June. Rev. R. E. Newton is the pastor of this church.

Rev. F. C. Lester, Promotional Secretary of the Southern Convention, expects to return to Elon College the first of next week to resume work. He underwent an operation at Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va., recently.

Rev. Roy D. Coulter of New Market, Va., was the principal speaker at the Battle of New Market Memorial Exercises held on Sunday, May 12. He will deliver the Baccalaureate sermon to the New Market High School graduating class early in June.

Three people who sent in requests for their subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN to be discontinued failed to sign their names to these requests. If you made such a request, and you are still receiving the paper, please write THE CHRISTIAN SUN office at Elon College, N. C.

New officers for the Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association were elected at the meeting last Monday. They are: President, Rev. T. Fred Wright of Waverly; Vice-President, Rev. George Olejar of Disputanta; Secretary, Rev. Herbert J. Councill, Jr. of Portsmouth; Treasurer, Rev. B. H. Watkins of Wakefield.

Memorial Day will be observed in our Carroll County churches, of which Rev. B. J. Earp is pastor, on June 2, from 10:00 A. M. to 3:00 P. M. The three churches are planning to meet for the day at Elk Spur. The Shallow Ford Christian Endeavor Society is to help with the music. All of our church people are invited to spend that Sunday in the mountains, sharing in the services, and getting acquainted with our mission work there. If you go, take your own lunch.

BACK AT WORK.

This morning I am back in my classroom! My Biology students are busy at work. I've called them my children during my entire half-year absence; this morning I'm sure they are my children, for once again they come to me with inquiring faces, eager to understand the hidden mysteries of life. And once again they know me as their teacher.

I never really appreciated being able to play a small part in a large world, until my work was suddenly snatched from me. I never appreciated having a strong, healthy body, until mine was broken and had to undergo repair. I never really appreciated living within the universe, until I was shut away from the world. But now it comes to me that it is great to be alive, to feel the vitality within which urges one to go forward, to be able to contact boys and girls in school.

There were so many kind people who remembered me during my recent shut-in stay, that I wanted to write them about being able to return to my work. With the return of another spring, it seems that the entire world is rejoicing and I am, too—

'Tis as easy now for the heart to be true,
As for the grass to be green, or the skies to be blue.

With "true hearts" we can reach out and take our fellowman by the hand; with "true hearts" we can prove to him that there is a noble way of living—and, in the end, the brotherhood of Christ will triumph over war, and hatred, and wrong living.

LITTLE CREEK OBSERVES SECOND ANNIVERSARY.

We observed our second anniversary at Little Creek Christian Church on May 19, at 7:30 P. M. We welcomed the largest congregation since the organization of our church. The following is a part of the program rendered:

Congregation Singing.

Scripture Reading and Prayer—by Pastor.

Special Song—Choir.

Song—by Quartette.

Reading: "It's Not the Church, It's You"—by Margaret Migell.

Short Addresses by the following:

Mr. W. M. Huggins. Mr. Bartholomew, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Gay, Mr. G. C. Holland, Mr. L. D. Dunton.

An inspiring address was given by Mr. E. E. Davis, Superintendent of the Sunday School at Norview Christian Church.

Reading: "A Penny a Day for the Church"—by Mrs. W. M. Huggins.

Song—by Pastor's children.

Address by W. H. Fentress.

Pastor preached for two minutes, using Psalm 119:18 as his text.

Presentation of cake and twelve dollars in cash to the pastor.

MRS. A. B. HERBERT.

NORTH CAROLINA PASTORS' SCHOOL.

The annual Pastors' School and Rural Church Institute will be held at Duke University, June 3-8. There is much to interest our ministers in the discussion groups, inspirational addresses, and worship services, although some of the main addresses have to do with Methodism since it is sponsored by Duke University. Further information may be secured by writing F. C. Lester, Elon College, N. C.

BOARD OF PUBLICATIONS TO MEET.

The Board of Publications of the Southern Convention will meet in the Alamance Building, Elon College, Tuesday morning at 8:30, May 28. The members of the Board: John G. Truitt, Chairman; W. E. Wissemann, Secretary; Jesse H. Dollar, Treasurer; J. E. McCauley and W. M. Jay, were elected at the recent session of the Southern Convention, and since the Convention they have been organized as above by ballot. Any person desiring to bring any matter to the attention of this Board are hereby given notice of its meeting.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Chairman.

REMINISCENCES OF INGRAM, VA.

Last Sunday Ingram held its annual Mother's Day service. The day itself was splendid—ideal and suggestive of the warmer weather that is to come. The Sunday School Department was filled.

The church auditorium was attractively decorated with flowers by Mrs. L. E. Carlton—flowers given in honor of the memory of some dear mother. Every seat in the choir was taken—not merely filled—but occupied by persons who could sing and did so. Two of the ladies sang an appropriate duet. Looking upon the congregation, one might see the colorful array of many carnations and roses worn to honor mother.

Just before the sermon, the minister presented nine new church members with Bibles. It was most impressive to have these new members sit upon the front row during the service. Some mother's heart was surely gladdened to see her son so near the altar on the day made for her honor.

After the sermon, which not only paid tribute to the mothers of our great heroes of American history, but also insisted upon "Motherliness" in our mothers of today, the minister administered Holy Communion. The Communion girls, in their spotless white dresses, uncovered the table, after which the deacons waited upon the congregation. Every deacon was present and in his place.

It was interesting to note that on Saturday, at the regular Quarterly Conference of the church, every department of the church handed in a report. This shows progress and work among the organizations of the church.

On the night before I left to come back to Biltmore to receive treatment for my lame leg, the wife of the Superintendent of our Sunday school, Mrs. J. K. Landrum, had our entire family for dinner. There was fried chicken for preacher and wife, ice cream especially for the children, and many more delicious dishes which only expert cooks can produce. But the tasty food was only part of the delight—there was a peaceful home, cool, serene, situated in a small grove of trees; there were flowers and all the attractions which make home happy and successful. Later in the evening additional guests arrived and the fellowship made the evening full and complete. The conversation touched on the conference which will meet at Ingram this year. There was individual mention of various preparations already in progress—from new wall paper and furniture to Negro helpers whom the preacher's wife declares she must "have at such a time." This year's conference will be history for Ingram; you're planning to come, aren't you?

The conversation naturally turned to war during the evening. It is surprising to note the concern of the man who works all day long, near the elements from whence comes our food. The farmer, the working man, is deeply concerned with what's to be. We Americans do not have our hands folded; we are conscious of the times. The radio no longer allows an isolated man to be a unit to himself.

Our conversation was cut short, for there were sleepy little ones to be put to bed. The minister turned our thoughts of the evening away from the cares of the world to God, asking His protection for the night and for the life that lies ahead. In God is our refuge!

WHERE IS YOUR EMPHASIS?

By MRS. CHARLES HAND.

[Read at the Vanceville Christian Church, of which Rev. G. D. Hunt is pastor, Sunday night, April 21, 1940.]

On one of Jesus' visits to their home Martha played the part of house keeper, while Mary assumed the role of home maker. Mary sat at His feet and listened to the words of eternal life as they flowed from His lips. He might have been discussing some of the great doctrines which form the basis of the Christian life and the foundation of the Christian Church. He might have been declaring that He was the Way, the Truth and the Life, and that He had come to "seek and to save that which was lost." He might have been pointing out the way by which the lost are saved.

In the midst of this important discussion, the impatient Martha appeared on the scene and complained that Mary had left her to look after preparing and serving the meal.

Jesus told her that she was careful and troubled about many things when really there was only one important thing. And that Mary had turned her attention in that direction.

The worth of our lives is determined by where we put the emphasis. Martha was missing the great issues of life because of a wrong conception of values. Martha was worried about bread, the staff of life, while Mary was concerned about the bread of life. Martha was concerned more about being a perfect housekeeper than she was about being a perfect homemaker.

There are Martha-mothers who may be more concerned about their children's curls than about their character. Many homes have been deprived of real stability because the father put the emphasis on things rather than on those values which have to do with the making of real lives. Where do you put the emphasis? We sometimes hear the expression: "She married well." It may mean that she married a sorry man who had plenty of money. The rich young ruler put emphasis on possessions in his scale of values.

Ananias and Sapphira placed too great value on money and lost their lives. Covetousness is not possession but desire. It is possible for the poor as well as the rich to be covetous. It is our attitude toward what we have which determines whether we are misers or good Samaritans.

During this season of the year many churches are in revival campaigns and we are trying to give emphasis to the matter of spiritual values. Many other demands will be made on our time and interest. Will we be a Martha, concerned about the secondary, or as Mary, willing to listen to the voice of Christ and choose the greater part?

Our kind of world needs changing—no doubt about that, and one place to begin would seem to be with our human attitudes. They are creative, they make Democracies or Totalitarian states; they make peace or war. They do this because they make character, and character makes the whole human order. "You can't change human nature" is the last defense of the half-stupid and the wholly stubborn. But it can be changed. It has been changed. A human nature which has flowered into saints and seers, has been changed again and again—and it doth not yet appear what we shall be. St. Paul saw it happening and knew its open secret.—Exchange.

A man is what he is, not what men say he is. His character no man can touch; only he, himself, can damage that. His reputation is what men say he is. That, truly, can be damaged by others. But reputation is for time, character is for eternity.—Anna Jameson.

If we look down, then our shoulders stoop. If our thoughts look down, our character bends. It is only when we hold up our heads that our body becomes erect. It is only when our thoughts go up that our life becomes upright.—A. McKenzie.

A man who cannot mind his own business is not fit to be trusted with the king's.—Saville.

IN FOR REPAIRS.

All machinery has to be put in the shop occasionally for repair. It can not run constantly without wearing and eventually needing renewal. The human body is no exception.

During the past two weeks your Editor has had the joy of resting in the hospital while nature restores some broken tissue and gives new life. Yes, there are real joys to resting in a hospital. Skilled physicians, faithful nurses, and kind friends, all contribute the best they have, while nature does the restoration. Indications are that repairs are being made rapidly and successfully and that the Editor will soon be back on his feet ready for the duties which lie ahead. Thanks to all you friends who have sent greetings.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY COMMENCEMENT.

Many graduates, former students and friends of Elon College will return to that institution for the Commencement on next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. They will rejoice in the fifty years of growth and service which the college has experienced. They will be grateful for the men who founded the institution and those who have carried it through the years.

Many of them will express their gratitude by joining the Golden Anniversary Club and helping the college pay its indebtedness. Three thousand volunteers, giving $50.00 for the 50 years would start the college on its second half-century invigorated and ready for successful attainment. It is devoutly to be hoped that such volunteers will make their gifts of gratitude.

WORK OF PROMOTIONAL SECRETARY.

Last week's paper incorrectly stated that the editorial gave the work which the Promotional Secretary had done up to now. Some of the readers may be interested in a brief statement of the work for the past nineteen months. Hence, this item, which is taken largely from the report made to the convention:

"All the work has been in cooperation with others. I have tried to discover what our people are undertaking to do, and to help whenever possible. This cooperation has been with institutions, boards, pastors, churches, pastorates, conferences, Sunday school conventions, missionary conferences, young people's organizations, denominational boards, and interdenominational leaders."

Religious and missionary education call for considerable emphasis. A large quantity of material has been distributed, training schools conducted, and vacation Bible schools held. Missionary groups, large and small, have been aided by reviewing the study books, giving addresses on missions, and furnishing material for their work.

The young people have been supported in all their undertakings, and there are indications that their work is progressing.

Guest speakers have been entertained and directed.

They have been missionaries and denominational leaders who have given us some two or three months service.

Considerable aid has been given to the organization of three new churches and the establishment of pastorates. "Eighteen of the present active pastors were selected by the churches after consultation with me."

A summary of activities includes the following: "During the nineteen months I have traveled approximately 40,000 miles in the interest of the Convention, made 150 addresses, visited about one-half our churches, talked with all of our pastors except the new one in Asheville (and with most of them several times), held hundreds of interviews with church leaders, aided in securing eighteen ministers, assisted in starting four churches, directed Student Summer Service, helped to plan and conduct the Elon Summer School of Leadership Education, assisted with several local training schools, counseled with young or new ministers in getting adjusted, kept in contact with denominational leaders, served as a member of the Prudential Committee, and edited 'The Christian Sun.'"

THE EUROPEAN TRAGEDY.

The past two weeks have witnessed an unparalleled destruction of life and property in Europe. The Hitler war machine has been turned loose on people who were unprepared to protect themselves against it. Norway, Holland and Belgium have been almost completely destroyed. Literally hundreds of thousands of people have been murdered.

At this writing the progress of the German army apparently has slowed down, but no one knows whether the Allies can stand the continuous pressure or not. If England and France fail in their efforts to defend themselves, the United States will face greater difficulties than we had ever dreamed. Present German officials seem to regard nothing as sacred. A signed agreement is thrown away at pleasure. National borders are overrun as if they meant nothing. Human life has value only as it contributes to the progress of the war machine.

This new danger has finally stirred the United States into action. Congress is following the lead of the President and is about to launch an unprecedented preparedness program. But there can be no safety in any part of the world so long as those who have power disregard all rules of the game and act entirely on the basis of their own selfish desires. This paper does not believe in war as the way to settle disputes, is not at all convinced that armament makes a country safe, and does not expect to be swept by war fears. Neither does it advocate letting wild men run loose in the world. It does seem that the time has arrived—perhaps long since past—when the clear-thinking, liberty-loving, and God-fearing people of the world face the necessity of destroying once and for all the war machine found in many parts of the earth, but now apparently at its worst in Germany.

Youth and the Program of the Church

By REV. STANLEY C. HARRELL, D. D.

[The Address of the President, at the Recent Southern Convention.]

One of the most important issues which confronts the church of today is what the church may do to train its youth; to inspire them with the high ideals of the Christ; to enlist them in the service of the kingdom; and to make the young people an integral part of all that which the Church is endeavoring to do. Other tasks and problems may appear to be more immediately urgent; but to permit these pressing problems to absorb the time and resources of the church, to the neglect of what the church should do for its youth, is to defeat the very purpose which it seeks to accomplish. Many of the problems which confront and plague us today would not be problems, or at least would not be so acute, if a former generation had done all that might have been done for its youth. For no problem of the church will remain solved unless its solution has back of it the powers and resources of Christian youth.

The future of the church very clearly depends upon what is done with and for youth. Those who have thought much about the work of the church have long since realized this. But what we have not always seen, but which is equally true, is that the destiny of civilization and of humanity is bound up with the enlistment of youth for the service of Christ's kingdom. Not long ago I heard a man who is a distinguished Bible scholar and student of world affairs, maintain the thesis that the wholesale enlistment of youth in support of the program of the totalitarian state can be explained only by the failure of the church to impart the spiritual ideals of the Christ. He argued that the roots of the present world crisis are not primarily economic, but spiritual. It was the conviction of that speaker that youth has responded to the state's program of conquest, cruelty and war, not because of empty larders, but because of empty hearts and lack of spiritual convictions. If the youth of America is different from the youth of Germany, the basic difference is in the spiritual convictions which undergird life.

Insofar as I have been able to learn, the effort to do for youth what the church feels should be done has, in practically all the Protestant denominations, taken the turn of forming youth organizations within the denomination. The strongest argument in favor of such an organization has been that it is "of, by, and for youth."

Two facts, however, seem to have emerged from the experiment of youth organizations within the church. First, where there is youth organization in the local church, there is a tendency for adults to feel that the responsibility to the young people has been met. Second, where there are active youth organizations in local churches, many of the young people devote all their time and effort to their own organization, and are not contributing to the support of the church itself.

We would not have you get the idea that we are condemning special organizations of church youth. They have served and are serving most useful purposes. Young people have social and recreational needs which can only be met through group activities. But can we not plan a future program which will meet these special needs, and also enlist a far larger number of our young people in the total program of the church?

It would be most interesting if we could have all our youth here to say just what they desire as their place and part in the program of our church. That is not possible; but from the things which some of the most thoughtful of our youth have said, and by the attitude which has been manifested by the choicest spirits among our young people, we may go far toward anticipating their wishes. If we have understood the spirit of youth, youth desires a voice in the councils of the church. Youth would like to help in formulating the plans and program of the church. Youth would like to do its full share of the work of the church, and to enter into the glorious fellowship of service.

Have we not assumed that our duty to young people is to prepare them for the life they are going to live, and for the service they are going to render? Children and youth are not getting ready to live; they are living. We should help them, as we may and can, in the business of life. No man knows just when he left off being a boy and became a man. None of us, whom youth no longer considers young, can tell just when the transition was made. We have just lived our way out of one period and into another.

There is but one way whereby we can help the young people of our church to realize the full potentialities of their youth. That way is to challenge them to undertake a large share of the total work of the church. If our young people are what they ought to be, nothing less than that will be satisfactory or appealing to them. Many of our local churches will never dare to undertake an adequate program until they have counted upon the enthusiasm, strength and determination of their young people. We need to undertake a program that will tax every available resource, and then let our young people know that we are bound to fail unless they help to the best of their ability.

Let us take evangelism and missions as illustrations of what we believe can and should be done to enlist youth in the total program of the church. It is sad to relate, but these two phases of church work are the ones in which the least progress is being made at the present time. In fact recent years have witnessed a gradually declining interest in both. But they are the very areas in which the interest of youth could be enlisted with largest profit, both to youth and the church.

In the field of evangelism I do not believe we shall ever be successful in winning the youth of our generation until the young people of the church undertake the task. The world's most perfect conformers are young people. They must wear what other young people are wearing. They all use the current vocabulary of youth. They do that which is the popular thing of the day, from roller skating to "yo-yoing." If the fine young people in our churches would unite to make Christian service the main interest of life, they could do more to win their fellows to Christ than all the evangelistic campaigns which the church has launched in the last fifty years.

The church of our day is confronted with the task of rebuilding its conception of the missionary obligation. Missionary endeavor must be undergirded by an understanding of the essential nature of Christ's gospel. Christians must realize that the field is the world; and that the church can be vital and growing only as it is reaching out into new lands and winning other peoples to Christ. Until this is done, we shall continue to hear of deficits in missionary budgets; and we shall continue to make urgent appeals for special gifts to keep missions alive.

I am convinced that the church acted wisely when it set out to enlist the interest and the support of the women in behalf of mission work. Achievements abundantly justify the wisdom of that course. But I am equally confident that the next logical and necessary step is to challenge the

SUFFOLK LETTER.

From time to time the question has been asked: "Why has the Christian Church not grown in keeping with other denominations?" Many answers have been given. A complete summary of these answers would be interesting.

The history of this denomination indicates some of the changes which have taken place in the methods of the leaders who have sought to advance the interests of the church. In the days of Rev. James O'Kelly and his co-workers the ministers gave great emphasis to some definite convictions which moved them to champion their cause. The name "Christian," "Christian character a test of fellowship," "Christ the Head of the Church," "The Bible a sufficient rule of faith and practice" and "the liberty of conscience" were worth advocating and working for, as great adventures in the religious world.

In our day these statements appear in print, but they do not seem so important to many of our people. As a matter of fact there are ministers in our fellowship who are not very enthusiastic about any of these great fundamental principles. Even some parts of the Bible are freely criticized and held up as obsolete. Christian character is not a rigid test of fellowship. Modern psychology and other current philosophical systems are substituted for the cardinal doctrines of evangelical Christianity. The denomination has been criticized more often than it has been defended, and it has been weakened when it should have been supported.

If resolutions and expert methods could build a great church, our denomination would cover the face of the earth. But denominations do not grow by the advice of experts and the resolutions of assemblies. There must be some great motives which appeal to the masses as being worthy of sacrifice and heroic support. Methodists have exalted experience and evangelism; Baptists have emphasized the Sovereignty of God and salvation by the grace of God; Presbyterians have taught their adherents the great doctrines of Calvinism as exemplified by St. Paul. And other growing denominations have some outstanding theme or doctrine which give them a distinctive appeal to their followers.

The schools have not exhausted the teachings of Jesus and St. Paul. The New Testament is an unknown book to many people of the world. Present day scholarship can find much to learn in this day of criticism and shallow learning. The time is propitious for some leader who will dare to blaze the way by a clarion call which exalts the New Testament as the key to a solution of world problems. Jesus is superior to Marx. He is as far above him as infinity is beyond zero. The Bible should be exalted far beyond the plane of any present denominational emphasis. And there is room for much improvement in the field of Christian experience. Again, our denomination should be known as one of the great leaders in holding up "Tithing" as the minimum basis of giving to support the cause of Christ.

ABUNDANT GRACE.

Our God doth make all grace abound

To cleanse the heart within;

That we might feel the soft caress

To free man's soul from sin.

Tho He was rich yet for our sakes

He left His home above,

And proves the all sufficiency

Of His redeeming love.

By grace the souls of men are saved

And brought into the fold;

That we thru Him might be made heirs

Of all that Heaven holds.

—Vivien M. Ogden.

And, to many people, it would be a challenge to demand that the worship services in our church shall really lead people to worship God instead of Mammon, to create an atmosphere of fellowship as a substitute for formality and coldness. Any preaching service should be worthy of all the energy and power at the command of the preacher. Jesus cannot be crowned in a cellar. He must be exalted. The church cannot thrive upon evasions and compromises. The kingdom of God advances to its victorious conquest, upon its knees, while facing the cross. If Jesus thought the kingdom was worthy of His life, how much more should we set as our goal, a standard which demands "my life, my love, my all." When our church can lay aside all narrowness, self-interest and criticism and set its mind and heart to some great spiritual objective we shall go forward.

HOME-COMING AND MEMORIAL SERVICE AT LEAKSVILLE.

Plans are now being made for the Eleventh Annual Memorial and Home-Coming Service which will be held on the first Sunday in June as heretofore.

This service was instituted in 1930 by Rev. A. W. Andes who was the beloved pastor of Leaksville Church at that time, and continued as pastor until 1936, when death terminated a faithful and consecrated service of about twelve years to this church.

Many relatives and friends attend these services each year and the occasion is looked forward to with anticipation of great enjoyment.

This church has had a steady growth since its organization in the year 1880, at which time its services were held in the old school house which stood on the west side of the village. This continued to be the meeting place until the year 1890, when the present site was secured and the building now in use was erected.

Rev. D. A. Barney of Mutual, Pa., was the pastor at the time the building program was launched. Other pastors following were: Rev. W. A. Dofflemeyer; Rev. W. C. Garland, also of Pennsylvania; Rev. E. T. Isley, Rev. G. W. Tickle, Rev. H. C. Moore, Rev. R. L. Williamson, Rev. W. T. Walters, Rev. R. P. Crumpler, Rev. B. J. Earp, Rev. A. W. Andes, Rev. W. J. Andes, Rev. C. G. Scannell, and the present pastor, Rev. R. E. Newton.

The records show that several other ministers served for short periods, one of them being a lady minister by the name of A. Draper, who served about a year.

In 1928 the church added four nice Sunday school rooms and a choir loft, which have been a great asset to the church, and especially to the Sunday school work.

An invitation is extended to the public, and especially to former pastors and friends of the church, who, because of distance or other difficulties, are not privileged to attend the services of the church except on rare occasions.

As heretofore there will be a morning and afternoon service, and a basket dinner served at noon.

R. O. ROTHGEB,
Church Secretary.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Here I am in Knoxville, Tenn. Outside the rain is falling upon the thirsty flowers and grass. It is making soft tapping noises at my window pane.

I wish that all of you could have been with me on my trip from North Carolina. My husband brought me to Greensboro in our car. There I got on the train and came the rest of the way to Knoxville. I made two crossword puzzles before getting to Hickory, for the children's page. After that I looked out of the window at the lovely flowers, the mountain streams with their white waterfalls, and the birds darting in and out among the trees.

There were two little girls on the train who talked with me. One had gotten on the train at Charlotte and was going to Asheville. The other one was going to Black Mountain. They were about five years old and each of them had her grandmother traveling with her. One was a little yellow-haired girl and the other one was dark-haired with dark brown eyes. Both of them talked with me and were interested in my crossword puzzles which I was making.

I did not get to mother's until about eleven o'clock Monday night.

Mother had gone to bed but she got up when I came!

I have been enjoying my vacation thus far. This is the only work that I'm doing. But this isn't work exactly, because I enjoy doing it. I went to milk with my brothers last night and milked two of the five cows, just to see if I could still do it! The first time I milked a cow by myself I was only nine years old.

I helped mother churn yesterday morning and washed the dishes this morning. I wish you could see the Mother's Day present which my youngest brother fixed for my mother. While she had gone to town last Saturday he dug up a flower bed on either side of the front steps and set them full of blooming pansy plants. They are just beautiful and mother was so pleased with them.

I hope that you are beginning to work on your programs for Children's Day, and don't forget about trying to send your Sunday School teachers to Elon Leadership Training School.

This week I think I shall put a Bible story in the children's page for you to read. I used to read it when I was just a little girl. I found it here in my nephew's Bible story book, written by Hurlbut. This is a story which boys usually like very much. I hope that all of you will like it.

THE STORY OF DANIEL IN THE LIONS' DEN.

The lands which had been the Babylonian or Chaldean empire, now became the empire of Persia; and over these Darius was the king. King Darius, who was now a very old man, gave to Daniel a high place in honor and in power. Among all the rulers over the land, Daniel stood first, for the king saw that he was wise and able to rule. This made the other princes and rulers very jealous, and they tried to find something evil in Daniel, so that they could speak to the king against him.

These men in watching Daniel found that he prayed three times a day from the open window of his room, which faced toward the city of Jerusalem. Jerusalem was at that time in ruins, and the temple was no longer standing.

These nobles thought that in Daniel's prayers they could find a chance to do him harm, and perhaps cause him to be put to death. They came to Darius, and said to him:

"All the rulers have agreed together to have a law made that for thirty days no one shall ask anything of any man or of any god, except from you, O King; and that if anyone shall ask anything of any man and pray to any god, except you, O King, he shall be thrown into the den where the lions are kept. Now, O King, make the law, and sign the writing, so that it cannot be changed, for no law among the Medes and Persians can be altered."

The king was not a wise man; and being foolish and vain, was pleased with this law which would set him even above the gods. So not asking Daniel's advice, he signed the law. Word was sent throughout the land that for thirty days no one should pray to any god.

Daniel knew about the law but every day he continued to pray, as he always had, kneeling before his window. The rulers, who were watching, saw Daniel kneeling in prayer to God. They came to the king, and said:

"O, King Darius, have you not made a law, that if any one in thirty days offers a prayer, he shall be thrown into the den of lions?"

"It is true," said the king. "The law has been made and it must stand."

They said to the king: "There is one man who does not obey this law. It is Daniel, one of the captive Jews. Every day he prays to God three times just as he did before you signed the law."

DARK DAYS.

We are indeed passing through dark days, not being able to surmise what is to result from the present war situation in Europe. While we sympathize most deeply with the Allies, who are fighting to save their native lands from invasion and conquest by a dictator who came in on a revolution and whose only hope of staying in power is through revolution and conquest, we dread and fear to think that our own land and country may be drawn into the conflict before it is over. Whether we are to be drawn in or not, our country is spending billions to prepare for the worst and all of us know full well that whether we are drawn into the deadly combat, or not, these billions have got to be paid back and must necessarily come from taxation and the people.

The days are dark, but this assurance we have, that ultimately the right will win out and the cause of righteousness will finally triumph. It may be after thousands and tens of thousands of men, women and children have been killed either in battle or from the results of battle, but the Prince of Peace did not live and preach and die in vain. If during these nineteen centuries we had been busy carrying out His will and command, these dark days would not have come and the world would have been saved this present and prospective holocaust. The faithful and true followers of our Lord will not give up, nor lose heart, because of these dark days, remembering, as we always must, that our Lord Christ Himself passed through His dark days and it is declared through revelation that "those who suffer with Him shall also reign with Him."

While our government is spending millions, even billions, for purposes of defense in war and destruction, the church, which is the body of Christ, cannot afford to relax its efforts and its offerings to give the gospel to those who either do not care for Him, or who do not know Him, whom to know aright is life eternal. Our missionary giving should increase rather than decrease in these dark days, knowing as all of us must know, that the kingdoms of this earth shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ. Craving the cooperation of all the faithful in our churches and Sunday schools in the divine and unselfish task of missions, and praying that these dark days may soon pass,

Sincerely,
J. O. ATKINSON.

TO THE WOMEN OF THE SOUTHERN CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

Dear Friends:
My mail this morning brought me a letter containing the first registration for our School of Missions to be held at Elon College, June 17-20. This letter came from the Berea, Nansmond, women and carried the registration fee for six of their women. How happy I am to pass this message on to you. Along with it came a letter requesting registrations for our Franklin women, saying they would have at least two cars to go. If you knew just how much I have carried this program on my heart and mind since last October, when I first really began to work on it, you could appreciate how I felt when these messages arrived.

Several of our leaders are busy working up groups in their districts and we just must have two hundred delegates in our college dormitory beside our day visitors. To do this, every church in the Eastern Virginia Conference must accept its share of the responsibility in getting its women there. We have prepared a real feast for you and we want you to come, one and all. You can't have a school without pupils, and we believe we have some fine teachers.

If the women in your church have not already planned, will you begin now to do so and have a splendid representation at Elon to open our school Monday evening, June 17, at 8 o'clock.

I am sending the entire program to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Please send your registrations to your District Superintendent who in turn sends them to Mrs. J. H. Lightbourne, who has charge of room assignments. Be sure to state with whom you wish to room if you have a preference. The registration fee is $1.00 only, and can be sent in with your request for assignment, or can be paid when you arrive at Elon. The entire charge is $4.50 for board and room, plus $1.00 for registration.

It is earnestly hoped that each church will see that some woman represents them at this our first great undertaking.

Hoping to greet you, I am
Very sincerely,
ELIZABETH HARRIS.

HITLER AND THE GERMAN PEOPLE ARE RESPONSIBLE.

The terrific and unprovoked assaults upon Belgium, Luxembourg and Holland and the unrestrained bombardment of civilians wherever it seems to serve their nefarious purposes, has made it plain that Hitler and the German people behind him will stop at nothing. It is time for those most reluctant to do so to stop excusing the German people. For the vast majority of the German people from the first have been behind Hitler. It is perhaps the strangest thing in all history that a people advanced in science and literature as Germany has been and the home of some of the world's greatest universities, cathedrals and art galleries, should revert to unrestricted savagery and ruthlessly attack any nation that stands in the way of their wicked designs. There is a war on all civilization. They would not spare the monuments of the past nor the treasures of the present, and worse than this they seem to delight to murder women and little children in order to shock the world with their methods of terrorism.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

YOUTH AND THE PROGRAM OF THE CHURCH.

heart of Christian youth with the missionary responsibility. As in an earlier day the Student Volunteer movement carried the missionary appeal to the young people in the colleges, so in our day, must a way be found to enshrine the mission cause in the heart of every Christian youth.

What we have been endeavoring to say is, that no organization or policy for the youth of our church can be adequate or satisfactory unless it recognizes our young people as responsible for and a part of everything which the church is seeking to do. Nothing less than that can be worthy of our young people; and nothing less can serve the cause of Christ and His Church.

What ought this Convention to be doing for and with our young people? There are Pilgrim Fellowships organized within each Conference of the Convention. They have done much to make both our young people and adults aware of the tremendous potential powers of our youth. These organizations have greatly inspired those young people whom they have reached and have brought them into a delightful fellowship. But I am sure leaders of Pilgrim Fellowships would be the first to admit that they have not gone far toward reaching all our young people, or definitely relating them to the program of our church.

The officers of these Fellowships are some of our finest young people. Is it not possible for this Convention to provide a way whereby these organizations may be made acquainted with the objectives of our total program? With the support of these leaders enlisted, it should be possible for them to take the entire program of the Convention to every local church and to every young person within our constituency.

DANIEL IN THE LION'S DEN.

Then the king was very sorry for what he had done, for he loved Daniel, and knew that no one could take his place in the kingdom. All day he tried in vain to find some way to save Daniel's life.

Very unwillingly he sent for Daniel, and gave an order that he should be thrown into the den of lions. He said to Daniel: "Perhaps your God, whom you serve so faithfully, will save you from the lions."

So Daniel was thrown into the lion's den. The king's seal was placed upon the stone at the mouth of the den so that no one might let Daniel out of the den.

That night the king could not eat or sleep for thinking about Daniel in the den. Very early in the morning he arose from his bed and went in haste to the den of lions. He broke the seal, took away the stone, and in a voice full of sorrow he called out, scarcely daring to hope for an answer:

"O Daniel, servant of the living God, has your God been able to save you from the lions?"

And out of the darkness in the den came the voice of Daniel, saying:

"O king, may you live forever! God has sent his angel and has shut the mouths of the lions. They have not hurt me, because my God saw that I had done no wrong. And I have done no wrong toward you, O king!"

The king was glad, and had Daniel taken from the den. Then the king commanded that the men who had spoken against Daniel, and with them their wives and their children (for the king was very angry with them) should be thrown into the den, and the lions soon tore them to pieces.

Then the king wrote to the people of his kingdoms: "May peace be given to you all abundantly! I make a law that everywhere among my kingdoms, men fear and worship the Lord God of Daniel; for he is the living God, above all other gods, who only can save men."

EASTERN VIRGINIA MINISTERS ELECT OFFICERS.

At the meeting of the Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association held in Suffolk, Va., on Monday of this week, the following officers were elected: President, Rev. T. Fred Wright of Waverly; Vice-President, Rev. George Olejar of Disputanta; Secretary, Rev. Herbert Council of Portsmouth; and Treasurer, Rev. B. H. Watkins of Wakefield. In addition to the election of officers, routine business of the Association was transacted.

If Japan conquers China, it will mean "the hamstringing of the foreign mission enterprise," in the opinion of the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Scott, missionary to China. WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA.

The young people in our churches in the Western North Carolina Conference are to have a meeting at Big Oak Christian Church, near Hemp, on Friday night, May 24, at 7:45. Our main emphasis for this program will be the Elon Leadership Training School. Rev. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro, Dean of the Summer School, will be the main speaker.

President.

NORTH CAROLINA CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

The forty-second annual convention of the North Carolina Christian Endeavor Union will be held at Elon College, June 13-16. The cost will be six dollars, which includes registration, room and board, and the special banquet on Saturday night. Your registration should be sent to Miss Ollie Stadler, 114 Holt Street, Burlington, N. C.

Among the guest speakers will be Rev. Charles St. John, superintendent of the Bowery Mission in New York City; Mr. Warren G. Hoopes, general secretary of the Pennsylvania Christian Endeavor Union; and Miss Mildred Haggard of Minneapolis, Minn., who is an expert in Junior work. Besides the regular departmental conferences, there will be groups studying: music and worship, winning others to Christ, my Bible and I, developing Christian Personality, financing, and society and union, spiritual development, and society and union publicity. Dr. Merton French, of the Elon College Department of Religion, will teach the Bible course. Rev. F. C. Lester will not be able to teach the course on Christian personality, as planned, because of a recent operation.

MEETING OF VALLEY YOUNG PEOPLE.

The Pilgrim Fellowship of the Valley of Virginia Conference met in a special session at Bethel Christian Church on Sunday, May 12. Walstein Snyder, president of the host society, gave a warm welcome, to which Norman Morris, of Mt. Olivet (G), responded.

Rev. P. B. Sanger, until recently of Connecticut, now pastor of Antioch, Linville, New Hope and Beulah Churches, was the principal speaker. His subject was "Christian Youth in Today's World." In his talk he said, "Ours is a changing world. Our problems today are different from those of our parents. We must discover new methods and ideas and apply them. The problems of today challenge the best that lies within us. We as young people must instill the Christian way of living into all of our affairs. We must endeavor to implant the spirit of Jesus in our lives and in the lives of those with whom we come in contact. The church has a very definite place in God's plan and young people must make a contribution if the spirit of Christ wins over the evil forces which prevail today." The address was certainly challenging, for it made us feel we all had a part in God's great plan.

Reports from the key workers showed progress in young people's work in our area.

Raymond Andes and Norman Morris were elected as delegates to represent our Conference at the National Council in California this summer. Goldie Dofflemyer volunteered to act as alternate.

There was a very pleasant social period, after which a picnic supper was enjoyed in the basement of the church.

The Mt. Olivet (G) young people presented a very impressive vesper service, the theme being "Our Honored Mothers."

We separated feeling that it was good to have had this special meeting. We were better acquainted, and we had found that our problems were mutual and that by united effort we will be better able to solve them.

"THE POSSIBLE YOU."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR JUNE 2, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: Isa. 40: 28-31;
I Cor. 1: 26-29.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Good Advice to Youth—Ecc. 12: 1, 13, 14.

Tuesday—A Youth With Possibilities—I Sam. 16: 11-13.

Wednesday—Wisdom Is Vital—Prov. 8: 10-17.

Thursday—Every Man, His Own Task—Rom. 12: 3-8.

Friday—Understanding God—Jer. 9: 23, 24.

Saturday—A Well-Trained Young Man—Acts 22: 1-3.

This is a fine time to think about and plan to attend summer camps and schools of leadership training. (Elon, June 24-29, is a good place to develop "The Possible You." Write: Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., for material.)

Build the devotional service around the theme: "The Christian I Want to Be." Use some devotional hymn; follow by silent prayer. Use hymn: "Break Thou the Bread of Life," two stanzas to follow each Scripture Lesson. Give each person an opportunity to make a statement on: "One quality of Christian character I would like to strengthen in my own life."

Topics for Short Talks—

1. A person tends to become what his aims are.

2. The value of cherishing worthy ideals and remaining true to them. From time to time one should test one's life by the ideal of a better self.

3. A person should choose his friends with care and should know how to resist degrading influences.

4. Young people should cultivate habits of prayer and worship which bring them in touch with divine resources.

5. The other you. A painter asked a famous man for the privilege of painting his portrait. The offer was refused with the explanation, "Which man in me do you want to paint? There is one man in me who is not worth painting, and the other one is not yet completed."

For Discussion—

1. What are some common ways by which young people catch visions of what they may become??

2. Through what means may our lives be enriched and improved?

JEREMIAH ANNOUNCES THE NEW COVENANT.

LESSON VIII—MAY 26, 1940.

LESSON: Jeremiah 31.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Luke 22: 14-20.

GOLDEN TEXT: I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people.—Jeremiah 31: 33.

Today's lesson from the prophecies of Jeremiah comes after the destruction of Jerusalem. In the opening verses of the chapter the prophet predicts the restoration of both Israel and Judah. The lesson as printed, however, is concerned with what Jeremiah calls the New Covenant. It marks quite an advance in the history of spiritual religion. In fact, Jeremiah in a sense might be called the discoverer of the individual in religion. It was he who more than any of the other religious leaders before him interpreted and presented religion as an individual, personal, and spiritual matter.

A New Covenant.

God had already made one covenant with his chosen people when he gave the law at Sinai. This law was external. It was concerned with outward acts, and although, of course, from the standpoint of God who dealt with the inner spirit, still even in Jesus' day righteousness was interpreted in terms of conformity to the letter of the law. The spirit of the law did not enter in as fully as it should have. But Jeremiah sees, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, the coming of the time when God is going to make a new covenant with his people, and that this covenant will be written not on tablets of stone but in the hearts of people. Righteousness will thus become the expression of a right inner spirit rather than mere conformity to an external law. Jehovah says, "I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it." Now all of this has a point for us today. There are still a great many people who think of religion in terms of mere creeds and ceremonies, in forms of worship, and in performance of religious duties. To be sure these can not be minimized, but they are not the primary factors in religion. Religion is a matter of spirit; it is a matter of personal ideals and attitudes, a matter of inner motives and inner compulsions. Its motivating force is not fear of consequence for wrong doing, but fear of sinning against the Divine Love. A true Christian obeys not simply because he must but because he wants to. In fact the growth in Christianity might be symbolized by this formula—God's will to know, God's will to do, God's will to love.

Our God—His People.

"And I will be their God, and they shall be my people." Here again we have evidence of the fact that religion is primarily a matter of personal relationship. It is not primarily a matter of being something, but of loving someone; it is not a matter primarily of what we believe, but of whom we trust. If religion is to mean anything we are to think of ourselves as God's people, even more than that, as God's children. And we are to think of God as being not only the God of humanity in general but as a loving Heavenly Father to each one of us.

Access to the Throne of Grace.

"And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah." In the days of the temple the people came to God through the priest. It was he who taught them, and it was through him that they had access to God. To be sure they could have had direct access to God then as now, but that was not the central concept in their religious thinking. Jeremiah foresaw the time, however, when men and women would come directly to God, would have free and open access unto him, and would know him at first hand experience. This is, of course, one of the great messages of the Christian faith. We have direct access unto God, our loving heavenly Father, through Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit.

The Importance of the Individual.

"... From the least of them unto the greatest of them..." Here is one of the many references in Jeremiah's writings to the importance of the individual. It is difficult for us with our ideas of individuality and the importance of the individual to realize how completely lost the individual was in the nation of Jeremiah's day. But in Jeremiah's prophecies we see another step in the unfolding spiritual history of the human race. Gradually the individual was emerging from the mass; he was taking on a dignity and a value because of his own intrinsic worth. Steps were being taken which led finally to the heart of the religious teachings of Jesus, that the individual is of supreme worth. And this is true of the least as well as of the greatest. The smallest child or the humblest, or poorest, or most ignorant man is precious in the sight of God.

Forgiveness of Sin.

"For I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more." God is a God of justice and of judgment. He is bound by his own holy character and by the moral laws of the universe to allow sin to bring upon people, individuals and nations its punishment and its judgment. But God freely forgives sin when his children sincerely repent of their sin. This forgiveness is no easy, superficial matter. In fact one does not really understand what it costs God to forgive sin until he sees Jesus on the cross. Here is solved the eternal dilemma between man's sin and God's love.

The Basis of Faith in This Covenant.

God probably realized that both Jeremiah and his fellow countrymen would find this good news hard to believe, would have some questions concerning this new covenant. Thus in one of the high points of his prophecy Jehovah speaks to the prophet and gives him the assurance that the stability of the universe which God has created is a guarantee of the firmness of God's covenant. "Jehovah of hosts is his name." The God who has created and who sustains, and who orders the vast universe, of which our little world is only a small part, is the one who has made his covenant with his people. And the immensity of this creation is a symbol of inexhaustibleness of the forgiving love of God. A finite mind can hardly fathom the infinite love and wisdom and grace of God. But in Jesus Christ we do see a revelation of the invisible God and see drawn out in living letters something of the mind, and will, and love, and character of God.

MONDAY.

THE DESTROYER CRITICISM.

"Be ye kind . . . forgiving one another even as Christ forgave you."—Eph. 4:32.

Our sermon (yesterday) was on kindness. Let us have another little sermon on that grace today.

One of life's greatest destroyers is unkind criticism. We seem never to get away from it. It may be in but a small way, just a word or a slant of the eye, but like termites it eats away the very structure of the soul.

We are told that Dwight Morrow once said, "I never judge a person until I discover what he would like to be as well as what he is."

As we grow older we are greatly thankful that we see further into the "would-be" of those whom we may think unworthy. "With what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged."

Prayer—Our Father, we believe in Christ and His way of thinking about folks. Grant us this day the truth of kindness as our watchword. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"WHEN LIVING IS SWEET."

"There is a spirit in man, and the breath of the Almighty giveth them understanding."—Job 32:8.

There is a path that leads to pure delight
Through fields where fragrant flowers bloom;

Where melodies bring rapture day and night,
And brutal discords quickly find their doom.

Along this way are found some breaking hearts,

Some souls adversity fills with despair,
But these are fountains poisoned by foul arts

That long to pour forth sweetness rich and rare.

If you spread kindness everywhere you go
You will soon know the joys of Paradise,
And mirth from these sad hearts will freely flow

Because love taught you how to sacrifice.
Unselfish serving makes it sweet to live,
And noble hearts want no alternative.

—William James Robinson in Kansas City Star.

Prayer—Our Father, how sweet are Thy words, and Thy goodness in man as it moves others to nobler living! Create within us and in mankind hungering and thirsting for everything that is divinely good. Then will heavenly melodies be sung by all. Make this day a day of heavenly melodies to us. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE LORD'S WOODPILE."

"Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the the law of Christ."—Gal. 6:2.

When the time is dragging
And you've nothing to do,
And your heart is sagging
And gladness seems through.

Just pin on a flower
And put on a smile
And go spend an hour
At the Lord's woodpile.

Go cheer a sick neighbor,
Go lead a blind lad,
Go shoulder their labor
And make the world glad.

Go answer some prayer
That heaven forgot;
Go share the world's cares
In palace or cot.

—Don Lemon.

Prayer—O Thou Leader of our souls, who said it is more blessed to give than to receive, grant to us this day the gift of seeking out those whom we may help along the way, and as we have opportunity help us to do good. In all things may the law of kindness be on our tongues. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"GOD'S DESIGN."

"Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind . . . etc."—Rom. 12:2.

Arthur S. Way translates this verse this way: "Do not conform to the eternalities of this world; nay, let your character be transformed by the birth of a new life-purpose, so that you may put God's design to the test of your own experience, and so prove how kind, how gladdening, and how flawless it is."

Prayer—O Lord, our Lord, how perfect is Thy way! Thou knowest the way that we take. Help us to make our thoughts today a day of prayer for Thy plain path. Teach us Thy way that we may walk in it, and so we commit our way to Thee this day. Amen.

FRIDAY.

GOD'S LIST OF SINS.

"The works of the flesh."—Gal. 5:19-21.

"Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness.

"Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies,

"Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

Prayer—Our Father, who art able to do unto us abundantly above all that we can ask or think, give unto us the discretion between Thy way and the way of evil. Separate us from evil, and baptize us with Thy Holy Spirit. In Christ's name. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"LET NOTHING BETWEEN."

"I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor heights, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."—Rom. 8:38, 39.

Nothing between my soul and the Saviour
So that His blessed face may be seen;
Nothing preventing the least of His favour,
Keep the way clear, let nothing between.

TEXT: Mark 8:15.

Jesus had no illusions about the subtle attempts of invasion into the minds of His disciples by both the Herodians and the Pharisees. There would be innuendoes about their lack of background. There would be sly remarks made to be overheard about their association with a Carpenter. Acquaintances would point to the colossal power of the Roman government, the mighty Sanhedrin at Jerusalem, and contrast it with their weak and poorly organized group.

Then, too, the disciples would be sure to observe how the cleverness of the Pharisees, which was none too ethical, secured for them better food than the average, finer clothes than the disciples, and especially places of preferment. Then the followers of Jesus would observe the worldliness of the Herodians, its comforts, its lack of the burdens of conscience, and no sleeping under the stars, or trudging lonely roads on thankless missions. And they would contrast all of this with the little which they had and of course they would think.

Our Lord was not blind to this situation. He would observe a wavering in the men from time to time. He would overhear bits of conversation that would show how discontent was creeping in. And so one day, out and out, He told them to beware of the leaven of Herod.

Jesus' method was to meet continually the bad with the better. He did call attention to dangers. There was no mistaking Him in such matters. Sin was sin. There were hypocrites about. There were shallow people—plenty of them—and their way of life did have an attractiveness about it that some parts of the hard life of a disciple of His did not have. There was the leaven of Herod—of the world—they had better beware of that. So He hung out a vividly colored sign to tell His men that that disease to which the Herodians had succumbed was exceedingly dangerous to the progress of the Kingdom of God.

What Jesus wanted His disciples to do was to think hard and long, to consider all angles, and then to determine whether present spectacular gain and privileges which the people of the world achieve were worth the sorrow, troubles, and problems which always follow. What the Master was asking was this: "Is not the long, hard way, My way, which will eventually bring light and happiness, better than methods which although certain to bring joy and light and momentary satisfaction to a few, also bring in their train the same old persistent evils for the many?"

Which brings us to the thought that there are still many influences and forces in our day which are at work, for the same reason and in the same ways as in Jesus' day, to continue the frustration of the coming Kingdom of God on earth. For example, one must beware of the leaven of that group which advocates the sale of liquor and the creating of more gambling resorts because that will give us more money for school expenses and for running the government. The schools do need more revenue. We should pay our teachers better salaries. We do need more adequate equipment for the pupils, both white and colored. There is much that is alluring, enticing, in such an appeal. But it is a leaven of which we must beware.

For with the influx of gambling and of liquor we cut at the very roots of society. We attempt to bless with one hand and strike with the other. We fill our jails, and strew our roadsides with wrecks, and dead, and must have more police and larger hospitals. We must increase our budgets for welfare work. I, for one, am tired of binding up wounds that need never have been. Beware of the leaven of the slick of the world! Miriam Teichner has written:

God—let me be aware.

Let me not stumble blindly down the ways,
Just getting somehow through the days,
Not even groping for another hand,
Not even wondering why it all was planned,
Eyes to the ground unseeking for the light,
Soul never aching for a wild-winged flight,
Please, keep me eager just to do my share.
God—let me be aware.

God—let me be aware.

Stab my soul with others' pain,
Let me walk seeing horror and stain
Let my hands, groping, find other hands.
Give me the heart that divines, understands.
Give me the courage, wounded, to fight.
Flood me with knowledge, drench me in the light.

Please, keep me eager just to do my share.
God—let me be aware.

Now Jesus was not only counselling caution against the influence of the world but He was constantly advising in many different ways that His followers make their influence likewise be felt. They, too, had a leaven. Jesus had said before: "The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened." And one feels the urge to place an exclamation mark after that quotation.

The Church of the Lord Jesus Christ still has a leaven for use. The leaven of the Galilean is still more potent than anything else in the world—if it is used! We must not demean the leaven of the Christian home, the Christian school teacher, the Christian business man, and substitute some other way of bringing in

THE QUIET HOUR.

Nothing between, like pride or station,

Self or friends shall not intervene.

Though it may cost me much tribulation,

I am resolved, let nothing between.

Prayer—O Lord, Thou art at all times separating sin from righteousness as sheep from goats, and we believe that we shall be chosen out in the great day to come. O Lord, who shall stand? None shall stand, save them whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life. We pray that we may live each day in a way that our names shall be there. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE CONCLUSION OF THE WEEK.

"What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound?

"God forbid. How shall we that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?

"Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lust thereof.

"Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God.

"For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace."

God's word teaches that victory over sin is possible; yea, it is even already provided.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, on this Thy Sabbath day we turn to Thee looking to victory over our selves, the world, the flesh, and the devil. Thine is the victory and the glory. Grant unto us the victory that at last swallows up sin and death. In Jesus' name, we ask it. Amen.

In Memoriam

HOLT.

On the seventh of March the death angel bore the gentle spirit of one of our most beloved members, Mrs. W. K. Holt, to her heavenly home. She gave of her time and means to the upbuilding of Christ's kingdom. She was a true friend and a devoted mother. We deeply mourn the loss of this friend and member, but being assured that she has entered into the joys of the blessed, we are humbly resigned to His will. We commend her example of faith and love for Christ's kingdom to all who knew and loved her.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we have lost a devoted member, the community a valued friend, and the family a devoted mother.
2. That we humbly bow to His will, knowing that He doeth all things well.
3. That we extend anew our sympathy to the family.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy placed on the records of the Burlington (N. C.) Woman's Missionary Society, and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

STROWD.

Matthew Marshall Strowd was born February 10, 1862, and died October 8, 1939, spending his entire life in Orange County, near Chapel Hill, N. C. Brother Strowd was married to Adella Hill Andrews, who survives, on December 23, 1885. To this union were born three sons, H. D., Manly Dwight (deceased), and Thomas; and four daughters, Mrs. James Wills, Mrs. A. L. Cheek, and Misses Annie and Leta—all of whom live in and near Chapel Hill. Surviving also are eleven grandchildren.

His church membership was first at Damascus Christian Church, but later he transferred it to Chapel Hill. He served long and well as deacon in each of these churches. "Live Right" was his personal motto, and his well-known exhortation to others. This finds lasting reflection in his Christian home and family, and in the universal respect and admiration of those who knew him. His consistency of creed and dauntlessness of faith were most impressive.

Funeral services were held at the home and interment was in the nearby family cemetery. The Rev. W. J. McKee and Rev. George Harward assisted the undersigned in the services. Grandsons of the deceased were active pall-bearers.

B. J. HOWARD.

GLASSCOCK.

Nathan Samuel Glasscock passed to his reward at his home near Virgilina, Va., on December 13, 1939, at the age of eighty-nine. He was twice married. The first marriage was to Miss Frances Shotwell. To them were born four children. He is survived by his second wife, who was Miss Hattie Averett. To them were born eleven children. There were ten living children, thirty-eight grandchildren and twenty-six great-grandchildren. The deceased was a member of Union Christian Church. He was a very industrious man, a good neighbor, and was blessed with a host of friends. The funeral was at his home and burial in the Averett Cemetery. A large number of friends were present to give evidence to their friendship for the deceased and to express sympathy to the sorrowing.

C. E. NEWMAN.

FELTS.

Betty Lee Felts, eleven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Felts, 321 Bank St., Suffolk, Va., died Wednesday, January 3, 1940, and funeral was conducted at the residence on the following Friday.

She is survived by her parents and two brothers, Everett and Morrison Felts. The sympathy of the community and friends is bestowed upon the bereft family, and may God bless them everyone.

the Kingdom. No other way will work. It is Jesus Christ's way or no way!

The spirit and way of Jesus Christ must continue to filter, and eventually flood into business, politics, homes, education, international relations, the churches! There is no other hope—I say it again. But if in place of the mind and spirit of the Master filtering into life, and saturating life, it is oozing out, being squeezed out, being drained off, then we are in a bad way indeed.

One does think of that wizened little man in India. Weak and frail physically, he has spread abroad and hidden in the hearts of millions in his native land a leaven which is working in such a manner that mighty England takes cognizance of him and his beliefs. There is a man in Russia, clad in a peasant's costume at times, with stolid countenance; he with others has spread abroad in his land a leaven which apparently has captured the imagination of millions, and caused the whole world to fear. There is an individual in Germany, once obscure, but he had a bit of leaven in which he believed. He made others believe in it. He has hidden it in the hearts of thousands of German youth. And now they will die for a bit of leaven. There is a big, burly fellow in Italy who likewise had some leaven. He told about it, preached it, made others believe his way. And now a nation, because of his leaven, is poised for war, that if it continues, may devastate the whole of Europe.

To counteract all of this there is only one resource. Men may think it is guns and the killing of more of the enemy's men. Some may think that bigger and better lies will do it. Some believe that people can be starved, or beaten, or tricked into being friendly. All of this is chasing a will o' the wisp. All of this is the leaven of Herod!

Once One went to a Cross for the way of love. There is a record that He was taken down from that cross, that He was buried, that He rose again, and lives with the Father in Heaven. I do believe the record. But sometimes I see Him still on the cross, not yet dead, but dying, for a world in sin and darkness. I say dying, because He loved so much, and believed so much, in His way of life. Now it is that way, regardless the outcome of the present black struggle, which will save the world. It is that leaven, not the leaven of Herod, that Christ's followers must preach, live, and place in the depths of every heart.

White Captain of my soul, lead on;

I follow thee, come dark or dawn.
Only vouchsafe three things I crave:
Where terror stalks, help me be brave!
Where righteous ones can scarce endure
The siren call, help me be pure!
Where vows grow dim, and men dare do
What once they scorned, help me be true.

—Robert Freeman.

To the Ministers of the Southern Convention

AN OPEN LETTER.

At the recent session of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, a Committee on Stewardship was created. I am persuaded such a committee was needed. The work of that committee during the present biennium is of the greatest importance to the success of the program before us.

If we are to have a successful program from the point of view of the Convention, we must have a successful program in the local churches. The problem your Committee on Stewardship faces is the problem of getting in touch with the pastors of our churches in such a manner, and with such urgency, as to create in them the sense of need which it is the purpose and mission of Stewardship to supply; and to aid them, in every way possible, in solving their problems of Stewardship and Finance, of which they are already aware.

Your committee wishes to place itself before you in the spirit of service. This committee is your servant in the field of Stewardship, and we are anxious to serve you and your churches in every possible way. We are, and shall continue to be, in constant communication with the Commission on Stewardship of The General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches. We receive the literature of the United Stewardship Council. Through these sources we hope to keep abreast of the literature published by all cooperating denominations. We have access to any publications of materials on Stewardship by the cooperating agencies and shall do our utmost to keep before you, through "The Christian Sun," all such literature. This access to Stewardship materials is by no means a virtue peculiar to your committee, but we shall use it and suggest it for your use in the most helpful ways possible.

The committee has not had the opportunity of meeting together as yet, but we hope to be able to have such a meeting during the approaching School of Leadership Training, at Elon College.

The problems of your Committee on Stewardship are the problems of YOUR local church, or churches. The problems of your church, by virtue of the responsibilities the committee must carry, become our problems. We are anxious to be of any help possible. If you have the problem of raising your budget for current expenses or benevolence, it is the duty of this committee to help you. If you feel that the membership of your church is not responding to the call of the church in accordance with their ability to help, it is our duty to help you arouse them to that duty and opportunity.

We dare to suggest some things which it is not too early to begin planning:

1. We believe every church in the Convention, small or large, city or rural, should plan their work along the lines suggested by the Convention and develop their programs around the idea of setting aside certain months in which to present the needs of our larger program. We believe the offerings for the orphanage, the retired ministers, the college, missions, etc., should be taken in the periods designated.

2. We strongly urge every church to prepare a budget and plan extensively for a Stewardship Institute and a thorough Every-Member Canvass. Our rural churches need this instruction as much as any city church. The method may have to be varied, but the principle is universal. Plans for this purpose should be under way NOW. If the plan is initiated far enough in advance, pastors can be of great help to each other in this particular phase.

3. We urge every pastor to preach a series of sermons, before the vacation season hits us, on Stewardship. The Stewardship of getting, keeping, spending, giving; the Stewardship of time, talents, responsibility and possibilities are subjects about which our people should be taught, and it is the business of the pastor to teach them. Preach on Tithing, and your finest material for such a sermon, or series of sermons, will come from your own experiences of practicing what you preach.

4. We urge you, as pastors, to call upon your committee for any help within our power to give. Letters have already come from pastors offering suggestions. These are most helpful and we hope to have the privilege of aiding every pastor in the Southern Convention. We don't know what your needs are unless you take the time to let us know about them.

We do not claim to be miracle workers, but we are certain of one thing. If the pastors of our churches will get into this matter of Stewardship, with all their hearts, the results will be miraculous indeed, for when we present the principles of Christian Stewardship to our people we can do it with the certainty of "Thus Saith the Lord!"

Brethren, use your Committee on Stewardship for the advancement of the cause of Christ and His Church.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MAY 30, 1940.

No. 22.

IT SINGETH LOW IN EVERY HEART.

It singeth low in every heart,
We hear it each and all—
A song of those who answer not,
However we may call.
They throng the silence of the breast,
We see them as of yore—
The kind, the brave, the true, the sweet,
Who walk with us no more.
'Tis hard to take the burden up,
When these have laid it down;
They brightened all the joy of life,
They softened every frown.
But, oh, 'tis good to think of them,
When we are troubled sore;
Thanks be to God that such have been,
Tho' they are here no more.
More home-like seems the vast unknown,
Since they have entered there;
To follow them were not so hard,
Wherever they may fare.
They cannot be where God is not,
On any sea or shore;
What 'er betides, thy love abides,
Our God, forever more.

—John Chadwick.

I CANNOT THINK OF THEM AS DEAD.

I cannot think of them as dead
Who walk with me no more;
Along the path of life I tread
They but have gone before.
The Father's house is mansioned fair
Beyond my vision dim;
All souls are his, and here or there
Are living unto Him.
And still their silent ministry
Within my heart hath place
As when on earth they walked with me
And met me face to face.
Their lives are made forever mine;
What they to me have been
Hath left henceforth its seal and sign
Engraven deep within.
Mine are they by an ownership
Nor time nor death can free;
For God hath giv'n to Love to keep Its own eternally.

—Frederick Hosmer.

PRAYER FOR THOSE WHO HAVE DEPARTED THIS LIFE.

Our Father, unto thee, in the light of our Savior's blessed life, we would lift our souls. We thank thee for that true light shining in our world with still increasing brightness. We thank thee for all who have walked therein, and especially for those near to us and dear, in whose lives we have seen this excellent glory and beauty. May we know that in the body and out of the body they are with thee, and that when these earthly days come to an end, it is not that our service of thee and of one another may cease but that it may begin anew. Make us glad in all who have faithfully loved; make us glad in all who have peacefully died. Lift us into light and love and purity and blessedness, and give us at last our portion with those who have trusted in thee, and sought, in small things as in great, in things temporal and things eternal, to do thy holy will. Amen.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Rev. J. D. Dollar has recently moved from West Point, Ga., to Langdale, Ala., where his church has bought a parsonage.

The Board of Publications and the Executive Board of the Southern Convention met at Elon College on Tuesday of this week, for the purpose of making plans for the coming biennium.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield has accepted a call to Old Zion Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., to be effective September 1. He tendered his resignation to his present churches, Windsor, Isle of Wight, Antioch, and Mt. Carmel, last Sunday.

Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, pastor of Damascus, Oak Grove, and Eure Christian Churches in Gates County, N. C., is attending the Oberlin College Commencement this week. His class is to have its forty-fifth reunion.

Rev. J. Calvin Felton of Irvington, N. J., a graduate of Elon College, was present for the Commencement season. His daughter, Margaret, is a talented student in the Elon School of Music, and was presented in recital on Sunday afternoon.

Rev. W. E. Wisseman, pastor of the First Congregational-Christian Church of Greensboro, N. C., preached the Baccalaureate Sermon for the graduating class of the Reidsville High School on last Sunday night. His topic was "The Disciplined Life."

Rev. F. Ervin Hyde, formerly pastor of our Sanford and Shallow Well Churches in the Eastern North Carolina Conference, is moving this week to West Milton, Ohio, where he is to be the pastor of the Christian Church. For the past year Mr. Hyde has been at Cortland, N. Y.

Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, pastor of the Durham Christian Church, brought $51.25 to THE CHRISTIAN SUN office recently in payment for subscriptions from his church. This was raised by three teams of women who went out after new and renewal subscriptions and succeeded in getting them.

Dr. H. Shelton Smith, alumnus of Elon College and of Yale, delivered the Commencement Sermon at Elon College on last Sunday. Dr. Smith, who is the head of the Department of Religious Education at Duke University, gave a splendid and carefully prepared sermon contrasting the way of Pilate and the way of Christ—then and now.

Rev. T. N. Lowe of Hopewell, Va., reports a very successful series of meetings during the past two weeks. Rev. R. Lee House preached the first week and Rev. Mr. Lowe conducted the services the second week. There were eight conversions and many reclamations. Three united with the church and others are expected to do so later.

Sat.—Benediction—Eph. 6: 21-24.

JOIN WITH US IN READING THE BIBLE

The Annual Memorial Services at Pleasant Grove (Va.) Christian Church, Rev. J. E. McCauley, pastor, will be held on next Sunday, June 2. The morning services will be held at the church, special music being furnished by the choir and the children. Dinner will be served on the grounds. The afternoon services will be held at the old Farmer Burying Grounds. The public is invited and former ministers and members will be especially welcome.

Rev. Duane Vore, a graduate of Elon College in the class of 1940, was ordained to the Christian ministry on Sunday night, May 26, at the Elon College Community Church. The committee ordaining him was composed of Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, Dr. D. J. Bowden, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, and Dr. L. E. Smith. Mr. Vore has been outstanding in college activities, being the president of the student body his senior year. He is the pastor of Graham Providence, Haw River and Long's Chapel Churches.

Much of the material for this issue, such as the litany on the back page and the poetry and prayer on the front page, is taken from the Pilgrim Hymnal. This book, published by our denomination, has a fine variety of helpful materials in it. If your church uses this hymnal, be sure that you take full advantage of the special services, litanies, prayers, and responsive readings therein. If you are considering buying a new hymnal for your church, do not fail to get a sample copy of our denomination's book before you select your new one. A sample copy may be borrowed from the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., for inspection purposes.

HAPPY HOME.

Not since their school days, certainly not since they had grown older, had some of the ladies of the Happy Home Missionary Society displayed their talent in the art of dramatics. Recently they presented a playlet, "Aunt Tillie Learns to Tithe." It is hoped that the message, convincing as it should have been, was conveyed to the audience.

On the third Sunday in May, as a special part of the service, our pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, ordained two newly elected deacons, Lonnie Richmond and William Ward. Recognition of the five other deacons was made by asking them to stand. He reminded us of the purpose of deacons, our duty toward them and theirs to us.

This was also our annual Memorial Day. A history of the church had been prepared by Miss Ruth Stephens and was read by her.

A few moments of meditation and a prayer led by Mr. R. W. Powell, chairman of the board of deacons, was devoted to the memory of Mr. W. W. Stephens, deceased deacon.

The sermon by the pastor was a very timely one, paying loyal tribute to the lives of departed loved ones; yet assuring us of the possibility of having peace and comfort in our hearts through all such sorrowings.

Plans are under way for a Bible School to begin on the afternoon of June 17, also the revival in the second week of July.

Rev. Mr. Andes asks that we make a written prayer list of a dozen or more whom we wish to see become Christians and that we pray every day for each of them. Since "prayer changes things" we feel that this will not be in vain.

Although the church is in fairly good shape financially, we are sorry

IN MEMORY.

The date of publication of this paper, May 30, is designated by the federal government as a day to be kept in memory of our soldier dead. This season of the year is held sacred by the churches as a time of memorial for their own departed loved ones. "The Christian Sun" is this week emphasizing memorials, particularly of our ministers and those whose memory has been recorded in the pages of this paper during the past year.

Memory is one of the best things God has given to a human being. In it can be stored those things which help us to live better from day to day. Out of it come ideas and ideals which develop into loyalties and enthusiasms. The memory of those who have gone on can give to us courage.

It is a fine thing to recall the faithfulness of soldiers who have given their lives for the honor of the country. Church people should certainly treasure the memory of ministers who as "Soldiers of the Cross" have given their lives to the Church of Christ. We must also remember those faithful ones who have stood in their places and have done their duty without honor or wide recognition, for in the army of the Lord everyone counts.

Memorial Day should mean for us not merely a day of flowers and sacred memories, but also a time of re-dedication to the high ideals of those who have given us both country and Christianity.

TO THE GRADUATE.

At the time of this writing about eighty young men and women are graduating from our own Elon College. Thousands of boys and girls are graduating from other colleges, and still more are receiving their diplomas from high schools. Among these multitudes are many of our Congregational and Christian Church young people. To those who chance to read these lines, the editor would like to say just a few words.

Congratulations on successful attainment. You have started on the road to culture, refinement, personal development and the wider fields of opportunity. Your family and friends and the state have joined with you and helped you to succeed thus far. In like manner, you will need through the years to come the cooperation of people known and unknown.

Stick to your ideals. This is a sad and sorry world in which you are to take your place. Tragedy stalks the earth. In the United States of America we are still free to do somewhat as we please, but how long this freedom will last nobody can guess. The world needs your idealism. It needs your enthusiasm. It needs your sparkling vitality. It needs your loyalty, if your loyalty is to the highest and best. The trouble with our world is that people have lost their ideals. They are living below their best. Read again the story of the Nazarene as recorded in the Gospels and try to discover the secret of living. In this way your generation can make a new world—a world in which there is freedom, and happiness, and peace.

ACROSS THE TRACKS.

In the beautiful auditorium of Elon College fine speakers deliver excellent messages, trained choirs sing inspiring music, young scholars graduate from college, and "old grads" renew friendships. It is springtime at Elon. The leaves on the trees have just reached maturity. The grass is green on the grounds, and flowers bloom with beauty and fragrance. It is a time when youth reaches maturity and flowers with a beauty far greater than that of the growing things. Parents rejoice with their children at Commencement, and graduates walk out into the world with high hope.

This writing is being done in a room across the railroad tracks. The writer is not a part of the gayety on the campus, and is not elated by the speeches and music of Commencement-time. Indeed, he does rejoice with those who rejoice and wishes for them all that they hope for themselves. Temporarily he is unable to share with them in their activities and regrets that is not with his classmates who assemble in reunion.

But this is not a lament. The writer is just thinking of those who always live "on the other side of the tracks" and are never included in the festivities, in the joys, in the graduations. Because of sickness, or social standards, or economic conditions, they are always condemned to be on the outside—perhaps just in sight but never a part of it. Church people sometimes forget that the Good Master sought out the lame and the blind and the sick, the poor, the forsaken, and preached to them the Glad Tidings. But the church does not always forget. It is constantly crossing the tracks with flowers and food and friendship and love and opportunity.

HAVE YOU GIVEN YET?

The American Red Cross is asking for ten million dollars with which to minister to suffering humanity in war-torn areas in Europe. It is reported that one hundred thousand Dutch soldiers were killed within the first few days of the war in their country. Nobody knows the number of refugees—widows and orphans, or wounded soldiers—in Holland, Belgium, and northern France. Those who are on the field give vivid descriptions of human torture.

Into this welter of death and destruction the American Red Cross is going with food, clothes, medicine, shelter and love. If you have not made a contribution, surely you will want to do so. If you have not given generously, please think of how you would feel if bombs had destroyed the city in which you live, and armies had overrun the countryside.

The war in Europe has made us forget temporarily what is happening in China, but multitudes of Chinese are in as desperate plight as are the people in Europe. Millions of people have been killed, and still more millions are wandering homeless and hungry. A dollar will save a life for a month there.

Now is the time for generous people to render service to suffering humanity.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The recognition of the service of Dr. J. U. Newman as a Professor in Elon College, for fifty years, meets the approval of many former students, and is a fitting tribute to that great teacher. The writer's acquaintance with this distinguished educator began at Antioch Christian Church, Isle of Wight County, Va., during the 1893 session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Sunday School Convention. Under one of the large oak trees in that church yard, we had an informal talk about the requirements and the possibility of entering Elon College, as a student, in the following September. His gentle approach, friendly spirit and courteous manner impressed a timid country boy who had never been more than forty miles from home. His clear steady eye seemed to be looking into the future to see what promise the boy might have of success as a student and minister.

It was our privilege to have classes in Greek, Chemistry and Geology under him while in Elon College. He has all the requisites of a typical college professor, according to the judgment of thoughtful students in that period. And he has merited that measurement until this present day. He was a careful student. He prepared himself for teaching a beginners class in Greek with as much care as he exercised in a recitation in the Senior class. This method was followed in every department where he served as teacher. He reviewed what he knew and sought diligently to discover any new point of interest and importance to his students. He was as humble as a bashful maiden and never sought to reveal his own superiority complex or embarrass the students by exposing their ignorance while on recitation. There was no attempt to display his knowledge in order to impress and over-awe a young student. He kept on hand, and at his command, reserves of knowledge—to be drawn on in emergency. But he did not raise the curtain or unlock the door, on the first day of the college term, to reveal these stores of knowledge.

His work has been outstanding in his impression on the lives of ministerial students. His discriminating mind, his spiritual insight, his mental poise, his wise counsel and stimulating methods created a rare atmosphere for the development of ministerial talents. Every normal class of college students will have some members who are not always prepared when the hour comes for the recitation period. Occasionally one of these "diplomats," in our day, asked Dr. Newman a question with the avowed purpose of starting an "episode"—which took the form of a "lecture" on some topic not directly related to the lesson for the day. These "class lectures" were not written down in the professor's note book—and no grades were given. But they were classic gems—and were really more valuable than the lesson. They served the purpose of the student who promoted them at the time—and they frequently revealed the rich wealth of information of the Professor and his keen interest in his students.

The writer has the honor of being pastor of Oakland Christian Church in Nansemond County, Va., where Dr. Newman held his membership when he left home to enter school. If the church had done nothing more than touch the lives of the Newman family distinguished for their culture, character and contribution to the kingdom of God, it would justify its record and history. And this large country church joins in extending congratulations to Dr. J. U. Newman on reaching his fiftieth year of service on the faculty of Elon College. The pastor acknowledges, with a grateful heart, the high privilege of having been a student of this great teacher.

I. W. JOHNSON.

A LONG TIME AGO.

When this is being written Elon College is in the midst of the celebration of her Fiftieth Anniversary, the college having been opened for students in September, 1890, and in the present term now closing ends the fiftieth scholastic term of our college. We have come a long way since the opening in September, 1890, and those early days now seem like a dream of the long ago.

This writer graduated from Wake Forest College in June, 1890, and recalls the fact that the class of 1890 in which he graduated numbered twenty-five, this being the largest class that that institution had graduated in any one year up to that time. Wake Forest is now in its 106th year of existence and has graduating classes each year numbering several hundred. Our own Elon beginning in 1890 has steadily risen from three in 1891 to seventy in 1940. The writer was not a member of the Baptist Church, but of the Christian Church while attending Wake Forest and went to that institution because we had none of our own. The writer, however, received every courtesy and favor that the institution could grant just the same as if he had been a Baptist. This we have always appreciated.

A friend and classmate who entered the year I did and graduated the year I did, and who like the writer had to save every penny possible and borrow money to pay board and get indulgence of the college on tuition until he could graduate, was the late lamented ex-Governor T. W. Bickett. Bickett was a man of a great heart as well as a good man and was frequently accused while Governor of pardoning some who should not have been pardoned and of saving quite a few from the death chamber. The Governor told the writer that he knew he was criticized over the State, but that he had rather err on the side of mercy a dozen times than to be heartless and cruel even one time.

"The Wake Forest Alumni News" for May, 1940, carried the following amusing, but true story—Dr. G. W. Paschal being the historian for Wake Forest and looking around for items of interest:

From Dr. G. W. Paschal we have received portions of a recent letter from Rev. James O. Atkinson, Secretary, The Mission Board, Inc., Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, Elon College. We quote:

"I shall ever be grateful that Wake Forest gave me a chance and I have loved the dear old place ever since. Tom Bickett entered Wake Forest at the same time that I did and he and I were friends throughout the four years of our stay at Wake Forest. While Bickett was Governor of North Carolina he came to Elon College to deliver the Commencement address and then over to my house for a visit before leaving for Raleigh. My little boy, J. O., Jr., went with us to the train that Bickett was to take for Raleigh, and the people were all anxious to shake hands with the Governor as I introduced him to them. Walking back to my house after Bickett was gone my little boy looked up and said, 'Daddy, as you were a school-mate of the Governor why didn't you go in politics and try to be somebody yourself?' I had a hard time explaining to the little fellow that I felt impressed to enter the ministry. The last conversation I ever had with Bickett was in a hotel in Norfolk where we chanced to meet. He was then ex-Governor and was practicing law. I told him what my boy had said and his reply was, 'Please tell that boy for me that you chose the better part and that he need not be surprised any day to find in the morning paper that Bickett, ex-Governor, had entered the ministry and had gone to the mountains and the out-of-way districts in North Carolina to preach the gospel.' It was only a short time after that that our good and great ex-Governor passed away.

"Wake Forest is indeed a great institution and has made a wonderful contribution to the State and the nation."

My excuse for publishing the above, if any excuse is needed, is to show that the church related college makes a contribution to the State and to the nation that no State institution can make. Only in a religious atmosphere and under religious instruction is the student able to choose the best for himself in life and to pursue the best. The guarantee of any nation is its religious freedom, "For in that light do we see light."

A few years ago this writer was called back to Wake Forest to deliver the Alumni Address, in which address to the graduating class, faculty and students, he recalls taking the position that only in the light of religion and righteousness as set forth in the words of our Lord could one choose for himself the best career. Imagine his surprise and gratification when the next morning, after the address, the President of the college told the writer that some students had set up all night discussing the address, these students being a group of seniors who had been deploring the fact that they had attended a church college, since they had in mind the study of the law and they had been feeling as they graduated that they had made a mistake in choosing their institution. All of which means that the real founder and preserver of true democracy was Lord Christ, who prized the individual above all else, teaching that the soul, or life, of one man was of more worth than the whole world: "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his soul." "He that would be greatest among you let him be servant of all." The world is changing, but there are some things that abide eternally. Luke 16:17 quotes the words of Christ, "The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man passeth into it. And it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle of the law to fail."

God's blessings on our own Elon College which has made a contribution to the State and nation that no other institution could make.

DR. SWEET WELL AGAIN.

After more than five months in the hospital, Rev. Milo J. Sweet returned to his pulpit at Union Congregational Church, Chattanooga, Tenn., on Sunday, May 19. On the bulletin for that Sunday under the heading of "Our Pastor's Thanksgiving," he says, "How can I ever express my gratitude to the many, many organizations so generously during my confinement in the hospital: First of all, my church—its loyalty, its love, its power to carry on, its faithfulness to our Lord, and its vital interest in all the life of the community. . . . Today I am renewing my efforts with an intense desire to make our work more effective and helpful than ever before. In this I most earnestly seek a very genuine consecration and devotion of every member and friend. To that end let us all consecrate ourselves to prayer and to our Sunday services. By the blessing of God, such loyalty will bring not only success, but a greater satisfaction to everyone."

Final Word to the 1940 Graduating Class of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH.

Years ago there came sweeping through the heart of Georgia a terrific cyclone. Trees were uprooted, barns were unroofed, and houses were blown to smithereens. A beautiful old colonial mansion that had been standing for more than one hundred years was standing right in the path of that terrific storm. It had stood as a landmark for that community and every passerby for many years. It had been in one family since its founding. Within its walls there had been peace and prosperity, joy and sorrow, love and affection, happiness and children, sickness, sorrow, and death. All the fortunes and misfortunes of life had swept across its threshold, but it had withstood all until this day. The storm was too much; the test was too great. That stately old building came toppling to the ground. It was a complete wreck. In a few days architects, carpenters and builders were there with timbers and tools ready to rebuild that stately old dwelling and to rebuild it more substantially and more beautifully if possible.

This is a beautiful world in which we live. It is our Father's world. It is the training field for world's heavenly and eternal. It is meant for enrichment and development.

Members of the graduating class of 1940, when your fathers and mothers were born, they were born into a world that was at peace, a world dedicated to peace and hoping for prosperity. When you were born, you were born into a world struggling to save itself from the backwash of the World War, a war that was fought to end war and create a world in which the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man would be recognized by all peoples, and peace and good will be the precious possessions of all nations,

But these apparently were only ideals and vain hopes. Today as you graduate from this institution, another war more terrible and more destructive than any that man has known is sweeping through the world with terrific and amazing speed, leaving death and destruction in its wake. Already nations and governments that have never desired war, never prepared for war, but have lived for peace, desired peace, and have sought peace and pursued it for a thousand years have been laid waste by the powerful war machines and are today in ruins, and the end is not yet.

Today as you leave this campus, you go out into a broken world, a world with broken purposes, broken homes, and broken hearts. Tomorrow you will stand in the midst of this broken world. It is your responsibility to rebuild. Yours is a tremendous task. Your success depends upon your architect, materials and tools. One is your Architect, even God. Your materials are love, sympathy, kindness, forgiveness; your tools are faith, confidence, hope, and trust.

For four brief years we have endeavored to assist in equipping you for this task of rebuilding. We have tried to give you an appreciation of the task before you, to acquaint you with the necessary materials, and to place the proper tools in your hands. All of our efforts have fallen short unless we have brought you to the great Architect, even God Himself.

Yours is an historic class, the Golden Anniversary class, closing the first half century of Alma Mater's service of instruction and guidance. As we, trustees, faculty, church, friends, and alumni, have been with you during your college days, so we will be with you in the fortunes and misfortunes of life, even unto the end.

NEWS FROM LEAKSVILLE.

The Page District Missionary Rally was held at Leaksville Church (near Luray, Va.), with Miss Amy Louderback presiding. Mrs. Rachel Miller led the devotional, which consisted of instrumental music, a scripture reading and a poem, a duet by Mr. and Mrs. B. F. McDaniel, prayer by Rev. R. E. Newton, poem by Keyser Rothgeb, and hymn. At the roll call of the churches there were three represented out of the six belonging to the district. Bethel had fifteen present, Newport four, and Leaksville seventeen. The officers were elected as follows: Superintendent, Miss Amy Louderback; Assistant Superintendent, Mrs. E. Lena Rothgeb; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Hazel Davis; Assistant Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. Irene Monger. Each church represented gave a report of the work of their missionary society. A duet was sung by two young ladies from the Bethel Church. A fine missionary reading was given by Mrs. C. W. Louderback. A splendid reading on women's work was given by Mr. C. W. Louderback, and a good missionary address by Bro. Newton. G. W. Rothgeb of Luray dismissed the congregation with a short prayer.

MISS HELEN FRANCES SMITH.

Miss Smith, who will teach the Home Mission study, "Shifting Populations in America," at the Elon Summer School of Missions, June 17-20, comes to us from the Board of Home Missions of the Congregational and Christian Churches in New York City. In order that she may have first-hand information concerning her work, she has traveled extensively in all portions of the country, largely in her own automobile. She is the Information Secretary of the Board of Home Missions and has been a board secretary since 1928. Her home is in White Plains, New York..

Our Homecoming and Memorial Services are to be held the first Sunday in June. Our Sunday school is going along nicely under the supervision of R. O. Rothgeb.

REPORTER.

DR. CHARLES ELDRED SHELTON.

Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton, pastor of the Shelton Congregational Church in Portsmouth, Va., for seventeen years before his retirement in 1937, died in Pittsburg, Pa., on May 13. He would have been eighty-two years old in June. Burial was at Indianola, Iowa. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Fannie R. Shelton; one son, Dr. Whitford H. Shelton, professor of modern language at the University of Pittsburgh; two grandsons, one granddaughter, and a great-granddaughter.

Dr. Shelton was superintendent of public schools in Burlington, Iowa, for several years and was president of Simpson College in Indianola for more than twelve years. He left the latter position to enter the ministry. While in Portsmouth, he took an active part in all local civic, church, and school activities. After his retirement as pastor of the First Congregational Church in Portsmouth, the congregation voted to change the name to Shelton Congregational Church in honor of this splendid minister who had so faithfully served them.

Our ministers in the Eastern Virginia Conference enjoyed their friendship with Dr. Shelton after the merger of Congregational and Christian Churches. Many will remember him as a scholar and Christian gentleman, whose keen mind and Christian spirit made them delighted to know him.

REV. ELISHA BRADSHAW.

The picture of Rev. Elisha Bradshaw is missing from the group of memorial pictures on the center pages of this issue. It was intended to use the picture of each of our ministers who had died during the past year. However, no picture could be secured of Mr. Bradshaw from which a cut could be made.

Mr. Bradshaw was born October 20, 1877, in Isle of Wight County, Va. On October 2, 1904, he married Miss Blanche Rose. This union was blessed with two girls and four boys. On November 16, 1921, Mr. Bradshaw was licensed to preach the Gospel, the Elon College Community Church authorizing the licensure. In November, 1922, he was ordained to the Christian ministry in the Holland Christian Church. Mr. Bradshaw attended Elon College in 1921. That summer he attended the Moody Bible Institute. He served as pastor of Elm Avenue Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., for one year and as pastor of our mission work in Carroll County, Va., for one year. In 1923 he moved to Walters, Va., where he

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

This week I have been visiting an older sister. When I was a very small tot, this sister, Katherine, used to bathe me, dress me, comb my hair, tell me stories, make me doll clothes and take me for walks in the woods. I love her very much and it is such a joy to get to be with her again.

Katherine's home is in the foothills of the Clinch Mountains. Her house nestles on the side of a hill and below in the valley is a grassy meadow with a cool, clear brook babbling along its stony bed. It is cool and quiet here. Birds of brilliant color sing to us all the day long. Just now I heard a dove, a bob-white or quail, and a red bird. At night the whipporwills "whip" their song in great chorus. But best of all I like the sweet calls of the wood thrushes. Each morning they wake me with their singing from the woods above the house.

Katherine has two sons. Lewis is a junior in high school and Jackie is in the third grade. Yesterday afternoon when Jackie came home from school I showed him several numbers of the "Children's Page" and taught him how to work our crossword puzzles. He liked them so much that we finished solving all of the unsolved ones I had before going to bed. Jackie knows a lot about the people and stories of the Bible, so he was able to figure out the words from the Bible rather easily. His father gave him a Bible A B C Book for Christmas and he has learned much about the Bible from it. When I was a little girl I learned my A B C's from such a book.

Jackie, his brother, father and mother go to Sunday school and church at a little chapel which is only a few yards beyond the house. I went up there at a choir practice Sunday night. It is a lovely country church

SEASONAL VERSES.

Jesus loves me, this I know
For the "Sunshine" tells me so;
Tells me as it gives its light
Making all the world so bright.

Jesus loves me, this I know,
For the "Raindrops" tell me so;
Tell me as they gently fall
On the trees and flowers and all.

Jesus loves me, this I know,
For the "Flowers" tell me so;
Tell me as they smell so sweet
Blooming all around our feet.

Jesus loves me, this I know,
For the "Birds" tell me so;
Tell me by their merry song,
Singing now the whole day long.

DONALD LEARNS ABOUT RULES.

Donald was a very little boy so little that he had to stand on a chair to reach the candy jar. Mother did not think that candy was very good for Donald between meals, so one day when she saw him climbing up on the chair she said:

"Donald, we shall need to have a rule about this candy. You may have two pieces after lunch and two pieces after dinner, but no more. I know that you do not want to be sick."

For several days Donald remembered the rule and climbed up on the chair only twice each day. "Two pieces after lunch," he said, "and two pieces after dinner. That is the rule."

But one day Donald disobeyed. "I don't like rules," he said to himself. He ate another piece, and another. and another, and another. No one knows just how many pieces he ate, but by and by a very sick little boy was lying on the couch. He was a sorry little boy, too, for he had disobeyed his mother.

When Donald's mother came into the room, he told her all about it. After she had given him some medicine and he was feeling better, mother talked to him about rules. She told him that God has rules for the birds. and flowers, and rules for the sun and moon and the stars.

"Does he have rules for all his animals, too?" asked Donald.

"Yes," said mother, "for all the animals and for all the people. And because fathers and mothers have lived a longer time than children and so have found out more about God's rules, the Bible says, 'Children, obey your parents.'"

"I'll do it," said Donald.

"And God will be pleased and happy," said mother.—S. S. Leaflet.

DEATH IS A DOOR.

Death is only an old door
Set in a garden wall;
On gentle hinges it gives, at dusk
When the thrushes call.
Along the lintel are green leaves,
Beyond the light lies still;
Very willing and weary feet
Go over that sill.
There is nothing to trouble any heart;
Nothing to hurt at all.
Death is only a quiet door

YOUTH IN THE WORLD-WIDE FELLOWSHIP.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

JUNE 9, 1940.

SCRIPTURE: Roman 1: 8-16.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Youth in Preparation—II Kings 6: 1-4.

Tuesday—A Peaceful Alliance—I Kings 5: 7-12.

Wednesday—First Missionaries to Jews—Matt. 10: 1-8.

Thursday—First Missionaries to Gentiles—Luke 10: 1-9.

Friday—Gentiles Receive the Gospel—Acts 13: 44-49.

Saturday—Fellowship in Grace—I Cor. 1: 4-9.

We shall have a series of three topics on the general theme: "Looking at Youth Around the World." This topic is a very timely one dealing with the world-wide fellowship of Christian youth. The next topic will be on "American Youth" and the third will deal with the "Youth of Our Denomination."

Let some experienced person speak on the World Conference of Christian Youth, held last summer at Amsterdam, The Netherlands. Accounts of the Conference have appeared in religious periodicals, and special literature concerning it may be obtained from the office of Promotional Secretary, Elon College. (See the Christian Endeavor World.)

Now it is more important than ever before that young people be banded together in world-wide fellowship in the interest of peace, of church unity, of missions, and of justice..

For Short Talks—

1. What is ecumenism? Is it easy to accomplish?

2. Young people are much the same around the world. They are eager to learn, seek enriching friendships, love to play, have similar appreciations of music and art, and they desire to know God in reality.

3. When we think of the youth in all the world as seeking the same values that we do, can we tolerate hate, prejudice, and war?

4. If Jesus is conqueror in our lives, we should aid him to be victor in this world of strife.

For Discussion—

1. What can young people do to keep alive the international aspects of Christianity:?

2. What attitude should German Christians hold toward French and British Christians, and vice versa?

Suggested Hymns—

"Lord, Speak to Me, That I May Speak."

"In Christ There Is No East or West."

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

TESTING CONDUCT BY ITS USEFULNESS.

(A Principle of Temperate Living.)

LESSON IX—JUNE 2, 1940.

LESSON: Ezk. 15: 1-6; Matt. 5: 13-16; 7: 16-20; I Cor. 10: 6, 7.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Mark 11: 12-14.

GOLDEN TEXT: By their fruits ye shall know them.—Matthew 7: 16.

The lesson today deals with practical things concerning character and conduct. It is the lesson in temperate living. It is made up of selections of Scripture taken from both the Old and the New Testaments. It includes words from Ezekiel, from Jesus, and from Paul. Reduced to simple terms, all of these inspired men emphasized the stupidity of sin. In essence sin is folly, sin is stupid. If we were both all-wise and able to do as we know we ought to do, we would not sin in such foolish ways.

Uselessness Though Useful.

In a striking paragraph Ezekiel characterizes the people of his day by an analogy to a vine. A vine is a very useful thing when it is used for its proper purpose; namely, fruit bearing. But it is not very good for wood, either for fuel or for making household furnishings. Ezekiel says that if a man was going into the woods to look for wood he would not select a vine. Like that vine-tree are the people of Jerusalem—fit only to be cast into the fire for fuel.

Salt of the Earth.

"Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt has lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out and trodden under foot of men." In these few words Jesus describes the function of his disciples. Salt is a seasoning, savoring, saving element. In like manner Christians are to be a seasoning, saving influence in the world. They are to keep it from going to corruption. They are to give tone to every area of life with which they come in contact. They are to purify it and make it wholesome and clean. Alas for the man or woman who as a disciple of Christ has lost his or her zeal and spiritual fervor and passion. Back-sliding or half-hearted Christians are not much good; in fact, they are a real harm to the Kingdom of God.

Light of the World.

"Ye are the light of the world. . . . Even so let your light shine before men; that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven." Light reveals, light cheers, light cleanses and heals, light guides, light gives life. Indeed it can be said with all truth that ultimately where there is no light there is no life. When Jesus said that his followers were to be the light of the world, he meant that they were to bring cheer into dark places, that they were to cleanse and to heal, that they were to guide, that they were to give life. And this light was to come from Him who was the light of the world. Lights are meant to give light, and HEAVEN.

No night is there!
Though here the night comes dank and chill
And shadows every corner fill,
The deathless morning comes at last
When all of time for me is past,
No night is there!

No pain is there!
Though here pains wrench this mortal frame
And men are sick and weak and lame,
In that fair land awaiting me
I shall from ills and pains be free,
No pain is there!

No tears are there!
Though here we miss the loved ones dear
And lonely are and often fear,
In heaven, our home, we'll meet them all
And answer once again their call,
No tears are there!

Our Christ is there!
He'll come and take us to himself,
And give to us for this world's pelf
A mansion made by his dear hand
And with us dwell in that fair land,
Yes, Christ is there!

—Clarence A. Vincent.

they are no good unless they shine. Here again Jesus says that we are to let our light shine, but we are to let it shine not for our own glory, but that men seeing our good works may glorify our Father who is in heaven.

Known By Their Fruits.

Jesus put a great deal of emphasis upon the fruitfulness of life. He said that it was by their fruits that men were to be known. In a homely way He illustrated this truth by saying that man would hardly go to a thorn bush to gather grapes, or to thistles to look for figs. In like manner one can hardly expect good fruit to issue from a heart that is evil. One can not have unclean and selfish, vindictive and narrow thoughts and expect his life to flower forth in kindness, in purity, and in loving service. Jesus said that rootage was the key to fruitage. "Every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but the corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit." To be sure a man can, to some extent, lead a dual life; he can do good works after a fashion and window-dress his life in such a way that for the time being he may deceive others; but the principle still holds good—out of the heart are the issues of life. Only a right life within can guarantee right conduct without. "Therefore by their fruits ye shall know them." Augustine put it in another way when he said "Love God, and do as you please." "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life."

Our Examples.

In his letter to the Corinthians Paul writes, "Now these things were our examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted." He had been writing to the Corinthians about some of the foolish practices, the careless living, and the idolatrous attitude of the people of Israel in an early day. In these things and in the things which happened to the Israelites, he saw a picture of the foolishness and the folly of sin. They were written for our examples; they were not simply abstract principles put down in a book; they were actual experiences written in human life. The tragedy of life is that on every hand we see the results of intemperate and ungodly living, and yet we do not benefit thereby. No man need to make a mistake or be led astray if only he would see in human life the folly, the futility, and the inevitable results of sin.

The Old and the New Idolatry.

"Neither be ye idolators, as were some of them; as it is written, The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play." That was the idolatry of olden times. Life was interpreted in terms of physical satisfactions and pleasures. Eating and drinking and playing made up the round of activities for a great many people, much thought for the things of the body but little or no thought for the things of the spirit. It is also the new idolatry. There is a great host of people in our modern world who are so much interested in ministering to the physical satisfactions, and the current pleasures of life that they give little heed to the things of the spirit. A great many people in America today are simply semi-refined pagans. Their philosophy of life expressed, or unexpressed, is "Let us eat, drink, and be merry." And, as in the case of olden times, God gives them the desires of their hearts, and sends leanness unto their souls.

FINE "B'S."

"They which be of faith are blessed."—Gal. 3:9.

BE KIND (Eph. 4:32)—"The fault that looms so large in some one else may not be yours, but to your charge may lie one worse."

BE MERCIFUL (Rom. 12)—"It is better far to overpraise, than thoughtlessly some soul to mar with sharp reproach."

BE CAREFUL (Titus 3:8)—"Unwise speech will wing both fast and far to unsuspected realms and sting with hurtful wound."

BE FAIR (Phil. 4:8)—"Your judgment does not close the whole account. Another finds high praise for those you criticize."

In fine the love that searches long
Some good to note,
And helps to fill the world with song,
Is like the rose.

'Tis true that on one bush there grow
Both rose and thorn;
Yet, in life's garden, kind hearts know
A thornless rose.

Prayer—(Let one of the family lead as the spirit leads).

TUESDAY.

THE FAITHFUL FEW.

"I thank Christ that he counted me faithful."—I Tim. 1:12.

When the meeting's called to order
And you look around the room
You're sure to see some faces
That from out the shadows loom,
They are always at the meeting
And they'll stay until it's through;
The ones that I would mention
Are the always faithful few.

They fill the many offices,
And are always on the spot,
No matter what the weather,
Though it may be awful hot.
It may be dark and rainy,
But they are tried and true.
The ones that you rely on
Are the always faithful few.

There are lots of worthy members
Who will come when in the mood,

When everything's convenient
They can do a little good.
They're a factor in the meeting
And are necessary, too,
But the ones who never fail us
Are the always faithful few.

Prayer—O Lord, be there so few who are faithful. We would be faithful to Thee this day, and all days through life that we may advance Thy kingdom on earth and swell the chorus of the "Well done good and faithful" in heaven. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

A PRESENCE AND A DUTY.

"He sat on the right hand of God, and they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them."—Mark 16:19,20.

An apostolic grand vision, grand presence and grand inspiration. Jesus, though on the throne of glory, seems close to us in His perfect humanity. That Presence is with us the same loving, patient, forgiving heart that he showed in Galilee. He is our Savior today.

Prayer—To Thee, O Lord, we join with the angels in singing "Holy, Holy, Holy." Amen.

THURSDAY.

MORO ROCK.

"Be still and know that I am God."—Psalm 46:10.

We are visiting Sequoia and Grant Parks in the high Sierras of California. Disobeying the doctor's orders to "stop climbing mountains," my lady and I have climbed a small steep mountain rock, 6,700 feet high. Moro is its name.

"Moro" is the Spanish word for "roan." The legend accounting for the name is that in early days of this country an old roan horse grazed around the base of this mountain rock, so they said "Moro."

Magnificent peaks surround us. In the east they stand out clear against the sky. The sun is setting in the golden west. One is dumb in this presence. In the silence of it all something says "God," and we worship Him the Creator, Sustainer, and Lover of us all.

Perhaps you have not the magnificence of the mountains for your inspiration. Maybe you have the fields of growing grain, or the forests, or the flowers of a garden, be it ever so small. If you are deprived of these things, try to arrange for a trip or a vacation and look for them and of them drink into your soul—God.

Prayer—Our Father, whether inspired by scenery or not, give us a daily bread of Thy witnesses, that we may know Thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

EASY, IS IT?

"Whatsoever he sayeth unto you, do it."—John 2:5.

"To live the Christian life consistently does not require perfection. We strive toward the goal. Also, we should remember that we do not keep Christ; but that He keeps us. Many people make the mistake of listening to what others say, when in facing these questions and their problems, they should listen to Him alone. 'Whatsoever He sayeth unto thee, do it.'"—Daniel Poling.

It is not easy to live a Christian surrounded by cheating, intolerance, and evils of every sort, yet, it is achieved by living it one day at the time and taking Jesus Christ along with us.

Prayer—Our Father, we would begin this day with Thee. In spite of all that the day may bring forth, may we find Thee close by our side. Amen.

SATURDAY.

TAKE COURAGE.

WHAT SHALL I DO WITH MY LIFE?

TEXT: "It is more blessed to give than to receive."—Acts 20:35.

[The following Baccalaureate Sermon was delivered to the mid-year graduating class of the Newport News High School. We bring it to you at this Commencement Season.—Editor.]

Life is almost a perpetual question. As fast as we settle one, another arises; and the more they come, the harder the answers.

I imagine that for some of you whom we honor tonight one question of your high school career was, "Shall I quit school and find a job, or shall I continue in school?" It seems a silly question now, but at one time it was a big question in your mind. You are now faced with an even bigger question as you are about to realize the great ambition of your graduation. It is the question of whether you are to continue your preparation beyond high school, or seek to find a place for the investment of your life in some business, or, more likely at your stage of preparation, a job. I hope that this question is receiving its full share of your thoughts in these closing days of your studies in high school.

The question of what college you choose is a great question, and I warn you to be careful in your choice. If you are among those who know already what vocation you will seek to fill, the question will be easier to answer. Now I am not even imagining that all of you will go to college, and I would not recommend that you do. Your ideals and ambitions will very largely answer that question.

I would like to suggest two things that you may do with your life: You may spend your life or you may invest it. Now let it be agreed from this night on, that whatever you do will be as evidence that you have given your answer.

If it is your desire to spend your life, it will become your aim to see how much you can get out of it. Strange miseries come to those who look upon life as something to be spent. Life is your inheritance, and it matters very little how much you inherit in stocks and bonds and houses and lands. Such inheritances will only enhance the possibilities of evil as you go out to spend ruthlessly that which is precious in the sight of God.

Life in its beauty of character and its divine possibilities is the only real thing there is in the world. With the gifts of life there comes the rich endowment of character, but for the person whose aim in life is to spend it, we may expect that his character will be wasted along with his time, his talents and possibilities for good. Once you lose your character you become a derelict on the sea of life, and every life is endangered by your presence in society. The moment you decide to spend your life you become a parasite on society.

It is to those who will choose to give the harder answer that I wish to speak; to you whose answer will be "I will invest my life." All power to you who thus answer the great question. Your aim will not be to see how much you can take out of life, but how fully you can invest your life to make your finest contribution toward solving the problems that baffle us and oppress us; problems which must be solved before we can realize our fondest dreams and achieve our highest hopes for mankind everywhere. To you I would give every encouragement. You are of the cream of the earth. We know the writer of our text was speaking an eternal truth when he said, "It is better to give than to get."

If you would invest your life so that it will bring the largest possible returns to those ends you would serve, I warn you not to rush to make your investment now. You have something to give, but you do not have the wealth of learning, the strength of maturity and the sturdiness that will be yours through experience.

I would point out three outstanding problems which we face today. In doing so I am suggesting that you ponder well the contribution you can make toward the solution of these problems. Either is worth your full measure of devotion.

Many great men have lived before you. They have done and are doing their best to make a world fit to live in. Those whose life's blood was given to make ours the greatest country on earth have wrought well, for they gave their best. The joy of giving their best to the establishment of their ideals was all the reward they craved. But they made some mistakes, even as you, in the exercise of your highest aspirations, will make.

You inherit from us a world that is sound economically. We meant to build a country in which all men might find equal opportunity and the right to grow and give their best. Instead, we have a nation which has served the minority well and has slaved, in one way or another, the masses for whom this country was built as a shrine of freedom and equal opportunity.

The machine which we have invented to save us labor has thrown millions out of work, and after all that has been done to find a place in our economic life for those who crave the privilege of work, we have an army of ten million unemployed today. Rather than becoming the servant of man, the machine which he has made has turned to make him an object of charity. I would suggest, therefore, that you give yourselves to solving the problem of inequality and unequal opportunity. Here you can invest your best, and I assure you it will not be too much.

We have evolved a society which is full of social injustices, class pride, racial hatred and selfish endeavor. It who died in the year 1940 wrote his own epitaph, as follows:

Let us not think of our departed dead
As caught and encumbered in these graves of earth;
But think of death as of another birth,
As a new freedom for the wing outspread,
As a new heaven yet higher for the head,
As a new joy of more ethereal mirth,
As a new world with friends of nobler worth,
Where all may take a more immortal bread.
So, comrades, if you pass my grave sometime,
Pause long enough to breathe this little rhyme:
"Here now the dust of Edwin Markham lies,
But lo, he is not here, he is afar
On life's great errands under mightier skies,
And pressing on toward some melodious star."

Prayer—Our Father, through patience in well-doing, we seek Thy glory. Thou knowest the ways of the perfect and will reward them forever. Amen.

SUNDAY.

Let today be a day, be to you a day of renewing your inner man in Christ. Wherever you are or whatever you may plan to do read II Cor. 4:16; Job 38:36; Psalm 51:6; and Jeremiah 31:33. Say a prayer, and go to church if you have the opportunity.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

We have one call after another to take children into the orphanage. Of course, we do not take all who apply—conditions and circumstances guide us in accepting children. In many cases circumstances make it unwise for us to accept the responsibility. In some cases satisfactory arrangements are made for them other than having them come to the orphanage.

But where a mother is left with a group of little children with no means of support and appeals to the orphanage for help, it is hard to say no. We accepted two little girls last week (nice little children) from a home where a mother was left with a large family of children without income. She appealed to us to take the two little girls. I believe if our church people could have visited this home with me they would have suggested that we take all of them for the children's sake.

When we take a boy in our orphanage, we take him in hoping that some day he will be a United States Senator or even climb to the President's chair. No one can look into the future to see what a boy with ambition will make of himself. Some of our greatest men have come from very humble homes. One of the most soul-stirring preachers the writer has ever heard preach was born in a little log cabin on the side of a mountain.

When we take in a little girl, it is our hope that she will grow and develop into a fine Christian character and go out from us to become a nurse, a teacher, or take up some profession by which she can render the greatest service to mankind. The entire denomination should take a deep interest in helping the little children here. If your Sunday school does not now make a monthly offering, please begin now and have a part in this worthy work.

WHAT SHOULD I DO?

is a society which caters to the favored few and frowns upon those who cannot stack up a reputation in stocks and bonds. A greater number of people are subject to some form of dictation now than at any time in the history of our country. If we are to continue to have a democracy, we would do well to return to the principles out of which our democratic form of government grew. I suggest that you examine yourselves and see if you do not have something to contribute toward the solution of these dangerous problems.

The last great evil to which I would direct your attention is that of religious intolerance, denominational prejudice and ecclesiastical bigotry. Here I see a ray of hope, for already the youth of our day are lifting their eyes and minds above the barriers which have been set up. We see a fine evidence of the trend in the manner by which you carry on the organization and administration of your school interests. You do not inquire as to the denominational allegiance of someone who has proved his capability or worthiness to receive an honor that is to be bestowed. You take him for what you believe him to be. If he is judged worthy of the high honor, you crown him with it. You act more like brothers of a common cause than we of the church have had the grace to act at times.

The purpose of real religion is to establish values within the individual worthy of the best heaven has. It ought to be that when one possesses the divine gift of godliness, a character worthy of the highest honor and the deepest trust, he should be accounted worthy of any trust—even that he become our brother. It will be a glorious day when all those who love and seek to serve the Lord can join hearts and hands against sin and unrighteousness and march to victory in His name.

In Memoriam

WOODWARD.

With a feeling of deep sorrow the Ladies Benevolent and Social Union of the Suffolk Christian Church records the passing, on March 24, 1940, of Mrs. Sue Bryant Woodward, for a number of years an active member of this organization. Her keen personal interest in the Society was marked by her readiness and willingness at all times to do her part to carry on the work. By her departure a vacancy has been created that cannot easily be filled.

Mrs. Woodward's personal charm was interwoven with a fine sense of values for human needs, as evidenced not only by her service to her church and its affiliated organizations, but to the City of Suffolk in whose life she had for a number of years held a place of love and esteem.

RESOLVED, That the membership of the Ladies Benevolent and Social Union extend to her husband and to her aged father sincerest sympathy.

RESOLVED further, That a copy of this resolution be recorded on the minutes of this organization, and a copy be sent to her husband and father as a testimonial of its sincere appreciation of her usefulness. Also that a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

BENTON.

Our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom and love, has called home our beloved member and friend, Mrs. Lula Benton. She was a faithful member of the Suffolk Christian Church. She was interested in all the activities of the local church and the denomination as a whole. She was a faithful reader of "The Christian Sun."

While we mourn her loss we must bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well. Therefore, be it resolved that we extend to her family our sympathy, that we ever remember her warm friendship and emulate all that was finest and best in her life.

Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to "The Christian Sun," and a copy be spread on the minutes of the Ladies Benevolent and Social Union.

MAKEPEACE.

Mrs. Minnie Martin Makepeace, widow of F. P. Makepeace, died May 2, 1940, at her home in Suffolk, Va.. She is survived by one son, W. T. Makepeace; two grandsons, Lloyd Makepeace, and Vernon Smith, both of Suffolk; and a brother, L. D. Martin, of Dallas Texas. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, and interment was made in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Makepeace was a good woman; everyone who knew her loved her for her kind, Christian character. She was a favorite with young people and children, and a large number of children and young people who had been helped by her since their childhood attended her funeral. May we honor her memory, and may God bless those left behind.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Pastor.

BYRD.

Mrs. Elizabeth Holland Byrd died May 22, 1940, at her home in Suffolk, Va., at the age of seventy-five years. Her husband, Mr. A. T. Byrd, had the first funeral of the present pastorate in Suffolk. Since then there have passed from labor to reward 128 other members of the Suffolk Christian Church. Mrs. Byrd is survived by three daughters, Mrs. L. O. Holland, with whom she made her home; Mrs. J. L. Bond, and Mrs. Frank Spady, both of Portsmouth; two sons, J. A. Byrd of Suffolk and N. H. Byrd of Chuckatuck, Va.; and thirty grandchildren, and thirteen great-grandchildren. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends at her funeral. She was of great faith, and good works; and many are they that rise up and call her blessed. May our heavenly Father comfort and bless the bereaved.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Pastor.

PAUL.

Charlie Gray Paul, son of the late James W. and Nannie Sanford Paul, departed this life at Duke Hospital, April 8, 1940, at the age of fifty-five. On December 26, 1907, he married Miss Mae Gregory who died several years ago. He is survived by five children, four grandchildren, one brother, one half-brother, and three sisters. For years Mr. Paul was an employee of the Southern Railway Co., and was promoted to an engineer. For years he has been a road builder. At the time of his death he had considerable farming interests in Granville County. Brother Paul had been a member of Union Christian Church for thirty-two years. A useful man, a devoted father and a Christian gentleman has gone to his reward. The funeral was at his church and burial in Virgilina cemetery. There was a very large attendance. One hundred and twenty beautiful floral designs were placed on and about the grave, evidencing love for the deceased and his family.

C. E. NEWMAN.

HUFFMAN.

Mrs. Virgie M. Huffman, wife of J. Walter Huffman of Leaksville (Luray, Va.), died at her home after a lingering illness. Mrs. Huffman was a lifelong resident of this section and was well known here. Since her childhood she was a member of the Leaksville Christian Church, a regular attendant upon its services until failing health confined her to her home.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Huffman is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Noah Painter, Leaksville, and Mrs. James Bumgardner, Hagerstown, Md.; two grandsons, Richard and Page Painter of Leaksville; also several brothers and sisters as follows: sisters, Mrs. Joseph Huffman, Mrs. W. H. Kiser, Mrs. Lena Rothgeb and Miss Della Rothgeb; brothers, W. J. Rothgeb, all of Leaksville, and George W. Rothgeb of Luray, Va.

The funeral service was held from the Leaksville Church. Rev. R. E. Newton, pastor, and Rev. W. J. Andes, Durham, N. C., former pastor, conducted the services. Interment was in the church cemetery.

ELISHA BRADSHAW.

served as pastor of Mt. Carmel Church for five years. After a brief period as a supply pastor for the Methodist Episcopal Church, he returned to Mt. Carmel as pastor, retiring from the active ministry in 1936. He was made a deacon of this church after his retirement as pastor. Mr. Bradshaw never lost his devotion to and zeal in Christian work. He was a great believer in prayer and personal work. He is particularly missed in the Mt. Carmel Church, where he labored faithfully so long.

LITANY OF COMMEMORATION

For Those Who Have Gone Before Us.

Almighty and everlasting God, before whom stand the spirits of the living and the dead, Light of lights, Fountain of wisdom and goodness, who livest in all pure and humble and gracious souls: For all who have witnessed a good confession for Thy glory and the welfare of the world; patriarchs, prophets, and apostles; the wise of every land and nation, and all teachers of mankind:

We praise Thee, O God, and bless Thy name.

For the martyrs of our holy faith; the faithful witnesses to Christ of whom the world was not worthy; and for all who have resisted falsehood and wrong unto suffering or death:

We praise Thee, O God, and bless Thy name.

For all who have labored and suffered for freedom, good government, just laws, and the sanctity of the home; and for all who have given their lives for their country:

We praise Thee, O God, and bless Thy name.

For all who have sought to bless men by their service and life, and to lighten the dark places of the earth:

We praise Thee, O God, and bless Thy name.

For those who have been tender and true and brave in all times and places; and for all who have been one with Thee in the communion of Christ's Spirit and in the strength of his love:

We praise Thee, O God, and bless Thy name.

For the dear friends and kindred, ministering in the spiritual world; whose faces we see no more, but whose love is with us forever:

We praise Thee, O God, and bless Thy name.

For the teachers and companions of our childhood and youth, and the members of our household of faith who worship Thee now in Heaven:

We praise Thee, O God, and bless Thy name.

For the grace which was given to all these; and for the trust and hope in which they lived and died:

We praise Thee, O God, and bless Thy name.

And that we may hold them in continual remembrance, that the sanctity of their wisdom and goodness may rest upon our earthly days, and that we may prepare ourselves to follow them in their upward way:

We beseech Thee to hear us, O God.

That we may ever think of them as with Thee, and be sure that where they are, there we may be also:

We beseech Thee to hear us, O God.

That we may have a hope beyond this world for all Thy children, even for wanderers who must be sought and brought home; that we may be comforted and sustained by the promise of a time when none shall be a stranger and an exile from Thy kingdom and household.

We beseech Thee to hear us, O God.

In the communion of the Holy Spirit; with the faithful and the saintly in heaven; with the redeemed in all ages; with our beloved who dwell in Thy presence and peace, we, who still fight and suffer on earth, unite in ascribing—

Thanksgiving, glory, honor, and power unto Thee, O Lord our God.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit: as it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.

"Ifs" for the Church School Teacher

By ERWIN L. SHAVER.

If you can keep your faith in children's futures,
When all your teaching seems of no avail;
If you can press your truth when many others
Would close their open minds and doubts assail;
If you can say what you can't help believing,
Yet listen kindly to a younger voice;
And seek to guide your pupils' powers of thinking,
But let them exercise their right of choice;

If you can prepare each lesson plan just so,
But change your plan to meet the pressing need;
If you can cause that interest spark to glow,
And lead from group discussion on to deed;
If you can call to help you instantly
The incident which fits the case in hand;
Or stimulate productive memory
By question from the list at your command;

If you can see the good in flippant smarties;
Nor vent your ire upon those noisy boys;
If you can turn the talk of girls from parties
To thoughts of character and inner poise;
If you can share with them in liveliest fun,
And make good times a stepping stone to worth;
And lead your group to build their Father's Kingdom,
Extending friendliness throughout the earth;

If you can keep the aim of all your teaching,
Uncolored by the failures on the way;
If you can plan and you can pray unceasing
For each one in your class from day to day;
If you can sense the honor of your calling
As He whom men once named the Lowly One;
You'll find this task your very best demanding—
Then hear the Master Teacher say, "Well done!"

NEWS AND VIEWS

Next Sunday is Children's Day. Your offering on that day, sent to the Board of Christian Education, will count on Conference Apportionment.

Rev. and Mrs. Millard Stevens have gone to Langdale, Ala., where Mr. Stevens began a ten-day revival meeting on June 3. Rev. J. D. Dollar is pastor of Langdale Christian Church.

Mr. James Lightbourne, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Lightbourne of Burlington, N. C., began his work last Sunday as the supply pastor at the Monticello Christian Church. He will be a member of the Junior Class at Elon College next year.

The annual Memorial Day service of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Lynchburg, Va., was held at the Congregational-Christian Church on last Sunday morning, with the pastor, Rev. J. Howard Smith, preaching a special sermon for the occasion. The The Veterans Ritual and special music were used in the service.

Our church in Franklin, Va., is this week sharing in a community Bible School. Vacation Church Schools will be held in our Suffolk and Lynchburg, Va., Churches beginning June 10. A model school will be conducted at the Elon Summer Conference where workers can be trained to conduct one in their local churches. Five Student Summer Service workers are available to assist those churches desiring their aid. Plan to hold such a school for the children of your church. Further information may be secured from the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C.

Elon College conferred honorary degrees upon the following at its Commencement Exercises on May 28: Dr. H. Shelton Smith, Doctor of Literature; Miss Ruth Isabel Seabury, Doctor of Literature; Hon. Cameron Morrison, Doctor of Laws; Hon. Colgate W. Darden, Doctor of Laws. Because of the extreme importance of this session of Congress, Representative Darden was unable to be present. By special vote of the trustees, Mrs. Darden received the degree for her husband, the second honorary degree ever granted in absentia by Elon College, the first having been conferred upon Dr. P. J. Kernodle, a former professor at the college, and for many years secretary of the Southern Convention.

FIRST WOMAN TO RECEIVE HONORARY DEGREE AT ELON.

It is fitting that the first woman to receive an honorary degree from Elon College should be one outstanding in the work of our denomination, one who has aided the missionary cause in the Southern Convention by her inspiring addresses and pleasing personality and by helping with the arrangements for the School of Missions.

In presenting Miss Seabury for her degree, Dean J. D. Messick said: "Mr. President, Ruth Isabel Seabury, Educational Secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Boston, has been called 'an internationalist by instinct.'"

RUTH ISABEL SEABURY, A. B., Litt. D.

Widely known as a vivid and stimulating speaker on Christianity at home and abroad, Miss Seabury spends the major part of her time addressing churches, women's organizations, young people's groups, and schools and colleges throughout America. A graduate of Smith College, Miss Seabury has several times been abroad since taking up her work with the American Board. In an extended world tour she visited twenty-seven countries, often going far off the beaten track of the tourist to interior villages and observing the work of her own and other boards. Miss Seabury was elected a delegate to the great International Missionary Council meeting in Madras, India, in 1938 and visited the Board's fields in the Near East and India in the three months preceding. A few years ago she was invited to spend the summer as friendly visitor and speaker to the summer conferences in England and Scotland as representing the Mission Boards in the United States under the Missionary Education Movement. She was at that time a guest of Miss Muriel Lester at Kingsley Hall, London. Miss Seabury has been a member of the famous National Preaching Mission and is author of the following books: Our Japanese Friends, Do You Like Our Country—India, Introducing Young China, and Dinabandhu—A Background Book on India. She is the adult member of the United Christian Youth Movement. Mr. President, it is my honor to present Ruth Isabel Seabury to have conferred upon her the degree of Doctor of Literature.

DUTIES OF A SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER.

By MRS. M. ADA WILLIAMS,

First Congregational-Christian Church,
Newport News, Va.

1. Preparation of the Lesson.—Begin to prepare the lesson at least a week in advance. Don't do everything else you want to do or feel you have to do all week, then on Saturday night try to prepare the lesson to be taught on Sunday morning. It just can't be done that way. The more we put into anything, the more we get out of it; the more preparation we put on our Sunday school lesson, the better we teach it.

2. Always Be On Time at Sunday School.—Better still, be a few minutes early. The teacher should be in place to receive his pupils. By being punctual himself, he is teaching punctuality.

3. Always Attend the Morning Worship Service of the Church.—Don't leave the classroom and go home or elsewhere as if your duties for the day are over. The Sabbath was given us as a day of rest and worship. We need to attend the worship services of our church to set the example for our pupils, as well as for our own benefit. We need to train them to attend these services. Someone might say, "When I get out of the classroom my pupils have all gone home." This need not be so, for if we will remember to take a moment at the close of the lesson period every Sunday to ask our pupils to stay for the worship service with us, we will soon get response. Remember, we teach by example as well as by word of mouth. Our lives and habits teach a lesson to our pupils.

4. Never Be Absent from Your Class Without Getting a Substitute.—Be sure to get the substitute in time for him to prepare the lesson. Don't

NATIONAL FEAR.

Two months ago the people of America felt safe behind two big oceans and protected by the French and British armies and navies. We still believed that peace-loving and peaceable peoples could live in this world and be secure.

Today all that security has faded like the mists of the morning. Nations that have been neutral for hundreds of years while wars went on around them, have been crushed by the makers of war who seem not to care what happens to humanity so long as they win battles. France and England have been trapped in Flanders and have lost heavily in men and munitions, though perhaps not so heavily in morale as might have been expected. Our national leader describes the narrowing seas and says that attacking planes can reach our shores in a matter of hours.

The result is that sudden fear has gripped the hearts of most of our people. The President is asking for billions of additional dollars every few days to increase our armaments. Congress is rushing through in record time legislation that will change the course of our national history. All aliens and native citizens who do not believe in war are under suspicion and attempts are being made to make it hard for them to live in this land of the free.

The country is going mad with fear. It is silly and very dangerous. No one denies the new difficulties that face us. The world is changing in our day. We must live in a very different world henceforth. But that is no reason why we should suddenly decide that God has abdicated, and that military force is the only chance for protection. If freedom as represented by democracy has real value, it is our business to protect it here while it is being crushed elsewhere. To become suspicious of every person born in another country, to refuse food, shelter, and labor to those who seek to live peaceably among us, is to invite the very disaster we are trying to avoid.

This is the time for church people to use their religion. The Bible has much to say about fear, and love, and human relations. Jesus kept his faith in the midst of Jewish hate and Roman might. If we cannot keep our Christian faith in a day like this, it was not worth having at any time. Our country needs people who think clearly, feel keenly, and are unafraid because they believe in the God who reigns supreme above the conflicts of earth. Jesus and Paul and the early Church seemed to fail before Roman might, but through the centuries they have meant more than did the legions of Rome. When Hitler and his army are forgotten save by the militarists, the believers in love, right, and righteousness will still sing songs of triumph.

"The Christian Sun" would like to urge its readers to be the saving salt and the shining light that this country—and the world—needs so severely this week and the next. Do not be stamped by fear. It is deadly. Have faith in God. It works.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Farmers are busy planting and cultivating their crops with the hope of a coming harvest. And how we will need that harvest! Industrialists are seeking ways to speed up production and to use more workers. Government is frantically struggling to get more machines and men ready for national protection.

In the midst of this great rush for more "things" the churches rightly take time out for Children's Day. On next Sunday little children will speak and sing and pray in our churches. Adults will direct them, assist them, and enjoy them. The Church will then be developing the country's greatest commodity.

Without the children, trained children, devoutly religious children, any country is doomed. Those who train children in the fundamentals of religion, are giving to the country its essential product, the one thing without which a nation cannot live.

SHOP TALK WITH CHURCH LEADERS.

Beginning with July 1, 1940, "The Christian Sun" will be edited by the Rev. Robert Lee House of Richmond, Va., and the printing will be paid for by the Board of Publications. Funds for this Board will be $2,050.00 from the Mission Board, the Board of Christian Education, the Christian Orphanage, and Elon College; $200.00 from the Convention Fund; and whatever is received from subscriptions. If the subscriptions are adequate, the Board can pay promptly and in full.

The office of Promotional Secretary is to be continued, but this officer will not be responsible for editing the church paper. This will give time for other much-needed work. The secretary is to be responsible for securing subscriptions to the paper.

The promotional office is to be financed by the Convention Fund and the Board of Christian Education. This gives the churches a chance to support this work or not as they like, and in no way involves the other Boards of the Convention financially. If Conference Apportionments for the Convention Fund and for the Board of Christian Education are paid by the churches the work of promotion can go forward. If the churches fail on these funds the work will be curtailed. It is believed that the churches will respond.

Sunday schools making an offering at Children's Day for the Board of Christian Education can count the amount on Conference Apportionments for that Board. This year the money sent to the Sunday School Conventions does not count on Apportionments, but is badly needed to support the Board of Christian Education. Next year this will count on Apportionments, if the Conferences follow the Convention vote, but the Apportionment will be slightly higher.

"The Christian Sun" and the Promotional Secretary are anxious to cooperate with the churches in every possible way, and it is expected that the churches in turn will do likewise. Thank you.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The war in Europe is causing great anxiety in the United States. The threat of immediate war in this country is one of the possibilities to be considered. The President has made a strong appeal to Congress to make extensive and expensive plans of defense. It is wise and timely to prepare for any eventuality.

But there is one type of preparation which is not usually considered by legislative bodies. And the United States has been slow to see the importance of this, in the education of the young people in the schools. There are no paid lobbyists, no private corporations to advocate the supervision of the social, economic and political propaganda finding a prominent place in the schoolroom, the daily press and current books of this generation, with a view of eliminating the dangerous, and encouraging safe and sound teaching. This is a land of liberty, where a free press and free speech are the privilege of every citizen.

There is a wide chasm between free speech and censored expression. The war in Europe is, in large part, the result of supervised public speech. The schools of Germany for forty years have been doing a very effective work with the young people of that country. They taught that the nation is superior, that the people are entitled to have the best material resources of the earth, even at the price of fighting for them. Supermen should have superior blessings. Youth should look forward with pleasure to the day when they may show their patriotism on the battlefield. With that kind of teaching it is not surprising that they march to war with great enthusiasm.

Think what a difference it would mean today if the former Kaiser and Herr Hitler had been as persistent in preparing for peace as they have been in preparing for war. If the United States would spend $5,000,000,000.00 in creating a public sentiment to encourage a high standard of morals, a real spirit of brotherhood, an abhorrence of war and a love of peace, the present generation of young people would not be war-minded twenty years hence. The best defense at the present time may be an adequate supply of war materials with trained men to use them against the common enemy. But the best preparation for twenty-five years hence is a persistent, effectual teaching in every schoolroom, every Sunday school, every daily paper, every moving picture theatre and in magazines and books, which creates a public sentiment for justice and universal brotherhood.

This is not a task for the church. It is the opportunity of the nation. This will not meet the present situation today. But it is possible to outlaw war in 1965 by this process. Stir up hatred and war is inevitable. Cultivate brotherhood and peace is possible. This cannot be done by legislation. The schoolroom, the pulpit, the public forum and the printing press can cultivate this fertile field. And the nations of the earth could try the experiment of putting a ban upon any public propaganda which advocates war as a method of settling disputes, and encouraging the teaching of the brotherhood of man—of all races and and all nations.

War is not an accident, nor is it an incident. War is an effect—and behind it is always some great powerful cause. War is the harvest of hate and well-planned propaganda. A very small group in an aggressor nation may be responsible for it. The great mass of people are peace-loving when they are trained to love truth and support righteousness. Why not teach youth to hate war instead of hating other nations? Is it glorious to fight and to die upon the field of battle, except in the defense of liberty and righteousness?

HISTORICAL STATEMENT.

By PRESIDENT LEON EDGAR SMITH.

[A brief historical statement prepared by President L. E. Smith and read Commencement day by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Secretary of the Board of Trustees.]

The spirit and purpose of the Reverend Daniel Wilson Kerr had much to do with the early beginnings of a movement for the establishment of an institution of higher learning by the Christians in the South. In 1826, according to the records of the State of North Carolina, Daniel Kerr was teaching in Wake County, which resulted in the establishment of Wake Forest-Pleasant Grove Academy, situated on the Oxford Road twelve miles north of Raleigh. Twelve years later he moved to Orange County and established J unto Academy in what is now known as the Mt. Zion Church Community. Seven years later Mr. Kerr transferred his educational interests to Pittsboro, N. C.

Two years after his death, the movement for higher education in the church resulted in the establishment of Graham Normal Institute, Graham, N. C. In 1865 Rev. W. S. Long, D. D., opened a high school in Graham and later acquired the Graham College property and operated the school as Graham Normal College. This institution was endorsed and encouraged by the conference of the Christian Church.

In 1887 the Committee on Schools and Colleges of the Southern Christian Convention consisting of Dr. W. S. Long as chairman; Dr. J. Pressley Barrett, Rev. J. W. Holt, Dr. J. U. Newman, and Mr. J. W. Harden leased the grounds and buildings of Graham Normal College, intending to establish an institution of higher learning for the education of ministers and laymen under positive religious surroundings.

In 1888 the Southern Christian Convention was called in extraordinary session in Old Providence Christian Church, Graham, N. C., for the purpose of giving further consideration to the needs of the college then proposed. The Convention took positive action looking toward the founding of a college. Through a Provisional Committee consisting of W. S. Long, J. P. Barrett, F. O. Moring, J. H. Harden, and G. S. Watson, the present site was selected for the building of the college. Mill Point, as it was then known, as an inducement offered twenty-five acres donated by the Hon. W. H. Trollinger of Haw River, N. C., twenty-three additional acres, and $4,000.00 in cash. The committee accepted the offer, solicitations for funds with which to build began, and the college was built and opened for students September, 1890. Dr. W. S. Long was the first president. Under his administration the foundation for a great institution was laid. The administration building and what is now East Dormitory were built. Dr. Long served as president for four years. He was succeeded upon his resignation by the Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., who served as non-resident president for eleven years, with Dr. J. U. Newman as dean for nine years and Dr. J. O. Atkinson as dean for two years. Under Dr. Staley's leadership the debts of the college that threatened its life were paid. Upon Dr. Staley's resignation, Dr. E. L. Moffitt, a member of the original faculty of the college, was chosen and served as president for six years. Under Dr. Moffitt's administration West Dormitory and the present power plant were built, central heating, water, and sewerage

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

I feel that you are interested in my vacation and I wish that it were possible for me to picture for you the beauty of the part of God's universe that I have found in Maytime in this East Tennessee Valley.

In the deep quiet and peace of these secluded spots of God's beautiful world, away from the radio reports, it is hard to realize that there is ugliness, pain and suffering in the lands across the sea.

God's feathered folk are so busy building their nests in the trees; getting their daily food; making the woodland ring with song; hatching their young and teaching them how to make their first awkward flights.

In the garden where I helped to hoe some potatoes I found the nicest toads. One was so small and so much a part of mother earth that I almost stepped on him. They were busy helping us care for those potatoes by catching the insects which would harm them, but at the same time they were getting their supper!

I found green hillsides kissed by red wild strawberries. I took a pail, and plucking them from their green beds, I stained my finger tips rosy red. Then I took them to the home of my brother where I was staying and removing their fluted, green caps, I put them into a saucepan, after having washed them. That night when my brother came home from his work in the smoky city of Knoxville he found a piece of luscious strawberry pie for his supper. "It has been years since I have eaten pie made by your hands, Dot," he said..

Sunday I had the joyful experience of going to the lovely country church with my mother and three brothers who were at home that day. My brothers are all deeply interested in the church and its program for making life happier! I am so thankful that they are such good boys. They have made mistakes in life, though, just as you and I have, but those mistakes have helped them to learn and obey God's laws. The brother for whom I made the pie is only two years older than I and we were always pals. I'll tell you a story about him this week.

Sincerely,

DOROTHY TODD.

BILL'S HUNTING TRIP.

There was nothing that thirteen-year-old Bill liked better than to go hunting with his father. It was the fall of the year and the hunting season had just opened. Bill's father told Bill that if he would work hard at his chores before and after school each day that they would go hunting on Saturday afternoon.

All week long Bill did his work faithfully and counted the hours until Saturday afternoon should come! On Friday Bill's father plowed up the big field of sweet potatoes on the other farm and work as he might, he did not get all of the potatoes hauled to the potatoe house. Saturday morning came and Bill's mother said that there would be rain before Monday and that the rest of the sweet potatoes should be brought from the field before night. What was to be done? Father hated terribly to disappoint his son but he realized with mother that the potatoes must be saved after all the hard labor that had gone into the raising of them. Besides, it would mean that the children would have food during the winter.

Father called Bill to him and explained the situation as clearly as he could. He told Bill that surely they would go the next Saturday for he would see to it that no task was begun which could not be completed. So Bill went off to the water mill with corn to be ground into meal and chicken feed. He promised his father that he would not try to go hunting alone but wait until the next Saturday. Father, mother and the other children (except Clara, who was to stay at home to buy the Sunday groceries needed, and prepare supper) went to the other farm two miles away to gather in the remaining potatoes..

All of the way to the mill Bill thought of his disappointment until it grew so great that he decided he'd just buy some shells on the way home and go hunting alone. Dad should not have plowed up all of those old potatoes! Bill hurried back from the mill, bought the shells and on reaching home he waited until Clara went to the store to buy groceries, slipped the double-barreled shot gun from its place in the closet and hurried away from the house into the woods and fields in search of Mr. Cottontail.

Clara came back from the store and missed Bill. She hunted for him all about the place and called for him, but there was no answer. She discovered that the gun was gone and went into the woods and fields calling for him, but still no answer. Bill had reached a neighbor's field out of the reach of her calls. Clara was worried, but finally decided that dad must have sent someone to go hunting with Bill. She went back to the house and started preparing the family supper.

Bill finally found Mr. Cottontail

QUIETLY BUILDING.

It is difficult for one to think very long, or very far, without having the horrorscope of war, devastation and death thrown across one's horizon. Europe has been turned into a shambles by the conduct of a mad man. The wish is expressed on every side that our country will not be drawn into this war.

However, we are already in. By the request of the President and the vote of the Congress, we are speeding up national defense and spending billions of dollars in the mad rush to increase our fighting strength.

We may think under such conditions that all is lost that makes for peace. Not so. Through the preaching of the gospel of our Lord, we are quietly building for the present and the future, and in his name and for his sake we shall win out, and peace will come. Mad men have often had their day in the past, and we presume will have their day now and then in the future, but the Prince of Peace will win out, and in this sign, the sign of the Cross, we shall win out.

History tells us that Alexander the Great conquered the world and wept because there were no more worlds to conquer. He had his day, with his ruthless destruction and heartless killing, but his day was in the long, long ago and occupies but a brief space even in the history of the past now.

Napoleon of France, "at whose footfall the nations of Europe trembled," had his day, the time when France, under his leadership, lost in battle the flower of her youth and manhood. It was indeed a dark day for all of Europe while Napoleon, the killer and conqueror, held sway, but be it remembered that even he met his Waterloo, and the man of greatness and power was banished finally from his own country and died on a lonely island.

Such is the strength of war and the warrior, but the strength of the Prince of Peace is a different proposition. Someone has said, and we think truly, that when the true and lasting history of the nations and of the world is written, it will simply be His-Story. The story of Him whose message we are trying to give to the world through the gospel. It is the same old story told from age to age, and it will be told until time shall be no more—His-Story.

So while our government is spending billions for armament, equipment and defense, and while the mad man of Europe is carrying death and destruction in his wake, we shall go on quietly building, building in His name and for His sake. This we shall do until the kingdoms of this earth shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ. Quietly building, but steadily and surely building on a foundation that cannot fail nor fall.

Our missionaries are going about seeking to establish the true religion, the religion of our Lord and His Christ, and these are they who shall finally win out. Someone has said and truly that the soldier of his country goes into battle to show the rest of us how to die. The true soldier of the Cross, the missionary, goes out from his country to show others how to live—to live bravely and courageously in the battle for peace, happiness and righteousness. There are two battlefronts, one headed by the mad man of Europe, whose program is that of death and destruction. The other battlefront is that of the Prince of Peace, represented in fields afar as well as at home by those who preach the true gospel of the Prince of Peace.

In giving and working for missions we at least have the knowledge that we shall win out if we faint not in our efforts. "Faint, but pressing forward."

The above total of receipts the past week is not large, but it represents at least a firm, fixed faith on the part of many who believe that the cause of righteousness as represented by our missionary donations will yet win out. We are grateful for the donations because we know full well that they represent purely unselfish and divine gifts, gifts to help make this a better world in which to live, a program of righteousness solely for the sake of others less favored than ourselves. Despite all the gloom and darkness of the passing moment, the cause of missions will win out, because it is in the name and for the sake of Him of whom the prophet spoke, "The government shall be upon his shoulders and of his government there shall be no end forever." We appreciate more than we can say every donation made to the cause of missions.

A MEDITATION.

When the brutal, devilish forces of Mars suddenly seized Denmark and Norway, King Haakon is reported to have said in sadness:

"All civilization seems to have come to an end. I cannot understand how such terrible things can happen. I can no longer be sure of anything."

Many of us who love liberty, independence and self-government, religion, learning and the arts, and who feel so secure in our remoteness from danger—even we are tempted to despair when we see the "most civilized peoples in Europe" made the prey of Hitler.

"What are we coming to?" we say. "Can it be that like those of ancient Greece, we are doomed to have our temples torn down, our cherished political systems destroyed, our ideologies and our ideals swept into the sea? Is it true that the social structures built at such cost during the centuries must now crumble into dust because the human race really wants a change?"

But why not look away from the ruins of the Greek temple to the glorious sky effects? Poseidon serves no longer, but Greece has the same glorious heavens. Man's monuments may decay, but God abides!

William Loyd Phelps, in the closing pages of his autobiography, says that if optimism means the belief that in the long run truth will survive error, and good will triumph over evil, then he is most certainly an optimist. Jay T. Stocking once said: "The prophet's servant could not see the horses and chariots of the Lord. He saw only the hosts of Syria and was frightened. But Elisha saw the hosts in the sky." To our late leader the skies were ever full of waiting reinforcements: "Within and around are his unseen and beneficent powers, and in steadfast reliance upon this assured fact we can be strong for all circumstances."

And so in faith we go on in missionary service, quietly building for a Better World. While with equal assurance we give thought, as world citizens, to the problem of providing a basis for permanent peace. "God is in His Heaven; all's right with the world."—The Missionary Herald.

Dr. Judd to Speak at School of Missions

Dr. Walter H. Judd, for ten years a missionary of the American Board in China, was educated at the University of Nebraska where he received his A. B. and M. D. degrees. From 1925-31 he was a physician in Shao-wu, South China. On furlough, 1932-34, he had a fellowship in surgery at the Mayo Clinic. He returned to China in 1934 as superintendent of Harwood Memorial Hospitals, Fenchow, North China, where he stayed until 1938.

Among those best qualified to interpret the menacing situation in the Far East and America's relation to it are American educators, business men, and doctors, who saw the approach of war, stayed at their posts while the tide of conflict rolled past, witnessed at first hand its devastating effects, and in the wake of this stirring experience have thought deeply with regard to its significance.

Dr. Walter Judd is such a person. His scientific training has given him the habit of observing accurately, analyzing objectively and evaluating carefully. His wide experience as a lecturer before a great variety of American audiences—both on the Chautauqua platform and in the Student Volunteer Movement—before going to China and during subsequent furloughs has developed the ability to speak vividly and convincingly.

While in North China he was in Japanese invaded territory where he saw American trucks carrying alien soldiers over the good earth of China; American doctors and nurses treating men and women and children wounded by American bombs; American relief money feeding refugees under the shadow of American planes flown with American gasoline.

He has watched at close range, in the area of most active guerilla warfare, the gallant struggle against gigantic odds to keep the invader from consolidating and exploiting his gains. He has come into close contact with men and events in the midst of the war, giving him inside information on things which the average foreigner in China never has opportunity to observe.

Recently Dr. Judd has returned to this country to report what he has seen, believing that most Americans are utterly unaware of the decisive role they, however unwittingly, are playing in this Far Eastern affair. He is not confused about what can and must be done if we are to preserve America's honor and good name among the nations of the world and to safeguard her own economic welfare and national security.

Dr. Judd will speak at the School of Missions on Thursday night, June 20, at 8:00 in Whitley Memorial Auditorium, Elon College. All of our people are urged to take advantage of this opportunity of hearing one of the best-known and best-informed speakers on conditions in China today who for ten years represented our denomination there as a doctor.

TO THE WOMEN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

Are you ready to begin your journey to Elon College for our School of Missions? We would like to have one hundred women from Eastern Virginia Conference to meet with one hundred women from the Valley and North Carolina Conferences and spend three days in fitting ourselves to do the work our church has given into our care.

Great care has been taken to prepare a program that has claimed the interest of outstanding speakers and teachers. Dr. Walter Judd and Miss Helen Smith, two of our leaders, are to be on the Northfield program later, and Miss McClure, another teacher, leaves shortly for her field in China.

I am counting on you, the women of our churches, to plan to be on hand for the opening, which will be the dinner meeting in the college dining hall at 6 o'clock, Monday evening, June 17.

Hoping to greet you, I am

ELIZABETH HARRIS.

DR. MARTYN SUMMERBELL, DECEASED.

Many members of the Christian Church in the South and readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will remember most pleasantly the late Dr. Martyn Summerbell. Dr. Summerbell was a staunch friend of Elon College and greatly interested in the work and progress of the Southern Church.

The following resolution was presented to the trustees of the Palmer Fund in session May 10 in New York City:

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God to call from our midst Rev. Dr. Martyn Summerbell, whose life was ever an example to his fellow man; and

Whereas, Dr. Summerbell was a brilliant educator, student, minister of the Gospel, and devoted much of his span to helping prepare young people for useful Christian lives; and

Whereas, Dr. Summerbell, as member and President of the Board of Directors of the Francis Asbury Palmer Fund for many years, showed his unselfish devotion to the objects of our founder and the work of this Board; therefore

Be it resolved, that we, the members of the Board of Directors of the Francis Asbury Palmer Fund, deeply appreciative of our loss and the loss to Dr. Summerbell's many other friends, and aware of the loss to his family, hereby express our sympathy and heartfelt condolences in their bereavement.

And be it further resolved, that a copy of these words be forwarded to Dr. Summerbell's oldest living child.

HELPS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE'S PROGRAMS.

You will notice from the back page of this issue that there as a variety of courses to be offered at the Elon Summer School of Leadership Education this year. There are courses on Bible which will help everyone know more about it; there are courses by the Missionary which will give first-hand information about work on the mission field; there are courses which will help individuals live better lives; there are courses designed especially for teachers of children's groups in the church school.

In addition to these are courses designed especially to help with materials and methods in young people's work. If you are a member of a rural church, you will gain much from the course on "Young People's Work in the Rural Church," taught by Rev. W. J. (Billy) Andes, pastor of two rural churches and adviser for various young people's groups. If you are a member of a city church, the course taught by Mrs. J. G. Truitt on "Young People's Work in the Urban Church" will be of great benefit to you. Mrs. Truitt is the superintendent of the large young people's department in the Suffolk Christian Church. "Finding and Using Source Materials for the Youth Program," to be taught by Rev. J. A. French, executive secretary of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention, will be of invaluable aid to those of you whose responsibility it is to plan programs for your young people's group. "Understanding Youth," a course particularly designed for teachers of intermediates, seniors, and young people, is to be taught by Dr. E. W. Jones of Franklin, Va., and will help you do what the title states. Courses on art, music, and social action will give you helpful information about the use of these three types of materials in your work and worship.

There is still time to plan for young people from your church to come to the Elon Summer Conference.

PLEASANT HILL SUMMER CONFERENCE.

The Leadership Training School at Pleasant Hill, Tenn., will be held

June 11-19. This year special plans have been made for the women of our churches, who will have a course on "The Work of Women in the Church" led by Mrs. Mary D. White of New York. The ministers and men will have a course on "The Pastor and His Church" conducted by Rev. J. G. Gonzales, formerly superintendent of Kansas, now pastor of Thorsby Community Church.

The courses for young people include the following:

The Old Testament—Dr. Victor Obenhaus, principal of Pleasant Hill Academy.

Primary Methods and Materials—Mrs. Luther Ballou, Clanton, Ala.

The Life of Paul—Dr. Ellsworth Smith, Berea, Ky.

High Spots at Home and Abroad—Dr. Howell D. Davies, Secretary of Missions, Chicago, Ill.

Worship—Dr. A. William Loos, Atlanta University, Atlanta, Ga.

Christianity and the Second World War—Rev. A. L. DeJarnette, Soddy, Tenn.

My Community and the Christian Ideal—Rev. Edwin E. White, Pleasant Hill, Tenn.

Stewardship—Dr. Howell D. Davies.

Cooperatives—Dr. Ellsworth Smith.

Christian Family Life—Rev. Alfred W. Hurst, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Scouting for Boys—Rev. L. L. Stanley, Lanett, Ala.

The Pilgrim Fellowship—Miss Dorothy French, Chattanooga, Tenn.

The Interest Groups in the afternoons will include: Nature Study and Hikes, Rev. L. L. Stanley; Dramatics, Miss Dorothy French; Handicrafts; and the publication of Pleasant Times, Rev. E. H. Rainey.

Everyone will share in the work of the conference, all of which will be done by the students and faculty with the exception of dishwashing which will be hired. The cost will be five dollars or its equivalent in produce which can be used by the conference.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTIONS.

The tentative dates and places for our Sunday School Conventions are: Eastern North Carolina, June 21, Mt. Herman; North Carolina and Virginia, June 27, Apple's Chapel;

Western North Carolina, July 2, Liberty; Valley of Virginia, week of July 15-22, New Hope; Eastern Virginia, July 23, place to be announced. Visiting speaker for the first three will be Dr. Robert W. Gammon of Chicago. Speaker for the last two is Dr. Forrest L. Knapp of the World Sunday School Association, New York City.

BILL'S HUNTING TRIP.

setting in a clump of brush on a slate bank above a creek. Quietly Bill crept nearer the rabbit and pulled back the trigger to shoot, when suddenly the slate earth beneath his feet gave way. The rabbit scurried up the bank out of sight. The gun Bill let drop with his left hand as he grasped a bush with his right hand to keep from sliding down into the creek. The trigger of the gun was struck by a limb or root and the full load of the gun hit Bill's right hand and wrist, shot scattering from his heel to his ear. Bill left the gun and started the three-quarter mile walk home carrying his torn and bleeding right arm on his left one on his chest. At the first neighbor's house he sent the man for the doctor and his wife to get mother and father.

Bill was barely able to stagger up the steps on reaching home. Clara grabbed clean sheets, tore them into strips and tried to stop the arm from bleeding. By the time the twenty-mile drive to the hospital was ended Bill had very little blood left. For three days the brothers and sisters at home scarcely ate or slept until we heard the good news that Bill's arm could be saved. Bill's doctor told him that only the pure blood which his parents had given him at birth made possible the saving of the arm. But to this day Bill carries the ugly scar and a thumbless right hand to remind him of that day long ago when he disobeyed, and broke a promise to his father. If Bill were telling you this story he would end by saying as I have so often heard him say, "Boys and girls, always obey your parents."

EZEKIEL TEACHES PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY.

LESSON X—JUNE 9, 1940.

LESSON: Ezekiel 33:1-20.

DEVOTIONAL READING: II Cor. 5:6-10.

GOLDEN TEXT: So then each one of us shall give account of himself to God.—Romans 14:12.

The prophecy of Ezekiel covers two periods of Israel's history. The first twenty-four chapters are prophecies concerning the impending judgment upon Jerusalem and the people of Judah, and the doom which awaited them because of their sins. Because these prophecies ran contrary to the popular opinion and desires, Ezekiel, like Jeremiah, was very unpopular. But after these sayings actually happened the people recognized Ezekiel as a man of God, and when he was carried into captivity with them they listened to him with respect. He became a great pastor to them and ministered effectively to them while they were captives in Babylon.

A Watchman.

Drawing his analogy from the life of his own day, Ezekiel said that he was a watchman. The people knew the implications of this term. By day and by night they had watchmen appointed to be on the alert against any danger that might come from without the city. At the first sign of danger these watchmen were to sound the alarm so that the people of the city could prepare to defend themselves. Woe unto that watchman who, when he saw danger approaching, failed to warn his people! What a tremendous responsibility such a man had in Ezekiel's day!

Now Ezekiel said that this was his function. God had set him as a watchman, and as a watchman he saw all too closely the danger to which his people were exposed. They had forgotten God, and they had broken their covenant with him. In spite of reported warnings by the prophets, they persevered in their foolish and sinful ways. As a watchman Ezekiel could do nothing but tell the people plainly of their danger and to warn them of impending destruction. He would have been guilty of a crime if he had not thus spoken the word of the Lord.

Now this truth is one which needs practical application in the lives of ministers and Sunday school teachers, and, for that matter, all Christian people. What a responsibility we have toward those who are walking in the ways of evil and are living out of harmony with God's will! If we fail to warn our fellowmen, when judgment comes their blood will be upon our heads. Yet how tactful and sympathetic one must be to approach someone who is careless or callous, and try to bring him to his senses and help him back into the way of righteousness! We are not responsible for results, but we are responsible for honest effort. The minister who sees members of his church doing wrong or growing indifferent to Christ and His Church, the Sunday school teacher who knows that members of his class have become indifferent and careless or have begun to walk in evil ways, or the Christian who knows of a brother or sister who is walking in the way of the transgressor and does not give warning in a sympathetic and warm fashion is a renegade to his duty. Perhaps this is one of the most neglected duties in the church, both in the pulpit and in the pew.

Personal Responsibility.

Ezekiel faced a very baffling problem when he began to reprimand the people for their sins. Then, as now, their favorite sport was "passing the buck." They were saying that they were suffering for the sins of their fathers. This thing started early in the history of the human race. Adam blamed it on Eve, and Eve blamed it on a serpent. From that day to this men have been unwilling to face the consequences of their own sins and admit their own guilt. We blame it on others, on heredity, on environment, etc. To be sure, these factors do enter into the things which we do and say; but Ezekiel called attention to the fact that in the final analysis every man is responsible for his own acts. He expressed in one way what Paul expressed in the words of the golden text, "So then each one of us shall give account of himself to God."

Salvation for All.

"Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked." God does not send any man to hell. God does not want any man to be lost. He may foreknow that men will be lost, but to foreknow a thing is not to will it. There are those who will consistently and constantly say no to the divine will and will not respond to divine love, and thus be lost. God has no pleasure in the death of the wicked, and it is His desire that all men should be saved and come to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. No matter who a man is or what he has done, he can find abundant pardon and forgiveness if in sincerity and in honesty he confesses his sin and asks forgiveness for it. The heart of the Gospel is that God loves all men and wants all men to be saved.

Something to Think About.

Here is a man who has been a righteous man. Either unconsciously and gradually, or deliberately, he begins to walk in the way of unrighteousness. In Ezekiel's day there was a popular fallacy that those who at one time had been righteous could become unrighteous with immunity. He would be allowed a little indulgence, for he would have accumulated a little extra merit which would cover his later wrong-doing. Ezekiel very bluntly says that if the righteous man commits iniquity none of his righteous deeds shall be remembered, but in his iniquity that he had committed therein shall he die. This matter of being a Christian is a life-time job; there is no period of retirement in this world. He that endures unto the end the same shall be saved. To be sure, this does not mean that there are not factors which will enter into the situation. What Ezekiel is trying to say and what the writer of these notes is trying to say is that a man must not think that because he has been good for a long time that he can now do as he pleases on the basis of that goodness. The good man must continue to be good.

Ezekiel also calls attention to another profound truth, and that is that although a man has been wicked, even desperately wicked, yet he can find divine favor, and his wickedness will not be held against him, if he turns from his wicked ways and brings forth fruits meet for repentance. "None of the sins that he hath committed shall be remembered against him: he hath done that which is lawful and right; he shall surely live." This is not because of mere outward acts, but because of a change in the man's heart and in his spirit. No man need think of his case as hopeless. If he forsakes his wrong way of living and his wrong way of thinking and returns unto the Lord, He will have mercy upon him and will abundantly pardon.

Every day is a fresh beginning;
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain:
And in spite of old sorrow, and older sinning,
And puzzle forecasted, and possible pain,
Take heart with the day, and begin again.

BY CHAPLAIN

MONDAY.

HE PRAYS FOR ME.

"I pray for them . . . which shall believe on me."—Jno. 17:9-20. See Ps. 61.

These are the words of Christ in his well known prayer. Among the many friends whom we highly prize are those who pray for us. Here we find Jesus praying for us. Do we prize him in our daily life because he does? Quoting The Upper Room in its comment on Christ's prayer: He prays for our "security" ("keep them."); he prays for our "felicity" ("that they might have my joy"); he prays for our "immunity" ("keep them from evil"); he prays for our "sanctity" ("sanctify them"); he prays for our "unity" ("that they may be one"); he prays for our "glorious destiny" ("that they may be with me . . . and see my glory").

Prayer—Father, it humbles and comforts us that Christ is on Thy right hand, praying for us. Show us how to live that all these things may be ours. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE MOST PACIFYING THOUGHT,

"Everyone that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened."—Luke 11:10.

The most satisfying thought of a believer is that God knows what is best. How many of us worry about things, lie awake at night, can't sleep, have to take sleeping tablets, get all nervous and probably bring on disease, worrying.

The Scriptures teach: "Do your part and leave the rest to God." It may be that, like Samuel, you are awake to receive a message from him. So with the sick, the unfortunate, sorrowing and distressed, "cast all your care upon him, for he careth for you."

Prayer—Our Father, we praise Thee when we hear the words of thy mouth. We believe that Thou wilt perfect that which concerneth us. Help us to believe. If through ignorance we ask for a stone, in thy wisdom give us bread. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THROUGH YOU.

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."—Ps. 119:105.

Gipsy Smith is quoted as saying: "It is not how many times you have been through the Bible, but how many times the Bible has been through you."

The Psalmist said, "Thy word have I hid in my heart." Regular Bible reading, the constant use of it, and the constant application of it in our lives, are necessary in right living. It is to the soul what food and exercise are to the body.

Prayer—O Lord, we would speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power. Help us meditate upon thy precepts day and night, and incline our hearts to keep thy statutes. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE MEANING OF SUFFERING.

"Thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee . . . that he might humble thee, to prove thee, to know what was in thy heart, whether thou wouldst keep his commandments or no."—Deut. 8:2.

It has been said that "the vale of tears is the vale of soul-making." If we could only see this, we would cease whining and fretting, and would take suffering as a school for our souls; a school of discipline to teach us humility; a school of learning how to live along the way; a school to teach us patience, faith and godliness, wherein we learn submission to the Divine Will and acquire a soul fit to live with, able to appreciate others.

Prayer—Mighty God, grant us thy strength, grace and humility, that we may understand and love our neighbor and find peace in Thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

OUR GREATEST FAULT.

"Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits."—Ps. 68:19.

David continually realized the blessings of the Lord, and he did not fail in his praise for those blessings.

What are some of the daily blessings showered upon us? The sunny smile, the pleasant word, the glowing sunshine, helping hands, sympathetic friends, the church and godly people, the club and its forums of life and world affairs; facilities for health to the sick. We should enter each day glad for all that is available to make us more nearly what we ought to be.

Prayer—Our Father, Giver of all grace and benefits, forbid that we shall become so submerged in the cares of this life that we shall bring over into the new day the hurts and vexations of yesterday. We know that our burdens shall not be heavier than we can bear. Make us glad in today's blessings—yea, in the days wherein Thou hast afflicted us. Amen.

SATURDAY.

NOT BESTOWED BUT WON.

"Be thou faithful."—Rev. 2:10.

Faithfulness is the foundation of every achievement. The word itself expresses action, up grades, perhaps, unwavering determination. It expresses strength of character. It is a grace bestowed by God and not acquired by our own volition. Success in business is not wished on one, it causes often a lot of thought and toil over many years. So, goodness is not wineskins of nation and culture; its sympathies overflowed the patterns of race. Its concern was as wide as mankind. Jesus could say: "All that is not universal is alien to my kingdom."

TWO KINGDOMS IN CONFLICT.

Thus the kingdom of Pilate and that of Jesus were in crucial conflict in respect to their dimensions. A kingdom without frontiers challenged a kingdom with frontiers. Looking at Pilate, Jesus said: "Everyone who is on the side of truth listens to my voice." With a cynical sneer Pilate retorts, "What is truth!" and closes the conversation, convinced that truth lies on the side of his kingdom.

Now it cannot be denied that Pilate's view of the matter has had a large following in human history. Pilate's kingdom has its successor in the modern nation-state. The nationalist state is surely on the side of Pilate's idea of truth. For it believes in frontiers behind which a particular group claims title to economic and other values which it is unwilling to share in terms of the ethic of a universal kingdom. It believes in a kingdom in which, for example, tariffs, racial quotas, and other forms of defense are employed to protect itself against other national powers. Out of this arises rivalries, balances of power, and ultimate violence between the kingdoms of this world. The truth of a nationalist kingdom is without doubt the truth that governs mankind today. No less than that ancient Procurator, Modern Pilates sardonically say: "What is truth!"

They thus reveal their skepticism over the possibility of living by any truth except that of nationalism. Nevertheless, this truth which the Pilates deride is the ultimate truth about human existence. Anyone who analyzes the present world struggle, which in some nations has emerged in violence, is driven to face the fact that the kingdoms of Pilate are incarnations of a truth that is producing tragic results. In an earlier period the nationalist state may have served certain good ends, but the closely articulated life of the present day cannot survive in terms of unqualified nationalism. And yet, the interval since the first World War has seen nations everywhere, including our own, withdrawing into themselves. Behind the facade of a League of Nations, the victors in that war practiced intense nationalism. The truth that was relied upon to save imperialist kingdoms is ironically the truth that in reality created the new world crisis. It is once more being brought home to us in rivers of blood that the truth that only frees some nations is the truth that ultimately reduces all nations to slavery.

In a second aspect, the kingdom of Pilate is in growing conflict with that of Jesus. This conflict reveals itself as we search for an answer to the fundamental question: "What is the ultimate principle of human community?"

It is generally agreed that the world of today is a vastly different world from that of a century ago. The world of this generation is set within a frame of time-space that makes it relatively tiny. The world of the age of Columbus was infinitely large as compared with that of the twentieth century. Nothing is more symbolic of that fact than the radio, which, in these terrifying days, keeps the entire world in a state of emotional panic. The world of today is not only made small by the techniques of science; it is rendered infinitely complex by these same techniques.

What is it, then, that constitutes the ultimate principle of human coherence in this tiny, yet vastly complex, world? On what must man rely for human order and community? The kingdom of Pilate has its reply, clear and forthright. His kingdom, Pilate frankly confesses, is ruled by the principle of force, by the law of coercion. Rome's marching legions were everywhere a symbol of that fact. The Palestine of Jesus' day saw itself being increasingly encircled by an imperial power that depended for its success, not upon the principle of peaceful persuasion but upon the strength of the sword.

Jesus had a different reply to the question: "What is the principle of human coherence?" It is clearly implied in his advice to one who drew his sword against those who had come to lay hands on Jesus. "Put up thy sword," said Jesus, "for they that take the sword shall perish by the sword," Matt. 26: 52. In this episode emerges the creative principle of the kingdom of Jesus. It clearly runs counter to that of Pilate's kingdom. In a world seething with revolutionary violence, Jesus committed himself to the law of love.

The truth of force and the truth of love challenge each other in the kingdoms of Pilate and Jesus. "Everyone who is on the side of truth," says Jesus, "listens to my voice." But Pilate takes issue with Jesus. His cynical remark, "What is truth," is Pilate's way of pouring scorn on the kind of truth that Jesus relied upon for human deliverance. He knew that it was Caesar's legions that had brought victory to imperial Rome. Over against this sort of truth, no other kind of truth counted with Pilate.
